A. C. LOCKE

The World's Crisis

AND SECOND ADVENT MESSENGER.

"BEHOLD, I COME QUICKLY; AND MY REWARD IS WITH ME."

WHOLE NO. 431. BOSTON, TUESDAY, JANUARY 5, 1864. VOL. XVIII.—NO. 16.

The Worlds' Crisis

AND SECOND ADVENT MESSENGER,

Issued every Tuesday Afternoon, at

167 HANOVER STREET, BOSTON.

MILES GRANT, EDITOR.

EDITORIAL COMMITTEE:

H. L. HASTINGS, D. T. TAYLOR, H. F. CARPENTER.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEE:

H. V. DAVIS, S. S. BREWER, A. ROSS, J. G. HAMBLIN, SOLOMON HOVEY.

GEO. T. ADAMS, TREASURER.

☞ THE CRISIS is devoted to the exposition of all Bible truth; especially the doctrine of the immediate, personal coming and reign of Christ on the earth; holiness of heart; the unconscious state of the dead; their literal resurrection, and the final destruction of the wicked.

For the World's Crisis.

MY LIFE.

I think upon the weary days,
When o'er this earth I walked alone;
My heart had known no songs of praise,
A Savior's love to me unknown.

But now the blood that Calvary gave
Washed out the sins that wrapped me o'er;
I sunk beneath the cleansing wave,
And rose to live forevermore.

By prison wall no more I'm bound,
I lean upon the Pure and True;
His love my life hath wreathed and crowned,
And all of earth hath bloomed anew.

My care upon His arm I cast,
That mighty arm, so strong to save;
Life's desert now is in the past,
My bark is on the bounding wave.

And while upon life's sea I sail,
The fiercest storm may not o'erwhelm;
I will not fear the rudest gale,
For Judah's Zion guides the helm.

And though the martyr's fire should burn,
And wrath her cup of wo should fill;
Through all I never more will turn
My longing gaze from Zion's hill.

The Sun of Righteousness will shine
Around me through the deepest gloom,
And cloudless skies will yet be mine,
For Eden's flowers again shall bloom.

And Judah's Lion soon will come,—
His garment crimson with the stain
Of rebel blood,—to gather home
His saints, and ever with them reign.

MRS. CHAS. A. KNOWLES.

Peace Dale, R. I.

For the World's Crisis.

WHERE ARE THE DEAD?

MR. EDITOR:—Dear Sir,—I saw in your paper an article headed by the solemn inquiry, "Where are the dead?" The writer says, it cannot be denied that the Scriptures are more silent on this subject than we could desire. But why, I ask, does he arrive at this conclusion? Is it not because there is a popular and almost universal belief in a doctrine relative to the state of the dead between death and the resurrection, that is not at all drawn from the word of the Lord? Therefore we look in vain for Scripture to throw light on an idea that is not founded on its authority; though it has found its way into the christian church as the tares among the wheat.

Will you allow me to draw some fragments from the storehouse of God's word, that will throw some light on the subject now before us? In order to do this, let us go back to the beginning of the history of our race. "And God said, let us make man in our image, after our likeness."—Gen. 1: 26. While we consider this most interesting part of creation, let us endeavor to get the scriptural idea of what is meant by the word man. We read in Gen. 2: 7, "And the Lord God formed man of the dust of the ground." Then are we not most assuredly taught that the being that God purposed to make, the being that God did make, and called man, he made of the dust of the ground? I know that we are told by some, that the thing that God made of dust was nothing but the casket that contained the jewel, the body that contained the man. But, candid reader, do you see anything in this passage of God's word to give any such idea? Strange, indeed, that the inspired writer should give us such a clear account of the formation of the casket, and say nothing about the formation of the jewel; and stranger still that the casket should be made in the image of God, and the jewel be left to bear an image of we know not what. Bear in mind that the one God made in his own image, and called man, was made of dust; and we read of nothing else being made in the image of God. But I would remark here, that we are not to suppose that the dust thus used remained inorganic matter, but was made flesh and blood, bones and sinews, with all the apparatus ready for working. But, as yet, there was no life in it. "And the Lord God . . . breathed into his nostrils the breath of life, and man became a living soul." Some try to make it appear that in some mysterious way a soul was breathed into him at this time; and some say that the breath was the soul. If either of these sayings are true, what image did the soul receive? for the thing that was to be made in the image of God, the text says was already made, and made "of the dust of the ground." The breath was the only thing wanted, and that not to make an addition to the creature, but simply to set him in motion; and in whatsoever we find this breath to be, we find life and motion, and without it "as the one dieth, so dieth the other; yea, they have all one breath."—Eccl. 3: 19. Besides all this, the Word says that it was man that "became a living soul," not the breath, nor any spiritual substance; but man that was made "of the dust of the ground." He it was that became "a living soul."

But again, we are told that man is the only earthly creature that is said to have a soul. I ask if the words "living soul," that apply to man in the text already quoted, are not a translation of the same Hebrew words as "living creature," as applied to the creatures that the waters and the earth brought forth, as we read in Gen. 1: 21, 24? As "living soul" and "living creature" are translations of the same words, the one may be substituted for the other, as both mean the same thing. To this agrees another scripture: "And the second angel poured out his vial upon the sea, and it became as the blood of a dead man; and every living soul died in the sea." Rev. 16: 3. Thus we cannot see that there is to be any importance attached to the words "living soul" more than to the word "living creature," as both are used to signify man, and both are used to signify a lower order of beings.

Again, we learn from the word of the Lord where the dead are; for God said to the man that had become a "living soul," "In the sweat of thy face shalt thou eat bread, till thou return unto the ground; for out of it wast thou taken; for dust thou art, and unto dust shalt thou return."—Gen. 3: 19. Abraham acknowledged that he was but dust and ashes. Not a word about a part of him being made of spirit, though he had the power of thought, and did commune with God; for he said, "I have taken upon me to speak unto the Lord, which am but dust and ashes."—Gen. 18: 27.

But where are the dead? is the question now before us. Hear the answer that Job gives to this question: "Man lieth down, and riseth not, till the heavens be no more; they shall not awake nor be raised out of their sleep."—Job 14: 12.

A man said to me, "Where you can find one passage to prove your doctrine, I can find one or more to contradict it." I do not so learn the Scriptures. I have not time now to consider many of the passages referred to, but will glance at one or two of them, that seem to be chiefly relied on. First, the thief on the cross had the promise of being with Christ in Paradise on the day that they were crucified. There are so many different notions about the place or state called Paradise, that it is not necessary to notice them; but if it means heaven, or the place where God is, then it is evident that Christ did not go there at that time; for on the third day after he had risen from the dead, he said to Mary, "Touch me not, for I am not yet ascended to my Father." Thus Christ sets aside the idea that he and the thief were to go to God immediately from the cross; but if we let the word "day" have reference to the time that the promise was made, and not to its fulfillment, then on that day Christ foretold that the thief should be with him in paradise. Then the scripture harmonizes.

Now let us look at the parable of the Rich Man and Lazarus. Christ taught the people by parables, and we are told in one place, that "without a parable spake he not unto them." The Rich Man clearly represents the Jewish nation, or the priesthood. There was the purple and fine linen, the sumptuous living from day to day, while all around were looked upon as poor, despised Gentiles. This idea is given almost to the letter in the case of the woman of Canaan. She "cried unto him (Christ), saying, have mercy on me, O Lord, thou son of David. My daughter is grievously vexed with a devil. And he answered him not a word. And his disciples came and besought him, saying, send her away, for she crieth after us; but he answered and said, I am not sent but unto the lost sheep of the house of Israel. Then came she and worshiped him, saying, Lord, help me; but he answered and said, it is not meet to take the children's bread and to cast it to dogs. And she said, truth, Lord; yet the dogs eat of the crumbs which fall from their master's table." O what discouragement this poor woman met with up to this time! but now what a cloud of blessings is about to burst upon her devoted head, when the Savior undisguised his sympathizing heart, saying, "O woman, great is thy faith; be it unto thee even as thou wilt." Who can imagine the blessedness she felt, when thus she knew the Lord. She had found her way into Abraham's bosom, or the gospel church. But what does he say to those who are Israelites, to whom pertaineth the adoption, and the glory, and the covenant, and the giving of the law, and the promises? "Woe unto you, Scribes, and Pharisees, hypocrites. . . . Ye serpents, ye generation of vipers; how can ye escape the damnation of hell? . . . Verily I say unto you, all these things shall come upon this generation. O Jerusalem, Jerusalem, thou that killest the prophets, and stonest them which are sent unto thee; how often would I have gathered thy children together, even as a hen gathereth her chickens under her wings, and ye would not. Behold, your house is left unto you desolate." I leave the reader to make the contrast between these two cases. Abraham's bosom represents the one, and torment the other.

Let us now go to the grave of Lazarus, of Bethany, who actually had died. Where was he? Jesus said, "Where have you laid him?" Did any one say he had gone to heaven? or did the Savior say that Lazarus was beloved by him, and therefore had gone to heaven, and was now one of that happy throng that stood before the throne? Not a word in the whole narrative to give any such idea. Though he loved the whole family, he had no such consolation to offer as is now offered to those who mourn for the dead; but he went with them to the grave, and that proved to be the place where the dead was; for when Jesus had "cried with a loud voice, . . . he that was dead came forth." Now we have an answer to the question, "Where are the dead?"

The apostle Paul never offered any such consolation to the Thessalonians as we hear at the present day, but he comforted them in view of the resurrection, saying, "I would not have you to be ignorant, brethren, concerning them which are asleep, that ye sorrow not, even as others which have no hope." Will Paul tell us why they should not sorrow? Is it because their friends have gone to heaven? Not a word about any such thing, for this is his language: "For if we believe that Jesus died and rose again, even so them also which sleep in Jesus will God bring with him; for the Lord himself shall descend from heaven, with a shout, with the voice of the archangel and with the trump of God, and the dead in Christ shall rise first." Thus we see that the consolation given by the apostle was not that their souls have gone to heaven; but if God raised up Jesus from the dead, he will also raise from the dead them that sleep in Jesus. But where do we get the idea that the soul is to come from heaven, or any where else, to be re-united to the body? We do not get it from the Bible. It is not to be found there.

The apostle makes the resurrection the very foundation on which all our hopes of eternal life depend; for he says, "If Christ be not raised, your faith is vain; ye are yet in your sins. Then they also which are fallen asleep in Christ are perished." Why, Paul, are we not taught that those who fall asleep in Christ go right to heaven? and can they perish there, even if there should be no resurrection? Are the dead in a perishable condition? Paul says, yes, they perish, if there is no resurrection. Then are they in heaven? The Bible says, no, "If I wait, the grave is mine house." And in the grave they found Lazarus waiting for the resurrection.

How often do we hear men say, when the righteous die, that they have gone to their reward. But Paul said, after all his labor and toil in hunger and thirst, and cold and nakedness, "What advantageth it me if the dead rise not?" Now if the apostle expected to go to heaven at the time of his death, did he mean to say that heaven with all its glory was of no advantage to him, if his dead body did not rise? But Paul had the blessed assurance that though man does turn to dust, he shall rise again to his reward. He says,—"Henceforth there is laid up for me a crown of righteousness, which the Lord the righteous Judge shall give me me at that day, and not to me only, but unto all them also that love his appearing."—2 Tim. 4: 8. I do not know that there is any difference of opinion about what is meant by that day—the day of his appearing, the day of the Lord that cometh as a thief in the night; the day that shall burn as an oven; the day of judgment, the great day of God Almighty. And Christ says, "When thou makest a feast, call the poor, the maimed, the lame, the blind, and thou shalt be blessed; for they cannot recompense thee; for thou shalt be recompensed at the resurrection of the just."—Luke 14: 13, 14. Why did not the Savior say that they should be recompensed as soon as they left this world, and not put them off to the resurrection? It was because that he knew what was in man, and that the only way to his eternal abode is through death and the resurrection.

I remark, in conclusion, that if there were no interests involved in these considerations but the simple question, Shall we go to heaven when we die, or not until after the resurrection? I should hardly think it worth while to discuss the subject; but when I see so many plain passages of God's word so mystified and made to contradict each other, then I think it is time to raise my voice (however inadequate) in defense of revealed truth. The very question, "Where are the dead?" that led me to produce these arguments, shows that some are longing for light on this subject. But I am sorry to say that many of them remind me of the Jews, who were looking for the Messiah, and when he appeared among them, they cried, Away with him! crucify him!

I am aware that in these views I differ widely from many that I respect and love, and from whom I received all my religious instructions. I am now, and have been for thirty years, a member of an evangelical church. As my interest in religion increased, I felt the more anxious to know that the articles of my belief were drawn from the word of God. I resolved to search the Scriptures for myself, and you can see the result. And now I sincerely request of you, who are lovers of truth, to do one of two things; either show me my error, or let me show you yours; and may God open our hearts to receive the truth, and bring us to his heavenly kingdom where we shall be ever with the Lord. Amen and amen.

WM. BOTHWELL.

Dubuque, Iowa.

For the World's Crisis.

"YOU ARE TOO RELIGIOUS."

So said a "hobby preacher" to one who is trying to "live godly in Christ Jesus," who believes that the judgment is near, and feels that he must live soberly in this present evil world to stand at that judgment acquitted, and be saved in the kingdom.

"Too religious"! Well, a man may have too much religion if it is of the Pharisaical, trumpet-blowing sort, or like the heathen devotee, zealous without knowledge; but what an idea it is that a man may be too particular about keeping himself "in the love of God"! He does not want much religion who rides "hobbies." Theological "hobbies" are all wooden things—rocking horses, that will go all day and at night stand where they did in the morning. It does not require much spiritual life to drive such things. One may as well ride the world's "golden calf" as these wooden things, and better too, for it is more profitable and less hypocritical.

It is now no time to stop for pet hobbies' antics. We want the power of God in the heart. Preach the truth always, but do not get up any fancy notion that does not amount to the value of a straw in making a man better, and keep blowing away about it until all your christianity is gone, if you ever had any, and then complain of those who go straight forward. A man may get backslidden almost before he knows it by such a course.

Christianity is diffusive; it goes all through a man, making him over new so that he thinks more of loving God and being right, than of any notion. Some men preach all the time about the "return of the Jews," and when a man believes the doctrine, babtize him into it or into "the Christ." I do not believe Christ is "divided," and I know my Bible does not teach that such a notion is the special Christ. Let a man believe that if he wants to, I never could see any proof of it; but do not preach it to the exclusion of every thing else.

Let us have salvation free and full. Dwell in God, and he in us; so that we shall be ready to meet Jesus when he comes. The world is deficient enough in vital godliness without believers in the time of the end following its example.

L. C. MCKINSTRY.

For the World's Crisis.

"I HAVE SURELY SEEN THE AFFLICTION OF MY PEOPLE."—Ex. 3: 7.

Sister, rejoice! for God has seen
Each self-denial here;
Brother, through every trying scene
Bless'd angels have been near;
Not a grief has burthened thee,
But a pitying one
Has not failed that grief to see,
And all thy sorrows borne.

That noble act of mercy done
Unto thy enemy,
Has for thee bright laurels won
In heavenly company;
An angel saw the blessed deed,
And in God's courts above
He stored in memory's bright archives
That little deed of love.

When mocked and used despitefully,
By one that should have been
Through gratitude a friend to thee,
As thou wast true to him;
That prayer for him, so soft and low,
Was heard by God above,
And on his blessed heart will glow
That little prayer of love.

The suff'ring time is passing by;
Soon on this mortal shore
There'll be no weary ones to sigh,
And hearts will bleed no more;
Then if for Jesus you would do
A little work of love,
Haste! for the night is almost through,
The Day-star beams above!

Charlemont, Mass. VESTA N. CUDWORTH.

For the World's Crisis.

REFLECTIONS

On Lords' Day evening, Dec. 27th.

Another year is drawing to its close. A few more suns will rise and set, and its last sands will have run out; it will have passed away with the years before the flood. What an eventful year! How full the record that it bears to Him who numbers all years, and registers all the deeds of man in characters indelible, to be reviewed in the great day of account. What multitudes, who were full of life and buoyancy at the commencement of this year, are now silent in the grave! How many have fallen upon the battle-field, even the young and gifted, leaving the hearts of parents and friends desolate and crushed: while many more, by the cruel hand of disease, away from home and all its comforts, have been laid low, and brought under the power of man's greatest enemy! Alas! Death has been doing its fearful work in our world, and most rapidly numbering its inhabitants among those that were, but are now no more.

Another year! How many thoughts crowd upon the mind at its close! But, amid all the darkness and clouds; amid all the dreary scenes that rise to our view, there is a ray of sunshine, a vision of brightness that cheers our hearts, and leads us to say, "Glory to God in the highest." And whence comes it? From the throne of the Eternal;—from the blessed word he has given through the Spirit; even the message of life and salvation to fallen man. The year that is waning has been rapidly fulfilling all the purposes of Divine mercy; all the plans of Jehovah relative to man's redemption; and we are one year nearer the grand, the glorious consummation, even the "times of restitution" foretold by all the "holy prophets since the world began." Let us lift up our heads and rejoice, for we are nearer the glorious morning of the resurrection, when our beloved ones will awake in the likeness of their Redeemer, to be clothed with immortality! Ah! yes, we are

"Nearer our Father's house,
Where the many mansions be;
Nearer the great white throne,
Nearer the jasper sea;
Nearer the bound of life,
Where we lay our burdens down;
Nearer leaving the cross,
Nearer wearing the crown."

There are joyful thoughts mingling with those of sadness. OUR SAVIOR IS COMING! He, who was once a prophet upon earth, and who is now a great High Priest within the most holy place, interceding for those without, is soon coming a triumphant and glorious King, to reign in majesty, and to restore harmony to this portion of Jehovah's empire. The curse is not to rest upon this earth forever. Oh no. Praise to Him who hath given us this most soul-cheering assurance. A little while longer, and the years will not pass burdened with the woes of mankind. Blood and carnage, ruin and death, will no more mark their pathway. But, as time flies on, there will be peace and joy upon his wings, even through the eternal ages! Then farewell to the year as it bears its record upward. For ten thousand worlds, we would not recall it. It has brought sorrow to our hearts, deep and poignant; but to the praise of God's glorious grace, we can testify that we have been comforted with the "exceeding great and precious" promises of his word, and that in the midst of darkness there has been light.

"Another year, another year!
Gaze we no longer on the past,
Nor let us shrink with faithless fear
From the dark shade the future casts.
The past, the future, what are they
To those whose lives may end to-day?

Another year, another year!
Help us earth's thorny path to tread:
So may each moment bring us near
To thee, ere yet our lives are fled.
Savior! we yield ourselves to thee
For time and for eternity."

A. C. JUDSON.

SCRIPTURE EXPOSITION.

1. "Thou prevailest forever against him, and he passeth; thou changest his countenance and sendest him away. His sons come to honor and he knoweth it not; and they are brought low, but he perceiveth it not of them. But his flesh upon him shall have pain, and his soul within him shall mourn."—Job 14: 20–22.

A writer in No. 26 of our paper, Vol. 55, observes "that this passage takes for granted that man is composed of flesh and soul. The flesh is one thing and the soul is another, according to this statement of the patriarch." And again, the same writer says, "The patriarch has stopped all ideas of playing upon the word HIM making no distinction between flesh and soul."

Why say there is a distinction between flesh and soul, and then almost in the same breath say there is no distinction? This looks as if the writer's ideas were a little confused. It is a strange idea that there is no distinction between flesh and soul. Again he says, "If 'him' means man, as man, then flesh and soul were sent away, and after death one had pain and the other did mourn."

Now the word "HIM" must signify, either the soul or the flesh, or soul and flesh united. If "HIM" refers to the soul, and this, as we are told, is after death, then souls after death have flesh upon them. If it refers to the flesh, then flesh will have pain after it is dead. If it refers to soul and flesh united, then it refers to this life, or otherwise the soul remains in the flesh after it is dead.

Let those who believe in the immortality of the soul, take hold of either horn of the dilemma they choose, it will leave them in the dark, so long as they claim that the soul mourned, and the flesh had pain after the death of the man.

The obvious signification of the text is that, while the man yet continues to live, his soul within him shall mourn, and his flesh upon him shall have pain. We will now give the German of Luther, and will submit our interpretation of his language to any well-informed German scholar in the land. "Weil er das fluisch on sech tragt, muss ar schmerchen haban; und weil sein saala noch bey ihm ist, muss ar leid tragen." "While he yet carries his flesh, he must have pain, and while his soul is yet with him, he must have sorrow."

2. "For we know that if our earthly house of this tabernacle were dissolved, we have a building of God, an house not made with hands, eternal in the heavens."—2 Cor. 5: 1.

"For we know that if our earthly tent-house were dissolved, we have a mansion (not body) built by God—a house not made with hands, celestial and imperishable." Thom. Paul says, "For we know if this terrestial (epigeios) house of our dwelling place were dissolved, we have a dwelling-place of God, this one everlasting and celestial." Everlasting and celestial are from the Greek words aionias tois auranois. The tabernacle was a type of mortality, or a temporary dwelling. The Jews in traveling to Canaan lived in tents; showing that they were strangers and sojourners, and not permanent residents. So man, while in this life is a traveler, and this present world is his tabernacle or dwelling place.

"Therefore we are always confident, knowing that, whilst we are at home in the body, we are absent from the Lord." Soma is the Greek word from which "body" is translated, and does not always mean the human body, but also a whole collective mass, an aggregate, assembly, spoken of the body of the church of which Christ is the head. And we see no impropriety in saying that the "body" spoken of in the passage, refers to the church of God, neither is it a far-fetched conclusion, as we shall presently see. Christ says, Luke 17: 37,—"Wheresoever the soma (body) is, thither will the eagles be gathered together." By the term "body" here, Christ has reference to the Hebrew nation. In Romans 6: 6, sin is called body, and so also Rom. 7: 24. "O wretched man that I am, who shall deliver me from the soma (body) of this death." In Col. 3: 15, Paul says, "Let the peace of God rule in your hearts, to the which also ye are called in one body," etc. Again, Rom. 12: 5, "We being many are one body in Christ," etc. Look also at Col. 1: 24, "Who now rejoice in my sufferings for you, and fill up that which is behind of the afflictions of Christ in my flesh for his body's sake, which is the church." So if it is indeed a "far-fetched conclusion" to call the church the body of Christ, we have Paul to keep us company. How easy then with this rendering to comprehend the word. And how natural too. "Therefore we are always confident, knowing that whilst we are at home in the body, (on earth among the saints or church), we are absent from the Lord." The body is the church, and is upon earth, Christ is the head of the church, and has gone to heaven; so if Paul would be with him, he must leave the church or body, and be translated to heaven. Col. 1: 18. "And he is the head of the body, the church; who is the beginning, the first-born from the dead." That Paul did not allude to his own body, is evident from the fact, that that was a part of himself. Many other passages might be presented to show that the "body" means the church, but enough has been brought forward to convince the candid reader.

The term "body" does not always mean one and the same thing. Neither does Paul say that the earthly tabernacle should be dissolved; he only says, we know if it were "we have a building of God," etc, If Paul's body was his earthly house, then the "house not made with hands" must have been a real body, likewise, or the similitude is destroyed. Now does Paul wish to convey the idea that there was a real body laid up on some shelf in heaven for him to enter when he left this mortal body? And if a real body awaited every one who will be saved? And if there is no surplus of bodies but just enough for each saved one a body, does it not teach the old doctrine of election? i. e., that just so many were to be saved and no more. Again, if that was a real body awaiting Paul, and which as we are told by some he put on at death, what will he do with his natural body when it shall be raised from the dead, for he will then have one more body than he will need; or will he put that on over the other? It is self-evident that the apostle had no allusion whatever to his natural body.

"I knew a man in Christ above fourteen years ago (whether in the body, I cannot tell, or whether out of the body I cannot tell; God knoweth) such an one caught up to the third heaven," etc. 2 Cor. 12: 2.

In examining this passage, let me call attention to the first verse, where the apostle says, "I will come to visions and revelations of the Lord." That he saw a vision he has no doubt, but his doubts which he expresses in parenthesis, is as to the "whereabouts" of himself during the vision; was he bodily snatched away to the third heavens, or was it a spiritual communication, whilst he remained on earth? This it seems he cannot tell; God only knowing. It might be he thinks either one or the other; for to be borne away by the Spirit was among the recorded instances. See Acts 8: 39; Ezk. 8: 3. Paul's words are en somati ektos ton somatos. As to en somati, this usage of en with its dative, is often equivalent to an adjective. See 2 Cor. 11: 17, 21; Matt. 22: 16; Mark 9: 1, and so en somati may be translated "bodily." See Rob. on en 3. As to ektos ton somatos, 1 Cor. 6: 18, may serve to illustrate it. Here ektos ton somatos "without the body" is used as "spiritually" in opposition to "bodily." Sin, he says, is not a bodily thing, but a spiritual. Ordinary sins do not injure or affect the body; they affect the spirit, or mind, without affecting the physical structure. Now why may not the apostle in the passage quoted, make a like use of the words, and so mean a purely spiritual effect without, or in opposition to a bodily movement, as we sometimes say "borne away by the feelings," "enraptured." We will now paraphrase the words accordingly: "I knew a man in Christ above fourteen years ago, and this man was caught up into the third heaven; whether bodily (caught away) or whether it was a spiritual effect, without moving the body from earth, I do not know," etc.—Herald of Gospel Liberty.

For the World's Crisis.

HOLINESS OF HEART.—No. 1.

Through the kindness of a friend, for a few weeks, I have been reading "The World's Crisis." In the prospectus we are informed that it is devoted to all Bible truth, especially to the doctrine of holiness of heart. Holiness of heart was the great subject of our Savior's preaching, forms the great central principle of christianity, presents a point of doctrine deeply interesting to all christians, most vital in the plan of salvation, a theme inviting the attention and well worthy a thorough investigation and actual possession of all mankind.

Holiness is the object of true life,—the source of success. Apparent success all in a greater or less degree obtain. But genuine success is realized by those few who aim high; who seek after holiness and obtain it. Deprived of every other enjoyment, he is really the rich man who has formed a character based on the rock of eternal holiness. No man can become what his Creator designed him, what the energies of his nature imply, perform the work that a state of good society demands, without exercising his religious faculties, dedicating himself to God, becoming good and holy, and also rendering service of great usefulness to his fellows.

Holiness implies an absence of sin, and the possession of the spirit of Christ. It is the watchword of the christian, the sentiment of his soul, the beginning of permanent peace, the cause of happiness, the way of respectability, and the passport to endless bliss. Holiness, in a word, is essential to meet the wants of life in our present existence, and indispensable to the world to come.

Without holiness of heart man becomes selfish and sinful, vile and vicious, wretched and miserable in the extreme. True it is, persons may be moral in the strictest sense, perfectly sound in theology, generally correct in theory, learned in science, respectable in deportment, generous in disposition, abounding in good works, refined in manner, virtuous in character, conversant with the Scriptures, friends to humanity; and yet in one grand particular fail to reach the greatest good or to attain the highest excellence of a noble christian manhood. We readily admit that more of this kind of morality is needed, would be beneficial to the individual, prove advantageous to society; and not in the least would we undervalue a life rich in deeds of pure morality.

We hold every degree of morality praiseworthy, and are bound to respect persons just in proportion as these elements abound in their characters, just so far as they respect themselves. But to divorce a supreme love to God from that of man is as unwise as it is dangerous. We defend morality, but promote holiness, in order that we ourselves may be promoted when Christ shall come the second time without sin unto salvation. Morality and holiness go together. The one must not be unhinged from the other. Separated they are lame and lean; wedded together they are strong and mighty. The one pertains to our moral, the other to our religious capacity.

Morality directs us in our duties to man; but holiness leads us in our worship to God. Piety works from within, outward, upward; morality squares our relations around us, regulating our conduct by the principles of strict justice in any laudable employment. But destitute of a real, vital, working holiness, man is out on the voyage of life, like a vessel fast on a bar or driven against the rugged rocks, liable to be wrecked before it goes into port,—out in nature's garden like the leaf that fades, and fades to rise no more.

Christian holiness! the Lord help us rightly to understand it. May it grow up in our hearts so that we may abound in all the graces of the gospel. All must become holy by repentance towards God and faith in the Lord Jesus Christ. Holiness! that's the thought, and we must utter it; that's the spirit, and we must possess it; that's the word, and we must proclaim it; that's the life, and we must live it.

A. A. LASON.

For the World's Crisis.

BEASTS IN THE KINGDOM OF HEAVEN.

(Concluded.)

Having examinined the main arguments in favor of this theory, and not finding them valid, I proceed to assign a few reasons for dissenting from this position.

I. If the beasts are to dwell in the kingdom of God, either all that have ever existed will be there, or only a part of them. If all are to be there, there would be thousands of beasts to one saint, and a larger world than ours would be requisite to hold them, according to accurate mathematical calculation. Beasts were more numerous than men at the beginning, and have since increased at a more rapid rate. What a host of them if they were all resurrected. If all are not to be there, why are a part to be exempt? Why have not that part as good a claim on the kingdom as the balance? Will God show partiality among the beasts? However, if only a part are to be there, what part will be thus favored above the rest? Will those who were first created be restored, to the exclusion of their posterity? or will those who are alive at the end be restored, and leave their predecessors out of the catalogue? Thus, if we say all, it makes too many for the territory; if we say only a part, it involves partiality. If those who lived at the fall are the favored class, it involves the resurrection of beasts,—then why not raise all? Where do we read of the resurrection of beasts?

II. In the thirty-fifth of Isaiah, we have a glowing description of the Restitution, when "the eyes of the blind shall be opened," the "ears of the deaf shall be unstopped," the "lame man leap as an hart," the "tongue of the dumb sing," etc., and then at the ninth verse we read, "No lion shall be there, nor any ravenous beast shall go up thereon; it shall not be found there." This is certainly explicit, and to the point. The restitution will place redeemed men upon the platform of immortality, where beasts will not be a necessary appendage.

III. In Ezk. 34: 22–25, we have the following prediction of Messiah's reign: "And I will set up one shepherd over them, and he shall feed them, even my servant David: he shall feed them, and he shall be their shepherd. And I the Lord will be their God, and my servant David a Prince among them: I the Lord have spoken it. And I will make with them a covenant of peace, and will cause the evil beasts to CEASE out of the land [orets—EARTH], and they shall dwell safely in the wilderness, and sleep in the woods." What can be plainer? When the antitypical "David," the "Prince" who shall then be crowned, begins his reign, "beasts" will cease out of the earth, so that it will be safe to dwell in the wilderness or sleep in the woods.

IV. The very formation of a part of the beasts is of such a cast as not only to show that they were purposely created to subsist upon fellow beasts, and not calculated to obtain a physical change of such magnitude as to destroy their identity, and make a new race of beasts of them, before they could obtain their living on a different principle. How many would need a new set of teeth to subsist on herbage, even if their fleshly appetite were extracted.

But here I will only open the door of thought, and leave the reader to ponder; then answer whether beasts were formed for the kingdom of God or for this world.

WM. SHELDON.

For the World's Crisis.

TESTIMONIES FOR CHRISTIANITY.

NUMBER SIX.

The next witness is Porphyry, who was born A. D. 233. He wrote fifteen books against Christians. His twelfth book was against the book of Daniel.

The following is from Eusebius' "Evangelical Preparation." "And that evil demons have no power of doing anything since our Savior's dwelling among men, the advocate of demons (Porphyry) in our own time, somewhere testifies in his work against us in this manner: 'And now people wonder that this distemper has oppressed the city so many years, Æsculapius and the other gods no longer conversing with men. For since Jesus has been honored, none have received any public benefit from the gods.'"

DIOCLESIAN'S PERSECUTION A. D. 303-313.

Eusebius says, "that in the nineteenth year of the reign of Dioclesian, in the month of March, were set up everywhere imperial edicts, 'appointing that the churches should be demolished to the foundation, that the SCRIPTURES SHOULD BE BURNT; that they who enjoyed any honors should lose them, and that men of private condition should be deprived of their liberty if they persisted in the profession of christianity.'"

The next and last number, for the present, will contain the testimony of Josephus.

Plymouth, Mass. F. H. BURBANK.

☞ If you want to love God, you must love your brother also, and that, too, even if you happen to know more than he does; or even if by some marvellous chance he should happen to know more than you do! Don't knock his lantern to atoms because it gives more or less light than yours.

The World's Crisis

AND SECOND ADVENT MESSENGER.

"BEHOLD, I COME QUICKLY; AND MY REWARD IS WITH ME."

WH[illegible]LE NO. 431. BOSTON, TUESDAY, JANUARY 5, 1864. VOL. XVIII.—NO. 16.

The Worlds' Crisis

AND SECO[illegible] ADVENT MESSENGER,

Issued ev[illegible]ry Tuesday Afternoon, at 167 HANO[illegible]ER STREET, BOSTON.

MILE[illegible] GRANT, EDITOR.

[illegible] COMMITTEE:
H. L. HA[illegible]INGS, D. T. TAYLOR,
[illegible] P. CARPENTER.

PU[illegible] COMMITTEE:
H. V. DA[illegible]S, S. S. BREWER,
A. ROSS, J. G. HAMBLIN,
S[illegible]LOMON HOVEY.

GEO[illegible] ADAMS, TREASURER.

☞ THE CRISIS [illegible]s devoted to the exposition of all Bible truth; espec[illegible]ally the doctrine of the immediate, personal coming an[illegible] reign of Christ on the earth; holiness of heart; the unco[illegible]scious state of the dead; their literal resurrection, and t[illegible]e final destruction of the wicked.

For the World's Crisis.

MY LIFE.

I think upo[illegible] the weary days,
When o'e[illegible] this earth I walked alone,
My heart h[illegible] known no songs of praise,
A Savior'[illegible] love to me unknown.

But now t[illegible] blood that Calvary gave Washed [illegible] the sins that wrapped me o'er,
I sunk ben[illegible]th the cleansing wave,
And ros[illegible] live forevermore.

By prison [illegible]ll no more I'm bound,
I lean up[illegible] the Pure and True;
His love my [illegible]ife hath wreathed and crowned,
And all o[illegible] earth hath bloomed anew.

My care up[illegible] His arm I cast,
That mi[illegible]y arm, so strong to save;
Life's dese[illegible] now is in the past,
My bark [illegible]n the bounding wave.

And while [illegible]on life's sea I sail,
The fier[illegible]t storm may not o'erwhelm;
I will not [illegible]r the rudest gale,
For Juda[illegible] Zion guides the helm.

And thoug[illegible] he martyr's fire should burn,
And wra[illegible] her cup of wo should fill,
Through al[illegible] never more will turn
My long[illegible] gaze from Zion's hill.

The Sun of [illegible]ighteousness will shine
Around [illegible] through the deepest gloom,
And cloudl[illegible] skies will yet be mine,
For Ede[illegible] flowers again shall bloom.

And Judah[illegible] Lion soon will come,—
His garm[illegible] crimson with the stain
Of rebel bl[illegible]d,—to gather home
His sain[illegible] and ever with them reign.

MRS. CHAS. A. KNOWLES.

Peace Dale, R. [illegible]

For the World's Crisis.

WHE[illegible]E ARE THE DEAD?

MR. EDITO[illegible]—Dear Sir,—I saw in your paper an artic[illegible] headed by the solemn inquiry, "Where a[illegible] the dead?" The writer says, it cannot be [illegible]nied that the Scriptures are more silent [illegible] this subject than we could desire. But [illegible]hy, I ask, does he arrive at this conclusio[illegible] Is it not because there is a popular and a[illegible]ost universal belief in a doctrine relative [illegible] the state of the dead between death and t[illegible] resurrection, that is not at all drawn from [illegible] word of the Lord? Therefore we look [illegible] vain for Scripture to throw light on an i[illegible] that is not founded on its authority; t[illegible]gh it has found its way into the christian [illegible]hurch as the tares among the wheat.

Will you a[illegible]w me to draw some fragments from the sto[illegible]ouse of God's word, that will throw some [illegible]ht on the subject now before us? In ord[illegible] do this, let us go back to the beginnin[illegible] of the history of our race. "And God sa[illegible], let us make man in our image, after our [illegible]ness."—Gen. 1: 26. While we consider t[illegible] most interesting part of creation, let us [illegible]deavor to get the scriptural idea of what [illegible] meant by the word man. We read in Gen. [illegible]7, "And the Lord God formed man of the [illegible]st of the ground." Then are we not most [illegible]surely taught that the being that God pu[illegible]sed to make, the being that God did ma[illegible], and called man, he made of the dust of t[illegible] ground? I know that we are told by some [illegible]hat the thing that God made of dust was [illegible]thing but the casket that contained the je[illegible]l, the body that contained the man. But, [illegible]did reader, do you see anything in this [illegible]assage of God's word to give any such ide[illegible]? Strange, indeed, that the inspired writ[illegible] should give us such a clear account of t[illegible] formation of the casket, and say nothing a[illegible]ut the formation of the jewel; and stranger [illegible]ll that the casket should be made in the [illegible]age of God, and the jewel be left to bear [illegible] image of we know not what. Bear in mind [illegible]hat the one God made in his own image, [illegible]d called man, was made of dust; and w[illegible] [illegible]ad of nothing else being made in the imag[illegible] [illegible] God. But I would remark here, that w[illegible] [illegible]re not to suppose that the dust thus used con[illegible] [illegible]ard inorganic matter, but was made flesh a[illegible] blood, bones and sinews, with all the appara[illegible] [illegible] ready for working. But, as yet, there wa[illegible] [illegible] life in it. "And the Lord God . . . bre[illegible]ed into his nostrils the breath of life, and ma[illegible] became a living soul." Some try to make i[illegible] [illegible]ppear that in some mysterious way a soul [illegible] [illegible] breathed into him at this time; and [illegible] [illegible] say that the breath was the soul. If eit[illegible] [illegible] of these sayings are true, what image [illegible] the soul receive? for the thing that was t[illegible] made in the image of God, the text sa[illegible] was already made, and made "of the dust [illegible] the ground." The breath was the only thin[illegible] wanted, and that not to make an addition to [illegible]he creature, but simply to set him in motio[illegible]; and in whatsoever we find this breath to [illegible]be, we find life and motion, and without i[illegible] [illegible] as the one dieth, so dieth the other; yea, th[illegible] have all one breath."—Eccl. 3: 19. Besid[illegible] all this, the Word says that it was man tha[illegible] "became a living soul," not the breath, nor [illegible]ny spiritual substance; but man that was [illegible]made "of the dust of the ground." He [illegible] was that became "a living soul."

But again, w[illegible] are told that man is the only earthly creature [illegible] that is said to have a soul. I ask if the w[illegible]rds "living soul," that apply to man in the [illegible] [illegible] already quoted, are not a translation of [illegible]he same Hebrew words as "living creature" as applied to the creatures that the waters and the earth brought forth, as we read in Gen. 1: 21, 24? As "living soul" and "living creature" are translations of the same words, the one may be substituted for the other, as both mean the same thing. To this agrees another scripture: "And the second angel poured out his vial upon the sea, and it became as the blood of a dead man; and every living soul died in the sea." Rev. 16: 3. Thus we cannot see that there is to be any importance attached to the words "living soul" more than to the word "living creature," as both are used to signify man, and both are used to signify a lower order of beings.

Again, we learn from the word of the Lord where the dead are; for God said to the man that had become a "living soul," "In the sweat of thy face shalt thou eat bread, till thou return unto the ground; for out of it wast thou taken: for dust thou art, and unto dust shalt thou return."—Gen. 3: 19. Abraham acknowledged that he was but dust and ashes. Not a word about a part of him being made of spirit, though he had the power of thought, and did commune with God; for he said, "I have taken upon me to speak unto the Lord, which am but dust and ashes."—Gen. 18: 27.

But where are the dead? is the question now before us. Hear the answer that Job gives to this question: "Man lieth down, and riseth not, till the heavens be no more; they shall not awake nor be raised out of their sleep."—Job 14: 12.

A man said to me, "Where you can find one passage to prove your doctrine, I can find one or more to contradict it." I do not so learn the Scriptures. I have not time now to consider many of the passages referred to, but will glance at one or two of them, that seem to be chiefly relied on. First, the thief on the cross had the promise of being with Christ in Paradise on the day that they were crucified. There are so many different notions about the place or state called Paradise, that it is not necessary to notice them; but if it means heaven, or the place where God is, then it is evident that Christ did not go there at that time; for on the third day after he had risen from the dead, he said to Mary, "Touch me not, for I am not yet ascended to my Father." Thus Christ sets aside the idea that he and the thief were to go to God immediately from the cross; but if we let the word "day" have reference to the time that the promise was made, and not to its fulfillment, then on that day Christ foretold that the thief should be with him in paradise. Then the scripture harmonizes.

Now let us look at the parable of the Rich Man and Lazarus. Christ taught the people by parables, and we are told in one place, that "without a parable spake he not unto them." The Rich Man clearly represents the Jewish nation, or the priesthood. There was the purple and fine linen, the sumptuous living from day to day, while all around were looked upon as poor, despised Gentiles. This idea is given almost to the letter in the case of the woman of Canaan. She "cried unto him (Christ), saying, have mercy on me, O Lord, thou son of David. My daughter is grievously vexed with a devil. And he answered him not a word. And his disciples came and besought him, saying, send her away, for she crieth after us; but he answered and said, I am not sent but unto the lost sheep of the house of Israel. Then came she and worshiped him, saying, Lord, help me; but he answered and said, it is not meet to take the children's bread and to cast it to dogs. And she said, truth, Lord; yet the dogs eat of the crumbs which fall from their master's table." O what discouragement this poor woman met with up to this time! but now what a cloud of blessings is about to burst upon her devoted head, when the Savior undisguised his sympathizing heart, saying, "O woman, great is thy faith; be it unto thee even as thou wilt." Who can imagine the blessedness she felt, when thus she knew the Lord. She had found her way into Abraham's bosom, or the gospel church. But what does he say to those who are Israelites, to whom pertaineth the adoption, and the glory, and the covenant, and the giving of the law, and the promises? "Woe unto you, Scribes, and Pharisees, hypocrites. . . . Ye serpents, ye generation of vipers; how can ye escape the damnation of hell? . . . Verily I say unto you, all these things shall come upon this generation. O Jerusalem, Jerusalem, thou that killest the prophets, and stonest them which are sent unto thee; how often would I have gathered thy children together, even as a hen gathereth her chickens under her wings, and ye would not. Behold, your house is left unto you desolate." I leave the reader to make the contrast between these two cases. Abraham's bosom represents the one, and torment the other.

Let us now go to the grave of Lazarus, of Bethany, who actually had died. Where was he? Jesus said, "Where have you laid him?" Did any one say he had gone to heaven? or did the Savior say that Lazarus was beloved by him, and therefore had gone to heaven, and was now one of that happy throng that stood before the throne? Not a word in the whole narrative to give any such idea. Though he loved the whole family, he had no such consolation to offer as is now offered to those who mourn for the dead; but he went with them to the grave, and that proved to be the place where the dead was; for when Jesus had "cried with a loud voice, . . . he that was dead came forth." Now we have an answer to the question, "Where are the dead?"

The apostle Paul never offered any such consolation to the Thessalonians as we hear at the present day, but he comforted them in view of the resurrection, saying, "I would not have you to be ignorant, brethren, concerning them which are asleep, that ye sorrow not, even as others which have no hope." Will Paul tell us why they should not sorrow? Is it because their friends have gone to heaven? Not a word about any such thing, for this is his language: "For if we believe that Jesus died and rose again, even so them also which sleep in Jesus will God bring with him; for the Lord himself shall descend from heaven, with a shout, with the voice of the archangel and with the trump of God, and the dead in Christ shall rise first." Thus we see that the consolation given by the apostle was not that their souls have gone to heaven; but if God raised up Jesus from the dead, he will also raise from the dead them that sleep in Jesus. But where do we get the idea that the soul is to come from heaven, or any where else, to be re-united to the body? We do not get it from the Bible. It is not to be found there.

The apostle makes the resurrection the very foundation on which all our hopes of eternal life depend; for he says, "If Christ be not raised, your faith is vain; ye are yet in your sins. Then they also which are fallen asleep in Christ are perished." Why, Paul, are we not taught that those who fall asleep in Christ go right to heaven? and can they perish there, even if there should be no resurrection? Are the dead in a perishable condition? Paul says, yes, they perish, if there is no resurrection. Then are they in heaven? The Bible says, no, "If I wait, the grave is mine house." And in the grave they found Lazarus waiting for the resurrection.

How often do we hear men say, when the righteous die, that they have gone to their reward. But Paul said, after all his labor and toil in hunger and thirst, and cold and nakedness, "What advantageth it me if the dead rise not?" Now if the apostle expected to go to heaven at the time of his death, did he mean to say that heaven with all its glory was of no advantage to him, if his dead body did not rise? But Paul had the blessed assurance that though man does turn to dust, he shall rise again to his reward. He says,—"Henceforth there is laid up for me a crown of righteousness, which the Lord the righteous Judge shall give me me at that day, and not to me only, but unto all them also that love his appearing."—2 Tim. 4: 8. I do not know that there is any difference of opinion about what is meant by that day—the day of his appearing, the day of the Lord that cometh as a thief in the night; the day that shall burn as an oven; the day of judgment, the great day of God Almighty. And Christ says, "When thou makest a feast, call the poor, the maimed, the lame, the blind, and thou shalt be blessed; for they cannot recompense thee; for thou shalt be recompensed at the resurrection of the just."—Luke 14: 13, 14. Why did not the Savior say that they should be recompensed as soon as they left this world, and not put them off to the resurrection? It was because that he knew what was in man, and that the only way to his eternal abode is through death and the resurrection.

I remark, in conclusion, that if there were no interests involved in these considerations but the simple question, Shall we go to heaven when we die, or not until after the resurrection? I should hardly think it worth while to discuss the subject; but when I see so many plain passages of God's word so mystified and made to contradict each other, then I think it is time to raise my voice (however inadequate) in defense of revealed truth. The very question, "Where are the dead?" that led me to produce these arguments, shows that some are longing for light on this subject. But I am sorry to say that many of them remind me of the Jews, who were looking for the Messiah, and when he appeared among them, they cried, Away with him! crucify him!

I am aware that in these views I differ widely from many that I respect and love, and from whom I received all my religious instructions. I am now, and have been for thirty years, a member of an evangelical church. As my interest in religion increased, I felt the more anxious to know that the articles of my belief were drawn from the word of God. I resolved to search the Scriptures for myself, and you can see the result. And now I sincerely request of you, who are lovers of truth, to do one of two things; either show me my error, or let me show you yours; and may God open our hearts to receive the truth, and bring us to his heavenly kingdom where we shall be ever with the Lord. Amen and amen.

WM. BOTHWELL.

Dubuque, Iowa.

For the World's Crisis.

"YOU ARE TOO RELIGIOUS."

So said a "hobby preacher" to one who is trying to "live godly in Christ Jesus," who believes that the judgment is near, and feels that he must live soberly in this present evil world to stand at that judgment acquitted, and be saved in the kingdom.

"Too religious"! Well, a man may have too much religion if it is of the Pharisaical, trumpet-blowing sort, or like the heathen devotee, zealous without knowledge; but what an idea it is that a man may be too particular about keeping himself "in the love of God"! He does not want much religion who rides "hobbies." Theological "hobbies" are all wooden things—rocking horses, that will go all day and at night stand where they did in the morning. It does not require much spiritual life to drive such things. One may as well ride the world's "golden calf" as these wooden things, and better too, for it is more profitable and less hypocritical.

It is now no time to stop for pet hobbies' antics. We want the power of God in the heart. Preach the truth always, but do not get up any fancy notion that does not amount to the value of a straw in making a man better, and keep blowing away about it until all your christianity is gone, if you ever had any, and then complain of those who go straight forward. A man may get backslidden almost before he knows it by such a course.

Christianity is diffusive; it goes all through a man, making him over new so that he thinks more of loving God and being right, than of any notion. Some men preach all the time about the "return of the Jews," and when a man believes the doctrine, babtize him into it or into "the Christ." I do not believe Christ is "divided," and I know my Bible does not teach that such a notion is the special Christ. Let a man believe that if he wants to, I never could see any proof of it; but do not preach it to the exclusion of every thing else.

Let us have salvation free and full. Dwell in God, and he in us; so that we shall be ready to meet Jesus when he comes. The world is deficient enough in vital godliness without believers in the time of the end following its example.

L. C. MCKINSTRY.

For the World's Crisis.

"I HAVE SURELY SEEN THE AFFLICTION OF MY PEOPLE."—Ex. 3: 7.

Sister, rejoice! for God has seen
Each self-denial here;
Brother, through every trying scene
Bless'd angels have been near;
Not a grief has burthened thee,
But a pitying one
Has not failed that grief to see,
And all thy sorrows borne.

That noble act of mercy done
Unto thy enemy,
Has for thee bright laurels won
In heavenly company;
An angel saw the blessed deed,
And in God's courts above
He stored in memory's bright archives
That little deed of love.

When mocked and used despitefully,
By one that should have been
Through gratitude a friend to thee,
As thou wast true to him;
That prayer for him, so soft and low,
Was heard by God above,
And on his blessed heart will glow
That little prayer of love.

The suff'ring time is passing by,
Soon on this mortal shore
There'll be no weary ones to sigh,
And hearts will bleed no more;
Then if for Jesus you would do
A little work of love,
Haste! for the night is almost through,
The Day-star beams above!

Charlemont, Mass. VESTA N. CUDWORTH.

For the World's Crisis.

REFLECTIONS

On Lords' Day evening, Dec. 27th.

Another year is drawing to its close. A few more suns will rise and set, and its last sands will have run out; it will have passed away with the years before the flood. What an eventful year! How full the record that it bears to Him who numbers all years, and registers all the deeds of man in characters indelible, to be reviewed in the great day of account. What multitudes, who were full of life and buoyancy at the commencement of this year, are now silent in the grave! How many have fallen upon the battle-field, even the young and gifted, leaving the hearts of parents and friends desolate and crushed; while many more, by the cruel hand of disease, away from home and all its comforts, have been laid low, and brought under the power of man's greatest enemy! Alas! Death has been doing its fearful work in our world, and most rapidly numbering its inhabitants among those that were, but are now no more.

Another year! How many thoughts crowd upon the mind at its close! But, amid all the darkness and clouds; amid all the dreary scenes that rise to our view, there is a ray of sunshine, a vision of brightness that cheers our hearts, and leads us to say, "Glory to God in the highest." And whence comes it? From the throne of the Eternal;—from the blessed word he has given through the Spirit; even the message of life and salvation to fallen man. The year that is waning has been rapidly fulfilling all the purposes of Divine mercy; all the plans of Jehovah relative to man's redemption; and we are one year nearer the grand, the glorious consummation, even the "times of restitution" foretold by all the "holy prophets since the world began." Let us lift up our heads and rejoice, for we are nearer the glorious morning of the resurrection, when our beloved ones will awake in the likeness of their Redeemer, to be clothed with immortality! Ah! yes, we are

"Nearer our Father's house,
Where the many mansions be;
Nearer the great white throne,
Nearer the jasper sea;
Nearer the bound of life,
Where we lay our burdens down;
Nearer leaving the cross,
Nearer wearing the crown."

There are joyful thoughts mingling with those of sadness. OUR SAVIOR IS COMING! He, who was once a prophet upon earth, and who is now a great High Priest within the most holy place, interceding for those without, is soon coming a triumphant and glorious King, to reign in majesty, and to restore harmony to this portion of Jehovah's empire. The curse is not to rest upon this earth forever. Oh no. Praise to Him who hath given us this most soul-cheering assurance. A little while longer, and the years will not pass burdened with the woes of mankind. Blood and carnage, ruin and death, will no more mark their pathway. But, as time flies on, there will be peace and joy upon his wings, even through the eternal ages! Then farewell to the year as it bears its record upward. For ten thousand worlds, we would not recall it. It has brought sorrow to our hearts, deep and poignant; but to the praise of God's glorious grace, we can testify that we have been comforted with the "exceeding great and precious" promises of his word, and that in the midst of darkness there has been light.

"Another year, another year!
Gaze we no longer on the past,
Nor let us shrink with faithless fear
From the dark shade the future casts.
The past, the future, what are they
To those whose lives may end to-day?
Another year, another year!
Help us earth's thorny path to tread;
So may each moment bring us near
To thee, ere yet our lives are fled.
Savior! we yield ourselves to thee
For time and for eternity."

A. C. JOHNSON.

SCRIPTURE EXPOSITION.

1. "Thou prevailest forever against him, and he passeth; thou changest his countenance and sendest him away. His sons come to honor and he knoweth it not; and they are brought low, but he perceiveth it not of them. But his flesh upon him shall have pain, and his soul within him shall mourn."—Job 14: 20–22.

A writer in No. 26 of our paper, Vol. 55, observes "that this passage takes for granted that man is composed of flesh and soul. The flesh is one thing and the soul is another, according to this statement of the patriarch." And again, the same writer says, "The patriarch has stopped all ideas of playing upon the word HIM making no distinction between flesh and soul."

Why say there is a distinction between flesh and soul, and then almost in the same breath say there is no distinction? This looks as if the writer's ideas were a little confused. It is a strange idea that there is no distinction between flesh and soul. Again he says, "If 'him' means man, as man, then flesh and soul were sent away, and after death one had pain and the other did mourn."

Now the word "HIM" must signify, either the soul or the flesh, or soul and flesh united. If "HIM" refers to the soul, and this, as we are told, is after death, then souls after death have flesh upon them. If it refers to the flesh, then flesh will have pain after it is dead. If it refers to soul and flesh united, then it refers to this life, or otherwise the soul remains in the flesh after it is dead.

Let those who believe in the immortality of the soul, take hold of either horn of the dilemma they choose, it will leave them in the dark, so long as they claim that the soul mourned, and the flesh had pain after the death of the man.

The obvious signification of the text is that, while the man yet continues to live, his soul within him shall mourn, and his flesh upon him shall have pain. We will now give the German of Luther, and will submit our interpretation of his language to any well-informed German scholar in the land. "Weil er das fluisch on sech tragt, muss ar schmerchen haban; und weil sein saala noch bey ihm ist, muss ar leid tragen." "While he yet carries his flesh, he must have pain, and while his soul is yet with him, he must have sorrow."

2. "For we know that if our earthly house of this tabernacle were dissolved, we have a building of God, an house not made with hands, eternal in the heavens."—2 Cor. 5: 1.

"For we know that if our earthly tent-house were dissolved, we have a mansion (not body) built by God—a house not made with hands, celestial and imperishable." Thom. Paul says, "For we know if this terrestial (epigeios) house of our dwelling place were dissolved, we have a dwelling-place of God, this one everlasting and celestial." Everlasting and celestial are from the Greek words aionias tois auranois. The tabernacle was a type of mortality, or a temporary dwelling. The Jews in traveling to Canaan lived in tents; showing that they were strangers and sojourners, and not permanent residents. So man, while in this life is a traveler, and this present world is his tabernacle or dwelling place.

"Therefore we are always confident, knowing that, whilst we are at home in the body, we are absent from the Lord." Soma is the Greek word from which "body" is translated, and does not always mean the human body, but also a whole collective mass, an aggregate, assembly, spoken of the body of the church of which Christ is the head. And we see no impropriety in saying that the "body" spoken of in the passage, refers to the church of God, neither is it a far-fetched conclusion, as we shall presently see. Christ says, Luke 17: 37,—"Wheresoever the soma (body) is, thither will the eagles be gathered together." By the term "body" here, Christ has reference to the Hebrew nation. In Romans 6: 6, sin is called body, and so also Rom. 7: 24. "O wretched man that I am, who shall deliver me from the soma (body) of this death." In Col. 3: 15, Paul says, "Let the peace of God rule in your hearts, to the which also ye are called in one body," etc. Again, Rom. 12: 5, "We being many are one body in Christ," etc. Look also at Col. 1: 24, "Who now rejoice in my sufferings for you, and fill up that which is behind of the afflictions of Christ in my flesh for his body's sake, which is the church." So if it is indeed a "far-fetched conclusion" to call the church the body of Christ, we have Paul to keep us company. How easy then with this rendering to comprehend the word. And how natural too. "Therefore we are always confident, knowing that whilst we are at home in the body, (on earth among the saints or church), we are absent from the Lord." The body is the church, and is upon earth, Christ is the head of the church, and has gone to heaven; so if Paul would be with him, he must leave the church or body, and be translated to heaven. Col. 1: 18. "And he is the head of the body, the church; who is the beginning, the first-born from the dead." That Paul did not allude to his own body, is evident from the fact, that that was a part of himself. Many other passages might be presented to show that the "body" means the church, but enough has been brought forward to convince the candid reader.

The term "body" does not always mean one and the same thing. Neither does Paul say that the earthly tabernacle should be dissolved; he only says, we know if it were "we have a building of God," etc. If Paul's body was his earthly house, then the "house not made with hands" must have been a real body, likewise, or the similitude is destroyed. Now does Paul wish to convey the idea that there was a real body laid up on some shelf in heaven for him to enter when he left this mortal body? And if a real body awaited the spirit of Paul, is there not a body in readiness for every one who will be saved? And if there is no surplus of bodies but just enough for each saved one a body, does it not teach the old doctrine of election? i. e., that just so many were to be saved and no more. Again, if that was a real body awaiting Paul, and which as we are told by some he put on at death, what will he do with his natural body when it shall be raised from the dead, for he will then have one more body than he will need; or will he put that on over the other? It is self-evident that the apostle had no allusion whatever to his natural body.

"I knew a man in Christ above fourteen years ago (whether in the body, I cannot tell, or whether out of the body I cannot tell; God knoweth) such an one caught up to the third heaven," etc. 2 Cor. 12: 2.

In examining this passage, let me call attention to the first verse, where the apostle says, "I will come to visions and revelations of the Lord." That he saw a vision he has no doubt, but his doubts which he expresses in parenthesis, is as to the "whereabouts" of himself during the vision; was he bodily snatched away to the third heavens, or was it a spiritual communication, whilst he remained on earth? This it seems he cannot tell; God only knowing. It might be he thinks either one or the other; for to be borne away by the Spirit was among the recorded instances. See Acts 8: 39; Ezk. 8: 3. Paul's words are en somati ektos ton somatos. As to en somati, this usage of en with its dative, is often equivalent to an adjective. See 2 Cor. 11: 17, 21; Matt. 22: 16; Mark 9: 1, and so en somati may be translated "bodily." See Rob. on en 3. As to ektos ton somatos, 1 Cor. 6: 18, may serve to illustrate it. Here ektos ton somatos "without the body" is used as "spiritually" in opposition to "bodily." Sin, he says, is not a bodily thing, but a spiritual. Ordinary sins do not injure or affect the body; they affect the spirit, or mind, without affecting the physical structure. Now why may not the apostle in the passage quoted, make a like use of the words, and so mean a purely spiritual effect without, or in opposition to a bodily movement, as we sometimes say "borne away by the feelings," "enraptured." We will now paraphrase the words accordingly: "I knew a man in Christ above fourteen years ago, and this man was caught up into the third heaven; whether bodily (caught away) or whether it was a spiritual effect, without moving the body from earth, I do not know," etc.—Herald of Gospel Liberty.

For the World's Crisis.

HOLINESS OF HEART.—No. 1.

Through the kindness of a friend, for a few weeks, I have been reading "The World's Crisis." In the prospectus we are informed that it is devoted to all Bible truth, especially to the doctrine of holiness of heart. Holiness of heart was the great subject of our Savior's preaching, forms the great central principle of christianity, presents a point of doctrine deeply interesting to all christians, most vital in the plan of salvation, a theme inviting the attention and well worthy a thorough investigation and actual possession of all mankind.

Holiness is the object of true life,—the source of success. Apparent success all in a greater or less degree obtain. But genuine success is realized by those few who aim high; who seek after holiness and obtain it. Deprived of every other enjoyment, he is really the rich man who has formed a character based on the rock of eternal holiness. No man can become what his Creator designed him, what the energies of his nature imply, perform the work that a state of good society demands, without exercising his religious faculties, dedicating himself to God, becoming good and holy, and also rendering service of great usefulness to his fellows.

Holiness implies an absence of sin, and the possession of the spirit of Christ. It is the watchword of the christian, the sentiment of his soul, the beginning of permanent peace, the cause of happiness, the way of respectability, and the passport to endless bliss. Holiness, in a word, is essential to meet the wants of life in our present existence, and indispensable to the world to come.

Without holiness of heart man becomes selfish and sinful, vile and vicious, wretched and miserable in the extreme. True it is, persons may be moral in the strictest sense, perfectly sound in theology, generally correct in theory, learned in science, respectable in deportment, generous in disposition, abounding in good works, refined in manner, virtuous in character, conversant with the Scriptures, friends to humanity; and yet in one grand particular fail to reach the greatest good or to attain the highest excellence of a noble christian manhood. We readily admit that more of this kind of morality is needed, would be beneficial to the individual, prove advantageous to society; and not in the least would we undervalue a life rich in deeds of pure morality.

We hold every degree of morality praiseworthy, and are bound to respect persons just in proportion as these elements abound in their characters, just so far as they respect themselves. But to divorce a supreme love to God from that of man is as unwise as it is dangerous. We defend morality, but promote holiness, in order that we ourselves may be promoted when Christ shall come the second time without sin unto salvation. Morality and holiness go together. The one must not be unhinged from the other. Separated they are lame and lean; wedded together they are strong and mighty. The one pertains to our moral, the other to our religious capacity.

Morality directs us in our duties to man; but holiness leads us in our worship to God. Piety works from within, outward, upward; morality squares our relations around us, regulating our conduct by the principles of strict justice in any laudable employment. But destitute of a real, vital, working holiness, man is out on the voyage of life, like a vessel fast on a bar or driven against the rugged rocks, liable to be wrecked before it goes into port,—out in nature's garden like the leaf that fades, and fades to rise no more.

Christian holiness! the Lord help us rightly to understand it. May it grow up in our hearts so that we may abound in all the graces of the gospel. All must become holy by repentance towards God and faith in the Lord Jesus Christ. Holiness! that's the thought, and we must utter it; that's the spirit, and we must possess it; that's the word, and we must proclaim it; that's the life, and we must live it.

A. A. LARON.

For the World's Crisis.

BEASTS IN THE KINGDOM OF HEAVEN.

(Concluded.)

Having examinined the main arguments in favor of this theory, and not finding them valid, I proceed to assign a few reasons for dissenting from this position.

I. If the beasts are to dwell in the kingdom of God, either all that have ever existed will be there, or only a part of them. If all are to be there, there would be thousands of beasts to one saint, and a larger world than ours would be requisite to hold them, according to accurate mathematical calculation. Beasts were more numerous than men at the beginning, and have since increased at a more rapid rate. What a host of them if they were all resurrected. If all are not to be there, why are a part to be exempt? Why have not that part as good a claim on the kingdom as the balance? Will God show partiality among the beasts? However, if only a part are to be there, what part will be thus favored above the rest? Will those who were first created be restored, to the exclusion of their posterity? or will those who are alive at the end be restored, and leave their predecessors out of the catalogue? Thus, if we say all, it makes too many for the territory; if we say only a part, it involves partiality. If those who lived at the fall are the favored class, it involves the resurrection of beasts,—then why not raise all? Where do we read of the resurrection of beasts?

II. In the thirty-fifth of Isaiah, we have a glowing description of the Restitution, when "the eyes of the blind shall be opened," the "ears of the deaf shall be unstopped," the "lame man leap as an hart," the "tongue of the dumb sing," etc., and then at the ninth verse we read, "No lion shall be there, nor any ravenous beast shall go up thereon; it shall not be found there." This is certainly explicit, and to the point. The restitution will place redeemed men upon the platform of immortality, where beasts will not be a necessary appendage.

III. In Ezk. 34: 22–25, we have the following prediction of Messiah's reign: "And I will set up one shepherd over them, and he shall feed them, even my servant David: he shall feed them, and he shall be their shepherd. And I the Lord will be their God, and my servant David a Prince among them: I the Lord have spoken it. And I will make with them a covenant of peace, and will cause the evil beasts to CEASE out of the land [orets—EARTH], and they shall dwell safely in the wilderness, and sleep in the woods." What can be plainer? When the antitypical "David," the "Prince" who shall then be crowned, begins his reign, "beasts" will cease out of the earth, so that it will be safe to dwell in the wilderness or sleep in the woods.

IV. The very formation of a part of the beasts is of such a cast as not only to show that they were purposely created to subsist upon fellow beasts, and not calculated to obtain a physical change of such magnitude as to destroy their identity, and make a new race of beasts of them, before they could obtain their living on a different principle. How many would need a new set of teeth to subsist on herbage, even if their fleshly appetite were extracted.

But here I will only open the door of thought, and leave the reader to ponder; then answer whether beasts were formed for the kingdom of God or for this world.

WM. SHELDON.

For the World's Crisis.

TESTIMONIES FOR CHRISTIANITY.

NUMBER SIX.

The next witness is Porphyry, who was born A. D. 233. He wrote fifteen books against Christians. His twelfth book was against the book of Daniel.

The following is from Eusebius' "Evangelical Preparation." "And that evil demons have no power of doing anything since our Savior's dwelling among men, the advocate of demons (Porphyry) in our own time, somewhere testifies in his work against us in this manner: 'And now people wonder that this distemper has oppressed the city so many years, Æsculapius and the other gods no longer conversing with men. For since Jesus has been honored, none have received any public benefit from the gods.'"

DIOCLESIAN'S PERSECUTION A. D. 303–313.

Eusebius says, "that in the nineteenth year of the reign of Dioclesian, in the month of March, were set up everywhere imperial edicts, 'appointing that the churches should be demolished to the foundation, that the SCRIPTURES SHOULD BE BURNT; that they who enjoyed any honors should lose them, and that men of private condition should be deprived of their liberty if they persisted in the profession of christianity.'"

The next and last number, for the present, will contain the testimony of Josephus.

Plymouth, Mass. F. H. BURBANK.

☞ If you want to love God, you must love your brother also, and that, too, even if you happen to know more than he does; or even if by some marvellous chance he should happen to know more than you do! Don't knock his lantern to atoms because it gives more or less light than yours.

For the World's Crisis.

MY JOURNAL.—At Home.

Sabbath, Nov. 22nd, preached in Lowell St. Chapel to a full house, on the blessedness of church order and fellowship, from Eph. 4: 15, 16, which was well received. In the afternoon and evening, to the Advent church in Hudson St., to large audiences. It seemed good to see the faces and to shake the friendly hand with old fellow-laborers of more than a quarter of a century. But the best of all is, the presence and blessing of Him who dwelt in the bush of devouring fire. Ah! the "good will of Him who dwelt in the bush" is better than all human friendships or possessions of earthly good. While I value human friendship, and perhaps enjoy as numerous a circle of friends as most any preacher of the glad tidings of the coming kingdom, yet my chief support and consolation is in my God. Indeed, to be truly blest and happy, we must "Give our mortal interest up,

And make our God our all."

In so doing, all mortal interests are thrice blessed. I am to spend a few weeks at home, among family and friends, while preparing for my western field and home.

Monday, Nov. 23d. Heard John B. Gough on the subject of a "peculiar people." After speaking of the peculiarity of large classes of persons in the common walks of life, he closed up with quoting this passage, Titus 2: 11, 14, on which he spoke briefly, making me feel almost as though I was in an Advent meeting. The effect of such lectures will be good.

Tuesday, Nov. 24th, met with the church and asked my dismission to the Advent church in Buchanan, Mich., with a view of removal west. The following letter and reply of the church are here given:

LETTER TO THE ADVENT CHURCH, HUDSON STREET, BOSTON.

BOSTON, Nov. 24TH, 1863.

Dear Brethren:—I am called to the performance of a duty, of which I never had a serious thought till of late. It has been my fixed determination to live and share with you in joy or prosperity, poverty or trial, to the end. And at any time in our past history had the subject of separation come up in any form, I should have said, in the language of Ruth the Moabite, "Entreat me not to leave thee, or to return from following after thee; for whither thou goest, I will go; and where thou lodgest, I will lodge: thy people shall be my people, and thy God my God: where thou diest will I die, and there will I be buried."

But human affection is not always a guide to duty. The strongest affections and dearest ties are often sundered by the will of God, who doeth all things well. I think I have clear indications of the will of God in this case. For the last thirty-four years I have labored with the church of Christ in this city. In that time great changes have taken place, and many have passed away. Some remain, who have been with me in all our labors and trials from the beginning. And our sympathy and love have increased by every year's toil in the Master's service. And nothing but a clear and undoubted call to another field of labor would reconcile me to the thought of leaving you. The call of the Adventists of the great Northwest is one that I cannot turn away from with indifference. Although at my time of life, after a campaign of twenty-four years in the front ranks of the Advent cause, I might naturally seek rest; yet with a "wide and effectual door opened to me," I am not at liberty to choose ease or retirement, while the cause of Christ is suffering for the aid I may be able, by the grace of God, to give to it.

The conferences of five States,—Minnesota, Iowa, Wisconsin, Illinois and Michigan, have given me a unanimous invitation to remove to that field. And with a knowledge of their wants and wishes, I have not been able to resist the conviction that it is the will of God for me to remove to that distant field. I do not expect to find a more faithful and true church or people on the earth than you have been. And I need not say that a strong sense of duty alone reconciles me to the separation. I can never forget you while I live, or cease to pray for you, that God will give you an inheritance among the sanctified, at his coming.

I need not add, that my warmest sympathies are with your beloved pastor, on whom has devolved the care of the church for some time past. I am conscious of leaving undone nothing that might cheer his heart or aid him in his labors to promote the welfare of the society. And I leave in the bonds of love. I ask, in conclusion, that you dismiss and commend me to the church of Adventists in Buchanan, Mich., as that is to be my residence, at least for the present. I remain your brother and companion in the faith and patience of Jesus, in the hope of his speedy coming, JOSHUA V. HIMES.

After the reading, Elder A. Hale, Deacons J. W. West and John Emerson were appointed a committee to make a suitable report thereon at the adjourned meeting. At the adjourned meeting, Nov. 28th, the committee reported as follows:—

"Brethren of the church, your committee on the letter of Eld. Himes beg leave to make the following REPORT:—

Whereas God in his providence has called our beloved and respected brother, Eld. J. V. Himes, to transfer his relation from this church to another in a distant and widely extended field, the calls from which for his labors in the great cause which we have had so long at heart are of the most urgent and encouraging character; this church, with which he has been connected as resident or associate pastor, is called to give him up, with its regrets, prayers and benediction, to the great Head of the church, to whose will he has so long and often taught us to submit.

Therefore, Resolved, 1st. That in thus sundering the relation which has so long existed between this church and Elder Himes, while we feel a sorrow that we shall not see his face as we have been accustomed to see it, we make the sacrifice with a degree of joy that a new and more promising field invites him away.

Resolved, 2nd, That our long and intimate acquaintance with his position, his labors, his conflicts, and his character, has given us the best opportunity possible to understand fully his merits as a man, a christian, and minister of Christ; and that in granting him a recommendation to the church to which his relation is to be transferred, we tender to him our warmest expression of confidence, and of hope, that good will result from his labors in the great field in which that church is located; and though he may be thus removed from our part of the vineyard, we shall ever feel a prayerful and unabated interest in his labors. And we earnestly implore on him and his charge the especial blessing of God, which alone can confer the protection and grace we all need to keep and preserve us unto his eternal kingdom. A. HALE.
J. W. WEST.
JOHN EMERSON."

And here my public and official labors close with the dearest and best body of believers I have ever known. We all felt the sadness of parting. But the object of the separation being the greater good and usefulness to the church in the west, we all felt the joy and the happiness of doing right, though it was not congenial with our natural feelings.

I have devoted this week mostly to visiting families in view of speedy separation. Also filled up the other hours in packing books and other articles connected with the office for the west. This is a new business to me, after a sojourn of so many years in Boston. But it is pleasant to me, because I think it is the will of God. Any thing that God commands we shall take delight in doing if we love him. JOSHUA V. HIMES.

Boston, Nov. 28th, 1863.

The World's Crisis

AND SECOND ADVENT MESSENGER.

Boston, Tuesday, January 5, 1864.

NEW YEAR.

We most heartily wish all our readers "A HAPPY NEW YEAR" IN THE LORD. If possible, we should like to take each of you by the hand, and make this earnest wish by the living voice, and have a familiar talk relative to coming events, and the consummation of our "blessed hope"; but we must wait a little while before we can enjoy such a privilege. By the grace of God, we will make an appointment to meet you in paradise, at the coming of Jesus.

We may expect stirring events this year. Things are rapidly approaching the grand crisis. The closing scene is evidently at hand. The harvest is fast ripening. Let us all keep upon the watch towers, and not be found sleeping. We are living in sublime moments, when the greatest of all events is at the doors. In a little from this, we may expect to see our dear Savior, and meet all those who are sleeping in him. Are we ready? Is there any feeling of "hatred" or "variance" towards any one? Remember, if it is not removed, the kingdom is lost. See Gal. 5: 20, 21. Now at the beginning of the year, let us have every difficulty with every one all settled. Jesus says, "If ye forgive men their trespasses, your heavenly Father will also forgive you. But if ye forgive not men their trespasses, neither will your Father forgive your trespasses."—Matt. 6. 14, 15. Says James, "Grudge not one against another, brethren, lest ye be condemned; behold the Judge standeth before the door."—James 5: 9. Satan is devising all possible means to cause roots of bitterness to grow between the children of the Lord. He is trying to get all into the war spirit in some form; and we need to watch with great care, lest we fall into this snare. So far as the results are concerned, it makes but little difference whether we go to fight the rebels, or some one at home, in the church, the society, or family. The war spirit, in all its forms, is opposed to the spirit of Christ; hence the great efforts of the demons at the present time to gather "the whole world" to battle.

Now is the time for christians to humble themselves, "be patient toward all men," bear things without a murmur, live very near to Jesus, put every thing into his care, and wait for his appearing. Let us pray much for each other, and all try to live better than ever before. How blessed it will be, when Jesus comes, to hear him say, "Well done, thou good and faithful servant, . . . enter thou into the joy of thy Lord."

In conclusion, permit us to say again, "we wish you "a happy new year." May yours be the hope that is like an anchor, the peace that passeth all understanding, the joy that is unspeakable, the love that casteth out all fear, and finally, the reward of eternal life.

RETIRE EARLY.

It often happens, where a preacher goes to stop for the night, that they sit up late to engage in conversation about various topics of interest. While this may be somewhat agreeable, it is not profitable to one's physical and spiritual health. Many break down much earlier because of such habits. After one returns from an evening meeting, they will feel best to retire as early as they can, rise in good season in the morning, and they will accomplish more work with less wear. Many families where the preacher stops are in the habit of retiring early in order to get their rest, and be prepared for their hard work next day; and when they go to bed early, they get none too much sleep. Now it seems cruel to keep them sitting up till a late hour, till they are obliged to give a gentle hint to the minister, by saying, "you can retire any time you choose," and then be met by the reply, "I am in no hurry to go to bed. I don't often retire before eleven o'clock."

The minister should propose to retire at an early hour, and persist in it for his own good, as well as that of the family. In short, he should be an example to the flock in all things.

GOOD SIGNS.

We have great reason to praise the Lord for his blessings on our efforts to scatter the light and truth, and for the favor he has given us with the people. We see no room to doubt that he is smiling upon our endeavors to glorify him in the publication of "our paper." The many encouraging letters received every week, with the most hearty expressions of benefit received from reading the paper, are convincing proofs that good is being accomplished; and when this ceases to be the result, our prayer is that it may be published no more.

We are pleased to learn that our paper is making its way into many families in other denominations, who are becoming deeply interested in the study of the Scriptures through its instrumentality.

We often have letters like the following:—

"NEW ANTIOCH, CLINTON CO., OHIO, Nov. 24TH, 1863.

MR. MILES GRANT, Boston, Mass.:

Dear Sir:—I had the pleasure of reading a No. of the 'World's Crisis' a short time since, and being well pleased with the spirit that seemed to animate those that conduct the paper, and wishing to know more about it, I enclose $—, with the request that you will send it to me. If ever there was a time when the discussions of the questions of peace and coming of the Prince of Peace were peculiarly important, now is the time. Seeing that faith in God's immediate providence, and the absolute necessity of christians relying implicitly on his protection, seems well nigh to have forsaken the earth.

Yours truly, J. M. RANNELLS, M. D."

Another writes to the President of the Advent Christian Association as follows:—

"DEAR SIR:—From a scrap which I notice in the Cincinnati Gazette, I see your name published as President of the 'Advent Christian Association.' I have no knowledge of the peculiar views entertained by this association, further than the name indicates; but I see from the statement of the Gazette that you publish a paper called the 'World's Crisis,' which I would like to take, but have no means of learning the whereabouts of its publication other than through you. Will you please send me a No. of the paper, or a note stating where and by whom it is published?

The subject is one that has interested my mind for many years. I have thought much, and written some on it; and as I am a physician, and not a minister, perhaps I have been less hampered in my investigation of the subject by preconceived theories and opinions than some others. In fact, the study of the Scriptures has led me in a very different way from that which I entertained when first starting out. Our religious newspaper editors seem to regard the study of prophecy, or the investigation of the Bible, with reference to the future, as forbidden ground, and are averse to the publication of any thing on the subject; because it has been the subject of much unworthy speculation; and a design to avoid one extreme has thrown them into another.

Very respectfully, HENRY G. TODD.

MR. D. T. TAYLOR. Danville, Ind."

We hope the friends of truth will take extra pains to show our paper to their neighbors. They will find many who feel like the two Dr's from whom we have just quoted. They are anxious to read about the very things in which we are interested. Let no opportunity slip for getting the subject before them. It is a duty we owe to them in behalf of Him who has given us our valuable hope. Let us be faithful.

PREMIUM TRACTS.—When any send new subscribers, so as to entitle them to premium tracts, according to our "liberal offer," we wish they would specify what works they wish, if they desire the premium; otherwise, we should conclude that they wish no compensation for their services.

CORRECTION.—In the article in the last Crisis headed "Shiloh," read Onkelos Targum, instead of "Pargem," and Jerusalem Targum, instead of "Sargum."

LOUIS NAPOLEON AND THE BATTLE OF ARMAGEDDON.

The above work, by M. Baxter, containing 344 pp., contains interesting matter. One prominent point in the book is an argument to show that Napoleon III. is the eighth head of the beast, and "the antichrist." Bro. Baxter seems very confident that his position is correct. He is not alone in his views, as there are a number of able men who hold the same sentiments. When in Montreal, C. E., we had several interviews with Bro. Baxter. He has awakened considerable interest in the minds of many on this subject. The following is an extract from the "introduction":—

The study of prophecy, which, during the dark ages of the Christian era, was almost wholly neglected, has for the last half-century attracted unwonted attention. The French Revolution of 1794, which was shown by many expositors, upward of one hundred years beforehand, to be predicted in the eleventh chapter of Revelation, had the effect of drawing many intelligent minds to the consideration of this subject. In that great political convulsion commentators have universally recognized a most important landmark, by means of which the slight degree of obscurity in which the year-day fulfillment of the prophecies was previously vailed has been almost entirely removed.

Guided by the light which that momentous epoch shed upon the page of prophecy, standard expositors have completely elucidated the year day interpretation of the Books of Daniel and Revelation; and the soundness and reliability of their principles of exposition have been fully attested by the identity of the conclusions at which they have independently arrived. Although differing in minor details, they remarkably agree as to the general outlines of prophecy, and a great many of them concur in showing the general period about 1864 to 1870 to be the time of Christ's coming, the close of the Christian dispensation, and the beginning of the Millennium. More than a hundred able treatises have been published during the last seventy years, in demonstration of this view; and when the scarcity of really profound students of prophecy is considered, it must be admitted that a conclusion reached by so many serious and sober-minded writers, is not very likely to be devoid of foundation.

Ever since the old-established system of things was broken up, at the time of the French Revolution, eminent expositors have persistently asserted that much more extensive and tremendous revolutions were foreshown to happen at the end of this dispensation, about the decade from 1860 to 1870; and in view of the present aspect of the world, it may now be asked, whether their forestatements have not been signally verified? The expectations of the total cessation of war, and of the gradual introduction of a millennium of peace and earthly prosperity, which have been so confidently entertained by those who disregarded prophecy, are now shown to have been vain and delusive. To illustrate the wide prevalence, twenty years ago, of such erroneous expectations, it may be sufficient to quote the sentiments expressed in 1844 by the President of the United States, the Queen of England, and the King of France.

President Tyler, in his message, on Dec. 2, 1844, to the United States Congress, said: "With all the powers of Europe we continue on the most friendly terms. Indeed, it affords me much satisfaction to state, that at no former period has the peace of that enlightened and important quarter of the globe ever been apparently more firmly established. The conviction that peace is the true policy of nations would seem to be growing and becoming deeper among the enlightened every where. We continue to receive assurances of the most friendly feelings on the part of all the European powers, with whom it is so obviously our interest to cultivate the most amicable relations. Nor can I anticipate the occurrence of any event which would be likely in any degree to disturb those relations." The Queen thus addressed the English Parliament in February, 1844: "I entertain a confident hope that the general peace, so necessary for the happiness and prosperity of all nations, will continue uninterrupted. My friendly relations with the King of the French, and the good understanding happily established between my government and that of his Majesty, with the continued assurances of the peaceful and amicable dispositions of all princes and states, confirms me in this expectation." Louis Philippe, addressing the French Chamber of Deputies in 1843, said, "The world is at peace; France is free, active, and happy. We can enjoy with security these blessings of peace, for it never was better secured;" and on December 26th, 1844, referring to his recent visit to England, he said: "I have gathered, in the sentiments that have been expressed to me, additional guarantees for the long duration of that generous peace, which assures to our country abroad a dignified and strong position, and at home an eternally increasing prosperity." He also expressed the assured belief, that "if he lived a few years longer, a general war in Europe would become impossible."

Let these fallacious anticipations be contrasted with the far-sighted views expressed at that period by prophetic investigators, such as the eminent Bickersteth, Faber, and Elliot. The Rev. E. Bickersteth, who showed from the prophetic dates that the Great Tribulation would intervene between the first and second Translations, from about 1864 to 1868, said in his Guide to the Prophecies and Divine Warning, in 1844–6: "The world seems now ripening by its sins for that fearful vintage of divine wrath which is the subject of so many predictions of the word of God. . . . It is a dangerous delusion for the Church to be anticipating peaceful triumphs, prosperous days of enlarging dominion and uninterrupted successes, when we may be on the verge of increasing trial and conflict, sorrow and suffering. . . . It is a time of universal peace. . . . But we have no reason to expect that the present state of peace and prosperity will continue many years. It will rather, we have reason to think from God's word, soon cease, and times of peculiar trial and conflict succeed. . . . Many who have deeply studied the subject, fully believe, and I cannot but concur with them, that we are in the last period of the fourth great empire, just previous to the Lord's return, as revealed to Daniel; that six out of the seven seals of Revelation have been opened, six out of the seven trumpets have sounded, six out of the seven vials have been poured out. The Lord's return is also, as many of us believe, nearly connected with the seventh seal, the seventh trumpet, and the seventh vial. We believe also that the chief prophetical dates that were to intervene have either run their course, or are nearly closing." The Rev. E. B. Elliot, in his celebrated work, Horæ Apocalypticæ, (first published in 1844,) having demonstrated the period 1865 to 1869, to be the time of the Second Advent, said: "The thought of the nearness of the consummation is of itself unspeakably awakening and solemn; and the rather when we consider further that there is to be expected antecedently a time of sifting and trial such as, perhaps, has never yet been experienced. For our christian poet Cowper's exquisite language does by no means adequately express the probable severity of the coming crisis. Ere the sabbatism of the saints begins, something much more is to be looked for than the mere gusty, closing blasts of a long tempest or billowy heavings of the sea before a calm, as 'it works itself to rest.' The final conflict between Christ's true Church and antichrist, and their respective chiefs and supporters, both visible and invisible, seems set forth in prophecy as most severe." The Rev. G. S. Faber,* who showed the time of the End to begin in 1864, spoke thus in his Secessions to Popery, in 1846: "The Ottoman empire totters to its fall: and the three spirits of Hellish Infidelity, Despotism, springing out of Anarchy, and Jesuitical Popery, are already engaged in their allied predicted vocation (Rev. 16.) The peace of Europe and of the world apparently rests upon the life of a single wise old man, (Louis Philippe.) When the obstacle presented by this modern Sobrino shall have been removed, the demons of discord, now scarcely repressed, will be let loose. Revolution will elevate the successful soldier, the revived Bonaparte of the day, to the imperial throne of military despotism. Then will follow that fearful material Universal War which is foretold by all the prophets as occurring at the Time of the End, and synchronically with the Restoration of Israel. And then Popery, budding as it has ever done into lawlessness and infidelity through the loathliness of its own corruptions, and allied with the great God-denying Antichrist; the False Romish Prophet, associated with the Apostatic Secular Empire under its last governing Head, will by some extraordinary process of violence come to its end, none helping it.

Many other extracts similar to the foregoing might be quoted from writings that have been published during the last seventy years.

* His "Revival of the French Emperorship," written in 1853, and republished at Appleton's, in New York, America, under the title of "Napoleon III. the Man of Prophecy," (37 cents) demonstrates most convincingly that Louis Napoleon is the Eighth Head of the Beast and Infidel Antichrist. He, as well as Frere and Gauntlett, showed previous to 1820 that a second French Emperor, exactly like Napoleon I. would arise some few years before 1864–7, and would be the last great Antichrist.

INTEMPERANCE INCREASING.

Notwithstanding all the great efforts that have been made to prevent drunkenness, it is evident that intemperance is rapidly increasing. This is true of all kinds of crime. Intemperance and sin are constant companions. Dark deeds need a stimulus from the intoxicating bowl, to give courage to go forward in their performance. It is a sad sight to see so many countenances of young men marked by this deadly enemy to the human race. Drinking is very fashionable at the present day. There are but few who do not use tobacco or strong drink. One calls for the other. Tobacco creates a thirst of a peculiar character, which is best gratified by alcoholic drinks. The results upon the system are very similar. The tobacco acts slower, but as surely. They are both effective aids in the way that leads to death and destruction.

We hope every one who reads these lines will resolve to abstain totally and forever from their use. They eat out the finer feelings of humanity in those who indulge in these soul-destroying habits; and yet many are so deceived by them, that they really think they are reaping a benefit. Thus Satan would have us think of every evil way. Is it not high time for those who wish to go to the marriage of the Lamb, where we must be presented without spot or wrinkle, to break off from all our bad habits? If we will not deny ourselves of all worldly lusts, we are not worthy to be associated with the pure in the kingdom.

The following sad tale we clipped from the Boston Journal, a few days since:—

"A SAD WARNING.—A few years ago a young woman left her happy home in Maine, father, mother, sisters, brothers, a large circle of friends, among whom she was respected and esteemed, and came to Boston. The tempter had whispered in her ear, and she had listened to his voice to her own ruin. She came to this city forewarned, with good resolutions of reform, and determined, when her shame was concealed, to return home and sin no more.

But want soon overtook her. Unable to earn a support by reputable means, too proud to beg, too honest to steal, she fell another step, to that grade of ruin from which so few ever recover themselves. Then her course was down, down, down, from a gilded palace of sin to a hovel, from costly apparel to dirty rags, from the society of those who had at least pretensions of respectability, to be shunned by all except men and women steeped in crime, who did not feel disgraced by the companionship of a poor, degraded, painted, dirty harlot.

And now comes the end, such an end as threatens all who choose to start on this path. Yesterday this woman was arrested as a common drunkard, and fell in a fit while being taken up to the Court room from the Tombs. She lingered until five o'clock this morning, receiving the best of care from the city physician and the keepers of the Tombs, but dissipation had done its work, and she died without being able to reveal the address of her parents, or give her real name. There it is—death in prison, of the delirium tremens, under an assumed name, with the following record of the end of one who was capable of shining in society and of loving and being loved:—

Died, in the Tombs, Dec. 22d, 1863, of delirium tremens, Mary Black, common drunkard, aged 24.—Herald, 22d."

For the World's Crisis.

"CHEEK."

This word has a meaning, in New England at least, which I do not find laid down in any of the dictionaries, of Johnson, Webster, or Worcester. It is used to express the same characteristics which we sometimes describe when we say a man has a great deal of brass. A more exact illustration might be supposed on this wise: if a minister should send his appointments to preach through the columns of the Crisis, and get out his congregation on the strength of its circulation, and then should not only use his position to spread his pet notions and hobbies, but should also improve his opportunity to slander its editor and conductors, try to curtail its circulation and destroy its influence, while at the same time he continued to use it as a vehicle for his appointments; in such a case I think it might be properly said, "That man has a good deal of cheek."

"But who does any such thing?"

O, that is the question. I do not pretend to know; do you?

Probably no one will flutter unless they should happen to be hit. PPP.

NEW SUBSCRIBERS IN 1863.

It is pleasant, in reviewing the closing year, to look back, and see the advancement we have made in influence and usefulness since the year began. It is sweet, also, to look forward with hope into the opening year, and feel that we have, and shall still have, new reasons to rejoice and give thanks to God who so abundantly crowns us with blessings. Glad in its prosperity, The World's Crisis and Second Advent Messenger wishes its many thousand readers a happy new year.

At the beginning of 1863, feeling that the Lord had a greater work for the Crisis to do, and a wider field of usefulness before it, we proposed the possible addition of 1000 names to its subscription list, before the close of the year, and urged a special effort to that end. That effort has been made,—the friends of The Crisis have labored nobly,—and what is now the result? Although our proposition was deemed enthusiastic, and impossible of realization, the 1000 names were had in less than six months; and now, at the close of the year, we have the pleasure of chronicling the addition of over 2000 (2060) names to our books since the beginning of the year. An increase without a parallel among Second Advent papers, and perhaps—taking all things into consideration—without a parallel in any other.

Of this number, over 1200 were obtained by the friends of the Crisis, as the result of effort.

As we have said, on a former occasion, what has been done once, can be done again. A like effort, the year to come, will, with God's blessing, produce a like result. Double the effort, and you double the result. 2000 more, at the end of 1864, would be a very acceptable increase; 4000 would be better. Who will work for it? Who will double their subscription this year? How many will get twice as many as they did the last? You can do it, if you will. Who will TRY?

W. B. H.

Who Obtained Subscribers in 1863?

The 2060 subscribers sent in the past year were obtained by the efforts of some four hundred and fifty brethren. Some four hundred of them obtained in the aggregate about 1500 subscribers, or, from one to four each; and fifty, whose names we give below, sent in, in all, about 600, or, from five to one hundred and twenty each.

Noble band of co-workers in a noble cause!—may it be doubled this year, and more abundant success follow their efforts to extend the circulation of this many-tongued messenger of the Coming King. W. B. H.

Five each—By I. C. Wellcome, C. F. Sweet, D. C. Terry, D. A. Dickinson, H. V. Davis, J. S. Heath, J. M. Jenness, W. H. Mitchell, O. D. Pease, C. Piper, Dr. E. S. Robbins, S. C. Raymond, C. H. Willey, L. Loomer, J. A. Sober, P. A. Smith.
Six each—By D S Clark, G W Foster, J M Worthing.
Seven each—By Geo. A. Streeter, D. Webster, Mrs. E. S. Willard.
Eight each—By Wm. Sheldon, N. A. Hitchcock, R. F. Berry, D. Cogswell, N. J. Winchell, J. R. Hall.
Nine each—By D. T. Taylor, H. G. McCulloch.
Ten each—By Thos. Smith, Chas. Stratton, Frank Burr, Chas. Goodrich, Geo. T. Adams, Daniel Braley, R. Haskins.
Eleven each—By Wm. E. Hathaway, C. P. Burroughs, R. R. York.
Twelve each—By J V Himes, I Damman, F A Baker.
Thirteen each—By C. P. Dow, H. K. Flagg.
Eighteen—By A. W. Sibley.
Thirty-one—By H. L. Hastings.
Thirty-five—By A. Fike.
Fifty-four—By C. B. Turner.
One hundred and twenty—By Miles Grant.

For the World's Crisis.

GOSPEL TO THE POOR.

On Thursday last, I was called to stop at Northwood, and attend the funeral of Michael, who died at the Town-poor House. He had lived with our brethren, and others in the neighborhood, and had gained an honest reputation. In his sickness he ran to the fountain, and made Christ his true friend and lover, by yielding himself to be his servant; thus finding joy unspeakable and full of glory. He fell asleep in full assurance of hope, and the light of Christ illumining the dark valley, as was very evident from his conversation with Bro. Hill, the overseer. He entreated his friends out of Christ to cease from sinning and be ready for the judgment.

Bro. Hill made due preparation, and took special pains to have all the household in a situation to hear. There were the aged, the infirm, the halt, and the maimed, with the neighbors,—all come to take their last look of the stranger who had fallen so peacefully. I felt it quite an honor to be with them, and to be able, under God, to preach to them that gospel which is the power of God to salvation to all the believing; a salvation that brings man to life again, giving him, if he be hid with Christ, honor, glory, immortality, and eternal life. The season was one of special interest to me. I had much freedom. The word seemed to run, and all were interested. I could but hope much good would be the result. The poor have the gospel preached to them. This burial was void of all that pomp and worldly display, so common; but everything was decent and in order. He was silently conveyed to his grave on the swell of land back of the house, where he will quietly sleep till the summons comes, when all the sleepers will awake to die no more.

Blessings big and abundant rest upon Bro. Hill, his companion, and household of unfortunate ones. Amen. L. BOUTELL.

Andover, N. H., Dec. 22nd, 1863.

For the World's Crisis.

THE OLD YEAR AND THE NEW.

BY HUMANITAS.

MR. EDITOR:—Believing it may be useful to be reminded of our delinquencies in the past, and of our obligations in the future, I send you for publication in your valuable paper the following brief poem. By giving it an insertion, it is hoped you may gratify and benefit your readers, as you will oblige the author.

I.

Adieu, old year! with all thy cares and woes!
While thousands, sorrowing, shall mourn thy close!
Welcome the new! with gratitude and praise
To Him whose mercy lengthens out our days.

II.

Back o'er the past, as here we stand and view
The devious paths our feet have travelled through,— Forgiveness of the wrong may we implore,
And firm resolve that we will sin no more.

III.

Have we to any spoken a harsh word,
By which the unhallowed passions we have stirred?
The indiscretion may we ne'er repeat,
But kindly look or speak to all we meet.

IV.

Have we to any an injustice done,
By word or deed—may we the sin atone
By making RESTITUTION—if we can,—
According to the heavenly Teacher's plan.

V.

Have we sought wealth by some unrighteous mean,*
Beneath some guise we thought our guilt would screen?
Let us remember God the motive saw,
And branded us the breakers of His law.

VI.

Have we been blessed with plenty in our store,
And turned the hungry empty from our door?
Let us reflect that He cognizance took,
And noted the "OMISSION" in His book.

VII.

Have we spent time and means to pamper pride,
While conscience, oft, perhaps, the sin did chide?
May we the folly of such conduct see,
And in the future each more humble be.

VIII.

Have we been called to meet the world's cold scorn,
And wished—like Job—we never had been born?
May it His friendship teach us to secure,
Whose love, undying, ever shall endure.

IX.

Have we been called the loss of friends to mourn,
Who have by death from our embrace been torn?
May it remind us we are mortal, too,—
That we should ever live with death in view.

X.

Have we not trained the young with proper care,
And sought to guard them 'gainst each sinful snare?
More faithful may we be in future days,
To guide their tender feet in wisdom's ways.

XI.

If for our bleeding country we've not toiled,
That she by foes might be no more despoiled,—
May we each other love so war shall cease,
And North and South, hereafter, live in peace.

XII.

Whatever duty we have left undone,
IN THE OLD YEAR—which now its course has run,—
Or act performed which it was wrong to do,—
May each one be more faithful IN THE NEW.

XIII.

As thus we look upon the year that's gone,
And see so much which we have cause to mourn,—
Resolved, in future, we will be more true
To God and man—WE'LL WELCOME IN THE NEW.

1863–4.

* Instrument—or device.

Correspondence.

From Bro. L. Boutell.

BRO. GRANT:—I send a few items of mission labor for the readers of the Crisis, to cheer and encourage the weary traveler, while toiling through the perils of the last days. I have spent all my time since the first of November in this State, visiting and preaching in many places; had many calls I could not supply.

In Concord there is a peaceable state of things, with a desire on the part of the church for an increase of spiritual interest, and they are making an effort in the right direction to secure, by the blessing of God, a consistent and faithful administration of truth in the Spirit, that shall benefit those who come to hear. They have full meetings; and, as far as I could judge, there is an interest among them for the welfare of one another, and the salvation of men. I have had good seasons with them. Bro. Merriam and eight or ten others, gave spiritual testimonies after the sermon, which is the life of the meeting. It is blessed to see the old soldiers of twenty years' warfare united in love with those of the eleventh hour enlistment, all doing their best by faith to swell the waters of salvation, and induce men to try its healing power.

I have been to Barnstead. Found some of like precious faith, and had one meeting with them. From thence I went to New Durham Corner, to attend an appointment made for me by Bro. Smith. I found a home with Bro. Callomy. I went to the meeting at the schoolhouse, found it full, with much religious interest. All seemed to have an ear to hear, as well as a heart to feel. I had a blessed good time in presenting the good news, and there was an interest to hear more of "this gospel" in this place. There was much interest. The testimonies that were given abundantly showed that the Lord was among them of a truth. Some have just put on Christ, and others felt the need of religion. It was encouraging to labor with them. I promised them another meeting the following week.

My next meeting was at the Ridge. I commenced on Saturday evening, and had a full house, and good hearing. I found the real faith was left. Sunday, all came together again, with many more, even a crowd. I did the best I could to give the household meat, plain, simple gospel food; and I found their appetites were keen, and they feasted all day, and in the evening were ready for more, as was evident by their going two miles when we had another good meeting together. The Lord was indeed with us. The testimony of all confirmed it. All went on in love and harmony.

Monday, I visited some, and spent the night with Bro. J. G. Smith and family. They have moved to New Durham Ridge, and I hope will be a blessing to the people in all this region. He and Bro. Pinkham were at Alton Corner, having meetings, the same time I was at the Ridge. Tuesday evening I went to New Durham Centre to fill my appointment. The brethren went over from the Ridge. We had a house crowded, and the Lord favored us with a special good meeting,—the best of the wine at the last of the feast. It was blessed to be there. All seemed to take hold with a whole-heartedness that always does one good. I was delighted with the appearance of the disciples here. They were full of interest for each other. The young came out to hear, and were solicitous for their salvation. I pray they may yield to Jesus Christ, believe on him and get ready for the day of judgment and glory. There is a good church here, zealously affected in this good cause. God bless them. You may say this is the good side I have pictured out; but it is all the side I saw, and I have no suspicions to intimate. The campmeeting at Alton Bay removed a great amount of prejudice, and the people in all that region are desirous to hear our faith. The cause is prospering. God speed the truth, and a preparation for his coming. L. BOUTELL.

From Sr. S. F. Bradford.

BRO. GRANT:—Five weeks ago I listened to a sermon on baptism, which was to the point, and which caused me to doubt my being a child of God; for Jesus said, "If ye love me keep my commandments," and the command is, "Believe and be baptized." Here is my condemnation, that I have not been baptized. "But," says one, "you have been baptized and you are a regular communicant with the Congregational church." True, I received their "seal of the covenant" from a hand dipped in water, and applied to my forehead; and for five years was never absent from their communion; but I was not satisfied at the time with the baptism, but yielded with reluctance to an overwhelming tide of opposition. But I can say from experience that "the way of the transgressor is hard."

For a long time I have had no rest on this point. Oft times I am plunged in dark despair, on account of this disobedience,—afraid to live, yet not ready to die. But I pray God to spare me a little longer, and not cut me off in my transgression. If anguish of soul, tears of penitence, resolutions of amendment would avail, I should feel justified; but not so. I must act; in short, I must and will, God sparing my life, be baptized.

I believe that I was born an Adventist; for from my earliest recollections, I believed many things from my heart which are taught by believers in the Advent faith; at the same time disbelieving the traditions of men so prevalent among us. Yet up to within six years, I knew not that there was another person on earth that believed as I did. At this period I ventured to express my strange views to a friend, a physician, who put into my hand a work entitled, "What is Man?" by Miles Grant. Here then was one of my faith; one who read the Bible as I did; viz. just as it reads. Yours in the faith,

Plympton, Mass. FANNIE S. BRADFORD.

[This sister has been baptized and received much comfort.—ED.]

From Bro. Wm. Ingham.

BRO. GRANT:—Having returned to my former field of labor in Nova Scotia, I would just say for the encouragement of the now scattered, but soon to be gathered saints, that I have visited Clements Port, Hillsburg, Granville and Chut's Cave. Find some still on the way to the land of rest, amidst opposition. In some of the places they have but little preaching, others more. They seem to be decided to go through. The Lord bless and strengthen them, and help my ministering brethren to feed the church of God, that he hath purchased with his own blood; that when the chief shepherd shall appear, we may receive a crown of glory that fadeth not away. That will be good pay. May it stimulate us all to faithfulness in the cause of our divine Redeemer.

Bro. Wood, from Rhode Island, is here laboring, I think, to good acceptance. Bro. Read, from Maine, made us a timely visit of some weeks. He was at Hillsburg when I returned, having a protracted meeting. The brethren and sisters were encouraged and strengthened. There has been quite a stir for a few weeks past on the subject of the sleep of the dead and the destruction of the wicked. Our Methodist brethren are getting quite awake, and are giving lectures to prove the immortality of man, the conscious state of the dead, etc. Perhaps, Bro. Grant, it may be your duty to make us a visit next season and give the people some instruction on the above doctrines. I think the lectures are doing good and are stirring up the candid minds to search the Bible for themselves, to see what is truth, and some are becoming quite favorable. May the Lord help us all to know and obey the truth, and be sanctified by it, and be presented blameless before the throne of his glory, is my prayer. WM. M. INGHAM.

Clements Port, N. S., Dec. 2d, 1863.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

SR. J. CHAPMAN, Worthington, Ms., writes:—"We take this opportunity to acknowledge the reception of your paper, which is ever a welcome visitor. We know not how to express our thanks for it. Would to God we were able to help sustain it. If there is a paper in the world that we would help sustain, it is the Crisis. It has been 'meat in due season' to us. We should not know how to do without it."

BRO. G. STORER, New Britain, Ct., writes:—"I have been sending papers, books and tracts to my friends in Erie, Pa., and I find they like them. One cousin is very much interested in them. She thinks your books and H. L. Hastings' are the best of any thing she ever read. I should like to have you see some of her letters. She asks a great many questions, and some that I cannot answer. I want she should have the paper, for it is so good. I wish every one could have it that will read it.

I have not had a paper for the last fifteen years that I took so much satisfaction in lending and giving away, as I do the Crisis. I think it decidedly the best paper I ever read; and I have no doubt the Lord is pleased with the management of it, or it would not prosper as it has."

For the World's Crisis.

BRO. GRANT:—I find that I have wronged the Sunday School of the Adventists in my statement in a late article. It is one of their rules that none but professed christians shall be teachers. MRS. C. A. KNOWLES.

Peace Dale, R I.

☞ Be careful of your word, even in keeping the most trifling appointment. But do not blame another for a failure of that kind till you have heard his excuse.

☞ There is quite as much in knowing when as in knowing how to speak.

Obituaries.

E. Mitchell.

Died in Kennebunk, Dec. 11th, 1863, Capt. E. Mitchell, aged about 72 years.

A faithful and devoted servant of God has fallen in death. Almost a half century has passed away since our dear brother (my uncle) found Jesus precious to his soul; and ever since that time has endeavored with earnestness and faithful devotion to live according to the teaching of the Holy Scriptures, which he ever regarded as his rule of faith and practice; believing they were able to make him "wise unto salvation." He was a man of much prayer; holding frequent communion with his heavenly Father, thus making his house a house of prayer. He was very constant in his attendance to the prayer meeting, a place very dear to him. The language of the poet, in the following hymn, was very expressive of his feelings:—

"I love it, I love it, and who shall dare
To chide me for loving the house of prayer?
I have prized it long as a holy place,
Where my gracious Lord shows his smiling face."

And not only did he love the house of prayer, but he loved to labor when there; always being ready to speak for Jesus.

He embraced the doctrine of the speedy coming of Christ in 1842, and since that time has waited with longing desire for the return of Him he so much loved. During the few last years of his life, he was deprived of the use of his eyes; but the thought of so soon seeing Jesus, when the eyes of the blind would be opened, together with the sustaining grace of God, enabled him to bear his affliction with much christian patience. Many of our preaching brethren, as they read this notice, will call to remembrance the happy seasons they have enjoyed at his home, for his home was the home of the weary pilgrim.

He leaves a wife, with many other relatives, to mourn. May God bless her who is bereft of so kind and devoted a companion, and may that strong arm upon which she has so long leaned, support her in this her hour of affliction. O when will this dark night of weeping end? when will death cease his cruel work? when will come that bright morning when all tears will be wiped away, and the cruel reign of death forever end? it cannot surely be long.

"Fly swifter round, ye wheels of time,
And bring the welcome day."

W. H. Mitchell.

Mary Ann Chesley.

Died in Farmington, Dec. 13th, 1863, Sr. Mary Ann, wife of Mr. Benjamin Chesley, aged thirty-four years, two months, and fourteen days.

The subject of this notice was formerly the wife of Bro. Alexis Chamberlain, of New Durham, who died in the autumn of 1854, and who was a firm believer in the Lord's speedy coming. In early life, Sr. Mary Ann espoused the cause of Christ, and about the year 1854 embraced the Advent faith, which she held till death. It was my privilege to be with her for a few days before she died, and even in the last trying moment; and in her case was fully exemplified the power of the "blessed hope" of the gospel to sustain, even in the hour of death. She had suffered much through fear of death, but that was all taken from her—its tears all gone. She could talk of death as calmly as though she was about going some pleasant journey;—indeed the room bore not the gloom of death, for it was a christian that was about to die. She had been a great sufferer, but for some hours before death was perfectly free from distress. Strength was given her both of body and mind. Calling her friends to her bedside, she earnestly besought them to seek the Lord, and meet her in the kingdom. She requested and obtained a promise from her husband to seek the Lord and meet her there also.

That death-bed scene I shall never forget. The Spirit of the Lord filled the room, and peace like a river flowed through our souls, changing the countenance of the dying, giving it a calm and heavenly expression, so peaceful, so happy, that truly it seemed none other than the house of God and the very gate of heaven. While talking with a friend, she remarked,—"It is not so much to die, after all, if we are only ready. I shall not go to heaven; I shall sleep,—sleep in Jesus."

Thus a kind and affectionate husband, two children, an aged father, brothers and sisters, have been called to mourn the loss of a beloved and faithful wife, mother, daughter and sister; but they "sorrow not" as "others which have no hope; for if we believe that Jesus died and rose again, even so them also which sleep in Jesus will God bring with him." By her request, Eld. Jas. G. Smith attended her funeral, and gave a solemn and stirring discourse, founded on Ps. 17: 15,—"I shall be satisfied when I awake with thy likeness." May the surviving friends heed the warnings she gave them, by fleeing to Christ, who will sustain and comfort them in every trial of life; and in the bright morning of the resurrection, when their loved ones shall come forth to immortality, may they be reunited to part no more forever. Martha S. Horne.

Sarah P. Burbank.

Fell sweetly asleep in Jesus on Tuesday evening, Dec. 22d., Sarah P., wife of E. G. Burbank, Esq., of Salem, Mass., aged fifty-nine years.

Death triumphs over another saint of Jesus, who loved and looked "for that blessed hope, and the glorious appearing of the great God," "even our Savior Jesus Christ. Her disease was consumption, from which she suffered intensely for several months previous to her disease; but through her sickness she manifested a patient spirit, not a murmuring word escaped her lips. Her faith in Christ was unwavering, and his grace sustained her unto the end.

My father mourns the loss of a faithful wife and an affectionate companion. A large family lament the death of a loving, self-sacrificing, pious mother. Relations, neighbors and friends, pay tribute to her virtue and godliness. The poor, the widow and the fatherless, weep for one who has always ministered to their necessities. By her they were clothed and fed. Sleeping now; but awaking by and by, she will receive her reward from her Savior, who will receive her to himself, and give her a crown of righteousness at that day; and not to her only, but unto all that love his appearing. Funeral services conducted by Rev. Mr. Winn of the Cent. Bapt. church, of which she was a much valued member. F. H. Burbank.

Eld. Humphrey B. Hyde.

Eld. Humphrey B. Hyde, died Oct. 25th, 1863. Bro. H. resided with his mother in Canadice, Ontario Co., N. Y. He was away from home at Floods Corners, when he died, laboring faithfully in the great work of his Master, though he did so in much weakness of body. But he died at his post.

Bro. H. was converted to the Advent faith through the labors of Father Chapman, in Springwater, N. Y., six or seven years ago. He labored in the vicinity of home some years with good results. He also labored in Boston and New York. In the latter city he labored faithfully for some time, and with some success. But his health failed him, so that he had to return to the country, but he never recovered fully from that sickness. He was an example to the flock, and an intelligent and faithful minister.

He will no doubt receive a crown of glory when the Chief Shepherd shall appear.

Joshua V. Himes.

Jose Roberts.

Died in New Durham, Sept. 27th, 1863, of whooping cough and fever, Jose St. Clair, daughter of David S. and Sabrina Roberts, aged one year, four months, and twelve days.

Farewell, dear babe, till Christ shall come,
And raise thy body from the tomb,
To wear a crown of glory bright,
And wave a palm with sweet delight.

Jer. 31: 16-17, and Matt. 2: 16. "Thus saith the Lord, refrain thy voice from weeping, and thine eyes from tears, for thy work shall be rewarded, saith the Lord; and they shall come again from the land of the enemy. And there is hope in thine end, saith the Lord, and thy children shall come again to their own border."

Joseph Roberts.

James Miller.

Died of diphtheria, in New Orleans Hospital, James W. Miller, son of John and Mary Miller, aged twenty years, lacking four days.

The subject of this notice was wounded at Port Hudson, and lost one leg. The funeral discourse was by the writer, and the occasion improved by an effort to present man's need of a Savior, and to exhibit Jesus as the only hope of life. May these dear parents and the surviving children be sustained in this hour of deep trial by the blessed hope of the gospel, which is as an anchor to the soul, sure and steadfast. James will sleep but a short time, for the night is wearing fast away; and very soon a voice far sweeter than the most enchanting music will say, James, 'tis morn; awake, and in my image rise, of richest joys partake in my blest paradise. James Dudley.

Elizabeth Rogers.

Died in Charleston, R. I., Dec. 4th, 1863, Sr. Elizabeth Rogers, wife of Bro. Thomas Rogers, both descendants of the Naraganestte tribe of Indians, aged forty-eight years.

Sister Rogers embraced the belief that Jesus is soon coming, about 1844. She has loved his appearing up to the time of her death. Being a great sufferer the last two or three years of her life, she found the blessed hope a great consolation and support in trials, until she calmly fell asleep in Jesus.

"Blessed sleep,
From which none ever wake to weep."

Bro. and Sr. Rogers' house was always open for God's servants, and they took pleasure in doing for them what God enabled them to perform. They were both members of church, worshiping at Clark's Hall. She was highly esteemed as a christian by all who knew her.

Bro. Rogers is left to mourn, but he sorrows not as those that have no hope. May he and surviving friends lay it to heart, and be led to walk more closely with God. Words of comfort to the friends were spoken by the writer, from 1 Thess 4: 18.

P. C. Rodman.

Neldora A. Stevens.

Died in Orange, N. H., Dec. 17th, 1863, of diphtheria, Neldora A., daughter of S. H. and B. W. Stevens, aged five years, six months and five days.

Little Nellie was a lovely child and loved by all who knew her. But death loves a shining mark, and once more entered the family circle, and laid his cold icy hand upon the pride and idol of the family. Though she sleeps the sleep of death, she will awake in the morn, having immortality and eternal life. May this affliction be sanctified to the good of the surviving companion and parent, that when the great Life-giver shall come and awake the sleepers, that he may be changed in a moment, that he with them may eat of the tree of life, which is in the midst of the paradise of God.

S. K. Ford.

Belinda W. Stevens.

Died in Orange of diphtheria, Dec. 14th, 1863, Belinda W. Stevens, aged thirty-seven years, five months and seventeen days.

The subject of this notice professed faith in Christ, and fully believed that Jesus is the way, the resurrection and the life, and all that sleep in Jesus will God bring with him.

Charles C. Stevens.

Died in Orange, N. H., Dec. 5th, 1863, of diphtheria, Charles C., son of S. H. and B. W. Stevens, aged ten years, one month and four days.

Walter Curtis.

Died in Providence, R. I., Dec. 29th, 1863, Walter F., son of Luke and Caroline H. Curtis, aged seven years, eleven months, and two days.

C. H. Sweet.

Summary of News.

FOREIGN.

The steamship Adriatic brings news from Galway Dec. 22nd.

The Liverpool Post says Lord Lyons, in a message to Earl Russell, predicts the termination of the American war in three months.

It is stated that Mr. Supervielle, the new rebel envoy to France, has a mission to notify the French Government of the recognition by the Confederates of the empire of Mexico, and also to try and persuade Napoleon to recognize the South in return.

The Liverpool Post gives prominence to the following paragraph:

"We consider ourselves in a position to state that Lord Lyons, in a dispatch to Earl Russell from Washington, announces that the war will be terminated within the next three months. The Confederates being in the greatest extremities, will have speedily to propose an armistice. In our informant we have the fullest confidence. It is possible that President Lincoln's proclamation has reference to the facts on which Lord Lyons grounded his conclusion."

THE HOLSTIEN QUESTION.

The Holstein question remains unchanged.

Austrian troops continue to arrive at Hamburg.

A public meeting of Norwegians has been called for the purpose of voting an address to the King, stating that Sweden and Norway are bound to assist Denmark in defending her frontiers, that Scandinavian interests are endangered, and that the people are ready to bear whatever burden may be imposed for the purpose.

It is reported that 22,000 Swedish troops, headed by the King, are in motion.

POLAND.

The telegraph continues to report engagements in which the insurgents are generally successful. Three of the insurgent leaders have been hung at Lizria.

The Great Eastern steamship is to be disposed of by lottery.

FRANCE.

Great dissatisfaction with the Emperor's Mexican policy prevails in France. Even Maximilian is reported as saying:

"I have not abandoned my desire to reign in Mexico; but the difficulties of the situation unexpectedly appear to increase. Only a partial suffrage will call me to the throne; and the financial difficulty has rather increased than diminished."

Liverpool, Dec. 23d, Queenstown 24th.

The London Globe cautions its readers against the statement that Lord Lyons had telegraphed to Earl Russell, predicting the termination of the American war in six months.

The Paris correspondent of the London Times insinuates that the Archduke Maximilian is not likely to accept the Mexican crown. He stipulates for a recognition of his monarchy by the American Government, among other conditions, and this recognition has been emphatically declined at Washington. It is reported that Napoleon is casting about for some one else in place of Maximilian.

AUSTRIA AND HUNGARY.

A revolutionary manifesto has been placarded in the principal towns of Hungary, announcing the establishment of a General Committee to maintain the independence of Hungary, and assuming the direction of affairs under Kossuth. The Austrian government is taking great precautions, but it is asserted that general agitation prevails.

INDIA.

The Bombay mails show that the trouble with the hill tribes was assuming alarming proportions. The British troops have lost heavily.

A Palermo paper publishes the following letter from Garibaldi:

"Caprera, Nov. 24, 1863.

My dear Basil—I am in really excellent health, much beyond my hopes. With the exception of the scar, which is in a complete normal state, and a little stiffness, my right foot can quite compare with the left. I send you an affectionate greeting, and am yours always. G. Garibaldi."

Garibaldi on the Polish Question.—In a letter on the Polish question, just published, Garibaldi says:—"The revolting cynicism shown in this holy cause is a living shame to diplomacy. While rivers of blood are flowing, their Excellencies amuse Europe with their notes. It is truly sad in these so-called days of social progress, to find no Government which will protect against slaughter—which will say to the Czar, 'Cease your career of murder, spare these men, these women, these infant victims who do not even belong to you,' and then put itself at the head of its people to support the demand. Such a Government would in truth, be the image of divinity on earth, and all the Liberals of the world would kneel at the feet to pray it to enlist them in its ranks.

☞ An Israelite has recently been chosen Mayor of Southampton, England, and another is Mayor of Liverpool.

DOMESTIC.

From the Morris Island correspondence of the Baltimore American we copy the following, written under date of Dec. 22d:—

"The rebels have been busy lately obstructing the channel which runs inside of Sullivan's Island. A steamboat was seen there for several days with a working party engaged in driving spiles across the inlet.

SUMTER.

An irregular fire is still kept up on Sumter from our mortar batteries. Several days ago one of our shells exploded within the fort, and was followed by another explosion, which set fire to something that burnt for several hours, covering the fort with a cloud of smoke. It is supposed that the woodwork of their bomb-proof was destroyed by the fire. The Charleston papers admit that twelve men were killed by the explosion.

The enemy are busily at work inside the fort, and the principal object of our fire now is to interfere with their operations. Large working parties are brought down to the fort in steamers, which also bring down great quantities of sand in bags. The opinion is freely expressed here that the rebels have now a formidable sand fort within the ruins of Sumter. The taking of the place is therefore a problem as far as ever from a satisfactory solution. It can only be taken by assault, and that assault can only be made by an expedition in boats. The obstacles in the way of the success of an enterprise of this kind are so obvious, that they need not be dwelt upon. Probably the favorable moment for putting Sumter in our possession has already escaped us.

THE PROSPECT.

The prospect of a resumption of active operations, or of our forces occupying Charleston at an early day, does not appear to me very flattering. A month ago I thought different, and then expressed a more hopeful opinion than events since have justified. Delays, some arising from unforeseen accidents, such as the sinking of the Weehawken; others, it appears to me, causeless, but all vexatious, have intervened, until now the opinion is everywhere expressed that no serious renewal of the attempt to take Charleston will be made before next spring. It seems impossible to keep more than one-half of the monitors here in fighting condition. Since the taking of Morris Island every monitor has been to Port Royal for repairs, more than half have been there twice since that time, and even now we have only four here. One of these will have to go down as soon as she can be replaced by one of those now there repairing. I do not pretend to canvass the causes of these delays, or of the frequency with which the monitors have to seek the machine-shop, but only record the fact as it stands. In the meantime the hope of a reinforcement of the iron-clad fleet from the North seems also to have died out.

New York, Dec. 29th. The Washington correspondent of the Philadelphia Ledger says that intelligence has been received from the department of the Gulf, of the occupation of La Fourche county by the rebels. Our forces a short time previously had fallen back into the parish of St. John's. The occupation will do the rebels no good, as the position just at present is not an important one to either party. A rebel expedition into Bayou La Fourche is said to have resulted in the capture of the steamers "Anyone" and La Fourche, with nearly all on board, including, it is said, Col. "Jilbourne," the former Provost Marshal of New Orleans.

The Conscription Act.—The following are in substance the various amendments intended to be proposed to the bill amendatory of the conscription act.

By Mr. Powell: That the amended act shall not take effect in States in which the draft, under the original act, has not been enforced. The first draft in those States shall take place as if the amended act had not passed.

By Mr. Trumbull: That the fact that any person of foreign birth has voted in any State or territory, or held any office in its gift, shall be taken as conclusive evidence that such person is not entitled to exemption from military service on account of alienage.

By Mr. Howe: That all sums paid by way of commutation shall constitute a fund to be equally distributed among the several persons who shall be drafted into the service under the same call, one-third to be paid at the termination of each year's service.

By Mr. Anthony: That any drafted person conscientiously unable to perform military service, by reason of his sincere and religious scruples against bearing arms, may apply by petition to any judge of any United States court for the district in which he resides, and if he see fit, that the petitioner be relieved from the penalty provided for his refusal to bear arms. And the person so exempted shall be in honor bound to contribute toward any hospital or charity a peace-offering in accordance with his means.

By. Mr. Wilson: That any person resident in the States of Virginia, North or South Carolina, Georgia, Florida, Alabama, Mississippi, Louisiana, Texas or Arkansas, who may voluntarily enlist in the United States service, shall be entitled to the benefits and privileges of existing laws, and may elect into what regiments they shall be mustered, and may be credited to the State to which such regiment belongs. Africans to be mustered only into African regiments.

Great Snow Storm at the West.

Buffalo, Jan. 2d. The heaviest snow-storm known in this vicinity since the year 1844 has been raging here yesterday and to-day. The water in the creeks, canals and slips has risen to an unusual height, causing much damage. The Lake Shore and Erie Railroads are completely blockaded by the snow. The trains on the Central Railroad are all behind time. Two hundred feet of the Niagara Falls Railroad, near this city, is washed away, and no cars have left the depot since Thursday. Trains are, however, running from Black Rock to Suspension Bridge. Business in this city is almost entirely suspended. No mails have been received today. Telegraphic communication with the West is intercepted. The Evans bridge, in the lower part of the city, has been carried away, and it is reported some lives were lost; but this cannot be traced to any reliable source.

Oswego, N. Y., Jan 2d. A terrible snow storm has been raging here for the past twenty-four hours. Four hundred feet of the east pier has been washed away. Several vessels have broken away from their moorings, and the shipping is badly damaged.

Louisville, Jan. 2d. Friday forenoon at nine o'clock the mercury was at 18 1-2 degrees below zero, and continued below all day. On Saturday at 9.30 in the forenoon it was at 3 degrees above, and at the same hour in the evening at 14 above zero. Nothing like this was ever known in Kentucky.

Indianapolis, Jan. 2d. A very severe snow storm commenced here on Thursday and lasted for two days. Railroad travel is almost suspended. The thermometer at 28 degrees below zero.

Chicago, Jan. 2d. At nine o'clock this forenoon the thermometer was at 28 1-2 degrees below zero. All the roads are completely blockaded with snow.

St. Louis, Jan. 2d. The weather has been intensely cold, the mercury having fallen 24 degrees below zero—unparalleled in this region. All the railroads leading out of the city are blockaded with snow. No trains have arrived or departed for two days. The river is closed this forenoon. Teams and pedestrians crossed on the ice all the forenoon.

A large number of cattle and hogs were frozen to death on weather bound trains on the North Missouri Railroad.

New York Crowded.—The Evening Post remarks that never, probably, in the history of New York have there been so many people in the city as there are at present. It is well known that, besides an unusual influx of northern and western strangers, a vast number of southern refugees are in town awaiting the conclusion of the war. Altogether it is estimated—though it is impossible to say how correctly—that there are at least one hundred thousand strangers temporarily residing in town. Not only is it next to impossible to find a house to hire, but it is even very difficult to secure ordinary sleeping apartments. All hotel and boarding-house keepers have raised their prices, and yet are daily obliged to turn away applicants for board and lodging.

St. Johns, N. F., Dec. 30th. The following has been received via Galway, but not through our Associated Press Agent here:

Mexico. The Paris correspondent of the Times says the recognition of the Archduke Maximillian by the Washington government is considered indispensable prior to his assumption of the new Mexican monarchy. The proposal was formerly made by the French government to Pres. Lincoln's Cabinet. A dispatch from Washington in reply was to the effect that the American Republic would never tolerate, much less recognise, a monarchy established at their own doors. It is supposed that this will decide the Archduke to abandon the idea of accepting the throne of Mexico.

☞ Negroes from the country are still pouring into St. Louis at the rate of one hundred per day to join the new negro regiments now forming at Benton Barracks. They hail chiefly from the counties along the Missouri river.

New Religious Movement.—We understand that a number of gentlemen who are active members of the different evangelical denominations in this city are about inaugurating a movement which will secure the daily preaching of the gospel to those who can be induced to attend it. They have hired the Meionaon for one year for this purpose, and their plan as at present proposed (though it may be modified in the future as experience shall suggest) is to have a prayer-meeting every afternoon which will be conducted by laymen, and preaching every evening by one of the pastors of Boston or vicinity. The plan meets the cordial approval of Rev. Dr. Kirk, Rev. Dr. Parker, Rev. Dr. Cushman, Rev. Mr. Bixby, and many others whose names we need not specify, and who will give to the movement their heartiest efforts. A cordial invitation will be given to all the pastors of the evangelical churches to unite in the movement. The first meeting will be held on Friday (New Year) afternoon, when it is expected that Rev. Dr. Parker will preside. It is believed that this movement will reach many in our city who are not now brought under religious influences, and be the means of great good.—Boston Journal.

☞ Men who have gone to Canada to get men to serve in our armies are rapidly coming to grief. Two of them have been sent to the penitentiary for fourteen years, two for twenty-one, and others are awaiting trial.

Philadelphia, Jan. 2. The weather is bitter cold. Last night four persons were frozen to death. The thermometer this morning stood at eight degrees above zero.

New York, Jan. 3. John Hughes, Archbishop of New York, died to-night at half-past seven o'clock.

By order of the War Department the draft is postponed until Jan. 15th.

☞ On Christmas day oysters sold in Richmond at $20 per gallon and milk at the same price per gallon.

☞ The North Carolina Times says a $5 gold piece was sold at auction for $150 in Confederate notes at Danville.

Notices.

Information Wanted.

Brethren in changing their Post Office address, not unfrequently forget to inform us from what office it is to be changed. The following named brethren will oblige us by giving us this desired information, when their requests will be complied with: Geo. W. Smith, Miss N. M. Wells, John S. Morgan, W. Holloway.

Notice.

To the preaching brethren in Eastern New York, Western Mass. and Conn. Dear Brn.—At the last appointed conference at Bantam, Ct., there not being members present sufficient to do business, it was agreed that I should write to all the preachers in the limits of the conference, requesting their meeting in conference at East Otis, Mass., Jan. 20th, 1864, for the purpose of organizing upon a basis that would secure a mutual and harmonious co-operation in the work of the ministry. I have therefore written to most of you, and received in return several letters of encouragement. And of those to whom I have not written, I beg the acceptance of my apology, it being through negligence and not of design.

But relative to the appointment at Otis, I am informed that the brethren there would be glad of such a meeting, if they had a convenient place to hold it. But at this season of the year their meeting-house cannot be made comfortable for such an occasion; in view of which it appears to me necessary to postpone the appointment, and submit the question of a future meeting, time and place, to your consideration; requesting each and all, who are interested in the matter, to ascertain where and when such a meeting could be held agreeable to the wishes and convenience of the brethren, and send me information, and I will give notice accordingly. In behalf of the brethren,

T. S. Canfield.

Morris, Ct., Dec. 30th, 1863.

Notice.

The Advent Christian Conference in Northern Indiana and Southern Michigan will be held in Jonesville, Mich., Wednesday, January 13th, 1864, and continue two days. The conference will perfect its organization, and set things in order generally, with the hope of building up the cause more effectually. All preachers interested are specially requested to attend. The churches will also send two delegates each, and Advent brethren living in isolated places will also come and represent their respective fields, and their wants. Important business will come up in which all are interested. Do not fail to come. Bro. J. V. Himes has been invited to preach in connection with the conference; and will commence a course of lectures Jan. 7th, and continue till the 12th, and through the conference. Bro. and Sr. Mansfield will attend the conference, and also preach Jan. 15th to 17th, Saturday and Sabbath, after the conference. Let us have a grand rally at this meeting. Let us gird up our loins and work while the day lasts.

Per order, D. Boon, President.

Eastern Central Quarterly Conference.

A quarterly conference will commence in the Union meeting-house, Round Pond, Bristol, Me., Thursday evening, 7 o'clock, Jan. 7th, and continue over the following Sunday. The friends there make a request for the meeting. It is hoped that the ministering brethren, and others who love to labor for the salvation of sinners and upbuilding of the cause of Christ, will attend and labor to this end. Come in the spirit of Christ, praying for his blessing. Call on Captain S. Harding, Samuel Loud, Barker Loud, Wm. Cutler, Solomon Yates.

I. C. Wellcome.

Notice.

The first quarterly meeting of the Iowa Christian Conference will be holden at Wilton Junction, Muscatine Co., Iowa, Jan. 8th, 1864, and hold over Sunday.

At this meeting there will be an opportunity for churches and ministers in the south part of the State to take the preliminary steps for admission into the conference. Request should be sent in by the churches who wish the next quarterly meeting to be with them. All communications concerning this meeting should be addressed to the writer.

Peter S. W. Deyo, Clerk.

Conference in Union Mills, Ind.

A covenant meeting of the church will be held at the usual hour, Saturday, Jan. 16th. In the evening I shall preach. Sabbath, Jan. 17th, preach in Union Mills, at 10 o'clock A. M., and in the evening at Stillwater Prairie. Resume the meetings at Union Mills Monday evening, Jan. 18th, and continue day and evening over the next Sabbath. All are invited. Let us have a grand rally in the name of the Lord. Joshua V. Himes.

Notice.

There will be a series of meetings at South Butler, Wayne Co., N. Y., commencing Jan. 22nd, and continuing through the following week, and over Sunday, Jan. 31st. Eld. F. Burr, of Honeoye, is expected to help preach the word. Let the brethren and sisters in the surrounding country prepare to attend this meeting. Come with your hearts full of love, that by your earnest prayers and exhortations you may help on the car of truth. Modern infidelity must fall. C. B. Turner.

Conference.

There will be a conference held in Madison, Me., near the centre, to commence Jan. 15th, evening, and hold over Sunday. A general invitation is given to all our brethren and sisters.

L. L. Howard,
D. M. Hanscom.

Wanted

One of the old 1843 Geographical Charts of the Four Kingdoms, painted in cloth; such as were used by our lecturers twenty years ago; also a set of the Symbolic Charts, presenting the metalic image, four beasts, etc., all in good repair. If you can spare me one for love or money, do not wait a month before replying, but write at once to, and oblige D. T. Taylor, Castleton, Rutland Co., Vt.

A Liberal Offer.

Being satisfied that time is short, and that what is done must be done quickly; and feeling anxious to do what we can to arouse a sleeping world and church, we make the following liberal offer:—Any one who will send three or more new subscribers to the Crisis for six months or one year, with advance pay for the same, shall receive at wholesale prices, including postage, any of our books and tracts they may select, amounting to one-third the value of the money sent. For instance, if they send three dollars, they receive one dollar's worth of books or tracts; for six dollars, we send them two dollars' worth; for twelve dollars, four dollars' worth, etc. Let every reader take hold of the work in earnest, and help scatter tracts, books and papers like autumnal leaves.

Miles Grant, per order of Publishing Committee.

Tract Notice.—Elder L. C. Wellcome, Yarmouth, Me., has a good supply of tracts and books, hymn books, etc., published by the C. P. Society, and by H. L. Hastings and others. Also, a great variety of other best works on the Advent, and inheritance of the saints.

Appointments.

We would say to our preaching Brethren that it is necessary we should receive their appointments as early as Tuesday Morning, as our paper goes to press about noon; otherwise they will not be inserted till the week following.

Lowell Street Chapel, Boston, corner of Causeway and Lowell Streets. Meetings are held regularly three times every Sunday, and Tuesday and Friday evenings. Seats free.

Appointment for Lowell Street Chapel.

H. L. Hastings . . . . Sunday, Jan. 10th and onward for the present.

Akron, N. H., in the Town Hall, Wednesday evening, Jan 6th, and continue every evening through the week, and over the following Lord's day.

Montreal, (Bonaventure Hall), Tuesday evening, Jan. 26th, and every evening for two weeks, including Lord's days, Jan. 31st and Feb. 7th. Brethren, pray for us.

Miles Grant.

Bro. Andrews' . . . . Saturday evening, Jan. 16th
Bradford Centre . . . . Sunday, Jan. 17th
Joseph W. White.

South Newbury, N. H. . . . . Sunday, Jan. 24th
Wm. Sutherland.

Dalton, (North Street School-house), Sunday, Jan. 10th
Wells Forge . . . . Wednesday evening, Jan. 13th
Cold Spring . . . . Thursday evening, Jan. 14th
Round Hill (Chester) . . . . Sunday, Jan. 17th
Wm. J. Hale.

Milo, (Me.) or Sebec, as the brethren may appoint, Jan. 10th.
Thos. Smith.

Springfield, Mass., (Bro. Morgan's), evening, Jan. 16th
Agawam . . . . Sunday, Jan. 17th
Sunday evening, as Bro. Slater shall appoint.
I. B. Potter.

Agawam . . . . Sunday, Jan. 10th
P. S. Butler.

Barnstead, (Clark meeting-house), for baptism, Jan. 10th
S. S. Mooney.

Newmarket, N. H. . . . . Thursday evening, Jan. 7th and continue over Sunday, Jan. 10th.
Lee, N. H. . . . . Jan. 17th
J. W. Brittan.

Cheshire Street, Ct. . . . . Jan. 9th to the 12th
Pleasant Valley, Ct. . . . . Jan. 13th to 17th
Danielsonville, Ct. . . . . Jan. 22d and over the Lord's day, and longer if the interest demands.
Lawrence, Mass. . . . . Sunday, Jan. 31st
A. Ross.

New Haven, Ct. . . . . Sunday, Jan. 10th
R. Williams.

Dover, N. H. (Back River School-house), Sunday, Jan. 10th.
Haverhill, Mass. . . . . Sunday, Jan. 17th
A. Simpson.

Agawam, Mass. . . . . Jan. 10th
South Windsor, Ct. . . . . Jan. 17th
G. P. Babcock.

Blooming Valley, Crawford Co., Pa., Jan. 23d to the 29th.
Edinboro', Erie Co., Pa., Jan. 30th till March 3d.
Brethren, please arrange for these meetings, and pray about them.
Jos. D. Brown.

South Ashburnham, Mass., Saturday evening and Sunday, Jan. 9th and 10th.
L. Boutell.

Northfield, Mass . . . . Jan. 10th
Geo. A. Streeter.

Wrightville, Ct. . . . . Jan. 10th
Collinsville, Ct. . . . . Jan. 17th
C. Goodrich.

New Durham Ridge, N. H. . . . . Jan. 10th
Z. Ford.

West Martinsburgh . . . . Sunday, Jan. 10th
Copenhagen . . . . evening, Jan. 11th, 12th, and 13th
C. B. Turner.

Hoosic Falls, N. Y. . . . . Sunday, Jan. 10th
E. McCulloch.

Cold Spring, Mass. . . . . Sunday, Jan. 10th
After that once in four weeks for the present.
Geo. L. Teeple.

North Sutton, (at Bro. Andrews), Sunday, Jan. 10th, and longer, as the way opens.
Will visit and give lectures in other neighborhoods, as the way may be opened.
B. Spaulding.

The Plains, Appanaug . . . . Jan. 16th and over Lord's day.
Natic . . . . Jan. 18th
River Point . . . . Jan. 19th
Central . . . . Jan. 20th
Coventry, (Town House) . . . . Jan. 21st
Summet . . . . Jan. 22d
Danielsonville . . . . Jan. 23d and over Lord's day.
J. J. Northup.

West Winsted . . . . Jan. 10th
W. S. Campbell.
P. S. Evening appointments in connection to be made as may be judged best. W. S. C.

Salem, Mass . . . . Jan. 10th and remain as long as the Lord directs.
F. H. Burbank.

E—— (?) Grove . . . . Jan. 13th
Earlville . . . . Jan. 14th, 15th and 16th
Greeley . . . . Sunday, Jan. 17th
Manchester . . . . evening, Jan. 17th
and remain some days.
Intend to visit the brethren at Coffin's Grove.
P. W. Houck.

VALUABLE BOOKS FOR SALE.

Kitto: The Cyclopædia of Biblical Literature. Edited by John Kitto, D. D., F. S. A. Illustrated by numerous maps and engravings. 2 vols, 8vo., 1878 pages, double columns, half calf binding. Price $8.

Hebrew: The Englishman's Hebrew and Chaldee Concordance, by which an English reader can find the original Hebrew for any word in the English Bible, with all the places where it occurs. 2 vols. Cloth, $22; 1 vol. sheep, or half morocco, $23. 1763 pp.

Murdock: The New Testament, translated from the Syriac by James Murdock, D. D. 8vo., 515 pp. Price $2.

Lardner's Works: Containing his "Credibility of The Gospel History." A vast collection of testimonies proving the truth of Christianity; illustrated with rich stores of Ecclesiastical History, Biography, etc., etc.; the ablest work in the world upon the authenticity of the New Testament. 10 vols., 8vo., cloth, over 6000 pp. Price $15. (Worth $20.)

Address H. L. Hastings, Boston, Mass.

Valuable Books for Sale.

Eusebius' Ecclesiastical History, $2.00. Postage 28c.
Butterworth's Concordance, sheep, second hand, $1.00. Postpaid $1.25.
Butterworth's Concordance, sheep, new, $1.50; postpaid, $1.75.
Cole's Pocket Concordance, sheep, $1.00; postage 16c.
Pocket Greek Concordance, cloth, postpaid, $1.35. (Worth $1.75.)
Robinson's Greek Harmony of the New Testament, cloth, $1.00; postage 20c.
Xenophon's complete works, translated, cloth, postpaid, $1.50.
Josephus' complete works, translated by Whiston, one vol., sheep, $1.25; postpaid $1.50.

With two exceptions, I have only one copy of the above works. Address E. P. Woodward, (Crisis Box) Boston, Mass.

English Bibles for Sale.

1. Diamond, fine print, full references, morocco bound, $1.50; calf, $1.25; roan, gilt, $1.00; flexible binding, $1.00. Postage 12 cents.
2. Pearl, flat, full references, morocco, $2.25; roan, $1.50. Postage 16 cts.
3. Nonpareil, 16 mo., references between the verses, or references in the margin, morocco, $3.00; calf, $2.50; roan, $2.00; references between verses, with gilt rims and clasps, $3.00. Postage 20 cts.
4. Minion, references between the verses, roan, $2.50. Postage 25 cts.
5. Minion, 8vo.; marginal ref., flat and clear type, roan, $2.50.
6. Testaments, roan, gilt, smallest 25 cts; larger, 33 cts. Postage 6 cts.

Address Miles Grant, Boston, Mass.

Price Reduced.

Resurrection of the Wicked. Discussion between M. Grant and J. T. Curry.

The advertised price of this Discussion is 25 cents, postage 3 cents. We have a quantity of them on hand, and will sell them hereafter for 20 cts., postage 3 cts. Send on your orders.

The Two Witnesses, Moses and Elijah. By the Rev. I. P. Labagh. An argument to show that the two Witnesses (Rev. xi.) are neither the Old and New Testaments, nor the Waldenses and Albigenses, etc. etc., but rather Moses and Elias, and that the prophecy concerning them is yet to be literally fulfilled. Price in cloth 15 cts., paper 10 cents.

We think this work is the best on the Two Witnesses that we have ever read.—Ed.

Photographs of Eld. Edwin Burnham. A few copies of a large, beautiful and life-like Photograph, which the friends of Bro. Burnham will be glad to obtain. Sent by mail for $1.00. Those wishing them should order at once.

Hiram Munger's Life and Religious Experience, Including many singular circumstances connected with revivals and campmeetings. Written by himself. 50 cents, postage paid.

Business.

THE NEW TRACT FUND.

Two Thousand Dollars.

We, the undersigned, agree to give the sums affixed to our names, for the purpose of raising two thousand dollars to aid the Christian Publication Society in the gratuitous distribution of tracts; and our subscriptions shall be paid at the call of the Treasurer, as soon as one half of the amount shall be subscribed.

Pledges and payments to Dec 25th, $374.50
S. A. Chaplin pd 1.37
Wm. C. Keve pd 3.00

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

S. S. Folsom—The Emphatic Diaglott will probably be completed in the coming spring.
S. B. Colton—There is yet room.
J. B. Worthing—They are sent.
Mrs S. M. Slade—We received it.
Matilda Cottrell—Your paper has been sent regularly.
E. Clark—Right; to No. 478.
N. Collins—The $1 in July was duly received and acknowledged.
R. O'Brien—We received the $2, mailed in August. Acknowledged in No. 416. Paid to No. 408.

CASH RECEIPTS TO JAN. 1, 1864.

The present No. of the Crisis is 431.
The No. which follows your name, is the No. to which your money pays.
Deduct the one from the other, and you will see how far you have paid in advance, or how much is due the office.
Make a memorandum of the same, and you will be reminded when your subscription expires.

D W Comstock 438, H Howell 454, A Amos 454, A H Brown 448, J M Gove 460, W Laskey 444, Wm D Watson 491, J Eaton 458, M E Goodwin 446, J H Carpenter 444, S J Parsons 441, Miss W Vaughn 455, Mrs H W Bearce 464, H Rotherham 451, J Knowles 454, J Buckingham 454, R H Bolton 481, Wm Coplain 443, W Paton 441, M A G Otis 515, J Boutwell 446, A Wood 433, S Sherwin 456, M V Meader 456, Mrs C E Conklin 448, H Gould 433, E V Hall 455, H B Streeter 431, S Caverly 449, B B Campbell 451, J Pecu 447, S Horn 456, E Dunham 456, O B Fox 456, Mrs M Leavitt 456, W M Webster 456, L Brown 456, B Hammond 459, J B Atwood 456, L Shurtleff 456, S S Parsons 438, Mrs. S. E. Miner 448, C H Barrett 456, J P Ellis 482, J C Pease 364, E Hayden 456, M L Bickford 456, D Lewis 438, S Tupper 457, C H Bradford 432, S H Folsom 488, R Boardman 503, N Collins 456, G E Holt 456, J B Fry 456, S D Bates 456, J Cove 456, M H Garland 456, A Riggs 442, M Pierce 456, S Corwin 456, M Lookins 456, J Wilkinson 456, N Drehme 456, S Hess 456,—$1.00 each.

J Bailey 442, A Johnson 431, Wm Manning 479, A O Shockey 442, G Sutton 480, W W Taylor 422, Wm Benton 480, L Brown 481, P W Matts 403, J M Dinsmore 480, Wm Chamberlain 412, W A S Smyth 468, J N Sherman 459, P Keyes 473, E S Morse 432, Mrs H Snell 485, M E C Bennett 469, F Whitney 444, S F Mudget 462, T Bullard 461, Wm C Keve 419, J S Morgan 468, D Loucks 472, G W Young 471, C J Gifford 482, Mrs C Otto 469, C B Peck 336, J Huyck 485, J C Rogers 482, W T Baker 468, E M Gowell 482, C H Ramer 482, S Ramer 482, B E Gifford 482, H Rand 434, T D Johnson 482, J S Pearson 482, A Roberts 444, C Pettibone 464, S J Gaylord 482, N Dixon 482, F I Hill 457, M A Weaver 482,—$2.00 each.

C Emerson 441, Z Quimby 441, J Sharp 441, B Gardner 442, G W Rice 442, G W Byle 330, Miss S Higby 442, W Creamer 442, S T Creamer 442, E Parrett 442, W. S. Read 442, N K Weicks 435, Mrs. M. Jones 443, Mrs H Murray 443, Miss C A Carpenter 443, T Davenport 428, M Smith 418, B Chesley 443, E Perry 443,—50c each.

L G Ingalls $2,45, 430; P Richardson 92c, 429; J B Tupper $1.10, 470; N Manning $5.00, 440; Geo W Smith $1.00, (from what P. O.?); J W Trott $2.50, 444; A Chase $3.35, 477; Mrs J Spackman $2.50, 457; S A Chaplin $2.56, 482; C J Smith $1.00, 391; E G Osgood $3.00, 390; C K Higby $1.50, 463; G Jackson $5.00, 447; A McKenzie $1.15, 457; T Sproul $1.15, 457; H Caswell $3.00, 400; H Raymond $1.61, 518; J Ireland $5.00, 474; E W Pond $1.00, 430.

FOR BOOKS AND TRACTS.

D W Comstock $1.00, S Longfellow $3.70, H F Holton $3.35, S A Chaplin $2.07, H Rotherham 85c, Geo W Smith $1.50, A Chase $1.45, A P Webster $1.00, S A Chaplin $1.00, H Pratt 50c, A Wood 25c, G Wright Jr 60c, Wm Sweet $2.00, J H Smith $5.40, D Loucks 25c, S W Bartlett 60c, M W Corliss $5.8?, A Roberts $1.00, C R Danks $1.25, J Wright $2.00, J Campbell 75c, S J Gaylord $1.00, Geo E Holt 60c, M Smith 35c.

To send Crisis to the Poor.—C. Pettibone, $3.

BOOKS AND TRACTS SENT.

By Mail.

C H Williams, North Bay, N Y; S W Bartlett, West Stafford Ct.; S G Sterling, Springwater, N. Y., J Campbell, Fall River, Mass.; G Wright, Jr., Lapeer, Mich., D. Poss, Brandon, Mich.; C. H. Ramer, New Boston Minn; C R Danks, Fon du Lac, Wis.; A Roberts, Long Point, Ill; E C Bennett, Riceville, Iowa; N W Eastman, Douglass, Iowa; J T Langley, Barnsted Parade, N. H.; J Hands, Richmond, N. B; S J Gaylord, Northfield, Mass.; N D Wight, Bond's Village, Mass.; L G Ingalls, Abington, Ct; A E Darling, E. Killingly, Ct; S S Folsom, Fisherville, N. H.; P Fish, Greenwich, N. Y.; W Hayes, Peru Station, Ill.

By Express.

M W Corliss, Woodstock, N. B.; J N Snyder, Mansfield, Ohio; I C Wellcome, Augusta, Me.; J Gay, Portland, Me.

LETTERS RECEIVED.

Wm. Hobbs, S Woodruff, S Loomer, D A Chamberlin, A Quimby, I K Lombard, S L Manly, D F Newton, Z Libbey, S E Rundlett, N M Wells, J V Himes, J E Clark, Ira Fancher, Geo. Severance.

POST OFFICE ADDRESS.

My address, until further notice, will be Worcester, Mass. Pere H. Lawrence.

☞ My address, until further notice, will be No. 128 High Street, Brooklyn, L. I., N. Y. I may be absent for a few days at some appointments, and will respond immediately on return. Come, dear friends, send in your orders and help scatter the light. S. S. Brewer.

Walter Pratt—New Bedford, Mass.

Who Obtained New Subscribers in Dec.

Whole number of new subscribers in Dec., 176. Obtained by the efforts of friends, 117.

One each—By S D Applebee, D Q Kent, Wm. Allen, J Blain, G A Barker, Jno. Berry, F Burr, C Bunnell, S W. Bartlett, R. F. Berry, D. Cogswell, J. Carr, P. S W Deyo, H M Dubey, I Damman, E F Dibble, D G Drake, E Dunham, B R Fellows, H. P. Glidden, J F Gray, N M Henry, J R Hall, E M Haggett, L G Ingalls, J Jenkins, D F Kendall, W Leaf, W Lucas, J J Northup, C L Page, J Pinkham, J W Piper, T W Piper, A Riggs, J A Sober, A W Sibley, P A Smith, W. A. S. Smith, C A Sumner, L E Saulpaugh, R N Stetson, A Smith, C C Stevens, W A A Smith, G W Smith, E G White, D Webster, W H Wild, J P Yates.

Two each—By S S Brewer, F Corker, N W Eastman, J B Goodrich, S Hammons, W E Hathaway, T I Hill, M S Home, A Spaulding, J M Worthing, G B Whitford.

Three each—By J F Chamberlain, A H Robbins, C H Ramer, M Smith

R. Haskins 8, C B Turner 11, M Grant 14.

☞ Report of money that has been sent me to assist in paying my commutation:—

Church in Peacedale, R. I., $25.00; A Bro. in Philadelphia, Pa., $2.00; Bro. Jas. Douglas, $3.00; Bro. and Sr. Thos. Hadley, $1.00; Sr. E. B. Lyon, $1.00; Brn in Hartford, Conn., $7.30; Sr. Julia E. Lloyd, 50 cts., A Sister, Providence, R. I., $3.00; Jas. Page 50 cts.; H. B. Cross, $2.00.

Will these friends accept my thanks? I acknowledge through the paper to save time and labor.

Jos. D. Brown.

☞ Received from a Sister in Kennebunk, $1; Wm. Watson, by the hand of L. Boutell, $1; "Sister in Christ," Danbury, $1.00. W. Pratt.

BOOKS AND TRACTS.

[illegible]

MILES GRANT'S WORKS.

Resurrection of the Wicked. Discussion with Jos. T. Curry. "Do the Scriptures teach the Resurrection of the Wicked?" [illegible]

Eternal Suffering. Discussion with Dr. J. Litch. "Do the Scriptures teach the eternal conscious suffering of the Wicked?" [illegible]

Spiritualism. Discussion with J. S. Loveland, "On Spiritualism and Immortality." [illegible]

State of the Dead. Discussion with W. W. Clayton, "On the State of the Dead and the Punishment of the Wicked." [illegible]

Miles Grant's Tracts. 32 pages each. Price 5 cents [illegible]

What is Man? A Bible view of his creation; The meaning of Soul, Spirit, Death, and Hell.

The Soul, What is it? Or a careful examination of all the uses of the words nephesh and psuche as employed in the old and new Testaments.

The Spirit, What is it? Or a careful examination of all the uses of the words ruach and pneuma as found in the old and new Testaments.

The Rich Man and Lazarus. Thief on the Cross; [illegible]

C. F. HUDSON'S WORKS.

Debt and Grace. Or the Doctrine of a Future Life, by C. F. Hudson. [illegible]

Christ our Life. The Scriptural Argument for Immortality through Christ alone. [illegible]

Human Destiny. A Critique on Universalism. [illegible]

The Doctrine of Endless Misery, an occasion of [illegible]

Eternal Death is the Eternal Penalty. [illegible]

The Rich Man and Lazarus. With remarks on [illegible]

The Rights of Wrong; or, is Evil Eternal? [illegible]

Reviewers Reviewed. [illegible]

BOOKS PUBLISHED BY H. L. HASTINGS, 107 Hanover Street, Boston, Mass.

[illegible]

The Signs of the Times; or, A Glance at Christendom [illegible]

The Voice of the Church on the Coming and Kingdom of the Redeemer [illegible]

Spiritualism a Satanic Delusion and a Sign of the Times. By William Ramsey, D. D. Edited by H. L. H. [illegible]

Thessalonica; or The Model Church. A sketch of Primitive Christianity. By H. L. H. [illegible]

The Great Controversy between God and Man. [illegible]

Reasons for my Hope, and the Tokens of the Speedy Redemption. By H. L. Hastings. [illegible]

Thessalonica and Reasons for my Hope. Bound in one volume. Cloth, 75 cents.

Looking Forward, or the Prospects of the Church; being the concluding chapter of the Signs of the Times. [illegible]

Future Punishment, as revealed in the Scriptures, in opposition to the Three Theories of Never-ending Sin and Misery, Eternal Sleep without Resurrection, and Universal Salvation. By H. L. Hastings. [illegible]

Pauline Theology; or, The Scripture Doctrine of Future Punishment, as taught in the Epistles of Paul. By H. L. Hastings. [illegible]

The Old Paths; or, the Primitive Doctrine of a Future Life. By H. L. Hastings. [illegible]

Retribution; or, The Doom of the Ungodly, after the Resurrection of the Dead, Just and Unjust. By H. L. H. [illegible]

MISCELLANEOUS.

Cruden's Condensed Concordance, by which any passage of scripture, of which only a single word is remembered, can at once be found, and every place where any word occurs in the English Bible, can be seen at a glance. Price $1.25, postage 24c. Leather binding $1.50, postage 30c.

The Life of Trust. An account of the Lord's Dealings with George Müller, Director of the Orphan Houses at Bristol, England, under whose care more than a thousand orphans are fed day by day on bounty obtained by prayer and faith in God. [illegible]

Two Hundred Stories for Children. An excellent and entertaining book for the young and old, compiled by T. M. Preble. [illegible]

A Treatise on the 24th and 25th chapters of Matthew, showing by copious extracts from History, the fulfillment of Christ's Predictions, and the Kingdom of God soon to come. By I. C. Wellcome. [illegible]

Should Christians Fight? A pamphlet on War, embracing the Scripture argument against fighting, and the testimonies of the Primitive Church. By I. C. Wellcome. [illegible]

The Bible from Heaven, or a dissertation on the Evidences of Christianity. By M. Hall. [illegible]

America in Prophecy. Exposition of the 18th chap. of Isaiah, showing its application to the United States of America in the present conflict, and end of the dispensation. By O. R. Fassett. [illegible]

The Celestial Railroad, or Modern Pilgrim's Progress. After the manner of Bunyan. Vividly representative of the present-day professors of religion. [illegible]

The Three Kingdoms, or the Kingdom of God the Father, the kingdom of Satan, the kingdom of the Lord Jesus Christ; or, a view of this world as it was, as it is, and as it is to be. By T. M. Preble. [illegible]

The Ten Virgins, or Wisdom and Folly contrasted. By T. M. Preble. [illegible]

The Two Adams. By T. M. Preble. An interesting tract. [illegible]

Messiah's Mission, or an exposition of the Gospel Covenant, as comprehended in the Scriptures of truth. By C. F. Sweet. [illegible]

The Excellency of the Lord's Anointed, or Christ the promised Messiah. By Mrs. Mary A. Seymour. [illegible]

Everybody's Book. The Bible View of the personality of God. The Devil: his origin, personality, power, and doom. By Princess A. Smith. [illegible]

Cook Book. By Dr. F. W. Hurd. This book gives instructions for preparing all the articles of food used at Dr. Jackson's celebrated health institution, denominated "Our Home," Dansville, N. Y. [illegible]

Premature Decay of American Youth. By Dr. A. Stone. This is a valuable work, and should be read by all the young. [illegible]

The Saint's Harvest, or an exposition of Matt. 24: 15, in connection with Dan. 12: 11-12. By H. K. Flagg. [illegible]

The Old and New Covenant. Superiority of the New. By A. W. Sibley. [illegible]

The Christian Lyre. A collection of Hymns and Tunes for Worship. [illegible]

A Disquisition on the Prophecies. By F. H. Berick. [illegible]

An Appeal to Pious Trinitarians. By H. Grew. [illegible]

TRACTS

Issued by the Christian Publication Society.

[illegible]

FREE TO THE POOR.

The Church not in Darkness; or, the duties of the times; the guilt of a slumbering world, and the duty of a faithful church. A stirring tract of 24 pages. By H. L. Hastings.

The Three Worlds; or, earth, past, present, and future. A graphic sketch of the old world, destroyed by the deluge; the present world reserved unto fire; and the new world which God shall create. By H. L. Hastings. [illegible]

The Last Days. A calm, scriptural, and convincing argument, showing that the last days, marked by divine goodness and human iniquity, are even now upon us. By H. L. Hastings. [illegible]

Plain Truths; or, Scripture and Tradition united. [illegible] By H. L. Hastings. [illegible]

Will all Men be Saved? A pointed, pithy, earnest and conclusive argument against Universalism, [illegible] By H. L. Hastings. [illegible]

A Voice of Warning from the Four Winds. [illegible] By D. T. Taylor. [illegible]

The New Heavens and New Earth. A collection of testimonies [illegible] By D. T. Taylor. [illegible]

Ancient Landmarks. Six tracts of four pages each, [illegible]

The Duty of Christians in the present crisis. [illegible]

State of the Dead. By John Milton, author of "Paradise Lost." [illegible]

Silence of the Scriptures respecting the Immortality of the soul, [illegible]

Immortality Through Christ Alone. The doctrine [illegible]

The Destiny of the Wicked. A solid mass of Scripture quotations, without note or comment, upon this subject. [illegible]

The Advent at Hand. A summary of reasons for expecting the speedy close of the present, and the ushering in of a new dispensation. [illegible]

S. S. BREWER'S TRACTS.

The Kingdom of God and the Signs of the Times. [illegible]

The Days we Live in. Price 10c, postage 2c.

The Seven Seals. An Exposition of the Sixth Chapter of Revelation. [illegible]

The Slaying of the Witnesses. Price 7c, postage [illegible]

The Great Image soon to be dashed to pieces. Price [illegible]

The Two-Horned Beast. Price 5c, postage 2c.

The Rich Man and Lazarus. Price 5c, postage 2c.

[illegible] MILES GRANT, Boston, Mass.

Obituaries.

E. MITCHELL.

Died in Kennebunk, Dec. 11th, 1863, Capt. E. Mitchell, aged about 72 years.

A faithful and devoted servant of God has fallen in death. Almost a half century has passed away since our dear brother (my uncle) found Jesus precious to his soul; and ever since that time has endeavored with earnestness and faithful devotion to live according to the teaching of the Holy Scriptures, which he ever regarded as his rule of faith and practice; believing they were able to make him "wise unto salvation." He was a man of much prayer; holding frequent communion with his heavenly Father, thus making his house a house of prayer. He was very constant in his attendance to the prayer meeting, a place very dear to him. The language of the poet, in the following hymn, was very expressive of his feelings:—

"I love it, I love it, and who shall dare
To chide me for loving the house of prayer?
I have prized it long as a holy place,
Where my gracious Lord shows his smiling face."

And not only did he love the house of prayer, but he loved to labor when there; always being ready to speak for Jesus.

He embraced the doctrine of the speedy coming of Christ in 1842, and since that time has waited with longing desire for the return of Him he so much loved. During the few last years of his life, he was deprived of the use of his eyes; but the thought of so soon seeing Jesus, when the eyes of the blind would be opened, together with the sustaining grace of God, enabled him to bear his affliction with much christian patience. Many of our preaching brethren, as they read this notice, will call to remembrance the happy seasons they have enjoyed at his home, for his home was the home of the weary pilgrim.

He leaves a wife, with many other relatives, to mourn. May God bless her who is bereft of so kind and devoted a companion, and may that strong arm upon which she has so long leaned, support her in this her hour of affliction. O when will this dark night of weeping end? when will death cease his cruel work? when will come that bright morning when all tears will be wiped away, and the cruel reign of death forever end? it cannot surely be long.

"Fly swifter round, ye wheels of time,
And bring the welcome day."

W. H. MITCHELL.

MARY ANN CHESLEY.

Died in Farmington, Dec. 13th, 1863, Sr. Mary Ann, wife of Mr. Benjamin Chesley, aged thirty-four years, two months, and fourteen days.

The subject of this notice was formerly the wife of Bro. Alexis Chamberlain, of New Durham, who died in the autumn of 1854, and who was a firm believer in the Lord's speedy coming. In early life, Sr. Mary Ann espoused the cause of Christ, and about the year 1854 embraced the Advent faith, which she held till death. It was my privilege to be with her for a few days before she died, and even in the last trying moment; and in her case was fully exemplified the power of the "blessed hope" of the gospel to sustain, even in the hour of death. She had suffered much through fear of death, but that was all taken from her—its tears all gone. She could talk of death as calmly as though she was about going some pleasant journey;—indeed the room bore not the gloom of death, for it was a christian that was about to die. She had been a great sufferer, but for some hours before death was perfectly free from distress. Strength was given her both of body and mind. Calling her friends to her bedside, she earnestly besought them to seek the Lord, and meet her in the kingdom. She requested and obtained a promise from her husband to seek the Lord and meet her there also.

That death-bed scene I shall never forget. The Spirit of the Lord filled the room, and peace like a river flowed through our souls, changing the countenance of the dying, giving it a calm and heavenly expression, so peaceful, so happy, that truly it seemed none other than the house of God and the very gate of heaven. While talking with a friend, she remarked,—"It is not so much to die, after all, if we are only ready. I shall not go to heaven; I shall sleep,—sleep in Jesus."

Thus a kind and affectionate husband, two children, an aged father, brothers and sisters, have been called to mourn the loss of a beloved and faithful wife, mother, daughter and sister; but they "sorrow not" as "others which have no hope; for if we believe that Jesus died and rose again, even so them also which sleep in Jesus will God bring with him." By her request, Eld. Jas. G. Smith attended her funeral, and gave a solemn and stirring discourse, founded on Ps. 17: 15,—"I shall be satisfied when I awake with thy likeness." May the surviving friends heed the warnings she gave them, by fleeing to Christ, who will sustain and comfort them in every trial of life; and in the bright morning of the resurrection, when their loved ones shall come forth to immortality, may they be reunited to part no more forever.

MARTHA S. HORNE.

SARAH P. BURBANK.

Fell sweetly asleep in Jesus on Tuesday evening, Dec. 22d., Sarah P., wife of E. G. Burbank, Esq., of Salem, Mass., aged fifty-nine years.

Death triumphs over another saint of Jesus, who loved and looked "for that blessed hope, and the glorious appearing of the great God," "even our Savior Jesus Christ. Her dicease was consumption, from which she suffered intensely for several months previous to her disease; but through her sickness she manifested a patient spirit, not a murmuring word escaped her lips. Her faith in Christ was unwavering, and his grace sustained her unto the end.

My father mourns the loss of a faithful wife and an affectionate companion. A large family lament the death of a loving, self-sacrificing, pious mother. Relations, neighbors and friends, pay tribute to her virtue and godliness. The poor, the widow and the fatherless, weep for one who has always ministered to their necessities. By her they were clothed and fed. Sleeping now; but awaking by and by, she will receive her reward from her Savior, who will receive her to himself, and give her a crown of righteousness at that day; and not to her only, but unto all that love his appearing. Funeral services conducted by Rev. Mr. Winn of the Cent. Bapt. church, of which she was a much valued member.

F. H. BURBANK.

ELD. HUMPHREY B. HYDE.

Eld. Humphrey B. Hyde, died Oct. 25th, 1863. Bro. H. resided with his mother in Canadice, Ontario Co., N. Y. He was away from home at Floods Corners, when he died, laboring faithfully in the great work of his Master, though, he did so in much weakness of body. But he died at his post.

Bro. H. was converted to the Advent faith through the labors of Father Chapman, in Springwater, N. Y., six or seven years ago. He labored in the vicinity of home some years with good results. He also labored in Boston and New York. In the latter city he labored faithfully for some time, and with some success. But his health failed him, so that he had to return to the country, but he never recovered fully from that sickness. He was an example to the flock, and an intelligent and faithful minister.

He will no doubt receive a crown of glory when the Chief Shepherd shall appear.

JOSHUA V. HIMES.

JOSE ROBERTS.

Died in New Durham, Sept. 27th, 1863, of whooping cough and fever, Jose St. Clair, daughter of David S. and Sabrina Roberts, aged one year, four months, and twelve days.

Farewell, dear babe, till Christ shall come,
And raise thy body from the tomb,
To wear a crown of glory bright,
And wave a palm with sweet delight.

Jer. 31: 16-17, and Matt. 2: 18. "Thus saith the Lord, refrain thy voice from weeping, and thine eyes from tears, for thy work shall be rewarded, saith the Lord; and they shall come again from the land of the enemy. And there is hope in thine end, saith the Lord, and thy children shall come again to their own border." [illegible]

JAMES MILLER.

Died of diphtheria, in New Orleans Hospital, James W. Miller, son of John and Mary Miller, aged twenty years, lacking four days.

The subject of this notice was wounded at Port Hudson, and lost one leg. The funeral discourse was by the writer, and the occasion improved by an effort to present man's need of a Savior, and to exhibit Jesus as the only hope of life. May these dear parents and the surviving children be sustained in this hour of deep trial by the blessed hope of the gospel, which is as an anchor to the soul, sure and steadfast. James will sleep but a short time, for the night is wearing fast away; and very soon a voice far sweeter than the most enchanting music will say, James, 'tis morn; awake, and in my image rise, of richest joys partake in my blest paradise.

JAMES DUDLEY.

ELIZABETH ROGERS.

Died in Charleston, R. I., Dec. 4th, 1863, Sr. Elizabeth Rogers, wife of Bro. Thomas Rogers, both descendants of the Naraganseтte tribe of Indians, aged forty-eight years.

Sister Rogers embraced the belief that Jesus is soon coming, about 1844. She has loved his appearing up to the time of her death. Being a great sufferer the last two or three years of her life, she found the blessed hope a great consolation and support in trials, until she calmly fell asleep in Jesus.

"Blessed sleep,
From which none ever wake to weep."

Bro. and Sr. Rogers' house was always open for God's servants, and they took pleasure in doing for them what God enabled them to perform. They were both members of church, worshiping at Clark's Hall. She was highly esteemed as a christian by all who knew her.

Bro. Rogers is left to mourn, but he sorrows not as those that have no hope. May he and surviving friends lay it to heart, and be led to walk more closely with God. Words of comfort to the friends were spoken by the writer, from 1 Thess 4: 18.

P. C. RODMAN.

NELDORA A. STEVENS.

Died in Orange, N. H., Dec. 17th, 1863, of diphtheria, Neldora A., daughter of S. H. and B. W. Stevens, aged five years, six months and five days.

Little Nellie was a lovely child and loved by all who knew her. But death loves a shining mark, and once more entered the family circle, and laid his cold icy hand upon the pride and idol of the family. Though she sleeps the sleep of death, she will awake in the morn, having immortality and eternal life. May this affliction be sanctified to the good of the surviving companion and parent, that when the great Life-giver shall come and awake the sleepers, that he may be changed in a moment, that he with them may eat of the tree of life, which is in the midst of the paradise of God.

S. K. FORD.

BELINDA W. STEVENS.

Died in Orange of diphtheria, Dec. 14th, 1863, Belinda W. Stevens, aged thirty-seven years, five months and seventeen days.

The subject of this notice professed faith in Christ, and fully believed that Jesus is the way, the resurrection and the life, and all that sleep in Jesus will God bring with him.

CHARLES C. STEVENS.

Died in Orange, N. H., Dec. 5th, 1863, of diphtheria, Charles C., son of S. H. and B. W. Stevens, aged ten years, one month and four days.

WALTER CURTIS.

Died in Providence, R. I., Dec. 29th, 1863, Walter F., son of Luke and Caroline H. Curtis, aged seven years, eleven months, and two days.

C. H. SWEET.

Summary of News.

FOREIGN.

The steamship Adriatic brings news from Galway Dec. 22nd.

The Liverpool Post says Lord Lyons, in a message to Earl Russell, predicts the termination of the American war in three months.

It is stated that Mr. Supervielle, the new rebel envoy to France, has a mission to notify the French Government of the recognition by the Confederates of the empire of Mexico, and also to try and persuade Napoleon to recognize the South in return.

The Liverpool Post gives prominence to the following paragraph:

"We consider ourselves in a position to state that Lord Lyons, in a dispatch to Earl Russell from Washington, announces that the war will be terminated within the next three months. The Confederates being in the greatest extremities, will have speedily to propose an armistice. In our informant we have the fullest confidence. It is possible that President Lincoln's proclamation has reference to the facts on which Lord Lyons grounded his conclusion."

THE HOLSTIEN QUESTION.

The Holstein question remains unchanged.

Austrian troops continue to arrive at Hamburg.

A public meeting of Norwegians has been called for the purpose of voting an address to the King, stating that Sweden and Norway are bound to assist Denmark in defending her frontiers, that Scandinavian interests are endangered, and that the people are ready to bear whatever burden may be imposed for the purpose.

It is reported that 22,000 Swedish troops, headed by the King, are in motion.

POLAND.

The telegraph continues to report engagements in which the insurgents are generally successful. Three of the insurgent leaders have been hung at Lizzia.

The Great Eastern steamship is to be disposed of by lottery.

FRANCE.

Great dissatisfaction with the Emperor's Mexican policy prevails in France. Even Maximilian is reported as saying:

"I have not abandoned my desire to reign in Mexico; but the difficulties of the situation unexpectedly appear to increase. Only a partial suffrage will call me to the throne; and the financial difficulty has rather increased than diminished."

Liverpool, Dec. 23d, Queenstown 24th.

The London Globe cautions its readers against the statement that Lord Lyons had telegraphed to Earl Russell, predicting the termination of the American war in six months.

The Paris correspondent of the London Times insinuates that the Archduke Maximilian is not likely to accept the Mexican crown. He stipulates for a recognition of his monarchy by the American Government, among other conditions, and this recognition has been emphatically declined at Washington. It is reported that Napoleon is casting about for some one else in place of Maximilian.

AUSTRIA AND HUNGARY.

A revolutionary manifesto has been placarded in the principal towns of Hungary, announcing the establishment of a General Committee to maintain the independence of Hungary, and assuming the direction of affairs under Kossuth. The Austrian government is taking great precautions, but it is asserted that general agitation prevails.

INDIA.

The Bombay mails show that the trouble with the hill tribes was assuming alarming proportions. The British troops have lost heavily.

A Palermo paper publishes the following letter from Garibaldi:

"CAPRERA, Nov. 24, 1863.

My dear Basil—I am in really excellent health, much beyond my hopes. With the exception of the scar, which is in a complete normal state, and a little stiffness, my right foot can quite compare with the left. I send you an affectionate greeting, and am yours always. G. GARIBALDI."

GARIBALDI ON THE POLISH QUESTION.—In a letter on the Polish question, just published, Garibaldi says:—"The revolting cynicism shown in this holy cause is a living shame to diplomacy. While rivers of blood are flowing, their Excellencies amuse Europe with their notes. It is truly sad in these so-callld days of social progress, to find no Government which will protect against slaughter—which will say to the Czar, "Cease your career of murder, spare these men, these women, these infant victims who do not even belong to you," and then put itself at the head of its people to support the demand. Such a Government would in truth, be the image of divinity on earth, and all the Liberals of the world would kneel at the feet to pray it to enlist them in its ranks.

☞ An Israelite has recently been chosen Mayor of Southampton, England, and another is Mayor of Liverpool.

DOMESTIC.

From the Morris Island correspondence of the Baltimore American we copy the following, written under date of Dec. 22d:—

"The rebels have been busy lately obstructing the channel which runs inside of Sullivan's Island. A steamboat was seen there for several days with a working party engaged in driving spiles across the inlet.

SUMTER.

An irregular fire is still kept up on Sumter from our mortar batteries. Several days ago one of our shells exploded within the fort, and was followed by another explosion, which set fire to something that burnt for several hours, covering the fort with a cloud of smoke. It is supposed that the woodwork of their bomb-proof was destroyed by the fire. The Charleston papers admit that twelve men were killed by the explosion.

The enemy are busily at work inside the fort, and the principal object of our fire now is to interfere with their operations. Large working parties are brought down to the fort in steamers, which also bring down great quantities of sand in bags. The opinion is freely expressed here that the rebels have now a formidable sand fort within the ruins of Sumter. The taking of the place is therefore a problem as far as ever from a satisfactory solution. It can only be taken by assault, and that assault can only be made by an expedition in boats. The obstacles in the way of the success of an enterprise of this kind are so obvious, that they need not be dwelt upon. Probably the favorable moment for putting Sumter in our possession has already escaped us.

THE PROSPECT.

The prospect of a resumption of active operations, or of our forces occupying Charleston at an early day, does not appear to me very flattering. A month ago I thought different, and then expressed a more hopeful opinion than events since have justified. Delays, some arising from unforeseen accidents, such as the sinking of the Weehawken; others, it appears to me, causeless, but all vexatious, have intervened, until now the opinion is everywhere expressed that no serious renewal of the attempt to take Charleston will be made before next spring. It seems impossible to keep more than one-half of the monitors here in fighting condition. Since the taking of Morris Island every monitor has been to Port Royal for repairs, more than half have been there twice since that time, and even now we have only four here. One of these will have to go down as soon as she can be replaced by one of those now there repairing. I do not pretend to canvass the causes of these delays, or of the frequency with which the monitors have to seek the machine-shop, but only record the fact as it stands. In the meantime the hope of a reinforcement of the iron-clad fleet from the North seems also to have died out.

New York, Dec. 29th. The Washington correspondent of the Philadelphia Ledger says that intelligence has been received from the department of the Gulf, of the occupation of La Fourche county by the rebels. Our forces a short time previously had fallen back into the parish of St. John's. The occupation will do the rebels no good, as the position just at present is not an important one to either party. A rebel expedition into Bayou La Fourche is said to have resulted in the capture of the steamers "Anyone" and La Fourche, with nearly all on board, including, it is said, Col. "Jilbourne," the former Provost Marshal of New Orleans.

THE CONSCRIPTION ACT.—The following are in substance the various amendments intended to be proposed to the bill amendatory of the conscription act.

By Mr. Powell: That the amended act shall not take effect in States in which the draft, under the original act, has not been enforced. The first draft in those States shall take place as if the amended act had not passed.

By Mr. Trumbull: That the fact that any person of foreign birth has voted in any State or territory, or held any office in its gift, shall be taken as conclusive evidence that such person is not entitled to exemption from military service on account of alienage.

By Mr. Howe: That all sums paid by way of commutation shall constitute a fund to be equally distributed among the several persons who shall be drafted into the service under the same call, one-third to be paid at the termination of each year's service.

By Mr. Anthony: That any drafted person conscientiously unable to perform military service, by reason of his sincere and religious scruples against bearing arms, may apply by petition to any judge of any United States court for the district in which he resides, and if he see fit, that the petitioner be relieved from the penalty provided for his refusal to bear arms. And the person so exempted shall be in honor bound to contribute toward any hospital or charity a peace-offering in accordance with his means.

By. Mr. Wilson: That any person resident in the States of Virginia, North or South Carolina, Georgia, Florida, Alabama, Mississippi, Louisiana, Texas or Arkansas, who may voluntarily enlist in the United States service, shall be entitled to the benefits and privileges of existing laws, and may elect into what regiments they shall be mustered, and may be credited to the State to which such regiment belongs. Africans to be mustered only into African regiments.

Great Snow Storm at the West.

Buffalo, Jan. 2d. The heaviest snow-storm known in this vicinity since the year 1844 has been raging here yesterday and to-day. The water in the creeks, canals and slips has risen to an unusual height, causing much damage. The Lake Shore and Erie Railroads are competely blockaded by the snow. The trains on the Central Railroad are all behind time. Two hundred feet of the Niagara Falls Railroad. near this city, is washed away, and no cars have left the depot since Thursday. Trains are, however, running from Black Rock to Suspension Bridge. Business in this city is almost entirely suspended. No mails have been received today. Telegraphic communication with the West is intercepted. The Evans bridge, in the lower part of the city, has been carried away, and it is reported some lives were lost; but this cannot be traced to any reliable source.

Oswego, N. Y., Jan 2d. A terrible snow storm has been raging here for the past twenty-four hours. Four hundred feet of the east pier has been washed away. Several vessels have broken away from their moorings, and the shipping is badly damaged.

Louisville, Jan. 2d. Friday forenoon at nine o'clock the mercury was at 18 1-2 degrees below zero, and continued below all day. On Saturday at 9.30 in the forenoon it was at 3 degrees above, and at the same hour in the evening at 14 above zero. Nothing like this was ever known in Kentucky.

Indianapolis, Jan. 2d. A very severe snow storm commenced here on Thursday and lasted for two days. Railroad travel is almost suspended. The thermometer at 28 degrees below zero.

Chicago, Jan. 2d. At nine o'clock this forenoon the thermometer was at 28 1-2 degrees below zero. All the roads are completely blockaded with snow.

St. Louis, Jan. 2d. The weather has been intensely cold, the mercury having fallen 24 degrees below zero—unparalleled in this region. All the railroads leading out of the city are blockaded with snow. No trains have arrived or departed for two days. The river is closed this forenoon. Teams and pedestrians crossed on the ice all the forenoon.

A large number of cattle and hogs were frozen to deatht on weather bound trains on the North Missouri Railroad.

NEW YORK CROWDED.—The Evening Post remarks that never, probably, in the history of New York have there been so many people in the city as there are at present. It is well known that, besides an unusual influx of northern and western strangers, a vast number of southern refugees are in town awaiting the conclusion of the war. Altogether it is estimated—though it is impossible to say how correctly—that there are at least one hundred thousand strangers temporarily residing in town. Not only is it next to impossible to find a house to hire, but it is even very difficult to secure ordinary sleeping apartments. All hotel and boarding-house keepers have raised their prices, and yet are daily obliged to turn away applicants for board and lodging.

St. Johns, N. F., Dec. 30th. The following has been received via Galway, but not through our Associated Press Agent here:

Mexico. The Paris correspondent of the Times says the recognition of the Archduke Maximillian by the Washington government is considered indispensable prior to his assumption of the new Mexican monarchy. The proposal was formerly made by the French government to Pres. Lincoln's Cabinet. A dispatch from Washington in reply was to the effect that the American Republic would never tolerate, much less recognize, a monarchy established at their own doors. It is supposed that this will decide the Archduke to abandon the idea of accepting the throne of Mexico.

☞ Negroes from the country are still pouring into St. Louis at the rate of one hundred per day to join the new negro regiments now forming at Benton Barracks. They hail chiefly from the counties along the Missouri river.

NEW RELIGIOUS MOVEMENT.—We understand that a number of gentlemen who are active members of the different evangelical denominations in this city are about inaugurating a movement which will secure the daily preaching of the gospel to those who can be induced to attend it. They have hired the Meionaon for one year for this purpose, and their plan as at present proposed (though it may be modified in the future as experience shall suggest) is to have a prayer-meeting every afternoon which will be conducted by laymen, and preaching every evening by one of the pastors of Boston or vicinity. The plan meets the cordial approval of Rev. Dr. Kirk, Rev. Dr. Parker, Rev. Dr. Cushman, Rev. Mr. Bixby, and many others whose names we need not specify, and who will give to the movement their heartiest efforts. A cordial invitation will be given to all the pastors of the evangelical churches to unite in the movement. The first meeting will be held on Friday (New Year) afternoon, when it is expected that Rev. Dr. Parker will preside. It is believed that this movement will reach many in our city who are not now brought under religious influences, and be the means of great good.—Boston Journal.

☞ Men who have gone to Canada to get men to serve in our armies are rapidly coming to grief. Two of them have been sent to the penitentiary for fourteen years, two for twenty-one, and others are awaiting trial.

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 2. The weather is bitter cold. Last night four persons were frozen to death. The thermometer this morning stood at eight degrees above zero.

New York, Jan. 3. John Hughes, Archbishop of New York, died to-night at half-past seven o'clock.

By order of the War Department the draft is is postponed until Jan. 15th.

☞ On Christmas day oysters sold in Richmond at $20 per gallon and milk at the same price per gallon.

☞ The North Carolina Times says a $5 gold piece was sold at auction for $150 in Confederate notes at Danville.

Notices.

Information Wanted.

Brethren in changing their Post Office address, not unfrequently forget to inform us from what office it is to be changed. The following named brethren will oblige us by giving us this desired information, when their requests will be complied with: Geo. W. Smith, Miss N. M. Wells, John S. Morgan, W. Holloway.

Notice.

To the preaching brethren in Eastern New York, Western Mass. and Conn. Dear Brn.—At the last appointed conference at Bantam, Ct., there not being members present sufficient to do business, it was agreed that I should write to all the preachers in the limits of the conference, requesting their meeting in conference at East Otis, Mass., Jan. 20th, 1864, for the purpose of organizing upon a basis that would secure a mutual and harmonious co-operation in the work of the ministry. I have therefore written to most of you, and received in return several letters of encouragement. And of those to whom I have not written, I beg the acceptance of my apology, it being through negligence and not of design.

But relative to the appointment at Otis, I am informed that the brethren there would be glad of such a meeting, if they had a convenient place to hold it. But at this season of the year their meeting-house cannot be made comfortable for such an occasion; in view of which it appears to me necessary to postpone the appointment, and submit the question of a future meeting, time and place, to your consideration; requesting each and all, who are interested in the matter, to ascertain where and when such a meeting could be held agreeable to the wishes and convenience of the brethren, and send me information, and I will give notice accordingly. In behalf of the brethren,

T. S. CANFIELD.

Morris, Ct., Dec. 30th, 1863.

Notice.

THE ADVENT CHRISTIAN CONFERENCE in Northern Indiana and Southern Michigan will be held in Jonesville, Mich., Wednesday, January 13th, 1864, and continue two days. The conference will perfect its organization, and set things in order generally, with the hope of building up the cause more effectually. All preachers interested are specially requested to attend. The churches will also send two delegates each, and Advent brethren living in isolated places will also come and represent their respective fields, and their wants. Important business will come up in which all are interested. Do not fail to come. Bro. J. V. Himes has been invited to preach in connection with the conference; and will commence a course of lectures Jan. 7th, and continue till the 12th, and through the conference. Bro. and Sr. Mansfield will attend the conference, and also preach Jan. 15th to 17th, Saturday and Sabbath, after the conference. Let us have a grand rally at this meeting. Let us gird up our loins and work while the day lasts.

Per order, D. BOON, President.

Eastern Central Quarterly Conference.

A quarterly conference will commence in the Union meeting-house, Round Pond, Bristol, Me., Thursday evening, 7 o'clock, Jan. 7th, and continue over the following Sunday. The friends there make a request for the meeting. It is hoped that the ministering brethren, and others who love to labor for the salvation of sinners and upbuilding of the cause of Christ, will attend and labor to this end. Come in the spirit of Christ, praying for his blessing. Call on Captain S. Harding, Samuel Loud, Barker Loud, Wm. Cutler, Solomon Yates.

I. C. WELLCOME.

Notice.

The first quarterly meeting of the Iowa Christian Conference will be holden at Wilton Junction, Muscatine Co., Iowa, Jan. 8th, 1864, and hold over Sunday.

At this meeting there will be an opportunity for churches and ministers in the south part of the State to take the preliminary steps for admission into the conference. Request should be sent in by the churches who wish the next quarterly meeting to be with them. All communications concerning this meeting should be addressed to the writer.

PETER S. W. DEYO, Clerk.

Conference in Union Mills, Ind.

A covenant meeting of the church will be held at the usual hour, Saturday, Jan. 16th. In the evening I shall preach. Sabbath, Jan. 17th, preach in Union Mills, at 10 o'clock A. M., and in the evening at Stillwater Prairie. Resume the meetings at Union Mills Monday evening, Jan. 18th, and continue day and evening over the next Sabbath. All are invited. Let us have a grand rally in the name of the Lord. JOSHUA V. HIMES.

Notice.

There will be a series of meetings at South Butler, Wayne Co., N. Y., commencing Jan. 22nd, and continuing through the following week, and over Sunday, Jan. 31st. Eld. F. Burr, of Honeoye, is expected to help preach the word. Let the brethren and sisters in the surrounding country prepare to attend this meeting. Come with your hearts full of love, that by your earnest prayers and exhortations you may help on the car of truth. Modern infidelity must fall. C. B. TURNER.

Conference.

There will be a conference held in Madison, Me., near the centre, to commence Jan. 15th, evening, and hold over Sunday. A general invitation is given to all our brethren and sisters.

L. L. HOWARD,
D. M. HANSCOM.

Wanted

One of the old 1843 Geographical Charts of the Four Kingdoms, painted in cloth; such as were used by our lecturers twenty years ago; also a set of the Symbolic Charts, presenting the metalic image, four beasts, etc., all in good repair. If you can spare me one for love or money, do not wait a month before replying, but write at once to, and oblige D. T. TAYLOR, Castleton, Rutland Co., Vt.

A Liberal Offer.

Being satisfied that time is short, and that what is done must be done quickly; and feeling anxious to do what we can to arouse a sleeping world and church, we make the following liberal offer:—Any one who will send three or more new subscribers to the Crisis for six months or one year, with advance pay for the same, shall receive at wholesale prices, including postage, any of our books and tracts they may select, amounting to one-third the value of the money sent. For instance, if they send three dollars, they receive one dollar's worth of books or tracts; for six dollars, we send them two dollars' worth; for twelve dollars, four dollars' worth, etc. Let every reader take hold of the work in earnest, and help scatter tracts, books and papers like autumnal leaves.

MILES GRANT, per order of Publishing Committee.

Tract Notice.

Elder L. C. Wellcome, Yarmouth, Me., has a good supply of tracts and books, hymn books, etc., published by the C. P. Society, and by H. L. Hastings and others. Also, a great variety of other best works on the Advent, and inheritance of the saints.

Appointments.

We would say to our preaching Brethren that it is necessary we should receive their appointments as early as TUESDAY MORNING, as our paper goes to press about noon; otherwise they will not be inserted till the week following.

LOWELL STREET CHAPEL, BOSTON, CORNER OF CAUSEWAY AND LOWELL STREETS. Meetings are held regularly three times every Sunday, and Tuesday and Friday evenings. Seats free.

APPOINTMENT FOR LOWELL STREET CHAPEL.

H. L. Hastings .... Sunday, Jan. 10th and onward for the present.

Alton, N. H., in the Town Hall, Wednesday evening, Jan 6th, and continue every evening through the week, and over the following Lord's day.

Montreal, (Bonaventure Hall), Tuesday evening, Jan. 26th, and every evening for two weeks, including Lord's days, Jan. 31st and Feb. 7th. Brethren, pray for us.

MILES GRANT.

Bro. Andrews' .... Saturday evening, Jan. 16th
Bradford Centre .... Sunday, Jan. 17th
JOSEPH W. WHITE.

South Newbury, N. H. .... Sunday, Jan. 24th
WM. SUTHERLAND.

Dalton, (North Street School-house), Sunday, Jan. 10th
Wells Forge .... Wednesday evening, Jan. 13th
Cold Spring .... Thursday evening, Jan. 14th
Round Hill (Chester) .... Sunday, Jan. 17th
WM. J. HALE.

Milo, (Me.) or Sebec, as the brethren may appoint, Jan. 10th.
THOS. SMITH.

Springfield, Mass., (Bro. Morgan's,) evening, Jan. 16th
Agawam .... Sunday, Jan. 17th
Sunday evening, as Bro. Slater shall appoint.
I. B. POTTER.

Agawam .... Sunday, Jan. 10th
P. S. BUTLER.

Barnstead, (Clark meeting-house), for baptism, Jan. 10th
S. S. MOONEY.

Newmarket, N. H. .... Thursday evening, Jan. 7th and continue over Sunday, Jan. 10th.
Lee, N. H. .... Jan. 17th
J. W. BRITTAN.

Cheshire Street, Ct. .... Jan. 9th to the 12th
Pleasant Valley, Ct. .... Jan. 13th to 17th
Danielsonville, Ct. .... Jan. 22d and over the Lord's day, and longer if the interest demands.
Lawrence, Mass. .... Sunday, Jan. 31st
A. ROSS.

New Haven, Ct. .... Sunday, Jan. 10th
R. WILLIAMS.

Dover, N. H.. (Back River School-house), Sunday, Jan. 10th.
Haverhill, Mass. .... Sunday, Jan. 17th
A. SIMPSON.

Agawam, Mass. .... Jan. 10th
South Windsor, Ct. .... Jan. 17th
G. P. BABCOCK.

Blooming Valley, Crawford Co., Pa., Jan. 23d to the 29th.
Edinboro', Erie Co., Pa., Jan. 30th till March 3d.
Brethren, please arrange for these meetings, and pray about them.
JOS. D. BROWN.

South Ashburnham, Mass., Saturday evening and Sunday, Jan. 9th and 10th.
L. BOUTELL.

Northfield, Mass. .... Jan. 10th
GEO. A. STREETER.

Wrightville, Ct. .... Jan. 10th
Collinsville, Ct. .... Jan. 17th
C. GOODRICH.

New Durham Ridge, N. H. .... Jan. 10th
Z. FORD.

West Martinsburgh .... Sunday, Jan. 10th
Copenhagen .... evening, Jan. 11th, 12th, and 13th
C. B. TURNER.

Hoosic Falls, N. Y. .... Sunday, Jan. 10th
E. MC CULLOCK.

Cold Spring, Mass. .... Sunday, Jan. 10th
After that once in four weeks for the present.
GEO. L. TEEPLE.

North Sutton, (at Bro. Andrews), Sunday, Jan. 10th, and longer, as the way opens.
Will visit and give lectures in other neighborhoods, as the way may be opened.
B. SPAULDING.

The Plains, Appanaug .... Jan. 16th and over Lord's day.
Natic .... Jan. 18th
River Point .... Jan. 19th
Central .... Jan. 20th
Coventry, (Town House) .... Jan. 21st
Summet .... Jan. 22d
Danielsonville .... Jan. 23d and over Lord's day.
J. J. NORTHUP.

West Winsted .... Jan. 10th
W. S. CAMPBELL.

P. S. Evening appointments in connection to be made as may be judged best.
W. S. C.

Salem, Mass .... Jan. 10th and remain as long as the Lord directs.
F. H. BURBANK.

E—— (?) Grove .... Jan. 13th
Earlville .... Jan. 14th. 15th and 16th
Greeley .... Sunday, Jan. 17th
Manchester .... evening, Jan. 17th and remain some days.
Intend to visit the brethren at Coffin's Grove.
P. W. HOUGH.

VALUABLE BOOKS FOR SALE.

KITTO: The Cyclopœdia of Biblical Literature. Edited by John Kitto, D. D., F. S. A. Illustrated by numerous maps and engravings. 2 vols., 8vo., 1878 pages, double columns, half calf binding. Price $8.

HEBREW: The Englishman's Hebrew and Chaldee Concordance, by which an English reader can find the original Hebrew for any word in the English Bible, with all the places where it occurs. 2 vols. Cloth, $22; 1 vol. sheep, or half morocco, $23. 1763 pp.

MURDOCK: The New Testament, translated from the Syriac by James Murdock, D. D. 8vo., 515 pp. Price $2.

LARDNER'S WORKS: Containing his "Credibility of The Gospel History." A vast collection of testimonies proving the truth of Christianity; illustrated with rich stores of Ecclesiastical History, Biography, etc., etc.; the ablest work in the world upon the authenticity of the New Testament. 10 vols., 8vo., cloth, over 6000 pp. Price $15. (Worth $20.)

Address H. L. HASTINGS, Boston, Mass.

Valuable Books for Sale.

Eusebius' Ecclesiastical History, $2.00. Postage 28c.
Butterworth's Concordance, sheep, second hand, $1.00. Postpaid $1.25.
Butterworth's Concordance, sheep, new, $1.50; postpaid, $1.75.
Cole's Pocket Concordance, sheep, $1.00; postage 16c.
Pocket Greek Concordance, cloth, postpaid, $1.35. (Worth $1.75.)
Robinson's Greek Harmony of the New Testament, cloth, $1.00; postage 20c.
Xenophon's complete works, translated, cloth, postpaid, $1.50.
Josephus' complete works, translated by Whiston, one vol., sheep, $1.25; postpaid $1.50.

With two exceptions, I have only one copy of the above works. Address E. P. WOODWARD, (Crisis Box) Boston, Mass.

English Bibles for Sale.

1. DIAMOND, fine print, full references, morocco bound, $1.50; calf, $1.25; roan, gilt, $1.00; flexible binding, $1.00. Postage 12 cents.
2. PEARL, flat, full references, morocco, $2.25; roan, $1.50. Postage 16 cts.
3. NONPAREIL, 16 mo., references between the verses, or references in the margin, morocco, $3.00; calf, $2.50; roan, $2.00; references between verses, with gilt rims and clasps, $2.00. Postage 20 cts.
4. MINION, references between the verses, roan, $2.50. Postage 25 cts.
5. MINION, 8vo.; marginal ref., flat and clear type, roan, $2.60.
6. TESTAMENTS, roan, gilt, smallest 25 cts; larger, 33 cts. Postage 6 cts.

Address MILES GRANT, Boston, Mass.

Price Reduced.

RESURRECTION OF THE WICKED. Discussion between M. Grant and J. T. Curry.

The advertised price of this Discussion is 25 cents, postage 2 cents. We have a quantity of them on hand, and will sell them hereafter for 20 cts., postage 2 cts. Send on your orders.

THE TWO WITNESSES, Moses and Elijah. By the Rev. I. P. Labagh. An argument to show that the two Witnesses (Rev. xi.) are neither the Old and New Testaments, nor the Waldenses and Albigenses, etc. etc., but rather Moses and Elias, and that the prophecy concerning them is yet to be literally fulfilled. Price in cloth 15 cts., paper 10 cents.

We think this work is the best on the Two Witnesses that we have ever read.—ED.

PHOTOGRAPHS OF ELD. EDWIN BURNHAM. A few copies of a large, beautiful and life-like Photograph, which the friends of Bro. Burnham will be glad to obtain. Sent by mail for $1.00. Those wishing them should order at once.

HIRAM MUNGER'S Life and Religious Experience. Including many singular circumstances connected with revivals and campmeetings. Written by himself. [illegible]

Business.

THE NEW TRACT FUND.

Two Thousand Dollars.

We, the undersigned, agree to give the sums affixed to our names, for the purpose of raising TWO THOUSAND DOLLARS to aid the Christian Publication Society in the gratuitous distribution of tracts; and our subscriptions shall be paid at the call of the Treasurer, as soon as one half of the amount shall be subscribed.

Pledges and payments to Dec 25th, $374.50
S. A. Chaplin pd 1.83
Wm. C. Keve pd 3.00

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

S. S. Folsom—The Emphatic Diaglott will probably be completed in the coming spring.
S. B. Colton—There is yet room.
J. B. Worthing—They are sent.
Mrs S. M. Slade—We received it.
Matilda Cottrell—Your paper has been sent regularly.
E. Clark—Right; to No. 478.
N. Collins—The $1 in July was duly received and acknowledged.
R. O'Brien—We received the $2, mailed in August. Acknowledged in No. 416. Paid to No. 408.

CASH RECEIPTS TO JAN. 1, 1864.

The present No. of the Crisis is 431.

The No. which follows your name, is the No. to which your money pays.

Deduct the one from the other, and you will see how far you have paid in advance, or how much is due the office.

Make a memorandum of the same, and you will be reminded when your subscription expires.

D W Comstock 438, H Howell 454, A Amos 454, A H Brown 443, J M Gove 460, W Laskey 444, Wm D Watson 491, J Eaton 458, M E Goodwin 446, J H Carpenter 444, S J Parsons 441, Miss W Vaughn 455, Mrs H W Bearce 464, H Rotherham 451, J Knowles 454, J Buckingham 454, R H Bolton 481, Wm Coplain 443, W Patton 441, M A G Otis 515, J Boutwell 416, A Wood 433, S Sherwin 456, M V Meader 456, Mrs C E Conklin 448, H Gould 433, E V Hall 455, H B Streeter 431, S Caverly 449, B B Campbell 451, J Pecu 447, S Horn 456, E Dunham 486, O B Fox 456, Mrs M Leavitt 456, W M Webster 456, L Brown 456, B Hammond 459, J S Atwood 456, L Shurtleff 456, S S Parsons 438, Mrs. S. E. Miner 448, C H Barrett 456, J P Ellis 462, J C Pease 364, E Hayden 456, M L Bickford 456, D Lewis 438, S Tupper 457, C H Bradford 432, S H Folsom 488, R Boardman 503, N Collins 458, G E Holt 456, J B Fry 456, S D Bates 456, J Cove 456, M H Garland 456, A Riggs 442, M Pierce 456, S Corwin 456, M Lookins 456, J Wilkinson 456, N Drehme 456, S Hess 456,—$1.00 each.

J Bailey 442, A Johnson 431, Wm Manning 479, A G Shockey 442, G Sutton 480, W W Taylor 422, Wm Benton 480, L Brown 483, P W Matts 463, J M Dinsmore 480, Wm Chamberlain 412, W A S Smyth 468, J N Sherman 459, P Keyes 473, E S Morse 432, Mrs H Snell 483, M E C Bennett 469, F Whitney 444, S F Mudget 462, T Bullard 461, Wm C Keve 419, J S Morgan 468, D Loucks 472, G W Young 471, C J Gifford 482, Mrs C Otto 469, C B Peck 335, J Huyck 485, J C Rogers 482, W T Baker 468, E M Gowell 482, C H Ramer 482, S Ramer 482, B R Gifford 482, H Rand 434, T D Johnson 482, J S Pearson 482, A Roberts 444, C Pettibone 464, S J Gaylord 482, N Dixon 482, T I Hill 457, M A Weaver 482,—$2.00 each.

C Emerson 441, Z Quimby 441, J Sharp 441, B Gardner 442, G W Rice 442, G W Byle 339, Miss S Higby 442, W Creamer 442, S T Creamer 442, E Parrett 442, W. S. Read 442, N R Weicks 433, Mrs. M. Jones 443, Mrs H Murray 443, Miss C A Carpenter 443, T Davenport 428, M Smith 448, B Chesley 443, E Perry 443,—50c each.

L G Ingalls $2,43, 430; P Richardson 92c, 429; J B Tupper $1.10, 470; N Manning $5.00, 440; Geo W Smith $1.00, (from what P. O.?); J W Trott $2.50, 444; A Chase $3.35, 477; Mrs J Spackman $2.50, 437; S A Chaplin $2.56, 482; C J Smith $4.00, 391; E G Osgood $3.00, 390; C K Higby $1.50, 463; G Jackson $1.50, 447; A McKenzie $1.15, 407; T Sproul $1.15, 437; H Caswell $3.00, 400; H Raymond $4.61, 515; J Ireland $5.00, 474; E W Pond $1.00, 430.

FOR BOOKS AND TRACTS.

D W Comstock $1.00, S Longfellow $3.70, H F Holton $3.30, C M Chaplin $2.07, H Rotherham 85c, Geo W Smith $1.50, A Chase $1.40, A P Webster $1.00, S A Chaplin $1.09, H Pratt 55c, A Wood 25c, G Wright Jr 60c, Wm Sweet $2.00, J H Smith $5.40, D Loucks 25c, S W Bartlett 60c, M W Corliss $5.8?, A Roberts $1.00, C R Danks $1.25, J Wright $2.00, J Campbell 75c, S J Gaylord $1.00, Geo E Holt 60c, M Smith 35c.

TO SEND CRISIS TO THE POOR.—C. Pettibone, $3.

BOOKS AND TRACTS SENT.

BY MAIL.

C H Williams, North Bay, N Y; S W Bartlett, West Stafford Ct.; S G Sterling, Springwater, N. Y.; J Campbell, Fall River, Mass.; G Wright, Jr., Lapeer, Mich.; D. Foss, Brandon, Mich.; C. H. Ramer, New Boston Minn; C R Danks, Fon du Lac, Wis.; A Roberts, Long Point, Ill; E C Bennett, Riceville, Iowa; N W Eastman, Douglass, Iowa; J T Langley, Barnsted Parade, N. H.; J Rands, Richmond, N. B.; S J Gaylord, Northfield, Mass.; N D Wight, Bond's Village, Mass.; L G Ingalls, Abington, Ct.; A E Darling, E. Killingly, Ct.; S S Folsom, Fisherville, N. H.; P Fish, Greenwich, N. Y.; W Hayes, Peru Station, Ill.

BY EXPRESS.

M W Corliss, Woodstock, N. B.; J N Snyder, Mansfield, Ohio; I C Wellcome, Augusta, Me.; J Gay, Portland, Me.

LETTERS RECEIVED.

Wm. Hobbs, S Woodruff, S Loomer, D A Chamberlin, A Quimby, I K Lombard, S L Manly, D F Newton, Z Libbey, S E Rundlett, N M Wells, J V Himes, J E Clark, Ira Fancher, Geo. Severance.

POST OFFICE ADDRESS.

My address, until further notice, will be Worcester, Mass. PERE H. LAWRENCE.

☞ My address, until further notice, will be No. 128 High Street, Brooklyn, L. I., N. Y. I may be absent for a few days at some appointments, and will respond immediately on return. Come, dear friends, send in your orders and help scatter the light. S. S. BREWER.

Walter Pratt—New Bedford, Mass.

Who Obtained New Subscribers in Dec.

Whole number of new subscribers in Dec., 176. Obtained by the efforts of friends, 117.

One each—By S D Applebee, D Q Kent, Wm. Allen, J Blain, G A Barker, Jno. Berry, F Burr, C Bunnell, S W. Bartlett, R. F. Berry, D. Cogswell, J. Carr, P. S W Deyo, H M Dubey, I Damman, E F Dibble, D G Drake, F Dunham, B R Fellows, H. P. Glidden, J F Gray, N M Henry, J R Hall, E M Haggett, L G Ingalls, J Jenkins, D F Kendall, W Leaf, W Lucas, J J Northup, C L Page, J Pinkham, J W Piper, T W Piper, A Riggs, J A Sober, A W Sibley, P A Smith, W. A. S. Smith, C A Sumner, L E Saulpaugh, R N Stetson, A Smith, C C Stevens, W A A Smith, G W Smith, E G White, D Webster, W H Wild, J P Yates.

Two each—By S S Brewer, F Corker, N W Eastman, J B Goodrich, S Hammons, W E Hathaway, T I Hill, M S Home, A Spaulding, J M Worthing, G B Whitford.

Three each—By J F Chamberlain, A H Robbins, C H Ramer, M Smith.

R. Haskins 8, C B Turner 11, M Grant 14.

☞ REPORT of money that has been sent me to assist in paying my commutation.—

Church in Peacedale, R. I., $25.00; A Bro. in Philadelphia, Pa., $2.00; Bro. Jas. Douglas, $3.00; Bro. and Sr. Thos. Hadley, $1.00; Sr. E. B. Lyon, $1.00; Brn in Hartford, Conn., $7.30; Sr. Julia E. Lloyd. 50 cts., A Sister, Providence, R. I., $3.00; Jas. Page 50 cts.; H. B. Cross, $2.00.

Will these friends accept my thanks? I acknowledge through the paper to save time and labor.

JOS. D. BROWN.

☞ Received from a Sister in Kennebunk, $1, Wm. Watson, by the hand of L. Boutell, $1; "Sister in Christ," Danbury, $1.00. W. PRATT.

BOOKS AND TRACTS.

All publications sent by mail must be prepaid. The postage on Tracts is 1 cent for each FOUR OUNCES, or fractional part of four ounces; on Books, 4 cents for each FOUR OUNCES or fractional part of the same. For example, the postage on any one tract on this list is TWO CENTS. [illegible]

MILES GRANT'S WORKS.

Resurrection of the Wicked. Discussion with Jno. T. Curry. "Do the Scriptures teach the Resurrection of the Wicked?" Phonographically reported by E. P. Woodward. 25c, postage 2c.

Eternal Suffering. Discussion with Dr. J. Litch. "Do the Scriptures teach the eternal conscious suffering of the Wicked?" 25c, postage 2c.

Spiritualism. Discussion with J. S. Loveland, "On Spiritualism and Immortality." 25c, postage 2c.

State of the Dead. Discussion with W. W. Clayton, "On the State of the Dead and the Punishment of the Wicked." 25c, postage 2c. Bound 35c, postage 6c.

Miles Grant's Tracts. 32 pages each. Price 5 cents [illegible]

What is Man? A Bible view of his creation; The [illegible]

The Soul, What is it? Or a careful examination of all the uses of the words nephesh and psuche as employed in the old and New Testaments.

The Spirit, What is it? Or a careful examination of all the uses of the words ruach and pneuma as found in the old and new Testaments.

The Rich Man and Lazarus. Thief on the Cross; [illegible]

C. F. HUDSON'S WORKS.

Debt and Grace. Or the Doctrine of a Future Life, by C. F. Hudson. [illegible]

Christ our Life. The Scriptural Argument for Immortality through Christ alone. [illegible]

Human Destiny. A Critique on Universalism. [illegible]

The Doctrine of Endless Misery, an occasion of [illegible]

Eternal Death is the literal sense of Eternal Punishment. [illegible]

The Rich Man and Lazarus. With remarks on Jo- [illegible]

The Right of Wrong; or, Is Evil Eternal? With [illegible]

BOOKS PUBLISHED BY H. L. HASTINGS,

107 HANOVER STREET, BOSTON, MASS.

[illegible]

The Signs of the Times; or, A Glance at Christendom. [illegible]

"I have been much impressed by [illegible]"—Rt. Rev. J. H. Hopkins, Bishop of Vermont.

The Voice of the Church on the Coming and Kingdom of the Redeemer; [illegible] By D. T. Taylor. [illegible] L. Hastings. [illegible]

Spiritualism a Satanic Delusion and a Sign of the Times. By William Ramsey, D. D. Edited by H. L. H. [illegible]

Thessalonica; or The Model Church. A sketch of Primitive Christianity. By H. L. H. [illegible]

The Great Controversy between God and Man. [illegible] By H. L. Hastings. [illegible]

Reasons for my Hope, and the Tokens of its Speedy Realization. By H. L. Hastings. [illegible]

Thessalonica and Reasons for my Hope. Bound in one volume. Cloth, 75 cents.

Looking Forward, or the Prospects of the Church; being the concluding chapter of the Signs of the Times. Paper, 15 cents.

Future Punishment, as revealed in the Scriptures, in opposition to the Three Theories of Never-ending Sin and Misery, Eternal Sleep without any Resurrection, and Universal Salvation. By H. L. Hastings. Cloth, $1. Paper, 50c.

[illegible]

Pauline Theology; or, The Scripture Doctrine of Future Punishment, as taught in the Epistles of Paul. By H. L. Hastings. 12th 1000. Paper, 10c.

[illegible]

The Old Paths; or, the Primitive Doctrine of a Future Life. By H. L. Hastings. 2d 1,000. Paper 12c.

[illegible]

Retribution; or, The Doom of the Ungodly, after the Resurrection of the Dead, Just and Unjust. By H. L. H. Paper, 10 cents.

[illegible]

Any of the above works will be sent by MAIL, POSTPAID, on receipt of the price. [illegible]

MISCELLANEOUS.

Cruden's Condensed Concordance, by which any passage of scripture, of which only a single word is remembered, can be found, and every place where any word occurs in the English Bible, can be seen at a glance. [illegible]

The Life of Trust. An account of the Lord's Dealings with George Müller, Director of the Orphan House at Bristol, England. [illegible]

Two Hundred Stories for Children. An excellent and entertaining book for young and old, compiled by T. M. Preble. [illegible]

A Treatise on the 24th and 25th chapters of Matthew, [illegible] By I. C. Wellcome. [illegible]

Should Christians Fight? A pamphlet on War, embracing the Scripture argument against fighting, and the testimonies of the Primitive Church. By I. C. Wellcome. [illegible]

The Bible from Heaven, or a dissertation on the Evidences of Christianity. By M. Hull. 25c, postage 5c.

America in Prophecy. Exposition of the 18th chap. of Isaiah, showing its application to the United States of America in the present conflict, and end of the dispensation. [illegible]

The Celestial Railroad, or Modern Pilgrim's Progress. After the manner of Bunyan. Vividly representative of the present-day tendencies of religion. [illegible]

The Three Kingdoms, or the Kingdom of God the Father, the kingdom of Satan, the kingdom of the Lord Jesus Christ [illegible] By T. M. Preble. [illegible]

The Ten Virgins, or Wisdom and Folly contrasted. By T. M. Preble. [illegible]

The Two Adams. By T. M. Preble. An interesting tract. [illegible]

Messiah's Mission, or an exposition of the Gospel Covenant, as contained in the Scriptures of truth. By C. F. Swett. [illegible]

The Excellency of the Lord's Anointed, or Christ the promised Messiah. By Mrs. Mary A. Seymour. [illegible]

Everybody's Book. The Bible View of the personality of God. The Devil: his origin, personality, power, and doom. By Phineas A. Smith. [illegible]

Cook Book. By Dr. F. W. Hurd. This book gives instructions for preparing all the articles of food used at Dr. Jackson's [illegible] Dansville, N. Y. [illegible]

Premature Decay of American Youth. By Dr. A. Stone. This is a valuable work, and should be read by all the young. [illegible]

The Saint's Harvest, or an exposition of Matt. 24: 15, in connection with Dan. 12: 11-12. By H. K. Flagg. [illegible]

The Old and New Covenant. Superiority of the New. By A. W. Sibley. [illegible]

The Christian Lyre. A collection of Hymns and Tunes for Worship. [illegible]

A Disquisition on the Prophecies. By F. H. Berick. [illegible]

An Appeal to Pious Trinitarians. By H. Grew. [illegible]

TRACTS

Issued by the Christian Publication Society.

[illegible]

FREE TO THE POOR.

The Church not in Darkness; or, the duties of the times; the guilt of a slumbering world, and the duty of a faithful church. A stirring tract of 24 pages. By H. L. Hastings.

The Three Worlds; or, earth, past, present, and future. [illegible] By H. L. Hastings. 24 pages.

The Last Days. A calm, scriptural, and convincing argument, showing that the last days, marked by divine goodness and human iniquity, are now in the world. By H. L. Hastings. 24 pages.

Plain Truths; or, Scripture and Tradition united. A condensed view of leading Scriptural statements regarding [illegible] By H. L. Hastings. 32 pages.

Will all Men be Saved? A pointed, pithy, earnest and conclusive argument against Universalism, [illegible] By H. L. Hastings. 24 pages.

A Voice of Warning from the Four Winds. A compilation of brief and thrilling testimonies to the fact of an approaching crisis, [illegible] By D. T. Taylor. 24 pages.

The New Heavens and New Earth. A collection of testimonies [illegible] By D. T. Taylor. 30 pages.

Ancient Landmarks. Six tracts of four pages each, [illegible] By H. L. Hastings. 24 pages.

The Duty of Christians in the present crisis. A letter to a Christian brother, [illegible] By H. L. Hastings. 24 pages.

State of the Dead. By John Milton, author of "Paradise Lost," [illegible]

Silence of the Scriptures respecting the immortality of the soul, [illegible] By C. F. Hudson. [illegible]

Immortality Through Christ Alone. The doctrine [illegible] By C. F. Hudson. [illegible]

The Destiny of the Wicked. A solid mass of Scripture quotation, [illegible] By H. L. Hastings. [illegible]

The Advent at Hand. A summary of reasons for expecting the speedy close of the present, and the coming of the next dispensation. [illegible]

S. S. BREWER'S TRACTS.

The Kingdom of God and the Signs of the Times. [illegible]

The Days we Live in. Price 10c, postage 2c.

The Seven Seals. An Exposition of the Sixth Chapter of Revelation. [illegible]

The Slaying of the Witnesses. Price 7c, postage [illegible]

The Great Image soon to be dashed to pieces. Price [illegible]

The Two-Horned Beast. [illegible]

The Rich Man and Lazarus. Price 5c, postage 2c.

THE NEED OF JESUS.

"Unto you who believe he is precious."—1 Pet. ii: 7.

I need thee, precious Jesus! for I am full of sin,
My soul is dark and guilty, my heart is dead within;
I need the cleansing fountain, where I can always flee,
The blood of Christ most precious, the sinner's perfect plea.

I need thee, precious Jesus! for I am very poor,
A stranger and a pilgrim, I have no earthly store;
I need the love of Jesus to cheer me on my way,
To guide my doubting footsteps, to be my strength and stay.

I need thee, precious Jesus! I need a friend like thee,
A friend to soothe and sympathize, a friend to care for me;
I need the heart of Jesus, to feel each anxious care,
To tell my every want, and all my sorrow share.

I need thee, precious Jesus! for I am very blind,
A weak and foolish wanderer, with a dark and evil mind;
I need the light of Jesus to tread the thorny road,
To guide me safe to glory, where I shall see my God.

I need thee, precious Jesus! I need thee day by day,
To fill me with thy fullness, to lead me on my way;
I need thy Holy Spirit to teach me what I am,
To show me more of Jesus, to point me to the Lamb.

I need thee, precious Jesus! I hope to see thee soon,
Encircled with the rainbow and seated on thy throne;
There, with thy blood-bought children, my joy shall ever be
To sing thy praises, Jesus! to gaze, my Lord, on Thee!

—Selected.

NAPOLEON AGAIN.

SOME FURTHER DEVELOPMENTS.

The readers of the Prophetic Times are acquainted with our surmises with reference to Louis Napoleon as perhaps he who is to perform the part of the great Antichrist of the last days. (See No. 2, p. 17; No. 4, p. 52; and No. 6, p. 87.) More and more, with every new movement, does he develop himself in that direction.

A writer in one of the secular issues of New York, dated September 5th, 1863, publishes, that, in 1857, he made the acquaintance of a gentleman of somewhat distinguished character, who had been the intimate friend of a certain Mr. Muller, the companion and counsellor of Louis Napoleon in the days of his banishment, and from whom he obtained possession of some very remarkable Napoleonic secrets, which we repeat.

It appears from what he thus elicited, in accordance with all the accounts, that the dream of Louis Napoleon's whole life was his accession to the throne of France; and that such was his aptitude for reverie, and facility for speculative development, that he had three large volumes, at the time he was in this country, filled with his plans for attaining the grand aim of his ambition. The secrets referred to, are contained in the general run of this imperial programme, framed so long in advance, and in the filling out of which thus far there has not occurred a single variation.

The attempt to take France with about sixty followers, in the steamboat City of Edinburgh, was distinctly marked out in these volumes. The calculation was, that the electric fire which always runs in the French veins, and which is known as "glory," would burst into a universal glow at the watchword of Napoleon; while the counter view and calculation for defeat, was contained in a marginal note, to the effect, that should he fail, the conviction that he was an easily-handled, soft-brained fool, would make him only the more eligible with the scheming sharpers of European politics, as a future candidate. It was to help this latter calculation entirely, that the performance with the tame eagle was thrown in. "The eagle," said Muller, "will catch the fools, if we succeed; it will catch the sharpers, if we lose. In playing for the minds of men, we must never forget the two divisions of society." This latter calculation was undoubtedly justified by the manner in which the intriguing leaders in French politics afterward seized upon Louis Napoleon, almost by common consent, as their candidate for the position of Prince President. "They thought they had the man of the tame eagle," said Muller; "but they got nothing better than the Corsican wolf."

Muller did not go back to Europe with Louis Napoleon; but he confidently expected to be sent for as soon as his protege should arrive at power. When, however, he found himself neglected, nay, forgotten by his aspiring pupil, in the grand dazzle of events which always buzz and sparkle round a throne, he sunk into a deep dejection. About a year after Louis became Emperor, Muller died in obscurity and poverty in Howard Street, in 1853.

Coming into possession of these Napoleonic ideas only second-hand, this writer says that he did not attach much importance to them, till he saw the opening portion of them come exactly true in the Italian campaign. That was Louis' second great move toward the unity of the Latin race; that race whose empire the Antichrist is in some manner to reconstruct. His first was his endeavor to raise Spain to the grade of a first class European power. "Now, as to the Italian campaign," says this writer, "I saw the programme come exactly true, and particularly saw that unexpected peace, which was tendered in the full flow of triumph, laid down as a double victory, inasmuch as in addition to feats of war, it conquered an alliance and friendship from a powerful and otherwise implacable foe. The object of the war was to make an alliance with Austria, and bring Italy so under his control, that he might unify her when he would."

Louis Napoleon's darling idea is to establish a dynasty. The Latin race is to compose the body, and France the head. As early as 1857, he commenced preparing the mind of France for the union of the Latin race, by pamphlets from various writers on that subject. And in all cases these pamphlets spoke sneeringly of the Anglo-Saxon race, and indicated that catholicity, properly applied, was the synthetic bond and impulse that would carry the Latin race to the resumption of its early empire over the world. "Without that synthetic idea," said one enthusiastic writer, in 1859, "we never can make France mistress of the world!"

And what comes still closer home, this writer informs us that Muller frequently declared, that Louis Napoleon intended to divide this republic into two conflicting parts; and that after we had become so weakened as to be unable to assist England, which is our natural ally, he intended to attack her. That is to be his first policy, to ingratiate himself with England—to show a continual unwillingness to act without her co-operation, but always to deceive her. This idea was expressed in the Napoleonic manuscript by the term of "flattering the old ox,"—these words being chosen probably because Bull was at last to be slain.

The number of soldiers set down in the Napoleonic manuscript for our invasion was 75,000—a force which, under the then condition of affairs, might be considered as equal to 200,000 now. With these, it was Louis' notion to get a footing in Louisiana, which he claimed to be really the property of France, by virtue of the non-fulfillment of the conditions of the session. He used to say, that the greatest mistake his uncle ever made, was the sale of the vast territory of Louisiana to the United States—it should be the aim of France to recover that territory, and by way of doing so, and of holding it in our despite, the slaves were to be made free and converted into soldiers. "I want no better material than is to be found in them," said Napoleon; "and so long as they are not emancipated by the United States, there is an empire ready in that quarter for whoever can give them liberty and arms. Once, mine, I shall never dread losing either them or the territory they defend."

With these ideas in his mind over twenty-six years ago, it is not difficult to believe that the Southern rebellion was in part inspired by Louis Napoleon, and that it has been through some secret understanding between him and its leaders, that the latter have counted so firmly, from the start, on foreign intervention. It was stated previous to the rebellion, in two of the Richmond papers, and in one in Alabama, that Louis Napoleon would help the South in a war against the North.

To show how well settled this idea of dividing the United States was with Napoleon, we have the word of Pierre Soule that Louis once seriously asked him "how he would like to be President of a Southern Republic!" He was then undoubtedly dreaming of its ultimate seizure for himself. The Napoleon manuscript, which was written more than twenty-six years ago, avowed, that as soon as he, Louis Napoleon, should obtain control over the South, he would abolish slavery.

The remark of Napoleon to Pierre Soule, which was made during a visit of the latter from his legation at Madrid to Paris, suggests that Louis, more than likely, gave impulse to the Ostend diplomatic meeting. He certainly inspired the raid on Cuba, and incited the insult to our flag on the Black Warrior; but he did not press the matter on the Spaniards, because events were not ready for his purpose. It was necessary, before he began to wrestle with the Great Republic, that he should first secure allies, and, in fact, effect a great coalition against it. His theory on this point, as originally laid down in the manuscript, was, to begin first with Russia, next Austria, next Spain—fighting each in detail, if it were necessary to effect the kind of alliance he wanted, but wheedling England all the while—to use his own words—"feeding the old ox." Witness how he used England in the Crimean war; how he cajoled and quieted her, while he was reconstructing Latin Italy, and taking Savoy and Nice; and how, at every footstep of our troubles, he has constantly put England forward to provoke our animosity. Notwithstanding the similarity of faith and institutions between the English and ourselves, he has so used the aristocratic government of England, as to exasperate us with the deepest wrongs, and make the destruction of England the first wish of the American heart. On the other hand, he has not permitted an iron-clad or Confederate pirate to be constructed in any of his ports; and we have heard of no blockade runner flying the French flag. His diplomacy in the matter of our troubles has been complete; and while he has lulled our suspicions, by directing our attention to "the old ox," he has been silently preparing, under the false cover of the Polish question, to descend upon our coasts.

The Napoleonic notes provided, that after this country was reduced, England was to be deprived of all her allies, and then, along with its religion, swept away. Germany was to be deceived by him, with the offer of a throne in Mexico or South America to some of its aspiring princes. Protestant and Catholic Germany were to occupy each other in exterminating strife—a thing that could easily be effected and prolonged, if England were too weak to side with Prussia in the contest. Your readers can judge for themselves, if England has not been played almost to a point of helplessness already, when the Saturday Review, in its last issue, lamented that, for some reason or other, Britain stands to-day, among the nations, without a friend in the world. France, on the other hand, stands at the head of European powers, with all of them obsequious to her, and ready and eager to recognize her new transatlantic empire, and do her bidding in regard to it. . . .

We believe that the approaching year will develop wonders in the affairs of the world. The day of God's judgment of the nations is at hand. Louis Napoleon seems every day to be approaching the moment of his revelation as the great Antichrist. We are anxiously waiting to hear what relation he has with the great association recently organized in Paris by the Jews, which is meant to extend to all the children of Israel throughout the world, and which its framers announce as to be the great instrument for the introduction of the reign of universal liberty and light. Let us not sleep as do others; lest in such an hour as we think not, the Son of man should come.—Prophetic Times.

STIRRING WORDS.

We live in the world's crisis. God is doing in the earth just what he has promised to do before his kingdom can come. Prophecy is marching with stately tread into the vestibule of glorious fulfillment.

God is shaking the world, that false religions and false institutions may fail. If these things were not shaken, we could not hope as we now do. Unless we turn infidels, we must believe that God is on the throne, and that he still rules the world. If he does indeed govern, then, as the divine husbandman, what preparations he is making for great things to come! By terrible things in righteousness, he is answering our prayers. He is making his glory to pass before us as he did of old to Moses and to Elijah. We are still in the cleft of the rock. We hear the earthquake and the wind; the mountains are rent, and the rocks fly in pieces; and the still, small voice is yet to come. We have long prayed, in the language of the prophet, that the Lord would judge among the nations, and rebuke many people; that they might beat their swords into ploughshares, and their spears into pruning-hooks. But God is answering us as we little thought. His ways are strange, indeed, for reaching the long-expected Sabbath of the world. The sword is to-day a ploughshare, tearing up the earth's packed surface, turning out the subsoil, to be mellowed and harrowed against the great planting, and the greater harvest yet to come. The world never felt such thrills and throbs. Creation groans audibly, travailing in pain, until the great redemption comes. Never were such changes going on. Opinions are shifting; errors are dying by sudden paralysis; truth is crystallizing, and asserting its power. We are lost in the mist of the great agitation, and stunned with the noise of struggling elements.

God has not become bewildered, if we have. He calmly watches the ripening of his purposes, the hastening of his kingdom. This hour of human despair is God's hour of mighty working. Let us believe it. He is plucking his right hand out of his bosom to do his own strange work on the earth.

Let us rise to an appreciation of the sublime and the glorious which are blending themselves with all that is terrible in this hour. God is opening iron doors, whose creaking rings round the globe. He is prying open systems of iniquity which have defied the storms of ages. He is forcing the gates of heathen nations, and rallying his church to press in and occupy the land. He calls us to go with the gospel—to pour truth upon the startled conscience of the earth. This great command is being thundered out of heaven, and echoed along the earth, and screamed from the battle-field. This is no time for a timid, faltering faith. Now let the church launch out upon the waters, for God is in the storm.

The ark is safe. These convulsions will lift it to its Ararat.

Ah, could we but see God's plans, how greatly would we wonder! We are among the mountains of Lebanon; we hear Hiram's woodmen felling the trees, and his stone-cutters hammering the great stones; but we do not see the silent progress of the temple at Jerusalem. But still the work goes on, and Christ's kingdom is "drawing nigh." Truth is shaking its lion mane, and is putting on omnipotence. Let us be calm. Let us rally to the privileges of faith and to the labors of christian love.—Voice of the Prophets.

For the World's Crisis.

"FOREIGN HELP."

No doubt it is a good thing for nations who are weak, and cowardly, and in debt, to accept foreign help, especially when foreigners are aching to cross over, pay up the mortgages, claim the place, get rich and take all the glory there is in buying, killing and destroying men. So the helped get helped too much, and the helpers satisfy a long desired ambition to extend their territory.

Now there are some men that cannot work for themselves; but to go out at days' works for others they do remarkably well. I remember our old whistling butcher, who had an awful headache when his own corn wanted hoeing, but when one of his neighbors got him, he worked well. And I have seen some christians who could not pray at home, but somehow when they got among strangers would get a "spirit of prayer" and talk as fast on their knees as any where.

Once in a while I come across a preacher who never "feels" like preaching about home. He does not "get the evidence" or "impression" that the Lord wants him to preach to his neighbors. If you ask him why, he quotes something about a "prophet's not having honor in his own country." And as he has not acted honorable about home at all times, he skedaddles, goes into "Macedonia," which place lies in any foreign land, bounded by every place where no one lives who is knowing to his last escape from jail, and goes there with all confidence, tells the wicked heathen in Macedonia how badly some professed christians live, never hinting that he fails in keeping the whole catalogue of commandments and ordinances to the very letter. He knows just where professors fail. Of course he does, for he has failed a good many times. By-and-by his neighbors hear of a reformation over in Macedonia. They think the work is of God—if the workman was of the devil. They think he has repented, and means to live godly. But no confessions are made. Old sins are smothered and left to rot the hearts they have wounded.

Now Paul, Peter and all the holy men you ever heard of, preached first to their "men and brethren." And a man that lives so bad a life at home that he fears and turns all colors while talking about "righteousness, temperance and a judgment to come," before his neighbors, is not the "chosen vessel" of the Lord to go abroad.

I like to hear all the new preachers that come our way. But the best commendation for them to bring is a good report from the church at home. They pass better with an undoubted character than with a fine coat. But there, "a new broom sweeps clean," folks say. Yes, and some sweep so clean that they take the wheat, chaff and all! Some poor-made brooms fall to atoms by a few clean sweepings.

You believe that brother who lives a few miles from you has "a call to preach?" "Yes; why?" "O! nothing, only I was wondering why he did not obey his call. Does he ever preach to you?" "Not very often." Can he preach?" "O yes; he is quite a speaker, a good man, understands the Scriptures, and might be useful; but his wife"— Hold! do not throw the blame on his wife. I wonder if you ever saw a backslidden minister that did not blame his wife for every cross word he speaks. "I was going to say his wife is a poor, sick, nervous woman, naturally proud, wants things in order. But they are poor, and his mind is overcharged with cares of this life. So he does not get out much."

Now, brethren, here is a chance for you to help others and get help. This man is qualified for the work. But he cannot dig the earth, serve tables, cook, tend the sick, rock the cradle at home and preach too. The trouble is not in him, it is in you. You have neglected him. You ought to have ministered to his necessities. The last preacher you paid proved to be a rogue. Better have given it to this man whom you know to be honest. He wants to tell you what God has told him, but his family must be cared for. "Yes, and I often think if ministers would not marry and have families, these cares would not be in their way." Suppose you had not a family—would you serve God better? I trust every body knows his own duty. Do not judge on matters that you have no Scripture for. That is a delicate subject, and had better not say "no" or "yes" till the only proper time comes.

If you want life among you visit the poor, especially those of the household of faith. Go and see how much care that oppressed brother has. Go and see how sick his children are, how care-worn and discouraged his wife is. She loves the Lord, but you have neglected her till she had rather die than live. You have opened your pockets to every stranger that came your way. The louder he talked the more you paid him for talking. The meaner he was and the more his conscience smote him for hypocrisy, the louder he shouted and the more you thought "the power" was with him. Some folks do have "power" to appear like "sheep," when inwardly they are "ravening wolves." Now, in the future, encourage your men whom God has raised up among you, help them out into the field, and if God wants them to go over to Macedonia, let them go without care or fear of starvation at home. I am glad there are a few who "let charity begin at home."

Brethren, if any of you think this means you, I do not doubt that it does. And this means you too: "Use hospitality . . . without grudging." And this: "Faith without works is dead." Hunt up similar passages that belong with them, and God will bless you in remembering them that minister to you in spiritual things. What is it for you of your abundance to minister to them of your carnal things,—old clothes, potatoes, corn, hay, wood or any thing they need more than you do? Be faithful stewards.

Canada East, 1863. M. Mathews.

There is many a mother's heart, both North and South, which will beat responsive to the following chaste lines:—

A MOTHER WAITING FOR THE NEWS.

How wearily the hours pass,
Since through the ambient air
The lightning flashed the startling fact,
A battle had been there—
There, where my noble, honest boy,
The path of fame pursues—
But oh! my aching heart will burst
While waiting for the news.

Wounded upon that gory field,
Forsaken he may die—
No mother there to wet his lips,
Nor raise his hopes on high:
Disfigured, stained, his features marred
By many a scar and bruise,—
Ah! who can tell what mothers feel
While waiting for the news?

Ye wise men who have made this war,
To make all mankind free,
Oh! know you not this boy of mine
Was all the world to me!
If he is gone, what have I left?
What comfort can I choose?
A mother's heart condemns your deeds,
While waiting for the news!

If I am wrong, oh God forgive
This throbbing heart and brain!
But who can justify their aims
If my poor boy is slain?
Yet they whose sons are safe at home,
May take far different views,
And cry aloud, more blood, more blood—
Oh God, send me good news!

—Natchez Courier.

WHO IS ELIJAH THE PROPHET?

We have long and earnest discourses, trying to prove that the personage spoken of in Malachi 4: 5, belonged to past generations, and that consequently we must not look for its fulfillment in the future; as God never suffers his prophecies to be fulfilled twice. But hold a moment! Let us see the evidence of its fulfillment. Well, says our opponent, "Just turn to Matt. 11: 14. Jesus is speaking of John the Baptist, and he says, 'If ye will receive it this is Elias which was to come.'" Now if Jesus says John the Baptist was the person spoken of by Malachi, (4: 5,) which he says is Elijah the prophet, then the evidence is conclusive, and we look no farther. But let us look at Matt. 11: 14, once more. It appears that John, after he was cast into prison, having had time to reflect on all that had passed, still it seems his faith wavers. And he sends two of his disciples, saying, "Go and ask Jesus, 'Art thou he that should come or do we look for another.'" Jesus sends John a list of his works, evidence on which he could rely. "The blind receive their sight, the lame walk, the lepers are cleansed, the deaf hear, the dead are raised up, and the poor have the gospel preached unto them." When John's disciples had gone, Jesus began to instruct the multitude concerning John. He asks them three questions, "What went ye out for to see? A reed shaken with the wind?" Again, "what went ye out for to see? A man clothed in soft raiment? Behold they that wear soft clothing, are in king's houses. But what went ye out to see? A prophet? This was what they had been out to see on the banks of Jordan. Jesus declares they had not only gone out to see a prophet, but that John was much "more than a prophet. For this is he of whom it is written, 'Behold I will send my messenger before thy face, which shall prepare thy way before thee;" referring to Malachi, 3: 1. Now as the first Advent of Christ was a matter of pointed prophecy, so of the messenger, sent before his first advent, "the voice of one crying in the wilderness, 'Prepare ye the way of the Lord." But was John the Baptist Elias? The angel told Zacharias, speaking of John, "He shall go before him (God) in the spirit and power of Elias." (Luke 1: 17.) to perform his work that he came to do, as fore-runner of Christ. It was the same Spirit that Elias had to guide him in his work. It was the same power too by which Elias wrought; consequently the spirit and power of Elias, and the spirit and power John came in, were the same. But that John was not Elias, we will now prove. But before examining the testimony, let us look at St. John's Gospel, 21; 24. "This is the disciple which testifieth of these things, and wrote these things; and we know that his testimony is true." Now turn back to the first chapter, and commence at the 19th verse, and you will there find John's testimony of himself, as recorded by this true witness; the beloved disciple, St. John. Well, what is the record? The Jews sent priests and Levites from Jerusalem to John the Baptist, to ask him "Who art thou?" We ask John Baptist to-day, the same question. John Baptist, "Who art thou?

Hark! hear John as he declares saying, "I am not the Christ." (verse 20.) Well, it is not contended by any that John Baptist was Christ; but there are very many who contend he is Elias. Let us ask him again, "What then?" "Art thou Elias? "And he saith I am not." "Art thou that prophet?" "And he answered, No."

Here John positively declares he is not Elias, "neither that prophet." But will John tell us who he is? Yes, and that too just as Christ did to the people, in the 11th of Matt. "And he said, 'I am the voice of one crying in the wilderness, Prepare ye the way of the Lord.'"

John, then, is the fore-runner of the first advent of Christ. He came in the spirit and power of Elias, or Elijah, to prepare the way of the Lord.

And I make no doubt when the time comes, as soon it will, we shall be willing to make the application of Rev. 19: 1 in the future, and not in the past. We feel confident that this messenger that comes "down from heaven," and "the earth is lighted up with his glory," during whose message a voice from heaven calls God's people out of Babylon, is yet to come. This messenger we think will be in fulfillment of Malachi 4: 5; it will be Elijah the prophet.—John Reed.—Hope of Israel.

LORENZO DOW AND GABRIEL.

It is said that at one time when Lorenzo Dow preached under a large spruce pine in South Carolina, he announced another appointment for preaching at the same place on that day twelve months. The year passed; and, as Lorenzo was entering the neighborhood the evening preceding his appointment, he overtook a colored boy who was blowing a long horn, and could, as I have often heard them, send forth a blast with rise and swell, and cadence, which waked the echoes of the distant hills.

Overtaking the blower, Dow said to him, "what's your name, sir?"

"My name? Gabriel, sir," replied the brother in ebony.

"Well, Gabriel, have you been to Church Hill?"

"Yes, Massa, I have been dar many time."

"Do you remember a big spruce pine tree on that hill?"

"O yes, massa, I knows dat pine."

"Did you know that Lorenzo Dow had an appointment to preach under that tree to-morrow?"

"O yes, massa, everybody knows dat."

"Well, Gabriel, I am Lorenzo Dow; and if you take your horn and go to-morrow morning, and climb up into that pine tree, and hide yourself among the branches before the people begin to gather, and wait there till I call your name, and then blow such a blast with your horn as I heard you blow a minute ago, I'll give you a dollar. Will you do it, Gabriel?"

"Yes, massa, I takes dat dollar."

Gabriel, like Zaccheus, was hid away in the tree-top in due time. An immense concourse of persons, of all sizes and colors, assembled at the appointed hour, and Dow preached on the judgment of the last day. By his power of description, he wrought the multitude up to the opening of the scenes of the resurrection and grand assize, at the call of the trumpet peals, which were to wake the sleeping nations.

"Then, said he, "suppose, my dying friends, that this should be the hour; suppose you should hear, at this moment, the sound of Gabriel's trumpet." Sure enough, at that moment, the trumpet of Gabriel sounded. The women shrieked, and many fainted; the men sprang up and stood aghast; some ran; others fell and cried for mercy; and all felt, for a time, that the judgment was set, and the books were opened. Dow stood and watched the driving storm till the fright abated, and some one discovered the colored angel who had caused the alarm, quietly perched on a limb of the old spruce, and wanted to get him down to whip him, and then resumed his theme, saying, "I forbid all persons from touching that boy up there. If a colored boy, with a tin horn, can frighten you almost out of your wits, what will ye do when ye shall hear the trumpet-thunder of the arch-angel? How will ye be able to stand in the great day of the wrath of God?" He made a very affecting application.

TEMPTATIONS TO DISHONESTY.

There are temptations to dishonesty that spring from extravagance. Our society is very vicious in its whole structure in this regard. We make no provision for the respectability of people who are in humble circumstances. We hold out inducements to them to live beyond their means. In European society, people that are intelligent and refined can entertain their friends in a plain room, with plain furniture, and treat them to a plain repast, and nothing will be thought of it. A German will invite his friends to come and see him, and they together will sit in common fellowship and in pleasing conversation, and make their repast from a loaf of bread and a pitcher of water, and there will be no thought but that the host is respectable. And I think that if a loaf of bread and a pitcher of water were a more frequent meal, there would be less dyspepsia. In Europe they are not ashamed to live plainly, even for economical reasons; and men respect each other for it. But in American society we have a vicious tendency to make men ashamed to live within their means. They say, "I will not have company unless I can have it as my neighbors do." They are slaves to other people's opinions. They have not the courage to say, "This is my place, here are my means, and I can afford to entertain my friends in my way; but if they cannot come and see me as I am, they cannot come at all."

Young people want to begin further along than they are able to. They want to keep house as twenty years of successful and fruitful industry have enabled men to do it. They measure everything on the pattern of somebody else. There is a want of self-respect founded on one's good breeding and fundamental honesty. And extravagance is almost invariably married to dishonesty.

MAXIMS OF WASHINGTON.

Use not reproachful language against any one, neither curses nor revilings.

Be not too hasty to believe lying reports to the disparagement of any one.

In your apparel be modest, and endeavor to accommodate nature rather than to procure admiration.

Associate yourself only with men of good quality, if you esteem your reputation, for it is better to be alone than in bad company.

Let your conversation be without malice or envy; for it is the sign of a tractable and commendable spirit, and in cases of passion admit reason to govern.

Use not base and frivolous things against grown and learned men, nor very difficult questions or subjects among the ignorant, nor things hard to be believed.

Speak not of doleful things in a time of mirth, nor at the table, nor of melancholy things, as of death or wounds, and if others mention them, change, if you can, the discourse.

Break not a jest when none take pleasure in mirth. Laugh not loud, nor at all without occasion. Deride no man's misfortune, though there seems to be some cause.

Go not thither when you know not whether you will be welcomed or not.

THE TRUE GENTLEMAN.

A true gentleman will not lavish all his attentions and kindnesses upon some distinguished individuals, whom he dare not despise, reserving his slants and gibes and overbearing demeanor for his nearest intimates and associates and dependents; but by a constant good humor he renders all around him happy.

Even the half idiot as he meets the true gentleman is somehow made to feel at ease, and there is nothing a true-hearted man more scrupulously avoids, than to cause his inferiors to feel the iron heel of his superciliousness.

That man is not a true gentleman who is constantly endeavoring to enhance his own dignity, lowering in the estimation of others those whom he considers his inferiors. He uses all his ingenuity in discovering methods of winning and securing the friendship of others, as far as his pure motives will allow, by suiting his acts of kindness to ALL.

To the mentally weak he is a soft ray of morning; to the strong, he is a sunbeam; to the afflicted, a solace; to the gladsome, he is cheerful; to the tender, he is mild; to the froward, he can be stern; but he measures his affected wrath, for no gentleman will indulge in bad passions.

But home is the place to test the true gentleman; for they are counterfeits who are gentlemen only to those beyond the family pale, while they are monsters of cruelty within the sanctuary of home.

Like the tabernacle built by Moses, the holiest place was within the very heart of the temple, in the holy place, where the ark of the testimony was placed; so with the true gentleman, those who know him best love him most.

ITALY GRASPED BY AUSTRIA.

After the overthrow of the Emperor Napoleon by the allied powers of Europe, in the year 1814, the sovereigns met in congress at Vienna to divide among themselves the spoils of their great victory. The map of Europe was to be reconstructed by them. All the states and kingdoms which had espoused the cause of France were to be punished by being partitioned out among the conquerors. There were present, at this congress, the emperors of Austria and Russia, the kings of Prussia, Denmark, Bavaria and Wurtemburg, also almost a countless number of grand dukes and petty princes, who in swarms had pounced upon the imperial eagle. The papal states were represented by Cardinal Consalvi. Lord Castlereah, the Duke of Wellington, and Lords Cathcart, Clancarty and Stuart represented the government of Great Britain. The Bourbons of France, replaced upon the throne by this coalition, were represented by the able and wily Prince Talleyrand, assisted by many of the highest dignitaries of the kingdom. Ambassadors from Spain, Portugal and Sweden, were also admitted to the deliberations. Prince Metternich, of Austria, presided over this most august congress ever assembled. These representatives of all the despotisms of Europe, flushed with victory, and having trampled out, with the French empire, all semblance of popular liberty on the continent of Europe, were now prepared so to partition out subjugated Europe, that no further efforts should be made in favor of the rights of humanity.

The congress commenced its session on the 12th of September, 1814, and continued its deliberations and contentions for the booty until the 9th of June, 1815. The result was comprised in one hundred and twenty-one articles. Few men have had the temerity to defend the acts of these coalesced despots. The verdict of posterity is well expressed by an able writer in the British Quarterly in these words:

"The treaties of Vienna, though the most desperate efforts have been made by the English diplomatists to embalm them as monuments of political wisdom, are fast becoming as dead as those of Westphalia. In fact they should be got under ground with all possible despatch. For no compacts so worthless, so wicked, so utterly subversive of the rights of humanity are to be found in the annals of nations."

Hygiene.

"This is for your health."—Paul.

For the World's Crisis.

THE TOBACCO SUBJECT.

Keep it moving,—do not let it get stagnant for want of exercise. There are many of my dear brothers and sisters of like "faith," who indulge in the weed in some form or another; and may be feel annoyed, and say "there is too much straining out gnats and swallowing of camels" on the subject; and others who have been long addicted to its use, and have seen its evil, and are desirous of quitting the habit, but have not the moral strength to overcome,—"Just so, I know it."

I will give you my experience after sixteen years of servitude to the "pipe," and during that time, one that was trying to live in all humility before God, and in the Spirit; but in the latter part of that time, I became deeply convicted that it was not clean in the sight of God, an inconsistency in one that had a claim to be his son. I made firm resolves to leave it off,—prayed over it,—threw away my tobacco and pipe; but, oh! ere three days I felt like one of old to say, "Ye have taken away my gods," and have been obliged to seek to them again.

I saw it was of no use. The task was too much, the fetters stronger than I could break. I betook myself earnestly in prayer to God for help. He heard, and answered by his own working. My desire for it was taken away. When the thought of "a smoke" came into my mind, or the water into my mouth, immediately and as quick I forgot it. Thus it continued for three weeks, until I had received strength over the habit.

For five years I have without ceasing given praise to God for his timely power. Do you believe in it? If you do, brother or sister, go and do likewise. You may be ready to say you have courage enough for the effort physically. Just try it, will you, you old veterans of the "weed," and give us the results? Yours in Christ,

Norwichville, Ct. Daniel Kinney.

DAMP BEDS.

Sleep is essential. However moderate the work, the best constitution will soon break down under a loss of sleep. It is especially necessary for preachers. If they are engaged in their work, as they should be, their labors are exciting and wearing, more than those of most other men, and after the exhausting services of a meeting, they need quiet and refreshing rest at night. This is far more essential than food or drink. Friends who invite them home show no want of hospitality in the supplies which they furnish to tempt the appetite. But in the provision which they make for their obtaining needful rest, there is often a culpable negligence which is sometimes attended with the most serious results. The late Wm. Dawson, an eminent and useful Methodist minister in England, was killed by a damp bed. Prince Albert was said to have shown the first symptom of his fatal illness as the consequence of a damp bed at Madingly Hall. We have had some painful experiences in this matter. At one time, after preaching three sermons on the Sabbath, to a crowded house, we were invited home by a brother to stay all night. We were very kindly received. After an interesting season of prayer, we were sent to sleep in a room—the third one away from any fire—in a bed that was seldom occupied, and which had accumulated all the damp and cold that a winter's frost could give it. The night was the coldest of the season. In vain did we try to sleep. We were so thoroughly chilled that rest was impossible? In the morning we arose languid and depressed, feeling as if we had suffered for a long fit of sickness. The good people had none but the kindest intentions, but if God had not blessed us with a strong constitution, and watched over us for good, our labors might have suddenly closed.

We have heard some of our old preachers say that they did not suffer in the early days of their ministry when they slept in the chambers of log cabins, through the roofs of which they could see the stars, so much as they often do now when put to sleep in some cold room of the large house of some wealthy brother. In those days the big fire below warmed the chambers; but the spare chamber of the large house is generally removed far from the influence of fire.

Will not our sisters think of these things? Make it a matter of conscience, never to put an ambassador of Christ, weary with toils, nor indeed any one else, to sleep in a bed that is cold, damp and uncomfortable. There is never any necessity for it. If you cannot take a fire to the bed to dry it thoroughly, you can always, with a little trouble, take the bed to the fire. This is a great deal better than to kill one off prematurely, or to give him the rheumatism, or some other painful disease for life.

OPEN FIRES, STOVES AND FURNACES.

Among health topics, this is one of the most important. In this latitude perhaps no other is so vital.

In fitting up a house for my family, I should begin with: "An open fire is number one among house blessings." If it were at all practicable, it should be of wood, in one of those great, generous, old-fashioned fire-places! How it fills the family group with a comfortable social spirit! To supply the draught the air of the room is momentarily changed. The carbonic acid and other excretions of the animal body cannot accumulate; the room cannot smell close, even when crowded.

Strange the people will not have this delightful sun in their homes, at any cost or sacrifice. And pray, now, why not have it all back again? If a small part of the money we spend in various foolish fashions were given to the reintroduction of this good old-fashioned blessing, how much healthier and happier we all should be.

OPEN COAL-GRATES.

Next to an open wood-fire, the open coal-grate is the best means of warming and ventilating. And if, with a good draught, the coal used be bituminous, it is a very excellent fire.

STOVES AND FURNACES.

There has been a fearful increase of consumption, bronchitis, headache, and some other affections, since the general introduction of stoves and furnaces. If with the higher degree of heat, the doors and windows are kept open during the entire season, as may be easily and comfortably done, the evil would not be so great, but as generally managed it is the gravest mistake in our physical life.

If in the window-shutter of a dark room, you open a small aperture, and look in the jet of light as it streams through the room, you will discover that the air is full of floating motes. The air of our houses is always crowded with these. In their ordinary condition they are not mischievous, but after they have been exposed to contact with a heated surface, they do poison us. Millions of these carbonized particles come from the stove or furnace to poison our lungs and blood.

If you would have good throat, lungs, and nerves, sit by an open fire, and keep as far as possible from stoves and furnaces. If you cannot escape those evils, wear more clothing, especially upon the feet and legs, and keep the doors and windows open. . . .

But let us have the open fire. Let us go without silks, broadclothes, carpets, and finery of all kinds, if necessary, that we may have this excellent purifier and diffuser of joy in all our houses. In my own house I have ten open grates, and find with coal at eleven dollars the expense is frightful, and if it were in any other department of house-keeping, I should feel I could not afford it, but in this I do not flinch, so important do I deem the open fire.—Dio Lewis, M. D.

GOOD ADVICE.

If the body is tired, rest; if the brain is tired, sleep. If the bowels are loose, lie down in a warm bed and remain there, and eat nothing till you are well. If an action of the bowels does not occur at the usual hour, eat not an atom till they do act, at least for thirty-six hours; meanwhile drink largely of cold water or hot teas, exercise in the open air to the extent of a gentle perspiration, and keep this up until things are righted; this one suggestion if practiced would save myriads of lives every year, both in the city and country. The best medicines in the world are warmth, abstinence and repose.—Journal of Health.

Reading whilst Traveling.—The attention of medical men, both in England and France, has of late been drawn to the ill effects resulting from the habit of reading while traveling by rail. Dr. Legrand de Saulle remarks that reading thus is extremely fatiguing to the eyes, and that this fatigue induces headache, and often pains round the eyes, with a slight congestion of the retina, which, when the habit has become inveterate and the subject is advanced in age, may in the end determine a real congestion of the brain.

The World's Crisis

AND SECOND ADVENT MESSENGER.

TERMS:

A single copy, one year	$2.00
A single copy, six months	1.00
A single copy, three months	.50
5 copies, six months, when sent to one address	4.50
10 copies, six months, when sent to one address	8.00
20 copies, six months, when sent to one address	15.00
30 copies, six months, when sent to one address	22.00

PAYABLE IN ADVANCE.

These terms, allowing a subscription of 50 cents for three months, place the paper within reach of all who are able to pay any thing. The reduction in price, where five or more papers are sent to one address, enables subscribers, by combining, to receive a large number at reduced rates; thus supplying the poor in their neighborhood.

We propose that those who have ability, when sending their own subscriptions, also send what they are willing to give to aid in circulating the Crisis among the poor who we have always with us.

Postage.—The postage, in the United States, on each single copy of the Crisis, is 20 cents a year, payable quarterly, in advance, at the office of delivery.

To Canada Subscribers.—As the postage on each paper sent to Canada and the British Provinces (20 cents a year) must be prepaid in Boston, the price to Canada subscribers is $2.20 a year, or $1.10 for six months. $2.00 pays for 47 Nos.; $1.00 for 23 Nos.; 50 cents for 12 Nos.

Rules for Correspondents.—Over all matters not intended for publication, write Private.

Over all business matters, write Business.

Over all articles for the paper, write For the Crisis.

All articles should be accompanied by the writer's name, for the Editor's information, even if it is not published.

When the names of new subscribers are sent, please say they are new, and it will save us much labor.

Private Letters.—Those wishing to address the Editor on matters not connected with the office, will please write the word Private on the outside of the envelope.

Please put the business matters and appointments on a piece of paper separate from other communications.

All persons writing to the office should give distinctly and plainly the Post Office, County and State at which they wish to be addressed; and all orders, subscriptions, communications and remittances, should be plainly directed to MILES GRANT, Boston, Mass.

PUBLISHED ALSO AT THE SAME OFFICE,

THE YOUNG PILGRIM,

A NEW ILLUSTRATED SUNDAY SCHOOL PAPER,

DEVOTED TO

The Interests of our Children and Youth.

TERMS:

For a single copy, 25 cents a year; and at the same rate for any number of copies under ten.

10 copies, when sent to one address	$2.00
20 copies, when sent to one address	3.80
30 copies, when sent to one address	5.40
40 copies, when sent to one address	6.80
50 copies, when sent to one address	8.00
100 copies, when sent to one address	15.00

PAYABLE ALWAYS IN ADVANCE.

To Canada Subscribers.—37 cents a year for every single copy; and at the same rate for any number of copies under ten. For every 10 copies, sent to one address, 12 cents additional to the above rates.

Postage.—(12 cents a year, for every single copy, and the same for every 10 copies or less to one address) must be paid quarterly in advance, at the office where the paper is received.

All communications and remittances should be addressed to THE YOUNG PILGRIM, Crisis Box, Boston, Mass.

The World's Crisis

AND SECOND ADVENT MESSENGER.

"BEHOLD, I COME QUICKLY; AND MY REWARD IS WITH ME."

WHOLE NO. 432. BOSTON, TUESDAY, JANUARY 12, 1864. VOL. XVIII.—NO. 17.

The Worlds' Crisis

AND SECOND ADVENT MESSENGER,

Issued every Tuesday Afternoon, at

167 HANOVER STREET, BOSTON.

MILES GRANT, EDITOR.

EDITORIAL COMMITTEE:
H. L. HASTINGS, D. T. TAYLOR,
H. F. CARPENTER.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEE:
H. V. DAVIS, S. S. BREWER,
A. ROSS, J. G. HAMBLIN,
SOLOMON HOVEY.

GEO. T. ADAMS, TREASURER.

☞ THE CRISIS is devoted to the exposition of all Bible truth; especially the doctrine of the immediate, personal coming and reign of Christ on the earth; holiness of heart; the unconscious state of the dead; their literal resurrection, and the final destruction of the wicked.

For the World's Crisis.

BEYOND.

Beyond the gloomy scenes of earth,
  Beyond the field of strife,
Where hostile bands engage in war
  At cost of human life;
Beyond the cannon's deadly roar,
  Beyond the scenes of blood;
Beyond this dark and gloomy shore,
  Where man dishonors God;—

Beyond the tempter's cruel power,
  Beyond the cloudy path,
Whilst o'er life's ocean track we're driven,
  'Neath death's dark, howling blast;
Beyond consumption's wasting hand,
  Beyond these sighs and tears,
Beyond all other human ills
  That fill the heart with fears;—

There is a bright and better land,
  A kingdom pure and fair;
That kingdom shall forever stand,
  When Jesus reigneth there.
No sickness, neither woe shall come,
  No sighs of grief be heard,
But praise and honor to the King
  Be sung with one accord.

And that great day is near at hand,
  When Christ shall come again
Upon the earth, on David's throne,
  Triumphantly to reign.
All glory be to God on high
  For such a prospect given,
'Tis better than the other way,
  Of "climbing up to heaven"!

West Poultney, Vt. CHARLIE HARRIS.

For the World's Crisis.

RELIGION'S CURSE.

Through centuries of individual and national transgression, stoical philosophy hath poetized the use of time as means invested to secure the greatest amount of sensual gratification. The elixir of life, whatever that may be, is always to be found in the apologies and prefaces of the literary world, and expounded from the sickly sentimentality of their yellow-covered novel down to the rugged implement of the barbaric savage. Existing human nature is a lie; its very purposes deny the very divinity of a christian Redeemer.

From the genuine shallowness of men's ingenuity to shuffle off the responsibilities of religion, it is easy to perceive how belieing is the conflict between the wild intense passions of the heart and the intuitive cravings for immortality. It is like a man who confesses all his days an intellectual belief in the character and government of a God, yet falsifies the pretension by not living a life of obedience and holiness: or more than this, it is like a man acknowledging a call to life by putting off the old man and his deeds, and yet perish in the act.

Among the proverbialisms of the age, none is a greater truism than—"Praise comes nearest to fame when it comes from afar." Now I do not feel bound by any degree of respect to societies, whether religious or social, which have for their mouth-piece a certain kind of ancestral notoriety. The celebrity which sometimes precedes a person, as well as things, does not always explain the real character any more than logic explains experience.

Humanity may eulogize the healing, saving, elevating power of religion, and thrust their hands deep in their pockets in support of its heavenly merits, and yet walk up and down the earth with a satanic, fiendish exultation that they have acquired a plenary indulgence to revel in privileges and power without any reciprocal responsibilities to God.

This species of religious trickery is like the torture of the boots, the thumb screws, and the wedges on the human system. You may be made to breathe sulphuric acid; you may partake of the oil of vitriol. The crystals of prussic acid may strengthen the stomach; but the selfishness of men who offer their silver Judas to the shrine of christianity, to satiate their lusts and interests, is an abomination to God—"a fire in his nostrils all the day." This curse of religion is simply denying and refusing the elementary privileges of christianity, and parceling them out at man's bidding, not God's.

So much about the upper mill-stone that helps to crush the conservative element of pious zeal. But the nether stone—the fulcrum over which rides this hippodrome of sanctimonious fraud, is photographed in the light of a lazy christian. Sophocles, of olden time, could dream away his summer midnights on the reeds by the Pysis, listening to the moonlight music of the nightingales; but what has a disciple of Jesus Christ in common with such a literary luxury? Of all the pitiable species of mortality that encumbers the universe of God, it is a lazy christian—a kind of ecclesiastical drone—a hanger on—cowardly Abirams, who prefer to sit by the flesh-pots of Egypt, among the lunatics and reptiles,

> Grudging every breath,
> To the chill winds which waft us on to death,

than to be convinced that Christ hath been honored by their having lived. If such a class were exterminated, ANNIHILATED, so that the chariot of salvation might roll on unobstructed by the obesity of indolence and fanatical stoicism, God only knows where the scattered schisms of creeds and joint-stock bigots would be found. "The sluggard is wiser in his own conceit than seven men who can render a reason."—Prov. 26: 16.

The spirit of duty is an old conventionality borrowed from theses of church manufacture, and only differs in its peculiarities among societies. As for its membership, its uniformity is proverbial. I desire some of our religious fraternity to explain the alarming apostasy cleaving its way through all the ramifications of society. Julian said, "All the inhabitants of the world belong to Rome." And Claudius says, "Rome is the fountain of all laws." Does not the poetry of such conceit bring down the standard of religion in the estimation of ungodly men? I will not say that the above is the motto of all creeds; but I do say that the unsanctified principle of non-fellowship; this lack of fraternal power; the objuration of every thing hostile to secular opinion, is a loathsome gangrene, made more leprous by its toleration, which turns God's temples into crucibles of merchandize.

The opposition to reform; the quiet, slavish indifference to the acquisition of knowledge, and the punic persistency of doctrine in the garb of the idol and his priest, turns friends into enemies, morally degenerates the religious aspirations of the christian, checks the impulse otherwise given to fidelity and duty, by engrafting among community a spirit of religious equality and large liberty of conscience. These are curses as well as causes, and let us glance at a few of their effects.

What is the present religious condition of society at large? I answer in one single word, namely, retrogressive. It must be. "Evil seducers shall wax worse," and it does not require a prophet to demonstrate this truth. The normal condition of humanity is iniquitous, and by a law of progression, in the absence of restraint, the impulsive human passions are let loose, uncircumscribed by any instructive reproof of the severity of guilt.

More especially in these last days has the public mind become callous, in proportion as a lean and hungry political philosophy has substituted or more properly superseded the gospel of Christ. Men's hearts have become obdurate, and religion with her banner of peace trailing in the dust is hackneyed and abused, and almost lost in the irrepressible clangor of remorseless strife. Ministers of the gospel have turned aiders and abettors of political economy, and metamorphosed into pillars of political fabrics. Mankind may hunger for the bread of life, but they themselves must foist it from the untimely grave in which it has been almost buried. It is true we have not altogether abjured our national religion, or contemptuously cast away our emblems of sacred office; but in the midst of this carnival of strife, the goddess of Reason stalks through the aisles and over the altars sacred to the memory of a crucified Lord. The course of the people is downward. The public mind is enslaved, the public conscience seared, and the public hand and noble faculty of the artisan turned to the construction of machinery to rack out the humanity of the children of God.

Finally, individual sin is the lowest form of morals. Through the intricate chasms cut by partisan sectionalism, inferential authority has been seized warranting a false and dangerous liberalism. Every man has become a theologian, and his franchise instigates him to believe in the right of private judgment to the exclusion of every and any authority. The wide divergence of opinion entailed upon community through a careless treatment of God's plan to save a lost world, has converted mankind into stoics, with a "form of godliness" that ransacks sea and land to make proselytes two-fold more the child of hell than themselves. It is inchoate heathenism that fastens its fangs upon community when they refuse to believe the gospel from the heart, and seek through other superficial means to quiet a whipped conscience.

Alcibiades would run away from Socrates, that he might not grow old listening to his words; and, amid this dark night of storms, the world with itching ears has turned from God unto fables, and is dancing upon the sectarian bubble which is the curse of the church of Christ, and which at his revelation will with its syrens flash into fragments. And amid the resplendent sublimity of his wrath there will be heard a voice, "Peace, be still!"

Blackstone, Mass. C. G. CARRE.

For the World's Crisis.

HOW TO DODGE IT.

It is not deemed important, in supporting a new unscriptural theory, that men should flatly deny explicit rebutting testimony from the Bible, but a brilliant display of ingenuity in dodging the force of the statement is regarded sufficient. But often they dodge from danger into disaster. Permit me to make a few specifications:—

1st. The Son of God said: "I came down from heaven, not to do mine own will, but the will of him that sent me." John 6: 38. To dodge the force of this statement, we are sometimes told he simply "came down" simply by generation—that is, that his origin could be traced back to the time that God formed the first man. But stop and take the result of the claim; in the same sense every murderer and vile wretch of earth just as really "came down;" and if this is the only principle on which the Father "sent" his Son, then he has just as really "sent" every sinner!

2nd. The Son of God prayed: "Glorify me with the glory which I had with thee before the world was." To dodge this explicit statement, we are sometimes informed that he had glory with the Father "before the world was" only in the purpose or undeveloped plan of the Father, while as yet he had no personal existence; but this would be just as true of every saint as of the Son of God!

3rd. The Son of God "was rich;" that is, we are told, rich in the purpose of God; then indeed, every saint "was rich" in the same sense; but, alas! after being "rich," he "became poor"—shall we say only in the purpose of God? Then as his purpose to make him "rich," must in its development or realization precede the realization of his purpose to make him "poor," it follows that Christ's poverty is yet in the future, instead of being in the past,—for the saying, "rich" and "became poor," positively locates the realization of this purpose to make him "rich," prior to the realization of the purpose to make him "poor." How could he become poor if he simply emerged from nonentity into poverty?

4th. It is sometimes argued that if the Son of God had a real existence as a divine being before coming into our world, it would involve a mystery in his birth, and an impossibility in his death.

We reply, if his existence dates no further back than his conception by the virgin, and if God was really his Father, he being an offspring of God, then the same mystery in his birth is here involved, and also the same seeming impossibility in his death; for if his origin is traceable to God, as an offshoot of divinity, partaking of the immortal nature of his Father, how could he die, even though blended with humanity, any more than in the other theory? The divine nature is the same in both cases. But if he neither existed before his conception by the virgin, nor was then a direct offshoot from paternal deity, he is reduced to a level with humanity, and we are left without a divine sacrifice! Rather let me believe in the power of God to send his divine Son, and to blend divinity and humanity so as to render it possible for his Son to DIE, even though "great is the mystery of godliness, God [the Son—not God the Father] manifested in the flesh." A truth, though a mystery.

W. SHELDON.

For the World's Crisis.

PILGRIM-HOMES—FEASTS—BLESSINGS.

We find but few real homes for the poor. There are plenty houses where great men can be accommodated, and from which no person of note would be turned away. Many professed christians would sleep on the floor themselves in order that some wealthy person might have their bed; but let a poor, ragged man come to them for shelter and he would be refused the floor even. As I go from place to place, I see and hear and think, and if God wants me to speak or write I must and will speak and write things that will hit. And if it hurts anybody they had better change their position—that's all.

I am now seated in Bro. Harley McLary's "Pilgrim-Home." Every old cripple that comes along is cared for. The meaner the man looks the more anxious our brother is. His wife believes in entertaining strangers, and when one comes she does not scowl and send him "on to the next house." This home is a simple log-house, neatly furnished, and will last till the Lord comes, we trust.

Once in a while I am asked the question, "What do you think of feet-washing?" If it is an ordinance of Christ's instituting I am ready for it. But until it be proved such I ask to make a few suggestions to those who harp on "feet-washing" and never wash "the saints feet." Show us your faith by your works, and the next time a poor saint comes to your house to stay all night set him "water in a basin, with a towel," and clean up the poor traveler so he can sleep in one of your soft beds instead of going over to a neighbor who "is a Universalist, and never turns away beggars."

And, sister, if you feel as though you ought to wash the saints' feet and the order of the church forbids it, take that old pilgrim's feetings, wash and mend them, patch his pants, vest, coat and all. And if you catch any ragged little orphans in your neighborhood, if they are shoeless, wash their feet, heal the bruises, clothe them. If they are hungry, feed them, if ignorant, teach them, and thus make decent folks of all the miserable, neglected, forsaken ones around you. Then you will find less time to tattle about your neighbors, or fool away at "fancy work," or to spend in following the abominable fashions Satan is inventing to make people look ridiculous. Try this sort of "feet-washing," and see if you do not find it full as "humiliating" as the literal act of washing clean feet with pure water and wiping with a clean towel. God will bless you.

The owner of this home made a "FEAST" last winter. He invited all the "halt, the blind, the poor and maimed" in the regions about him, and set before them a healthful, vegetable dinner, with some graham bread. (O! how I would like to have been here to "give thanks.") In the evening they had a real old-fashioned prayer-meeting. Hay was selling at a high price, cattle were dying for want of it, so some of these poor men were loaded off with hay. The same winter a preacher who had, through sickness in his family, been kept from work, was provided for in this respect.

Come, ye that profess to believe the Lord is coming within a few months, ye who sing—

> "Fly swifter round, ye wheels of time,
> And bring the welcome day!"

why won't you get rid of worldliness and act like consistent christians? It makes me groan and weep to see professors so full of covetousness, making slaves of themselves to add acre to acre and dollar to dollar, to their worldly possessions. What satisfaction is there in fighting thistles, piling stones, hoeing potatoes, further than to provide for one's family and having to give away? Examine your possessions. Look at your houses. There's one, high, roomy, splendid. You need a house, and a good one is better than a hovel. But why do not you use your house—live in it? There's one furnished tastefully from garret to cellar, and the family has shut the blinds, hidden the sunlight and air from it and—moved into the shed!

I wish christians would not build their houses too nice to live in, nor fill them with furniture too delicate for sunbeams to rest on. "Well, when a house is fixed up nicely we do not want to soil it." Bless you! what will you do in the New Jerusalem, when you get into one of those splendid mansions?

Church of Christ, awake! Ye Methodists, read over John Wesley's old sermons; ye Adventists, bring to remembrance the better days ye knew; ye Baptists, think of your leader who clothed himself with camel's hair, and instead of a gold girdle wore one made of leather, and O! ye CHRISTIANS, remember the Saviour who left the glory he had with the Father before the world was, who for your sakes became poor, who "had not where to lay his head." Compare yourselves with them, and blush at your vain display, repent of your departure from the gospel rule of adorning your bodies, and once more shall we see a "peculiar people, zealous of good works."

The blessing will come when "THE BRIDE HATH MADE HERSELF READY." Amen.

M. MATHEWS.

East Hatley, C. E., 1863.

UPHELD BY JESUS.

When heart and flesh despondent sink,
And from life's warfare fain would shrink;
An upward glance brings heavenly cheer,
Upheld by Him, I smile at fear.

When life appears a sea of woe,
And all its waves my soul o'erflow,
To Him I flee for sure relief;
Upheld by Him, I smile at grief.

When troubles like a mountain rise,
And comfort from my bosom flies,
I to the mercy-seat repair;
Upheld by Him, I smile at care.

When earthly treasure fails and fades,
And chilling poverty invades,
He every needed good will grant;
Upheld by Him, I smile at want.

When faith grows dim, and from its sight
My star of hope would vail its light,
Grace bids a beam of joy shine out,
Upheld by Him, I smile at doubt.

When wasting anguish and disease
Upon my suffering body seize,
My murmuring lips shall not complain,
Upheld by Him, I smile at pain.

And if 'tis mine, ere time shall close,
To slumber in the grave's repose,
With joy I'll yield my failing breath,
Upheld by Him, I smile at death.

—Selected.

For the World's Crisis.

THE DAY OF JUDGMENT.

When the last trumpet shall sound, and the dead shall be raised, the books will be opened, and the realities of that awful day will surely open to the sight of the millions who will then be arraigned before the judgment-seat of Christ. There will be mourning in that solemn assembly. Men who are now dreaming of worldly honors and riches and long life here, living in hopes of future peace, and prosperity in time, will soon lift up their eyes and see the Son of man coming in majesty and glory, attended with ten thousand of angels. "Ten thousand times ten thousands stood before Him, the judgment was set, and the books were opened."—Dan. 7.

This will prove a most unexpected sight to the wicked world. It will come as a cry at midnight. They will be taken in the midst of their wickedness. It will at once break up their revels, their eating and drinking and carousing. The world, then full of people, most of them wicked, will be filled with alarm and crying, for "all kindreds of the earth shall wail because of Him."—Rev. 1: 7. Then they will see who He is whom they have mocked and scoffed. "For every eye shall see him."—Rev. 1: 7. Their very countenances shall change; amazement, trembling, and gnashing of teeth shall seize upon them.

But with what joy will the saints look up and behold their Redeemer coming—the long absent Savior come at last. Lo! this is He whom we have waited for, and he will save us. He comes to execute judgment, and to reward every man according as his work has been.

J. E. CLARK.

TOKENS OF THE END.

The war raging is truly a terrible calamity. It is not my purpose to discuss the evils necessarily from such a contest; they are so evident to all that a description would be superfluous. There is one feature, however, that I propose briefly to present. We have multitudes who are predicting, because they desire it, that the war will soon be ended, the Union be restored, and general prosperity be again experienced. Others predict, for the same reason, that the war will end, the States will be divided into two or more confederacies, and each one will enjoy the blessings realized under the old Union. Some minor predictions are occasionally uttered, but all are concluded with the promise of great and increased prosperity. These prophetic announcements are made irrespective of the direct testimony of the word of God and the chronological period in which we live. They are all based either on the wishes of the prophet, or the former condition of the country, or the confidence expressed in human nature, education, the progress of civilization, or on the mistaken idea that the world is to be converted prior to the advent of Christ, and this country is destined to bear an important part in such a work. But what are the real facts, and what do we directly learn from God's word? The truth is, that there is nothing in the prosecution of the war, which directly gives us any hope of such a restoration to prosperity. Aside from other causes which forbid it, the political and moral corruption of the nation, the enormous debt which will bear heavily on the mass of the people, and the embittered feelings engendered by the war and the leaven of supreme State-right doctrine so widely and deeply rooted, not only in the hearts of wicked, designing politicians, but in those of professing christians, these will prove a barrier to the fulfillment of such predictions. Even should the war soon close, and the Union be restored, our republican form of government unfortunately affords the most ample facilities for the cultivation and propagation of that discontent and spirit of insubordination legitimately flowing from causes enumerated. We now have thousands of men who are prepared to take advantage of any such spirit and conduct it to an outbreak. Surely human nature will still be the same, even if the war were ended within a year.

But as we may be mistaken in the relation of facts to the future, (for we all admit that God can overrule for good,) we place ourselves on the teaching of the Bible, which alone enables us to explain present circumstances as they relate to the final result. We who are Millenarians are necessarily forced to take but one position in reference to the result of this war, viz.: that in whatever manner it is ended, whether by the restoration of the Union, or by a separation, or by an indefinite truce, we cannot expect the same degree of prosperity formerly enjoyed. Yea more, that this nation is doomed to meet with great calamity and finally to be overthrown. This is not said by way of apology for the rebellion or censure to the government. The agents employed for the overthrow of a nation may be, in some respects, more wicked than the nation overthrown. To avoid misapprehension, I shall also add, that we do not say that this government will fall through the agency of the Southern Confederacy. This is what we mean: all nations, including our own, are destined to feel, more or less, the judgments of God, immediately preceding the Advent and Millennial kingdom. We are expressly told that, at the coming of the great King with his saints, all kingdoms are to fall beneath his power, and the dominion and the greatness under the whole heaven will be his and the saints. Now consider:

1. The Millennial age is very near. The limited time of the prophetical periods so verily indicate this, that it is almost universally conceded.

2. This age, however, is only ushered in after the most terrible judgments on the nations of the earth. The gathering of the nations to the great battle, the treading of the wine-press, the supper of flesh, etc., all indicate this awful truth.

3. This age is developed by the advent of Christ, and this revelation of the Redeemer is followed by the overthrow of all his enemies, the king of the earth, and their confederated power.

4. All governments founded or sustained by injustice, blood, etc., will be subverted.

5. Our country is guilty of great sin, and must therefore meet with the same doom. No nation or kingdom, as such, is excepted. We read of none.

6. We should, therefore, reasonably expect that, as we live at the ending of this dispensation, when the prophetical periods are nearly run out, our prosperity will be checked, and subjects for contention, division, and bloodshed will be introduced in order that we nationally may be placed in a condition similar to that predicted to precede the Advent.

7. This is only partially our condition; and down to the Advent we have no scriptural hope for expecting any thing better, but rather to meet with that which is worse; so that even peace, if restored will pave the way for greater troubles. A true national repentance might do much to arrest these evils, but, alas, the predictions are based on the foreknown fact, that the depravity of human nature will prevent that honest, consistent, heart-felt humiliation before God, which alone can turn away his wrath.

We may depend on this, that God's word will be fulfilled, irrespective of the wishes and predictions of worldly men.—Ex.

For the World's Crisis.

PRESSING THE POINT.

A distinguished advocate of a partial resurrection of the dead, speaking with reference to the analogy between the seed sown and its product, and the body dead and the body to be raised (1 Cor. 15: 35–38), remarked that it would "not do to press every point in the analogy." And this remark is worthy of credence, for its truth is self-evident.

Grain possesses in itself a germ whereby it reproduces its kind; first the blade, then the stalk, then the ear, then the full-grown corn in the ear. And if we were allowed to press every point in the analogy, we could say that the resurrection body is reproduced in precisely the same manner. Or, looking at it in a more refined light, adopt the spiritualistic view, that the body contains a germ, like the chit in the seed, by which a new body is generated from the death of the old one.

But as we are not allowed to press every point, it is clear that we have no right to press any that the apostle does not; for the analogy is his, not ours. And his point is this: "Thou fool! that which thou sowest is not quickened except it die." The seed dies in giving vitality to the plant; and the point of resemblance is, that the body dies as truly as the seed does; but unlike the body it begins its future life before it dies.

If it be said that the dead retain some germ of life, whereby their resurrection is insured, and without which failure of a resurrection is the result, then a point is raised in opposition to Paul's assertion that "that which thou sowest is not quickened except it die." For if it retains a little germ of life, like the chit in the seed, then, unlike the seed, it never wholly dies. For the seed does die, in that it does not reproduce itself, but its kind; while the resurrection reproduces the bodily being that was dead.

So if the body did not die, germ and all, then it could not have a resurrection, in that it was never wholly dead. For the question which Paul illustrates by the analogy is,—"How are the dead raised up? and with what body do they come?" Not, how are the half dead raised up? or the almost dead, or the dead who have some germ of life left, but, "How are the dead raised up?"

How foolish then it is to surmise that they are raised up because they are not quite dead, when Paul says, "Thou fool! that which thou sowest is not quickened except it die."

But we need not expose the point any further, for its point is apparent to them that have eyes sharp enough to see it, while those who have not may perhaps conclude that there is no point to it; for there are none so blind as those who will not see.

WM. HOBBS.

For the World's Crisis.

PARADISE LOST AND RESTORED.

In the unfolding of great events, and of the purposes and plans of Jehovah, since man was created in the image of his Maker, and endowed not only with heavenly gifts, but also was to have dominion over every living thing, while in Eden he was permitted to dwell as in the tabernacle of the Most High, and to hold daily converse with Him who created all things; and while thus enjoying the smiles, approbation and fellowship of the Maker of all the worlds, the hour of temptation came, and also came the fall. Consequently man was driven forth out of the garden, henceforth to be an exile from Paradise, until in "the fulness of time" the seed of the woman should bruise the serpent's head.

During these long ages of pilgrimage, man was to be a wanderer in the earth, a stranger in a strange land, until those glorious "times of restitution of all things, which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began" should dawn upon a sin-stricken and sin-cursed world. Then Paradise, though long lost, should, as an eternal inheritance, be again restored to man.

Now as God's word declares, the righteous shall inherit (not some far distant realm, but) this very earth renewed, and dwell therein forever, after the wicked and the transgressors shall have been rooted out of it; for on this very earth paradise in all its beauty and glory existed, and will no doubt surpass its pristine glory as again restored.

Let us carefully note the proof, and the striking similarity of language found in the second and third chapters of Genesis, and also in the twenty-first and twenty-second chapters of Revelations. The former describing Paradise Lost, the latter describing Paradise Restored.

PARADISE LOST.	PARADISE RESTORED.
"And the Lord God planted a garden eastward in Eden; and there he put the man whom he had formed."—GEN. 2: 8.	"And I, John, saw the holy city New Jerusalem, coming down from God out of heaven, prepared as a bride adorned for her husband."—REV. 21: 2.
"And out of the ground made the Lord God to grow every tree that is pleasant to the sight, and good for food; the tree of life also in the midst of the garden, and the tree of knowledge of good and evil."—GEN. 2: 9.	"In the midst of the street of it, and on either side of the river, was there the tree of life, which bore twelve manner of fruits, and yielded her fruit every month: and the leaves of the trees were for the healing of the nations."—REV. 22: 2.
"And a river went out from Eden to water the garden, and from thence it was parted, and became four heads."—GEN. 2: 10.	"And he showed me a pure river of water of life, clear as crystal, proceeding out of the throne of God and of the Lamb."—REV. 22: 1.
"And they heard the voice of the Lord God walking in the garden in the cool of the day: and Adam and his wife hid themselves from the presence of the Lord amongst the trees of the garden."—GEN. 3: 8.	"And I heard a great voice out of heaven, saying, Behold, the tabernacle of God is with men, and he will dwell with them, and they shall be his people, and God himself shall be with them, and be their God."—REV. 21: 3.
"And unto Adam he said, Because thou hast . . . eaten of the tree of which I commanded thee, saying, Thou shalt not eat of it: cursed is the ground for thy sake; in sorrow shalt thou eat of it all the days of thy life." "For out of it wast thou taken: for dust thou art, and unto dust shalt thou return."—GEN. 3: 17–19.	"And he that sat upon the throne said, Behold, I make all things new. And he said unto me, Write, for these words are true and faithful."—REV. 21: 5. "And there shall be no more curse: but the throne of God and of the Lamb shall be in it; and his servants shall serve him"—REV. 22: 3. "And behold, I come quickly; and my reward is with me to give every man according as his work shall be." "I am Alpha and Omega, the beginning and the end, the first and the last."
"And the Lord God said, Behold, the man is become as one of us, to know good and evil; and now, lest he put forth his hand, and take also of the tree of life, and eat and live forever."	"Blessed are they that do his commandments that they may have right to the tree of life, and may enter in through the gates into the city."—REV. 22: 12–14. "And the gates of it shall not be shut at all by day; for there shall be no night there."
"So he drove out the man; and he placed at the east of the garden of Eden cherubims, and a flaming sword which turned every way, to keep the way of the tree of life."—GEN. 3: 22–24.	"And they shall bring the glory and honor of the nations into it." "And there shall in no wise enter into it any thing that defileth, neither whatsoever worketh abomination, or maketh a lie: but they which are written in the Lamb's book of life."—REV. 21: 25–27.

Marion, N. Y. S. L. MANLEY.

"THE THREE HEAVENLY WITNESSES."

"For there are three that bear record in heaven; the Father, the Word, and the Holy Ghost: and these three are one."—1 John 5: 7.

It ought to be known that the above verse is an interpolation; that it was not written by John, but forged and put into his epistle by some misguided and wicked person afterwards. Dr. Adam Clarke gives the following

"Summary of the whole evidence relative to the Three Heavenly Witnesses, 1 John 5: 7.

1. One hundred and thirteen Greek MSS. are extant, containing the First Epistle of John; and the Text in question is wanting in 112. It only exists in the Codex Montfortii, (a comparatively recent MS.) already described. The Codex Ravianus, in the Royal Library at Berlin, is a transcript taken from the Complutensian Polyglott.

2. All the Greek Fathers omit the verse, though many of them quote both ver. 6 and ver. 8, applying them to the Trinity and Divinity of Christ and the Holy Spirit; yea, and endeavor to prove the doctrine of the Trinity from vers. 6 and 8, without referring to any such verse as the 7th, which, had it existed, would have been a more positive proof, and one that could not have been overlooked.

3. The first place the verse appears in Greek, is in the Greek translation of the Acts of the Council of Lateran, held A. D. 1215.

4. Though it is found in many Latin copies, yet it does not appear that any written previously to the TENTH CENTURY contains it.

5. The Latin Fathers do not quote it, even where it would have greatly strengthened their arguments; and where, had it existed, it might have been most naturally expected.

6. Vigilius, Bishop of Tapsum, at the conclusion of the fifth century, is the first who seems to have referred expressly to the Three Heavenly Witnesses: but his quotation does not agree with the present Text, either in words or in sense; and besides, he is a writer of very little credit, nor does the place alleged appear to learned men to be genuine.

7. The Latin writers who do refer to the Three Heavenly Witnesses vary much in their quotations; the more ancient placing the eighth verse before the seventh; and very many omitting, after the earthly witnesses, the clause—these three are one. Others who insert—these three are one, add, in Christ Jesus. Others use different terms.

8. It is wanting in all the ancient Versions, the Vulgate excepted: but the more ancient copies of this have it not; and those which have it vary greatly among themselves, as may be seen in the specimens already produced.

9. It is wanting in the first edition of Erasmus, A. D. 1516, which is properly the editio princeps of the Greek Text. It is wanting also in his second edition, 1519; but he added it in the third from the Codex Montfortii.

10. In short, it stands on no authority sufficient to authenticate any part of a revelation, professing to have come from God."—Exchange.

For the World's Crisis.

LET YOUR LIGHT SHINE.

The Savior represents his followers as the light of the world; a city that is set on a hill, that cannot be hid. What an impressive lesson we should learn from this beautiful comparison of the Savior of the world, "who spake as never man spake." From this we not only see the importance of walking in the light, but of reflecting it around us. Jesus says, "Let your light so shine before men that they may see your good works and glorify your Father in heaven."

Let us watch unto prayer, and see that we show forth the praises of Him who has called us out of darkness into his marvellous light. As we grow in knowledge of the truth, may this light shine brighter and brighter unto the perfect day. May we "follow on to know the Lord, who is as the morning light." If we live in the Spirit, we shall walk in the Spirit, and not fulfill the lust of the flesh. Let us strive to be humble, out of self, have more of the mind of Christ, with an eye single to the glory of God. O, may we be the means of winning some souls to the Lamb of God.

"Restore unto me the joy of thy salvation; and uphold me by thy free spirit; then will I teach transgressors thy ways, and sinners will be converted unto thee." This is the great object, in letting our light so shine that we may win others to Christ. That the spirit of our blessed Master should govern all of our actions and words, and at the revelation of God's glory we may be able to enter that city shining bright, where the Lamb shall be its light.

N. M. WELLS.

For the World's Crisis.

PUBLIC FESTIVALS, SUPPERS, ETC.

Can those who have the spirit of Christ, who have the Holy Ghost shed abroad in their hearts, who have come out from the world, and made the consecration the gospel requires, consistently or conscientiously take part in these festivals, public suppers and parties, of whatever name, where worldlings meet; where gaiety, mirth and hilarity predominate? Can they do this without grieving the Spirit, wounding the Redeemer's cause, and bringing dearth and darkness upon their own souls?

Furthermore, do they not run the fearful hazard of being found as an evil servant, saying, "My Lord delayeth his coming"; "smiting their fellow servants, and eating and drinking with the drunken," thus fulfilling what our Savior furthermore says—"For as in the days that were before the flood, they were eating and drinking"; of which he has admonished to "watch therefore," "and take heed to yourselves, lest at any time your hearts be overcharged with surfeiting, and drunkenness, and cares of this life, and so that day come upon you unawares." "For as a snare shall it come." And of whom the apostle speaks, as "lovers of pleasure more than lovers of God"; "having the form of godliness, but denying the power thereof." Rather should they not "avoid every appearance of evil," and "be not conformed to this world," but "deny themselves, take up their cross daily, and follow Christ"; that truly they may be blameless and harmless, the sons of God, without rebuke, in the midst of a crooked and perverse nation, among whom ye shine as lights in the world."

So, dear brethren and sisters, may we be found; "to the end we may establish your hearts unblameable in holiness before God, even our Father, at the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ with all his saints."

Marion, N. Y. S. L. MANLEY.

RELIGION IN DAILY LIFE.—Religion is not a perpetual moping over good books. Religion is not even prayer, praise, holy ordinances; these are necessary to religion,—no man can be religious without them. But religion is mainly and chiefly the glorifying God amid the duties and trials of the world; the guiding of our course amidst adverse winds and currents of temptation, by the starlight of duty and the compass of divine truth; the bearing up manfully, wisely, courageously, for the honor of Christ, our great Leader, in the conflict of life.

A CLEAR CONSCIENCE.—How bravely a man can walk the earth, bear the heaviest burdens, perform the severest duties, and look all men boldly in the face, if he only bears in his breast a clear conscience, void of offence towards God or man.

The World's Crisis

AND SECOND ADVENT MESSENGER.

"BEHOLD, I COME QUICKLY; AND MY REWARD IS WITH ME."

WHOLE NO. 432. BOSTON, TUESDAY, JANUARY 12, 1864. VOL. XVIII.—NO. 17.

The Worlds' Crisis

AND SECOND ADVENT MESSENGER,

Issued every Tuesday Afternoon, at

167 HANOVER STREET, BOSTON.

MILES GRANT, EDITOR.

EDITORIAL COMMITTEE:
H. L. HASTINGS, D. T. TAYLOR,
H. F. CARPENTER.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEE:
H. V. DAVIS, S. S. BREWER,
A. ROSS, J. G. HAMBLIN,
SOLOMON HOVEY.

GEO. T. ADAMS, TREASURER.

☞ THE CRISIS is devoted to the exposition of all Bible truth; especially the doctrine of the immediate, personal coming and reign of Christ on the earth; holiness of heart; the unconscious state of the dead; their literal resurrection, and the final destruction of the wicked.

For the World's Crisis.

BEYOND.

Beyond the gloomy scenes of earth,
Beyond the field of strife,
Where hostile bands engage in war
At cost of human life;
Beyond the cannon's deadly roar,
Beyond the scenes of blood;
Beyond this dark and gloomy shore,
Where man dishonors God;—

Beyond the tempter's cruel power,
Beyond the cloudy path,
Whilst o'er life's ocean track we're driven,
'Neath death's dark, howling blast;
Beyond consumption's wasting hand,
Beyond these sighs and tears,
Beyond all other human ills
That fill the heart with fears;—

There is a bright and better land,
A kingdom pure and fair;
That kingdom shall forever stand,
When Jesus reigneth there.
No sickness, neither woe shall come,
No sighs of grief be heard,
But praise and honor to the King
Be sung with one accord.

And that great day is near at hand,
When Christ shall come again
Upon the earth, on David's throne,
Triumphantly to reign.
All glory be to God on high
For such a prospect given;
'Tis better than the other way,
Of "climbing up to heaven"!

West Poultney, Vt. CHARLIE HARRIS.

For the World's Crisis.

RELIGION'S CURSE.

Through centuries of individual and national transgression, stoical philosophy hath poetized the use of time as means invested to secure the greatest amount of sensual gratification. The elixir of life, whatever that may be, is always to be found in the apologies and prefaces of the literary world, and expounded from the sickly sentimentality of their yellow-covered novel down to the rugged implement of the barbaric savage. Existing human nature is a lie; its very purposes deny the very divinity of a christian Redeemer.

From the genuine shallowness of men's ingenuity to shuffle off the responsibilities of religion, it is easy to perceive how belieing is the conflict between the wild intense passions of the heart and the intuitive cravings for immortality. It is like a man who confesses all his days an intellectual belief in the character and government of a God, yet falsifies the pretension by not living a life of obedience and holiness: or more than this, it is like a man acknowledging a call to life by putting off the old man and his deeds, and yet perish in the act.

Among the proverbialisms of the age, none is a greater truism than—"Praise comes nearest to fame when it comes from afar." Now I do not feel bound by any degree of respect to societies, whether religious or social, which have for their mouth-piece a certain kind of ancestral notoriety. The celebrity which sometimes precedes a person, as well as things, does not always explain the real character any more than logic explains experience.

Humanity may eulogize the healing, saving, elevating power of religion, and thrust their hands deep in their pockets in support of its heavenly merits, and yet walk up and down the earth with a satanic, fiendish exultation that they have acquired a plenary indulgence to revel in privileges and power without any reciprocal responsibilities to God.

This species of religious trickery is like the torture of the boots, the thumb screws, and the wedges on the human system. You may be made to breathe sulphuric acid; you may partake of the oil of vitriol. The crystals of prussic acid may strengthen the stomach; but the selfishness of men who offer their silver Judas to the shrine of christianity, to satiate their lusts and interests, is an abomination to God—"a fire in his nostrils all the day." This curse of religion is simply denying and refusing the elementary privileges of christianity, and parceling them out at man's bidding, not God's.

So much about the upper mill-stone that helps to crush the conservative element of pious zeal. But the nether stone—the fulcrum over which rides this hippodrome of sanctimonious fraud, is photographed in the light of a lazy christian. Sophocles, of olden time, could dream away his summer midnights on the reeds by the Pysis, listening to the moonlight music of the nightingales; but what has a disciple of Jesus Christ in common with such a literary luxury? Of all the pitiable species of mortality that encumbers the universe of God, it is a lazy christian—a kind of ecclesiastical drone—a hanger on—cowardly Abirams, who prefer to sit by the flesh-pots of Egypt, among the lunatics and reptiles,

Grudging every breath,
To the chill winds which waft us on to death,

than to be convinced that Christ hath been honored by their having lived. If such a class were exterminated, ANNIHILATED, so that the chariot of salvation might roll on unobstructed by the obesity of indolence and fanatical stoicism, God only knows where the scattered schisms of creeds and joint-stock bigots would be found. "The sluggard is wiser in his own conceit than seven men who can render a reason."—Prov. 26: 16.

The spirit of duty is an old conventionality borrowed from theses of church manufacture, and only differs in its peculiarities among societies. As for its membership, its uniformity is proverbial. I desire some of our religious fraternity to explain the alarming apostasy cleaving its way through all the ramifications of society. Julian said, "All the inhabitants of the world belong to Rome." And Claudius says, "Rome is the fountain of all laws." Does not the poetry of such conceit bring down the standard of religion in the estimation of ungodly men? I will not say that the above is the motto of all creeds; but I do say that the unsanctified principle of non-fellowship; this lack of fraternal power; the objuration of every thing hostile to secular opinion, is a loathsome gangrene, made more leprous by its toleration, which turns God's temples into crucibles of merchandize.

The opposition to reform; the quiet, slavish indifference to the acquisition of knowledge, and the punic persistency of doctrine in the garb of the idol and his priest, turns friends into enemies, morally degenerates the religious aspirations of the christian, checks the impulse otherwise given to fidelity and duty, by engrafting among community a spirit of religious equality and large liberty of conscience. These are curses as well as causes, and let us glance at a few of their effects.

What is the present religious condition of society at large? I answer in one single word, namely, retrogressive. It must be. "Evil seducers shall wax worse," and it does not require a prophet to demonstrate this truth. The normal condition of humanity is iniquitous, and by a law of progression, in the absence of restraint, the impulsive human passions are let loose, uncircumscribed by any instructive reproof of the severity of guilt.

More especially in these last days has the public mind become callous, in proportion as a lean and hungry political philosophy has substituted or more properly superseded the gospel of Christ. Men's hearts have become obdurate, and religion with her banner of peace trailing in the dust is hackneyed and abused, and almost lost in the irrepressible clangor of remorseless strife. Ministers of the gospel have turned aiders and abettors of political economy, and metamorphosed into pillars of political fabrics. Mankind may hunger for the bread of life, but they themselves must foist it from the untimely grave in which it has been almost buried. It is true we have not altogether abjured our national religion, or contemptuously cast away our emblems of sacred office; but in the midst of this carnival of strife, the goddess of Reason stalks through the aisles and over the altars sacred to the memory of a crucified Lord. The course of the people is downward. The public mind is enslaved, the public conscience seared, and the public hand and noble faculty of the artisan turned to the construction of machinery to rack out the humanity of the children of God.

Finally, individual sin is the lowest form of morals. Through the intricate chasms cut by partisan sectionalism, inferential authority has been seized warranting a false and dangerous liberalism. Every man has become a theologian, and his franchise instigates him to believe in the right of private judgment to the exclusion of every and any authority. The wide divergence of opinion entailed upon community through a careless treatment of God's plan to save a lost world, has converted mankind into stoics, with a "form of godliness" that ransacks sea and land to make proselytes two-fold more the child of hell than themselves. It is inchoate heathenism that fastens its fangs upon community when they refuse to believe the gospel from the heart, and seek through other superficial means to quiet a whipped conscience.

Alcibiades would run away from Socrates, that he might not grow old listening to his words; and, amid this dark night of storms, the world with itching ears has turned from God unto fables, and is dancing upon the sectarian bubble which is the curse of the church of Christ, and which at his revelation will with its syrens flash into fragments. And amid the resplendent sublimity of his wrath there will be heard a voice, "Peace, be still!"

Blackstone, Mass. C. G. CARRE.

For the World's Crisis.

HOW TO DODGE IT.

It is not deemed important, in supporting a new unscriptural theory, that men should flatly deny explicit rebutting testimony from the Bible, but a brilliant display of ingenuity in dodging the force of the statement is regarded sufficient. But often they dodge from danger into disaster. Permit me to make a few specifications:—

1st. The Son of God said: "I came down from heaven, not to do mine own will, but the will of him that sent me." John 6: 38. To dodge the force of this statement, we are sometimes told he simply "came down" simply by generation—that is, that his origin could be traced back to the time that God formed the first man. But stop and take the result of the claim; in the same sense every murderer and vile wretch of earth just as really "came down;" and if this is the only principle on which the Father "sent" his Son, then he has just as really "sent" every sinner!

2nd. The Son of God prayed: "Glorify me with the glory which I had with thee before the world was." To dodge this explicit statement, we are sometimes informed that he had glory with the Father "before the world was" only in the purpose or undeveloped plan of the Father, while as yet he had no personal existence; but this would be just as true of every saint as of the Son of God!

3rd. The Son of God "was rich;" that is, we are told, rich in the purpose of God; then indeed, every saint "was rich" in the same sense; but, alas! after being "rich," he "became poor"—shall we say only in the purpose of God? Then as his purpose to make him "rich," must in its development or realization precede the realization of his purpose to make him "poor," it follows that Christ's poverty is yet in the future, instead of being in the past,—for the saying, "rich" and "became poor," positively locates the realization of this purpose to make him "rich," prior to the realization of the purpose to make him "poor." How could he become poor if he simply emerged from nonentity into poverty?

4th. It is sometimes argued that if the Son of God had a real existence as a divine being before coming into our world, it would involve a mystery in his birth, and an impossibility in his death.

We reply, if his existence dates no further back than his conception by the virgin, and if God was really his Father, he being an offspring of God, then the same mystery in his birth is here involved, and also the same seeming impossibility in his death; for if his origin is traceable to God, as an offshoot of divinity, partaking of the immortal nature of his Father, how could he die, even though blended with humanity, any more than in the other theory? The divine nature is the same in both cases. But if he neither existed before his conception by the virgin, nor was then a direct offshoot from paternal deity, he is reduced to a level with humanity, and we are left without a divine sacrifice! Rather let me believe in the power of God to send his divine Son, and to blend divinity and humanity so as to render it possible for his Son to DIE, even though "great is the mystery of godliness, God [the Son—not God the Father] manifested in the flesh." A truth, though a mystery. W. SHELDON.

For the World's Crisis.

PILGRIM-HOMES—FEASTS—BLESSINGS.

We find but few real homes for the poor. There are plenty houses where great men can be accommodated, and from which no person of note would be turned away. Many professed christians would sleep on the floor themselves in order that some wealthy person might have their bed; but let a poor, ragged man come to them for shelter and he would be refused the floor even. As I go from place to place, I see and hear and think, and if God wants me to speak or write I must and will speak and write things that will hit. And if it hurts anybody they had better change their position—that's all.

I am now seated in Bro. Harley McLary's "Pilgrim-Home." Every old cripple that comes along is cared for. The meaner the man looks the more anxious our brother is. His wife believes in entertaining strangers, and when one comes she does not scowl and send him "on to the next house." This home is a simple log-house, neatly furnished, and will last till the Lord comes, we trust.

Once in a while I am asked the question, "What do you think of feet-washing?" If it is an ordinance of Christ's instituting I am ready for it. But until it be proved such I ask to make a few suggestions to those who harp on "feet-washing" and never wash "the saints feet." Show us your faith by your works, and the next time a poor saint comes to your house to stay all night set him "water in a basin, with a towel," and clean up the poor traveler so he can sleep in one of your soft beds instead of going over to a neighbor who "is a Universalist, and never turns away beggars."

And, sister, if you feel as though you ought to wash the saints' feet and the order of the church forbids it, take that old pilgrim's feetings, wash and mend them, patch his pants, vest, coat and all. And if you catch any ragged little orphans in your neighborhood, if they are shoeless, wash their feet, heal the bruises, clothe them. If they are hungry, feed them, if ignorant, teach them, and thus make decent folks of all the miserable, neglected, forsaken ones around you. Then you will find less time to tattle about your neighbors, or fool away at "fancy work," or to spend in following the abominable fashions Satan is inventing to make people look ridiculous. Try this sort of "feet-washing," and see if you do not find it full as "humiliating" as the literal act of washing clean feet with pure water and wiping with a clean towel. God will bless you.

The owner of this home made a "FEAST" last winter. He invited all the "halt, the blind, the poor and maimed" in the regions about him, and set before them a healthful, vegetable dinner, with some graham bread. (O! how I would like to have been here to "give thanks.") In the evening they had a real old-fashioned prayer-meeting. Hay was selling at a high price, cattle were dying for want of it, so some of these poor men were loaded off with hay. The same winter a preacher who had, through sickness in his family, been kept from work, was provided for in this respect.

Come, ye that profess to believe the Lord is coming within a few months, ye who sing—

"Fly swifter round, ye wheels of time,
And bring the welcome day!"

why won't you get rid of worldliness and act like consistent christians? It makes me groan and weep to see professors so full of covetousness, making slaves of themselves to add acre to acre and dollar to dollar, to their worldly possessions. What satisfaction is there in fighting thistles, piling stones, hoeing potatoes, further than to provide for one's family and having to give away? Examine your possessions. Look at your houses. There's one, high, roomy, splendid. You need a house, and a good one is better than a hovel. But why do not you use your house—live in it? There's one furnished tastefully from garret to cellar, and the family has shut the blinds, hidden the sunlight and air from it and—moved into the shed!

I wish christians would not build their houses too nice to live in, nor fill them with furniture too delicate for sunbeams to rest on. "Well, when a house is fixed up nicely we do not want to soil it." Bless you! what will you do in the New Jerusalem, when you get into one of those splendid mansions?

Church of Christ, awake! Ye Methodists, read over John Wesley's old sermons; ye Adventists, bring to remembrance the better days ye knew; ye Baptists, think of your leader who clothed himself with camel's hair, and instead of a gold girdle wore one made of leather, and O! ye CHRISTIANS, remember the Saviour who left the glory he had with the Father before the world was, who for your sakes became poor, who "had not where to lay his head." Compare yourselves with them, and blush at your vain display, repent of your departure from the gospel rule of adorning your bodies, and once more shall we see a "peculiar people, zealous of good works."

The blessing will come when "THE BRIDE HATH MADE HERSELF READY." Amen.

M. MATHEWS.

East Hatley, C. E., 1863.

UPHELD BY JESUS.

When heart and flesh despondent sink,
And from life's warfare fain would shrink;
An upward glance brings heavenly cheer,
Upheld by Him, I smile at fear.

When life appears a sea of woe,
And all its waves my soul o'erflow,
To Him I flee for sure relief;
Upheld by Him, I smile at grief.

When troubles like a mountain rise,
And comfort from my bosom flies,
I to the mercy-seat repair;
Upheld by Him, I smile at care.

When earthly treasure fails and fades,
And chilling poverty invades,
He every needed good will grant;
Upheld by Him, I smile at want.

When faith grows dim, and from its sight
My star of hope would vail its light,
Grace bids a beam of joy shine out,
Upheld by Him, I smile at doubt.

When wasting anguish and disease
Upon my suffering body seise,
My murmuring lips shall not complain,
Upheld by Him, I smile at pain.

And if 'tis mine, ere time shall close,
To slumber in the grave's repose,
With joy I'll yield my failing breath,
Upheld by Him, I smile at death.

—Selected.

For the World's Crisis.

THE DAY OF JUDGMENT.

When the last trumpet shall sound, and the dead shall be raised, the books will be opened, and the realities of that awful day will surely open to the sight of the millions who will then be arraigned before the judgment-seat of Christ. There will be mourning in that solemn assembly. Men who are now dreaming of worldly honors and riches and long life here, living in hopes of future peace, and prosperity in time, will soon lift up their eyes and see the Son of man coming in majesty and glory, attended with ten thousand of angels. "Ten thousand times ten thousands stood before Him, the judgment was set, and the books were opened."—Dan. 7.

This will prove a most unexpected sight to the wicked world. It will come as a cry at midnight. They will be taken in the midst of their wickedness. It will at once break up their revels, their eating and drinking and carousing. The world, then full of people, most of them wicked, will be filled with alarm and crying, for "all kindreds of the earth shall wail because of Him."—Rev. 1: 7. Then they will see who He is whom they have mocked and scoffed. "For every eye shall see him."—Rev. 1: 7. Their very countenances shall change; amazement, trembling, and gnashing of teeth shall seize upon them.

But with what joy will the saints look up and behold their Redeemer coming—the long absent Savior come at last. Lo! this is He whom we have waited for, and he will save us. He comes to execute judgment, and to reward every man according as his work has been. J. E. CLARK.

TOKENS OF THE END.

The war raging is truly a terrible calamity. It is not my purpose to discuss the evils necessarily from such a contest; they are so evident to all that a description would be superfluous. There is one feature, however, that I propose briefly to present. We have multitudes who are predicting, because they desire it, that the war will soon be ended, the Union be restored, and general prosperity be again experienced. Others predict, for the same reason, that the war will end, the States will be divided into two or more confederacies, and each one will enjoy the blessings realized under the old Union. Some minor predictions are occasionally uttered, but all are concluded with the promise of great and increased prosperity. These prophetic announcements are made irrespective of the direct testimony of the word of God and the chronological period in which we live. They are all based either on the wishes of the prophet, or the former condition of the country, or the confidence expressed in human nature, education, the progress of civilization, or on the mistaken idea that the world is to be converted prior to the advent of Christ, and this country is destined to bear an important part in such a work. But what are the real facts, and what do we directly learn from God's word? The truth is, that there is nothing in the prosecution of the war, which directly gives us any nope of such a restoration to prosperity. Aside from other causes which forbid it, the political and moral corruption of the nation, the enormous debt which will bear heavily on the mass of the people, and the embittered feelings engendered by the war and the leaven of supreme State-right doctrine so widely and deeply rooted, not only in the hearts of wicked, designing politicians, but in those of professing christians, these will prove a barrier to the fulfillment of such predictions. Even should the war soon close, and the Union be restored, our republican form of government unfortunately affords the most ample facilities for the cultivation and propagation of that discontent and spirit of insubordination legitimately flowing from causes enumerated. We now have thousands of men who are prepared to take advantage of any such spirit and conduct it to an outbreak. Surely human nature will still be the same, even if the war were ended within a year.

But as we may be mistaken in the relation of facts to the future, (for we all admit that God can overrule for good,) we place ourselves on the teaching of the Bible, which alone enables us to explain present circumstances as they relate to the final result. We who are Millenarians are necessarily forced to take but one position in reference to the result of this war, viz.: that in whatever manner it is ended, whether by the restoration of the Union, or by a separation, or by an indefinite truce, we cannot expect the same degree of prosperity formerly enjoyed. Yea more, that this nation is doomed to meet with great calamity and finally to be overthrown. This is not said by way of apology for the rebellion or censure to the government. The agents employed for the overthrow of a nation may be, in some respects, more wicked than the nation overthrown. To avoid misapprehension, I shall also add, that we do not say that this government will fall through the agency of the Southern Confederacy. This is what we mean: all nations, including our own, are destined to feel, more or less, the judgments of God, immediately preceding the Advent and Millennial kingdom. We are expressly told that, at the coming of the great King with his saints, all kingdoms are to fall beneath his power, and the dominion and the greatness under the whole heaven will be his and the saints. Now consider:

1. The Millennial age is very near. The limited time of the prophetical periods so verily indicate this, that it is almost universally conceded.

2. This age, however, is only ushered in after the most terrible judgments on the nations of the earth. The gathering of the nations to the great battle, the treading of the wine-press, the supper of flesh, etc., all indicate this awful truth.

3. This age is developed by the advent of Christ, and this revelation of the Redeemer is followed by the overthrow of all his enemies, the king of the earth, and their confederated power.

4. All governments founded or sustained by injustice, blood, etc., will be subverted.

5. Our country is guilty of great sin, and must therefore meet with the same doom. No nation or kingdom, as such, is excepted. We read of none.

6. We should, therefore, reasonably expect that, as we live at the ending of this dispensation, when the prophetical periods are nearly run out, our prosperity will be checked, and subjects for contention, division, and bloodshed will be introduced in order that we nationally may be placed in a condition similar to that predicted to precede the Advent.

7. This is only partially our condition; and down to the Advent we have no scriptural hope for expecting any thing better, but rather to meet with that which is worse; so that even peace, if restored will pave the way for greater troubles. A true national repentance might do much to arrest these evils, but, alas, the predictions are based on the foreknown fact, that the depravity of human nature will prevent that honest, consistent, heart-felt humiliation before God, which alone can turn away his wrath.

We may depend on this, that God's word will be fulfilled, irrespective of the wishes and predictions of worldly men.—Ex.

For the World's Crisis.

PRESSING THE POINT.

A distinguished advocate of a partial resurrection of the dead, speaking with reference to the analogy between the seed sown and its product, and the body dead and the body to be raised (1 Cor. 15: 35-38), remarked that it would "not do to press every point in the analogy." And this remark is worthy of credence, for its truth is self-evident.

Grain possesses in itself a germ whereby it reproduces its kind; first the blade, then the stalk, then the ear, then the full-grown corn in the ear. And if we were allowed to press every point in the analogy, we could say that the resurrection body is reproduced in precisely the same manner. Or, looking at it in a more refined light, adopt the spiritualistic view, that the body contains a germ, like the chit in the seed, by which a new body is generated from the death of the old one.

But as we are not allowed to press every point, it is clear that we have no right to press any that the apostle does not; for the analogy is his, not ours. And his point is this: "Thou fool! that which thou sowest is not quickened except it die." The seed dies in giving vitality to the plant; and the point of resemblance is, that the body dies as truly as the seed does; but unlike the body it begins its future life before it dies.

If it be said that the dead retain some germ of life, whereby their resurrection is insured, and without which failure of a resurrection is the result, then a point is raised in opposition to Paul's assertion that "that which thou sowest is not quickened except it die." For if it retains a little germ of life, like the chit in the seed, then, unlike the seed, it never wholly dies. For the seed does die, in that it does not reproduce itself, but its kind; while the resurrection reproduces the bodily being that was dead.

So if the body did not die, germ and all, then it could not have a resurrection, in that it was never wholly dead. For the question which Paul illustrates by the analogy is,—"How are the dead raised up? and with what body do they come?" Not, how are the half dead raised up? or the almost dead, or the dead who have some germ of life left, but, "How are the dead raised up?"

How foolish then it is to surmise that they are raised up because they are not quite dead, when Paul says, "Thou fool! that which thou sowest is not quickened except it die."

But we need not expose the point any further, for its point is apparent to them that have eyes sharp enough to see it, while those who have not may perhaps conclude that there is no point to it; for there are none so blind as those who will not see. WM. HOBBS.

For the World's Crisis.

PARADISE LOST AND RESTORED.

In the unfolding of great events, and of the purposes and plans of Jehovah, since man was created in the image of his Maker, and endowed not only with heavenly gifts, but also was to have dominion over every living thing, while in Eden he was permitted to dwell as in the tabernacle of the Most High, and to hold daily converse with Him who created all things; and while thus enjoying the smiles, approbation and fellowship of the Maker of all the worlds, the hour of temptation came, and also came the fall. Consequently man was driven forth out of the garden, henceforth to be an exile from Paradise, until in "the fulness of time" the seed of the woman should bruise the serpent's head.

During these long ages of pilgrimage, man was to be a wanderer in the earth, a stranger in a strange land, until those glorious "times of restitution of all things, which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began" should dawn upon a sin-stricken and sin-cursed world. Then Paradise, though long lost, should, as an eternal inheritance, be again restored to man.

Now as God's word declares, the righteous shall inherit (not some far distant realm, but) this very earth renewed, and dwell therein forever, after the wicked and the transgressors shall have been rooted out of it; for on this very earth paradise in all its beauty and glory existed, and will no doubt surpass its pristine glory as again restored.

Let us carefully note the proof, and the striking similarity of language found in the second and third chapters of Genesis, and also in the twenty-first and twenty-second chapters of Revelations. The former describing Paradise Lost, the latter describing Paradise Restored.

PARADISE LOST.

"And the Lord God planted a garden eastward in Eden; and there he put the man whom he had formed."—GEN. 2. 8.

"And out of the ground made the Lord God to grow every tree that is pleasant to the sight, and good for food; the tree of life also in the midst of the garden, and the tree of knowledge of good and evil."—GEN. 2: 9.

"And a river went out from Eden to water the garden, and from thence it was parted, and became four heads."—GEN. 2: 10.

"And they heard the voice of the Lord God walking in the garden in the cool of the day: and Adam and his wife hid themselves from the presence of the Lord amongst the trees of the garden."—GEN. 3: 8.

"And unto Adam he said, Because thou hast . . . eaten of the tree of which I commanded thee, saying, Thou shalt not eat of it: cursed is the ground for thy sake; in sorrow shalt thou eat of it all the days of thy life."

"For out of it wast thou taken: for dust thou art, and unto dust shalt thou return."—GEN. 3: 17-19.

"And the Lord God said, Behold, the man is become as one of us, to know good and evil; and now, lest he put forth his hand, and take also of the tree of life, and eat and live forever."

"So he drove out the man; and he placed at the east of the garden of Eden cherubims, and a flaming sword which turned every way, to keep the way of the tree of life."—GEN. 3: 23-24.

PARADISE RESTORED.

"And I, John, saw the holy city New Jerusalem, coming down from God out of heaven, prepared as a bride adorned for her husband."—REV. 21: 2.

"In the midst of the street of it, and on either side of the river, was there the tree of life, which bore twelve manner of fruits, and yielded her fruit every month: and the leaves of the trees were for the healing of the nations."—REV. 22: 2.

"And he showed me a pure river of water of life, clear as crystal, proceeding out of the throne of God and of the Lamb."—REV. 22: 1.

"And I heard a great voice out of heaven, saying, Behold, the tabernacle of God is with men, and he will dwell with them, and they shall be his people, and God himself shall be with them, and be their God."—REV. 21: 3.

"And he that sat upon the throne said, Behold, I make all things new. And he said unto me, Write; for these words are true and faithful."—REV. 21: 5.

"And there shall be no more curse: but the throne of God and of the Lamb shall be in it; and his servants shall serve him"—REV. 22: 6.

"And behold, I come quickly; and my reward is with me to give every man according as his work shall be."

"I am Alpha and Omega, the beginning and the end, the first and the last."

"Blessed are they that do his commandments that they may have right to the tree of life, and may enter in through the gates into the city."—REV. 22: 12-14.

"And the gates of it shall not be shut at all by day; for there shall be no night there."

"And they shall bring the glory and honor of the nations into it."

"And there shall in no wise enter into it any thing that defileth, neither whatsoever worketh abomination, or maketh a lie: but they which are written in the Lamb's book of life."—REV. 21: 25-27.

Marion, N. Y. S. L. MANLEY.

"THE THREE HEAVENLY WITNESSES."

"For there are three that bear record in heaven; the Father, the Word, and the Holy Ghost: and these three are one."—1 John 5: 7.

It ought to be known that the above verse is an interpolation; that it was not written by John, but forged and put into his epistle by some misguided and wicked person afterwards. Dr. Adam Clarke gives the following

"Summary of the whole evidence relative to the Three Heavenly Witnesses, 1 John 5: 7.

1. One hundred and thirteen Greek MSS. are extant, containing the First Epistle of John; and the Text in question is wanting in 112. It only exists in the Codex Montfortii, (a comparatively recent MS.) already described. The Codex Ravianus, in the Royal Library at Berlin, is a transcript taken from the Complutensian Polyglott.

2. All the Greek Fathers omit the verse, though many of them quote both ver. 6 and ver. 8, applying them to the Trinity and Divinity of Christ and the Holy Spirit; yea, and endeavor to prove the doctrine of the Trinity from vers. 6 and 8, without referring to any such verse as the 7th, which, had it existed, would have been a more positive proof, and one that could not have been overlooked.

3. The first place the verse appears in Greek, is in the Greek translation of the Acts of the Council of Lateran, held A. D. 1215.

4. Though it is found in many Latin copies, yet it does not appear that any written previously to the TENTH CENTURY contains it.

5. The Latin Fathers do not quote it, even where it would have greatly strengthened their arguments; and where, had it existed, it might have been most naturally expected.

6. Vigilius, Bishop of Tapsum, at the conclusion of the fifth century, is the first who seems to have referred expressly to the Three Heavenly Witnesses: but his quotation does not agree with the present Text, either in words or in sense; and besides, he is a writer of very little credit, nor does the place alleged appear to learned men to be genuine.

7. The Latin writers who do refer to the Three Heavenly Witnesses vary much in their quotations; the more ancient placing the eighth verse before the seventh; and very many omitting, after the earthly witnesses, the clause—these three are one. Others who insert—these three are one, add, in Christ Jesus. Others use different terms.

8. It is wanting in all the ancient Versions, the Vulgate excepted: but the more ancient copies of this have it not; and those which have it vary greatly among themselves, as may be seen in the specimens already produced.

9. It is wanting in the first edition of Erasmus, A. D. 1516, which is properly the editio princeps of the Greek Text. It is wanting also in his second edition, 1519; but he added it in the third from the Codex Montfortii.

10. In short, it stands on no authority sufficient to authenticate any part of a revelation, professing to have come from God."—Exchange.

For the World's Crisis.

LET YOUR LIGHT SHINE.

The Savior represents his followers as the light of the world; a city that is set on a hill, that cannot be hid. What an impressive lesson we should learn from this beautiful comparison of the Savior of the world, "who spake as never man spake." From this we not only see the importance of walking in the light, but of reflecting it around us. Jesus says, "Let your light so shine before men that they may see your good works and glorify your Father in heaven."

Let us watch unto prayer, and see that we show forth the praises of Him who has called us out of darkness into his marvellous light. As we grow in knowledge of the truth, may this light shine brighter and brighter unto the perfect day. May we "follow on to know the Lord, who is as the morning light." If we live in the Spirit, we shall walk in the Spirit, and not fulfill the lust of the flesh. Let us strive to be humble, out of self, have more of the mind of Christ, with an eye single to the glory of God. O, may we be the means of winning some souls to the Lamb of God.

"Restore unto me the joy of thy salvation; and uphold me by thy free spirit; then will I teach transgressors thy ways, and sinners will be converted unto thee." This is the great object, in letting our light so shine that we may win others to Christ. That the spirit of our blessed Master should govern all of our actions and words, and at the revelation of God's glory we may be able to enter that city shining bright, where the Lamb shall be its light. N. M. WELLS.

For the World's Crisis.

PUBLIC FESTIVALS, SUPPERS, ETC.

Can those who have the spirit of Christ, who have the Holy Ghost shed abroad in their hearts, who have come out from the world, and made the consecration the gospel requires, consistently or conscientiously take part in these festivals, public suppers and parties, of whatever name, where worldlings meet; where gaiety, mirth and hilarity predominate? Can they do this without grieving the Spirit, wounding the Redeemer's cause, and bringing dearth and darkness upon their own souls?

Furthermore, do they not run the fearful hazard of being found as an evil servant, saying, "My Lord delayeth his coming"; "smiting their fellow servants, and eating and drinking with the drunken," thus fulfilling what our Savior furthermore says—"For as in the days that were before the flood, they were eating and drinking"; of which he has admonished to "watch therefore," "and take heed to yourselves, lest at any time your hearts be overcharged with surfeiting, and drunkenness, and cares of this life, and so that day come upon you unawares." "For as a snare shall it come." And of whom the apostle speaks, as "lovers of pleasure more than lovers of God"; "having the form of godliness, but denying the power thereof." Rather should they not "avoid every appearance of evil," and "be not conformed to this world," but "deny themselves, take up their cross daily, and follow Christ"; that truly they may be blameless and harmless, the sons of God, without rebuke, in the midst of a crooked and perverse nation, among whom ye shine as lights in the world."

So, dear brethren and sisters, may we be found; "to the end we may establish your hearts unblameable in holiness before God, even our Father, at the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ with all his saints."

Marion, N. Y. S. L. MANLEY.

RELIGION IN DAILY LIFE.—Religion is not a perpetual moping over good books. Religion is not even prayer, praise, holy ordinances; these are necessary to religion,—no man can be religious without them. But religion is mainly and chiefly the glorifying God among the duties and trials of the world; the guiding of our course amidst adverse winds and currents of temptation, by the starlight of duty and the compass of divine truth; the bearing up manfully, wisely, courageously, for the honor of Christ, our great Leader, in the conflict of life.

A CLEAR CONSCIENCE.—How bravely a man can walk the earth, bear the heaviest burdens, perform the severest duties, and look all men boldly in the face, if he only bears in his breast a clear conscience, void of offence towards God or man.

For the World's Crisis.

CHRISTIAN FRIENDSHIPS.

We are human. That great fact is full of meaning. I cannot make the statement without hearing hearts beat, and feeling the warm breath of humanity on my cheek. It suggests to one the idea of a great surging ocean, on which are innumerable barks guided by a strong hand, or driven about by the waves, or stranded all along its shores; and, as it ebbs, the blackened hulls overgrown with weeds and corals appear here and there to show where some mariner went down, some poor, human soul; and it flows again, and leaves no trace of the poor wrecked one.

We are human, and in the midst of all this surging life, these billows, and deeps between them, where men go up into the sunshine and down into the shadows, our humanity needs an answering nature to help it in the midst of the watery billows. This is just as true of christians as of others; and it may be more so. Our Father recognized this fact when he sent Jesus into the world. O! how that dear name suggests a melting, tender, human heart; one that knew what trials, what weariness, what tears mean. Jesus' nature on earth was warm with human feeling, and by this simple plan God has taught us that when in the flesh, while mortal, we need human hands to help us, human hearts to feel for us, and human prayers to intercede for us. He has said, "My grace shall be sufficient for thee," and there is "grace" in all human helps, when that human is christianized.

God is himself almighty, but he does not display his almighty wisdom by directly stretching out his hands to help, so much as by meeting the needs of the christian's human heart by sending him one of "like passions" to lead him along. The angels have their mission; they are "all ministering spirits, sent forth to minister to those who shall be heirs of salvation"; and so christians have their ministries—human ministries. Their friendships are specially precious, specially valuable.

Do we need encouragements to believe? The great cloud of witnesses "who through faith subdued kingdoms, stopped the mouths of lions, escaped the edge of the sword, waxed valiant in fight, turned to flight the armies of the aliens, and wrought righteousness," were human; they were MEN.

Do we need encouragements to pray? "Elias was a man, subject to like passions as we are" (the sensibilities of humanity). He prayed, and God heard him. Are we in trouble? Some good christian soul, who has "borne the burden" of trial, is just the one to speak the consoling word.

Do we need reproof? Who can cut to the quick so tenderly as a brother christian? The apostle gave the direction that put the christian in his proper place as a human being, when he said, "Rejoice with those that do rejoice, and weep with those that weep."

Now as christianity gives all christians a common interest, which is a mutual interest and excites mutual friendship, it is easy to see and for such to feel the value of "christian friendship." They are bound together by the blessed ties because human blood has been shed, for the blood that flowed from the cross flowed warm from a human heart: so that the christian's relations are "blood relations," and his friendships spring from that, and are strengthened by their fitness for each other.

Every christian has his or her mission, however weak and useless poor little self may seem. We are all mortal, and as such cannot look on God; so he has put his Spirit into christian hearts, and told all to walk in love, and comfort one another. He does give us direct help, but it is a sort of help that humanity cannot give; and as christians can help each other so wonderfully, they learn to esteem the fellowship of the saints more highly than any other. They all know that the great secret of these friendships, of their power to comfort, is christian experience. Angels could never occupy this place, and Raphael's eloquence could never touch, comfort and cheer the heart like the christian's, because he never has tasted the bitterness of sin, nor the sweets of redeeming love; when a tear of sympathy from a fellow christian will by the reflection of the Sun of Righteousness span the sad-clouded soul with the bow of peace.

Christians are "chosen out of the world," and so are friends. They are separated from the world like those left by a ship on an island, and their common condition in this respect makes them appreciate each other. They are all bound to the same home. This friendship is of such a nature it makes the most it possibly can of those who are trying to go home. It does not bitterly chide, but tenderly admonishes, and shows by even that admonishing that it means to advance the brother or sister the most he or she possibly can. O! it is sweet to know that such a friendship is to be eternal; that these christians, "the excellent of the earth," "will meet around the throne," and with Jesus enjoy an unending friendship. L. C. McKinstry.

UNCLE SAM ON RELIGIOUS GAMBLING.

We rather think that all that kind of fashionable lottery-gambling, so much in vogue, to raise money at church-fairs, religious festivals, and other public gatherings, has at last been pretty effectually knocked on the head. Hereafter, if any of our "Sisters of Charity" desire to sell, by lottery, either a doll-baby, a loaf of plum cake, or a "picture by one of the old masters," to raise money for a church, or an orphan asylum, or any other benevolent object, they must first take out a license and pay a thousand dollars for the privilege of this sort of gambling. And if said sisters neglect or refuse to take out such license as aforesaid, they will be liable to a little smart-money in the shape of a penalty of three times the amount of the license, viz., three thousand dollars. Heretofore, there has been a vast amount of conscience-dodging in such matters. Now, all archbishops who carry the keys of Saint Peter, ministers of the "regular succession"—in the "direct line from Saint Paul"—Puritan descendants of John Knox and President Edwards, blameless and circumspect elders and deacons, and the whole rank and file of zealous strategic, male and female religious financiers, will please take notice that, while Uncle Sam don't say—mind you—that lottery-gambling, even to fill the treasury of the Lord, is proper business for you or anybody else to engage in, yet, if you will do it, you must pay roundly for it. Here is the law. Read it:

"Lottery-ticket dealers shall pay one thousand dollars for each license. Every person, association, firm or corporation, who shall make, sell, or offer to sell, lottery-tickets or fractional parts thereof, or any token, certificate or device, representing or intended to represent a lottery-ticket, or any fractional part thereof, or any policy of numbers, in any lottery, or shall manage any lottery, or prepare schemes of lotteries, or superintend the drawing of any lottery, shall be deemed a lottery-ticket dealer under this act.—Independent.

The World's Crisis
AND SECOND ADVENT MESSENGER.

Boston, Tuesday, January 12, 1864.

WAR MEETINGS.

At the present time, war meetings take the lead, as of first importance. It seems as though people thought that enlisting in the army was almost equivalent to becoming a soldier of Christ; that, at least, it is an important step towards salvation. If the ministers of the day would make as earnest efforts to win souls to Christ, as to get them to join the army, we think a goodly number would be converted. It is alarming, indeed, to see how fast the mass of church members are conforming to the spirit and manners of the world. Every year makes a great change. Unless the current is stayed soon, terrible results must follow. People have already lost nearly all respect and reverence for nominal christianity, on account of its great abuse by its professed supporters. They look upon the whole as a system of priestcraft and partyism, and see no cause for changing their course of life in order to be saved, provided the majority of church members are on the safe side. The church and world now mingle in common. The same scenes of amusement answer for both; and they stand side by side in the bloody strife of these last days. O! that some power might awake them from their deadly slumbers, that they might see how near we are to the great day of the Lord, and make preparation for the event.

This state of things is one of the signs of the times. It seems certain that our Savior will soon appear to take those who "love his appearing."

We clip the following from the Boston Journal of Jan. 6th, 1864:—

"Recruiting in Worcester.—The citizens of Worcester, under the lead of their energetic Mayor, are making great exertions to raise the quota of troops required of them. War meetings have been of almost nightly occurrence for several weeks, and we learn from the Spy that meetings were held not only on Saturday afternoon and evening, but again on Sunday evening Mechanics' Hall was crowded by an immense audience assembled to help forward the work of procuring volunteers. Hon. Charles Allen presided, and the united choirs of various churches in the city participated in the exercises. John B. Gough was among the speakers. Mayor Lincoln has issued a card calling upon the citizens to close their places of business daily at 3 o'clock until the 6th inst., and devote as much time as possible to raising recruits. About fifty men are needed to complete the city's quota."

Let us be as active to get the "quota" for the Lord's army. Let each one try to persuade at least one to be a christian soldier; to "put on the whole armor of God," and to fight the good fight of faith," that at last he may "lay hold on eternal life."

THE STATE OF EUROPE.

Europe is now in a very critical condition, and her affairs are continually becoming more complicated. The general impression is that a great war is inevitable, and will probably begin this year. All are making preparations upon a grand scale; and we have no doubt that when the onset comes, every thing in the line of war implements, whether for land or sea, will be called into active service. The one great business of the world, at the present time, is preparation for war,—one of the most terrible kind.

Says a Catholic paper of Jan. 2nd, 1864:—"Europe has been for a year on the brink of war, the shock of which cannot much longer be averted. Mutual diffidence between the great powers, has led to the maintaining by each of immense standing armies, at once a burden to their own, and a menace to neighboring peoples. Meanwhile the best tactician of the century, sitting at Paris, quietly bides his time. It is a Napoleonic 'idea' to have a settlement with each and every one of the powers that signed the act of Vienna. Austria and Russia have been humbled, the Bourbons that acted for France on that occasion, are persecuted whenever opportunity offers, the turn of Prussia and England has yet to come. Meanwhile eighteen hundred and sixty-four opens with several questions menacing war. The most pressing is that of Schleswig-Holstien, the most momentous the Polish, the most difficult, of immediate solution, to settle the Italian, the most lasting, the one which is the beginning and end of all European diplomacy, is also its Gordian knot, the Eastern. Europe has enough to do with her own troubles, without attempting in the proposed Congress, as a Paris paper suggests, to send for 'Presidents Lincoln and Davis,' to settle their little differences."

In the same paper,—The Catholic—next after what we have just quoted, we find the following:—

"Meanwhile, the church appointed of God to bring salvation to all men is quietly and successfully doing her work. She is everywhere extending her missions, adding new members to her fold, creating new institutions to meet new wants. The world witnessing new exhibitions of her undying energy, respects or fears her more and more every day. Protestantism is going the way of all her enemies, to final and utter dissolution; and soon she will be face to face alone with the latest production of darkness, modern infidelity."

Still she boasts, "I sit a queen, and am no widow, and shall see no sorrow."

A STORM COMING.

Some are beginning to wake up to a sense of the awful state of the things in the world, and to sound a note of alarm; while others cry out against all such as "croakers." It will soon be seen, we think, that the most ardent have had but a faint glimpse of the terrible storm now about to burst upon a wicked world. The muttering thunder of the approaching conflict is distinctly heard in the distance. It is sure to come, and those who are not hid in the "Rock of Ages," are in a most alarming condition. O that something might awake them before it shall be too late!

We clip the following from the Boston Journal of Jan. 4th, 1864:—

"Europe and the New Year.

A brief glance at the leading States of Europe will show that the new year does not open upon them much more auspiciously than upon us, even considering the matter from the peace point of view alone. England, which is giving us such affectionate sermons on the evils of war, now has no less than three wars on her hands, viz.: with New Zealand, Japan, and the hill tribes of India. If the two latter, which have just commenced, shall be distinguished by the obstinacy of the former, which is yet far from being finished; there is no foretelling the total draft which will be made for men and money during the coming year. But besides these contests on the outskirts of her dominions, the prospects of England at home are far from being pacific. She has just now, in the matter of the European Congress, for the first time since the Crimean war, broken decisively with the policy of Louis Napoleon, and the result remains to be seen. If any seeds of resentment are implanted in the mind of that inscrutable monarch, Europe is full of chances which may speedily give them growth and maturity, as we shall see in running over the existing and contingent troubles.

The principal safeguard against any such resentment on the part of France lies in her own insecure position. The decided and increasing opposition of the city of Paris—which, in the long run, is France—to the Emperor's administrative policy, is significant of serious developments hereafter. Whether the Emperor now yields to it, or resumes violent repressive efforts, his dynasty is equally endangered. The dilemma is quite as bad in the case of his Mexican policy, upon which profound dissatisfaction exists throughout France. The Polish insurrection is taxing all the powers of Russia, while success, which seems quite as far off as in our own war, is, unlike ours, running counter to the moral sentiment of the age. The Schleswig-Holstein dispute, which may at any moment be launched into bloodshed, threatens to involve Denmark and Sweden with all the lesser German States, even if Austria and Prussia are not dragged in, in which case no assignable limits could be set to the war. Austria, besides, is threatened with another struggle in Italy in the spring, where Garibaldi is impatiently waiting for the hour of action to strike. In addition to these sources of trouble, the question of the Danubian principalities, and the case of the 'sick man' of Turkey, are as far from settlement as ever. It is no wonder, in view of this situation, that every nation in Europe is arming at such a rate, that that cause alone threatens to bring, in time, a general condition of bankruptcy. Surely, the new year is not all bright on the other side of the water any more than on this."

DARK OMENS.

It should cause deep sadness in the hearts of the true disciple of Jesus, when he sees how many are departing from the faith in these last days. When professed ministers backslide from the Lord, it must be expected that many lay members will follow their example. "Like people, like priest." They say practically, we have tried the service of the Lord, and have become tired of it, and advise all others to give it up, and try to enjoy the pleasures of the world, buy and sell and get gain, for we know not what shall be hereafter.

Burleigh, the well known correspondent of the Boston Journal, says:—

"One notices in New York a large number of clergymen who are not employed in their profession—many of them once celebrated as Pastors, Professors and Doctors of Divinity—celebrities in their day and generation, but for some cause have left their charges or their chairs; many of them are unemployed, and earn a precarious living. Why they prefer to remain in and around New York in large numbers with only a scanty support at best, while the West is suffering for preachers and offers the inducement of a good living, is a mystery. But to my knowledge, repeated efforts have been made to start some of these gentlemen West without success. Many are in secular business, and while they write themselves 'Rev.' appear on platforms and sometimes in the pulpit, they drive a thriving trade among the speculators of the day. Bishops from different dioceses spend a good portion of the year in New York, and Doctors of Divinity can be seen daily in Wall street where the bulls and bears hold their fierce combat. The novel and light literature of the day, which the fathers would not have touched with a pair of tongs, emanate from clergymen or clergymen's families."

THE MORALITY OF WAR.

We clip the following sensible remarks on "the morality of war," from Zion's Herald. We are glad to know that some dare speak the truth on this subject. We hope to see more raised up who will be faithful in sounding the alarm. The writer says:—

"War is a barbarous institution. Its spirit was first seen when Cain raised his hand to slay his brother; for in spilling the blood of that righteous man he not only acted the part of an assassin, but also acted the part of an offensive warrior. From that sad day the "voice of blood" has been sounding among the nations of earth, carrying sorrow and sadness to many a heart.... War is one of the greatest calamities that can befall a nation. It is the greatest demon that ever sported on the plains of hell, or exerted an influence among nations.... War appeals to the unsanctified passions of man for support. Its basis is the carnal mind—the culmination of ambition and revenge. History no where records a war based on christian sentiments—'love to God and man.' It is the nature of war to lay aside christian graces, kindness, humanity and love, and on the field of battle substitute revenge, hatred and malice. This has been clearly demonstrated on the sunny plains of the South during the year that is past; while some of the most shocking and unnatural crimes that ever entered into the human mind, have been committed in connection with war. In ancient history this is most strikingly illustrated. Innocent women and children were slain, dressed, and boiled in cauldrons, in order to strike a terror on the surrounding country, by making the people believe that the soldiers lived on human flesh. In Labaume's narrative of the campaign in Russia, we are presented with some of the most horrible details of sorrow and suffering that it is possible for man to endure. No asylum was respected; one hospital containing 20,000 wounded Russians was needlessly set on fire; half burned wretches were seen crawling and screeching in the flames; and this was sport for the demon soldiers without, while the innocent were crying for death to end their agonies. Says Rocca in his memoirs of war in Spain, 'The habit of danger made us look upon death as one of the ordinary circumstances of life. The indifference manifested towards the wounded and dying amounts to irony.' Nothing is more frightful than the want of feeling which characterizes the French soldiery. But we need not go far back in history to learn this, for some of us know from personal experience that the worst passions of men are cultivated, yea, triumph in the day of battle. The morals of the camp are far below the precepts Christ taught in his Sermon on the Mount. How very soon do our young men learn to swear like pirates and blaspheme like demons. Does a man fear God and love his Savior? Is he honest, sober, chaste and upright in his deportment? Has he a tender conscience, a nice sense of religion, and a keen appetite for the Bible? That man has two battles to fight at once. Occasionally we have a general who has 'Christ in his heart,' a praying captain and a devoted soldier, but this is the exception and not the rule. The voice of war is, 'the worse the man the better the soldier.' War tramples all heavenly injunctions under its bloody feet. It strikes into darkness all that is 'lovely and of good report,' and sends death, grim and horrid, over armies and nations."

"Can we, by any show of reasoning, be said to love our enemies, and yet join in shooting them down by hundreds? Our citizenship is said to be in heaven; can we then take part in contests for the support of an earthly government? It is to me a matter of much sorrow that so few ministers can be found, in these times, that are not involved in the spirit of war that fills our country. The ministers of the 'Prince of Peace' are found, on all sides, ready to offer their aid in the service of the god of war."

Daily observation more and more confirms the position that war in all its aspects is unchristian, and results only in evil. But few remain long in the army without being ruined morally and physically.

To us, nothing seems more opposed to the principles of a free government, as ours is said to be, than to attempt to force a christian man to go and help slaughter his fellow beings whom his Savior has taught him to love. Yet it is stranger still to hear the professed ministers of the Prince of peace urging his followers to engage in the bloody strife. What strange times are these! May the Lord help us all to keep free from the spirit of murder, and to stand waiting for the return of the blessed Redeemer.

IT MAY BE SO.

The following from the Boston Investigator contains a remark worthy of consideration. Every minister should inquire, Am I in that class who would "not be very glad to see him?" The Investigator says:—

"Perhaps some of our readers are not aware of the object to which The World's Crisis is devoted. It is a Second Advent publication, and its chief purpose seems to be to prove that Christ is soon to come and reign on the earth. Where he is to reside when he gets here, is not stated; but if he has no more to do with priests than he had when he was on earth before, they will not be very glad to see him."

As "to where he is to reside when he gets here," we would say to the Investigator, we think the Scriptures most plainly teach that Mt. Zion shall be his habitation, when it is restored to its Eden state, and crowned by the New Jerusalem,—the city of the Great King. Then we shall have a Prince of Peace, reigning in righteousness; and till that glad day comes, evil men and seducers will "wax worse and worse, deceiving and being deceived."

A NEW WORK.

"Home Thrusts," or "Much in Little—Little in Much."

"Home Thrusts," says an eminent and forcible writer, "are what we need, must have—things practical, pointed—the flint, the fire, the hammer, the holy unction, Sinai's crash, the lightning's flash; fire on fire: Household preaching, things that cut to the quick! 'sharper than any two-edged sword,' that tell on the conscience 'Thou art the man!' 'Small bullets do great execution,' an article pithily expressed, full of faith and the Holy Spirit, is often quoted from one end of the land to the other, and becomes a sword for millions."

This Volume of nearly 400 pages is an epitome or synopsis of some seventeen years of Editorial labor; containing the best, choicest—the most pointed, life-giving, soul-cheering, reformatory articles inserted in The Golden Rule, and other Periodicals, during the space of seventeen years. These articles on various subjects of light, life and salvation, have been revised, many of them re-written, put anew into the Gospel crucible, and in a condensed form, giving merely the cream, the marrow, the soul, the life, the power, the essential parts of the whole, in as small a compass as practicable.

In addition to the foregoing is "The Family Circle," a goodly number of recently written, original articles, on the subject of Parental Discipline, the duties of husbands and wives, parents and children, ministers and people;—Education in its various branches, courtesy, politeness of manners, temperance in all things, health of body, mind, and soul; "holiness to the Lord"; modesty, purity of thought, word, and action.

"The family is a little book,
The children are the leaves,
The parents are the cover, that
Protecting beauty gives"

The Bible will be the text book. "To the law and the testimony, if they speak not according to this word it is because there is no light in them."—Isa. 8: 20.

Bro. Newton is one of the living christians of these last days. If you wish to get a book worth five times the cost of it, send for "Home Thrusts."—Ed.

"THE POPE AND THE CONGRESS."

It is evidently the aim of Napoleon III. to have the Pope attend the proposed conference of the nations, at Paris, and then be crowned, making it the most important and imposing conference ever held in the world. Events are beginning to assume great proportions, thereby indicating greater changes at hand. To the student of prophecy all seems plain. We are almost to the great day of the Lord. Now is the time for heart work, and a thorough inspection of all our motives and principles to see if we are doing all to the Lord. We should be in a state of preparation to meet the Bridegroom; while the world is preparing for WAR.

We clip the following from the Catholic of Jan. 2nd, 1864:—

"The Pope and the Congress.—From certain expressions which fell from the Holy Father to-day, at an audience afforded to a gentleman of my acquaintance, it seems most probable that he will accept the invitation to preside at the expected Congress, the more so as guarantees have been offered as to the exclusion of all matters calculated to offend the dignity or wound the susceptibilities of the Vicar of Christ.... Moreover, by agreeing to preside, he will do away with the objection already raised by the enemies of the Holy See that the common Father of the Faithful refused to sanction by his presence an Assembly of Sovereigns convened for the purpose of avoiding the evils of a European war. The moral effect of the visit of the Holy Father to Paris cannot, it seems to me, be over-estimated. Enthroned for the time in the Tuileries, his presence will be an occasion of rallying for the friends of religion, and a salutary pressure cannot fail to be exerted on the councils of the forthcoming Congress, and I may add, on the future policy of the Emperor.

Notwithstanding the Renans, the Dumases, et hoc genus omne, who by their scepticism and impious writings bring discredit on the literature of that country, France is a great Catholic nation, and the French here say that in the event of his going, Pius IX. will be borne from Marseilles to Paris on the shoulders of the people. No doubt an unprecedented amount of enthusiasm would be manifested on the occasion, and the journey of the Holy Father would be an extraordinary and triumphant ovation."

For the World's Crisis.

ENGLISH SENTIMENT.

Not about the war, but about books and theology. I have lately received a letter from the Rev. Edward White, of London, known to some people in this country by his "Life in Christ," and who is now editor of the Christian Spectator. At the risk of some praise of my own doings, I venture the following extracts:—

"I received and read your small work (Christ our Life) with great interest. It is a capital introduction to the subject."

"Have lost no opportunity of referring to the book (Debt and Grace) in suitable terms when I can in the Christian Spectator. Its name and quality are at least known among the Dissenters; but in England I don't think one in a thousand really cares what becomes of mankind at the last judgment. The speculative power seems quite dead on such topics among the orthodox; and as for the heretics, they are all Universalists, and reckon such notions as ours very foolish."

"In England the controversies that excite interest are fundamental, and relate to the authority of Scripture. What the Bible really teaches seems to be a secondary concern."

"I can judge of the alteration of English opinion only by my own position, who am a sort of barometer. When I came to London twelve years ago, I was a marked man—rather feared, and much avoided. I am now living on equal terms with all my neighbor ministers, admitted to their pulpits, and their people read my magazine freely. This looks as if they were not so shocked as they once were. In fact all tell me that our witnessing has taken effect at least in removing violent prejudice and in bringing popular language nearer to the Scripture."

"Those who have read your book all agree with me that it is one of the very best we have received on any theological subject from the United States, and is a model of learning, fairness, and sagacity."

"H. W. Beecher's visit has done good," etc. C. F. H.

For the World's Crisis.

"THE CHRISTIAN LIFE."

The project of this monthly is abandoned, at least for a year. It is not one on which I had really set my heart—indeed it is n't well to set one's heart on any thing but Christ. But I should have been very willing to undertake it on fair encouragement. A good first number might bring three or four times as many names as any other advertisement. But three or four times forty-five names—the number now obtained—is no guarantee of a support. Happily I have nothing to tempt me into a pecuniary adventure, though I have very much to be thankful for in generous favors from various friends. If all in debt could be advised to stay out of it so gently, the world would be quite millennial. I only hope I shall deserve to stay out of debt, by help of grace.

A very few persons have paid for the magazine. Their money will be refunded, or used as they may direct. I should also thank some friends for the efforts they have made, and for offers of future aid. And to all I may say that though they may not see such a "Christian Life" as I have proposed in print, the practice of it, God helping, lies in the power of each and all. C. F. H.

THE RIGHT SPIRIT.

One of our most earnest and successful laborers,—Bro. C. B. Turner, of the Empire State,—closes up the old year very appropriately with eight new subscribers, and the following note:—

"This makes, in all, since the first day of January last, fifty-four subscribers. Hope, with the new year, to commence a more vigorous prosecution of the war."

That's it. Just what we want. A more vigorous prosecution of the war! Let it ring through all our ranks, from one end of the Lord's army to the other,—A MORE VIGOROUS PROSECUTION OF THE WAR! The fight is a good one, and the reward glorious. Who will enlist, and do valiant service the coming year? W. B. H.

Omitted.—In our list of brethren and sisters who obtained subscribers in 1863, the name of Sr. N. M. Henry was overlooked. She sent us eight subscribers in the year. Any other omission that may be discovered will be cheerfully rectified. W. B. H.

For the World's Crisis.

GOODNESS OF GOD.

Dear reader, have you ever meditated upon the power, wisdom and goodness of God, and wisely upon the signs of the times? If you have not, I would invite your attention to the book of nature, and the volume of inspiration for your consideration and instruction. They both teach us that there is a God who hath created the heavens and the earth, who ruleth and governeth all things therein. He hath created the angels above ministering spirits to do his will, and also man upon earth (the noblest part of creation) to serve him; the beasts of the field, and the animals that range the forest; the birds that fly in the air, the fishes that swim in the sea, the trees that flourish, and the flowers that bud and blossom beneath the sun for his honor and glory.

On him we are all dependent for life and every breath we draw. And as we are informed by divine revelation, he is a God of love. But notwithstanding his love and goodness to man, he often afflicts us with pain and anguish for our sins. Our follies are numerous, and we are sure to bring upon ourselves trouble. But thanks to the Giver of all good, amid all the scenes of earth which cause the heart to weep and the breast to heave with anguish, we may find a safe refuge and a sure fountain of peace in him.

God has revealed himself to us a kind and indulgent Father, whose wisdom never errs, whose goodness never fails, and though He causes grief for a season, "Yet will He have compassion according to the multitude of his mercies," which are as universal as his power, and as lasting as his existence. To him we are invited to look for our safety and support. "Look unto me" (saith the sacred volume) "and be ye saved, all the ends of the earth, for I am God and there is none else." Then let the wayward and rebellious heed the call, and turn from all their evil pursuits and raise their thoughts and affections from earth to the realms of bliss, from whence the waters of life flow that fill the soul with peace and gladness.

As christians, let us never despair, though the dark clouds of adversity and bloodshed hang over us, and the waves of affliction dash in upon us. Let not the blessed truth ever depart from us, that God who is almighty in power, infinite in wisdom, perfect in goodness, holy in justice, doeth all his will and pleasure, both in the armies of heaven and among the inhabitants of earth, and hath not left us without the glad assurance that he will not cast off forever, because his compassion faileth not. Would that these glorious truths of divine revelation might ever be had in view and with their full weight sink deep into the hearts of men. Then the bitter streams of sorrow would cease to flow, and the despairing cries of the fearful would be changed into cheerfulness, gratitude and praise; and universal resignation, joy and peace would change the kingdom of this world into the kingdom of our blessed Lord and Savior. Then all wars and commotions would cease to invade the earth, and all would be at peace; and its excellence would "cover the earth as the water fill the sea."

A few words upon the signs of the times. There has been much said upon the darkening of the sun, and the moon's not giving her light, and the stars falling from heaven, etc. I dare not say but those have been omens of what is to follow; but be this as it may, it appears that God now is doing a great work upon the earth; that he is about to cleanse his sanctuary. He has suffered our enemies to rush in upon us with great slaughter, blood and carnage. Such a war as we have now upon us has never been known in any nation, to my knowledge. All this cannot take place without an emblem of some future reciprocation. It appears as near as I can discern that God is about to give his children a new earth, wherein dwelleth righteousness. For we can see by the signs of the times, that the kings and queens of the earth have fallen, and lie under the cloud of darkness; and the stars—the great men—even among ourselves, have fallen so low that they have seceded from one of the best governments in the world, wherein they have had their greatest enjoyments and happiness.

Our sins as individuals and as a nation, have been odious in the sight of God, therefore we should not think it strange if he is now visiting us in judgment,—that he is preparing the way for the coming of Christ. It appears that the day of his wrath is now upon us, "and who shall be able to stand?" He that is serving God and looking for the Redeemer, who is able to lift us far above this terrible conflagration, and at length in his own time give us a new world wherein dwelleth righteousness, that never shall be removed.

Dear reader, is it not high time that we have our lamps trimmed and burning, that we may meet the Bridegroom in peace whenever he shall come,—that we may enter in through the gates into the city, to the royal marriage feast of the Lamb? J. Elkins.

Fisherville, N. H.

For the World's Crisis.

REPORT

Of the Maine Second Advent Ministerial Conference.

Friday, Jan. 1st. Met according to appointment at ten o'clock, A. M. Held an informal session. Met for business at 2 o'clock. Meeting opened by prayer. Eld. L. L. Howard was chosen Moderator, and Eld. C. H. Leverton Secretary. Listened to remarks by the Chair, and others, respecting the object for which the conference was called.

Moved, That the Chair appoint a committee of three, to report business to come before the conference. Carried. Brn. N. G. Reed, I. R. Hall and F. A. Baker were appointed.

The committee reported the following matters to be considered:

1. That the Second Advent ministers of the State of Maine form themselves into a body, who shall look after each other's interest in a scriptural manner.

2. That the manner of forming this body be open for investigation.

The first was adopted. The second item was tabled, to be taken up on the morrow.

Moved, That the Chair appoint a committee of three to investigate the matter of church government, as taught in the N. T. Brn. I. Damman, R. R. York and I. R. Hall were appointed.

Adjourned till Saturday, 9 o'clock A. M.

Friday evening, we listened to a profitable discourse delivered with much earnestness by Bro. F. A. Baker. Text, Luke 21: 34.

Saturday, 9 o'clock A. M. Assembled for business. The report of the committee upon church government being called for, was read, which was as follows:

A church is a company of believers in Christ, united in the order of the gospel.

The order of the gospel we understand to be as follows:

The Officers of the church are Bishops or Elders, and Deacons.

Bishops or Elders are those called of God to preach the gospel, set apart by laying on of hands; and are to feed the flock of God, and take the general oversight thereof. The qualifications necessary for such are described in 1 Tim. 3: 1–7; Titus 1: 5–9; and other passages.

Deacons are those in the church who are set apart by the laying on of hands, for the work of attending to the temporal interests of the church. Compare Acts 6: 1–6; Phil. 1: 1; and 1 Tim. 3: 8, 10, 12.

Church discipline should be attended to according to the rule laid down by the Savior, in Matt. 18: 15–17, and Luke 17: 3, 4. Also by the apostle in 1 Cor. 5: 2, and 2 Thess. 3: 6, with other scriptures.

The committee's report was adopted.

Moved, That we recommend to all the churches of our faith to organize and discipline according to the conclusions of the committee upon church government, as above named. Carried.

Moved, That we take from the table the item relating to the manner of forming ourselves into a body, etc. Carried.

Moved, That we who are here assembled organize as a Ministerial Conference, by choice of President and Secretary; said conference to meet once a year, or more, to transact business for the interest of the church and ministry, and to be named The Maine Second Advent Ministerial Conference. Carried.

Moved, That the present Secretary and President stand for the ensuing year. Carried.

Moved, That Brn. L. L. Howard, I. C. Wellcome and R. R. York be chosen as a committee of said conference, to be empowered to give Letters of Commendation to those whom their body shall advise. And also to recommend to the conference such ministers as they may deem proper. Carried.

Moved, That the ministers forming this body have their names recorded by the Secretary. Carried.

Names.—L. L. Howard, C. H. Leverton, Israel Damman, D. M. Hanscomb, Nicholas G. Reed, Fred. A. Baker, John Morrill, John R. Hall, Jeremiah Carr, R. R. York, Wm. H. Mitchell, I. C. Wellcome, John Wheeler.

Moved, That Brn. N. G. Reed and I. Damman have each a letter of commendation.—Carried.

Moved, That the Eastern Quarterly Conference retain for the present the name formerly assigned it—Maine Eastern Quarterly Conference. Carried.

Moved, That a report of this conference be sent to the Crisis for publication. Carried.

Moved, That we adjourn this conference, to meet with the Maine Annual Conference of the present year. Carried.

Saturday evening, met to hear the word of God. Bro. L. L. Howard interested us for a time, by speaking from Rev. 22: 14.

Sabbath, A. M. Convened at half-past ten. Listened again to a discourse by Bro. L. L. Howard. Text,—Matt. 24: 30. Bro. H. preached the truth with his usual earnestness. P. M. Bro. Baker addressed us. Text, 1 John 3: 3. The church was much edified. After preaching, a number of testimonies were given. The Spirit was present in much power. In the evening we had another glorious meeting. Bro. Mitchell presented for our consideration Rev. 16: 15. Much important truth was advanced in an interesting manner. The discourse was followed by a number of warm exhortations.

The evening closed this very profitable conference. Union with Christ and each other seemed to be the predominating desire of each. And in our business transactions, although all could not see alike on all points, yet a spirit of forbearance was manifested throughout. May this meeting redound to the glory of God, and tend to promote the interests of the church.

L. L. Howard, President.
C. H. Leverton, Secretary.

For the World's Crisis.

AT HOME AGAIN.

Bro. Grant:—By the blessing of God, I have been enabled to return home to my family once more, after an absence of three weeks. I have been trying to comfort the church. The Lord has helped me to declare his word. Brethren have been comforted, sinners convicted of the truth.

When I see a world lying in wickedness, men hasting to the judgment, and that day so near, my heart is stirred within me, and I am compelled to leave my dear family, and hasten on from place to place, as the Master directs, to declare the counsel of God, and to lift up my voice in warning to a guilty world, pointing them to the slain Lamb of God, who can give them eternal life. Precious boon! to be with God forever, to bask in the sunshine of his eternal glory. O Lord! what wilt thou have thy servant to do, that he may be sure of an entrance through the gates into the city of our God?

My faith is strong in God. My soul is striving for glory. "There remaineth a rest for the people of God"; how sweet the thought to the tried and tempest-tossed soul. It cheers the christian heart, and he is enabled to bear the toils of life with patience, waiting for the great day to come that will usher in that rest.

Brn., let us endure hardships as good soldiers, fight the fight of faith, and lay hold upon the promises of God, for it is he that endureth unto the end that is to be saved. Pray for me, that I may be faithful to my mission, and be found giving meat to the household of faith when the Master comes. I must be there, let it cost what it will. Thy Bro., loving and waiting for the coming of Jesus. Geo. A. Streeter.

Athol, Mass., Nov. 21st, 1863.

For the World's Crisis.

CONFERENCE REPORT.

The Christian Quarterly Conference met at Frankfort Mills, Waldo Co., Me., Thursday, Dec. 24th, 1863. Preaching at 6 o'clock P. M. by Bro. Israel Damman. Text, John 8: 46.

Met Friday morn, at 9 o'clock, for prayer and conference. Preaching at 10 o'clock by Bro. C. H. Leverton, from Rev. 22: 12. Met at 2 o'clock P. M. Preaching by Bro. I. Damman, from Luke 21: 36. Also at 6—sermon by Bro. N. G. Reed. Text, Matt. 24: 34.

Saturday morning, 9 o'clock. Conference business.

1st. Elected Bro. Israel Damman, Chairman.

2nd. Bro. Moses Young, Clerk.

3d. Voted we refer the boundaries and name of this conference to the ministerial conference to be held at Augusta, Jan. 1st, 1864.

4th. Voted we take the Scriptures of the New Testament as our rule of faith and practice; and as to discipline, it be referred to the conference before mentioned, to report as soon as circumstances permit.

Sermon at two o'clock by Bro. I. Damman, from 1 Tim. 6: 11.

Saturday Eve, 6 o'clock, preaching by Bro. C. H. Leverton. Text, Micah 4: 8.

Sabbath Morn, 9 o'clock. Prayer and conference. Preaching at 10 o'clock by Bro. N. G. Reed. Text, Amos 3: 7. At 2 o'clock, sermon by Bro. Damman, from Luke 23: 43. At 6 o'clok, preaching by Bro. Leverton, from Heb. 4: 9.

Good attention and the best of order prevailed during the meeting. Nothing more manifest in preachers and hearers than the honor and glory of God. Each of the preachers exhibited a zeal and deep feeling worthy their calling. Union and harmony controlled every exhibition of the meeting.

In addition to the preachers before named who attended the meeting, were Bro. Morrill of Newbury, and Bro. Baker of Frankfort Mills. The brethren with whom Bro. Baker labors express great regard toward him.

Bro. C. H. Leverton reports success in various towns, viz: Burlington, Lincoln, Lee, and other towns in which he has been laboring during the past season; that many have been converted; that the preaching of the Second Advent faith is well received; that a

For the World's Crisis.

CHRISTIAN FRIENDSHIPS.

We are human. That great fact is full of meaning. I cannot make the statement without hearing hearts beat, and feeling the warm breath of humanity on my cheek. It suggests to one the idea of a great surging ocean, on which are innumerable barks guided by a strong hand, or driven about by the waves, or stranded all along its shores; and, as it ebbs, the blackened hulls overgrown with weeds and corals appear here and there to show where some mariner went down, some poor, human soul; and it flows again, and leaves no trace of the poor wrecked one.

We are human, and in the midst of all this surging life, these billows, and deeps between them, where men go up into the sunshine and down into the shadows, our humanity needs an answering nature to help it in the midst of the watery billows. This is just as true of christians as of others; and it may be more so. Our Father recognized this fact when he sent Jesus into the world. O! how that dear name suggests a melting, tender, human heart; one that knew what trials, what weariness, what tears mean. Jesus' nature on earth was warm with human feeling, and by this simple plan God has taught us that when in the flesh, while mortal, we need human hands to help us, human hearts to feel for us, and human prayers to intercede for us. He has said, "My grace shall be sufficient for thee," and there is "grace" in all human helps, when that human is christianized.

God is himself almighty, but he does not display his almighty wisdom by directly stretching out his hands to help, so much as by meeting the needs of the christian's human heart by sending him one of "like passions" to lead him along. The angels have their mission; they are "all ministering spirits, sent forth to minister to those who shall be heirs of salvation"; and so christians have their ministries—human ministries. Their friendships are specially precious, specially valuable.

Do we need encouragements to believe? The great cloud of witnesses "who through faith subdued kingdoms, stopped the mouths of lions, escaped the edge of the sword, waxed valiant in fight, turned to flight the armies of the aliens, and wrought righteousness," were human; they were MEN.

Do we need encouragements to pray? "Elias was a man, subject to like passions as we are" (the sensibilities of humanity). He prayed, and God heard him. Are we in trouble? Some good christian soul, who has "borne the burden" of trial, is just the one to speak the consoling word.

Do we need reproof? Who can cut to the quick so tenderly as a brother christian? The apostle gave the direction that put the christian in his proper place as a human being, when he said, "Rejoice with those that do rejoice, and weep with those that weep."

Now as christianity gives all christians a common interest, which is a mutual interest and excites mutual friendship, it is easy to see and for such to feel the value of "christian friendship." They are bound together by the blessed ties because human blood has been shed, for the blood that flowed from the cross flowed warm from a human heart: so that the christian's relations are "blood relations," and his friendships spring from that, and are strengthened by their fitness for each other.

Every christian has his or her mission, however weak and useless poor little self may seem. We are all mortal, and as such cannot look on God; so he has put his Spirit into christian hearts, and told all to walk in love, and comfort one another. He does give us direct help, but it is a sort of help that humanity cannot give; and as christians can help each other so wonderfully, they learn to esteem the fellowship of the saints more highly than any other. They all know that the great secret of these friendships, of their power to comfort, is christian experience. Angels could never occupy this place, and Raphael's eloquence could never touch, comfort and cheer the heart like the christian's, because he never has tasted the bitterness of sin, nor the sweets of redeeming love; when a tear of sympathy from a fellow christian will by the reflection of the Sun of Righteousness span the sad-clouded soul with the bow of peace.

Christians are "chosen out of the world," and so are friends. They are separated from the world like those left by a ship on an island, and their common condition in this respect makes them appreciate each other. They are all bound to the same home. This friendship is of such a nature it makes the most it possibly can of those who are trying to go home. It does not bitterly chide, but tenderly admonishes, and shows by even that admonishing that it means to advance the brother or sister the most he or she possibly can. O! it is sweet to know that such a friendship is to be eternal; that these christians, "the excellent of the earth," "will meet around the throne," and with Jesus enjoy an unending friendship. L. C. McKINSTRY.

UNCLE SAM ON RELIGIOUS GAMBLING.

We rather think that all that kind of fashionable lottery-gambling, so much in vogue, to raise money at church-fairs, religious festivals, and other public gatherings, has at last been pretty effectually knocked on the head. Hereafter, if any of our "Sisters of Charity" desire to sell, by lottery, either a doll-baby, a loaf of plum cake, or a "picture by one of the old masters," to raise money for a church, or an orphan asylum, or any other benevolent object, they must first take out a license and pay a thousand dollars for the privilege of this sort of gambling. And if said sisters neglect or refuse to take out such license as aforesaid, they will be liable to a little smart-money in the shape of a penalty of three times the amount of the license, viz., three thousand dollars. Heretofore, there has been a vast amount of conscience-dodging in such matters. Now, all archbishops who carry the keys of Saint Peter, ministers of the "regular succession"—in the "direct line from Saint Paul"—Puritan descendants of John Knox and President Edwards, blameless and circumspect elders and deacons, and the whole rank and file of zealous strategic, male and female religious financiers, will please take notice that, while Uncle Sam don't say—mind you—that lottery-gambling, even to fill the treasury of the Lord, is proper business for you or anybody else to engage in, yet, if you will do it, you must pay roundly for it. Here is the law. Read it:

"Lottery-ticket dealers shall pay one thousand dollars for each license. Every person, association, firm or corporation, who shall make, sell, or offer to sell, lottery-tickets or fractional parts thereof, or any token, certificate or device, representing or intended to represent a lottery-ticket, or any fractional part thereof, or any policy of numbers, in any lottery, or shall manage any lottery, or prepare schemes of lotteries, or superintend the drawing of any lottery, shall be deemed a lottery-ticket dealer under this act.—Independent.

The World's Crisis AND SECOND ADVENT MESSENGER.

Boston, Tuesday, January 12, 1864.

WAR MEETINGS.

At the present time, war meetings take the lead, as of first importance. It seems as though people thought that enlisting in the army was almost equivalent to becoming a soldier of Christ; that, at least, it is an important step towards salvation. If the ministers of the day would make as earnest efforts to win souls to Christ, as to get them to join the army, we think a goodly number would be converted. It is alarming, indeed, to see how fast the mass of church members are conforming to the spirit and manners of the world. Every year makes a great change. Unless the current is stayed soon, terrible results must follow. People have already lost nearly all respect and reverence for nominal christianity, on account of its great abuse by its professed supporters. They look upon the whole as a system of priestcraft and partyism, and see no cause for changing their course of life in order to be saved, provided the majority of church members are on the safe side. The church and world now mingle in common. The same scenes of amusement answer for both; and they stand side by side in the bloody strife of these last days. O! that some power might awake them from their deadly slumbers, that they might see how near we are to the great day of the Lord, and make preparation for the event.

This state of things is one of the signs of the times. It seems certain that our Savior will soon appear to take those who "love his appearing."

We clip the following from the Boston Journal of Jan. 6th, 1864:—

"RECRUITING IN WORCESTER.—The citizens of Worcester, under the lead of their energetic Mayor, are making great exertions to raise the quota of troops required of them. War meetings have been of almost nightly occurrence for several weeks, and we learn from the Spy that meetings were held not only on Saturday afternoon and evening, but again on Sunday evening Mechanics' Hall was crowded by an immense audience assembled to help forward the work of procuring volunteers. Hon. Charles Allen presided, and the united choirs of various churches in the city participated in the exercises. John B. Gough was among the speakers. Mayor Lincoln has issued a card calling upon the citizens to close their places of business daily at 3 o'clock until the 6th inst., and devote as much time as possible to raising recruits. About fifty men are needed to complete the city's quota."

Let us be as active to get the "quota" for the Lord's army. Let each one try to persuade at least one to be a christian soldier; to "put on the whole armor of God," and to fight the good fight of faith," that at last he may "lay hold on eternal life."

THE STATE OF EUROPE.

Europe is now in a very critical condition, and her affairs are continually becoming more complicated. The general impression is that a great war is inevitable, and will probably begin this year. All are making preparations upon a grand scale; and we have no doubt that when the onset comes, every thing in the line of war implements, whether for land or sea, will be called into active service. The one great business of the world, at the present time, is preparation for war,—one of the most terrible kind.

Says a Catholic paper of Jan. 2nd, 1864:—"Europe has been for a year on the brink of war, the shock of which cannot much longer be averted. Mutual diffidence between the great powers, has led to the maintaining by each of immense standing armies, at once a burden to their own, and a menace to neighboring peoples. Meanwhile the best tactician of the century, sitting at Paris, quietly bides his time. It is a Napoleonic 'idea' to have a settlement with each and every one of the powers that signed the act of Vienna. Austria and Russia have been humbled, the Bourbons that acted for France on that occasion, are persecuted whenever opportunity offers, the turn of Prussia and England has yet to come. Meanwhile eighteen hundred and sixty-four opens with several questions menacing war. The most pressing is that of Schleswig-Holstien, the most momentous the Polish, the most difficult, of immediate solution, to settle the Italian, the most lasting, the one which is the beginning and end of all European diplomacy, is also its Gordian knot, the Eastern. Europe has enough to do with her own troubles, without attempting in the proposed Congress, as a Paris paper suggests, to send for 'Presidents Lincoln and Davis,' to settle their little differences."

In the same paper,—The Catholic—next after what we have just quoted, we find the following:—

"Meanwhile, the church appointed of God to bring salvation to all men is quietly and successfully doing her work. She is everywhere extending her missions, adding new members to her fold, creating new institutions to meet new wants. The world witnessing new exhibitions of her undying energy, respects or fears her more and more every day. Protestantism is going the way of all her enemies, to final and utter dissolution; and soon she will be face to face alone with the latest production of darkness, modern infidelity."

Still she boasts, "I sit a queen, and am no widow, and shall see no sorrow."

A STORM COMING.

Some are beginning to wake up to a sense of the awful state of the things in the world, and to sound a note of alarm; while others cry out against all such as "croakers." It will soon be seen, we think, that the most ardent have had but a faint glimpse of the terrible storm now about to burst upon a wicked world. The muttering thunder of the approaching conflict is distinctly heard in the distance. It is sure to come, and those who are not hid in the "Rock of Ages," are in a most alarming condition. O that something might awake them before it shall be too late!

We clip the following from the Boston Journal of Jan. 4th, 1864:—

"EUROPE AND THE NEW YEAR.

A brief glance at the leading states of Europe will show that the new year does not open upon them much more auspiciously than upon us, even considering the matter from the [...] point of view alone. England, which is giving us such affectionate sermons on the evils of war, now has no less than three wars on her hands, viz.: with New Zealand, Japan, and the hill tribes of India. If the two latter, which have just commenced, shall be distinguished by the obstinacy of the former, which is yet far from being finished, there is no foretelling the total draft which will be made for men and money during the coming year. But besides these contests on the outskirts of her dominions, the prospects of England at home are far from being pacific. She has just now, in the matter of the European Congress, for the first time since the Crimean war, broken decisively with the policy of Louis Napoleon, and the result remains to be seen. If any seeds of resentment are implanted in the mind of that inscrutable monarch, Europe is full of chances which may speedily give them growth and maturity, as we shall see in running over the existing and contingent troubles.

The principal safeguard against any such resentment on the part of France lies in her own insecure position. The decided and increasing opposition of the city of Paris—which, in the long run, is France—to the Emperor's administrative policy, is significant of serious developments hereafter. Whether the Emperor now yields to it, or resumes violent repressive efforts, his dynasty is equally endangered. The dilemma is quite as bad in the case of his Mexican policy, upon which profound dissatisfaction exists throughout France. The Polish insurrection is taxing all the powers of Russia, while success, which seems quite as far off as in our own war, is, unlike ours, running counter to the moral sentiment of the age. The Schleswig-Holstein dispute, which may at any moment be launched into bloodshed, threatens to involve Denmark and Sweden with all the lesser German States, even if Austria and Prussia are not dragged in, in which case no assignable limits could be set to the war. Austria, besides, is threatened with another struggle in Italy in the spring, where Garibaldi is impatiently waiting for the hour of action to strike. In addition to these sources of trouble, the question of the Danubian principalities, and the case of the 'sick man' of Turkey, are as far from settlement as ever. It is no wonder, in view of this situation, that every nation in Europe is arming at such a rate, that that cause alone threatens to bring, in time, a general condition of bankruptcy. Surely, the new year is not all bright on the other side of the water any more than on this."

DARK OMENS.

It should cause deep sadness in the hearts of the true disciple of Jesus, when he sees how many are departing from the faith in these last days. When professed ministers backslide from the Lord, it must be expected that many lay members will follow their example. "Like people, like priest." They say practically, we have tried the service of the Lord, and have become tired of it, and advise all others to give it up, and try to enjoy the pleasures of the world, buy and sell and get gain, for we know not what shall be hereafter.

Burleigh, the well known correspondent of the Boston Journal, says:—

"One notices in New York a large number of clergymen who are not employed in their profession—many of them once celebrated as Pastors, Professors and Doctors of Divinity—celebrities in their day and generation, but for some cause have left their charges or their chairs; many of them are unemployed, and earn a precarious living. Why they prefer to remain in and around New York in large numbers with only a scanty support at best, while the West is suffering for preachers and offers the inducement of a good living, is a mystery. But to my knowledge, repeated efforts have been made to start some of these gentlemen West without success. Many are in secular business, and while they write themselves 'Rev.' appear on platforms and sometimes in the pulpit, they drive a thriving trade among the speculators of the day. Bishops from different dioceses spend a good portion of the year in New York, and Doctors of Divinity can be seen daily in Wall street where the bulls and bears hold their fierce combat. The novel and light literature of the day, which the fathers would not have touched with a pair of tongs, emanate from clergymen or clergymen's families."

THE MORALITY OF WAR.

We clip the following sensible remarks on "the morality of war," from Zion's Herald. We are glad to know that some dare speak the truth on this subject. We hope to see more raised up who will be faithful in sounding the alarm. The writer says:—

"War is a barbarous institution. Its spirit was first seen when Cain raised his hand to slay his brother; for in spilling the blood of that righteous man he not only acted the part of an assassin, but also acted the part of an offensive warrior. From that sad day the "voice of blood" has been sounding among the nations of earth, carrying sorrow and sadness to many a heart. . . . War is one of the greatest calamities that can befall a nation. It is the greatest demon that ever sported on the plains of hell, or exerted an influence among nations. . . . War appeals to the unsanctified passions of man for support. Its basis is the carnal mind—the culmination of ambition and revenge. History no where records a war based on christian sentiments—'love to God and man.' It is the nature of war to lay aside christian graces, kindness, humanity and love, and on the field of battle substitute revenge, hatred and malice. This has been clearly demonstrated on the sunny plains of the South during the year that is past; while some of the most shocking and unnatural crimes that ever entered into the human mind, have been committed in connection with war. In ancient history this is most strikingly illustrated. Innocent women and children were slain, dressed, and boiled in cauldrons, in order to strike a terror on the surrounding country, by making the people believe that the soldiers lived on human flesh. In Labaume's narrative of the campaign in Russia, we are presented with some of the most horrible details of sorrow and suffering that it is possible for man to endure. No asylum was respected; one hospital containing 20,000 wounded Russians was needlessly set on fire; half burned wretches were seen crawling and screeching in the flames; and this was sport for the demon soldiers without, while the innocent were crying for death to end their agonies. Says Rocca in his memoirs of war in Spain, 'The habit of danger made us look upon death as one of the ordinary circumstances of life. The indifference manifested towards the wounded and dying amounts to irony.' Nothing is more frightful than the want of feeling which characterizes the French soldiery.' But we need not go far back in history to learn this, for some of us know from personal experience that the worst passions of men are cultivated, yes, triumph in the day of battle. The morals of the camp are far below the precepts Christ taught in his Sermon on the Mount. How very soon do our young men learn to swear like pirates and blaspheme like demons. Does a man fear God and love his Savior? Is he honest, sober, chaste and upright in his deportment? Has he a tender conscience, a nice sense of religion, and a keen appetite for the Bible? That man has two battles to fight at once. Occasionally we have a general who has 'Christ in his heart,' a praying captain and a devoted soldier; but this is the exception and not the rule. The voice of war is, 'the worse the man the better the soldier.' War tramples all heavenly injunctions under its bloody feet. It strikes into darkness all that is 'lovely and of good report,' and sends death, grim and horrid, over armies and nations."

"Can we, by any show of reasoning, be said to love our enemies, and yet join in shooting them down by hundreds? Our citizenship is said to be in heaven; can we then take part in contests for the support of an earthly government? It is to me a matter of much sorrow that so few ministers can be found, in these times, that are not involved in the spirit of war that fills our country. The ministers of the 'Prince of Peace' are found, on all sides, ready to offer their aid in the service of the god of war."

Daily observation more and more confirms the position that war in all its aspects is unchristian, and results only in evil. But few remain long in the army without being ruined morally and physically.

To us, nothing seems more opposed to the principles of a free government, as ours is said to be, than to attempt to force a christian man to go and help slaughter his fellow beings whom his Savior has taught him to love. Yet it is stranger still to hear the professed ministers of the Prince of peace urging his followers to engage in the bloody strife. What strange times are these! May the Lord help us all to keep free from the spirit of murder, and to stand waiting for the return of the blessed Redeemer.

IT MAY BE SO.

The following from the Boston Investigator contains a remark worthy of consideration. Every minister should inquire, Am I in that class who would "not be very glad to see him?" The Investigator says:—

"Perhaps some of our readers are not aware of the object to which The World's Crisis is devoted. It is a Second Advent publication, and its chief purpose seems to be to prove that Christ is soon to come and reign on the earth. Where he is to reside when he gets here, is not stated; but if he has no more to do with priests than he had when he was on earth before, they will not be very glad to see him."

As "to where he is to reside when he gets here," we would say to the Investigator, we think the Scriptures most plainly teach that Mt. Zion shall be his habitation, when it is restored to its Eden state, and crowned by the New Jerusalem,—the city of the Great King. Then we shall have a Prince of Peace, reigning in righteousness; and till that glad day comes, evil men and seducers will "wax worse and worse, deceiving and being deceived."

A NEW WORK.

"HOME THRUSTS," OR "MUCH IN LITTLE—LITTLE IN MUCH."

"HOME THRUSTS," says an eminent and forcible writer, "are what we need, must have—things practical, pointed—the flint, the fire, the hammer, the holy unction, Sinai's crash, the lightning's flash; fire on fire: Household preaching, things that cut to the quick! 'sharper than any two-edged sword,' that tell on the conscience 'Thou art the man!' 'Small bullets do great execution,' an article pithily expressed, full of faith and the Holy Spirit, is often quoted from one end of the land to the other, and becomes a sword for millions."

THIS Volume of nearly 400 pages is an epitome or synopsis of some seventeen years of Editorial labor; containing the best, choicest—the most pointed, life-giving, soul-cheering, reformatory articles inserted in THE GOLDEN RULE, and other Periodicals, during the space of seventeen years. These articles on various subjects of light, life and salvation, have been revised, many of them re-written, put anew into the Gospel crucible, and in a condensed form, giving merely the cream, the marrow, the soul, the life, the power, the essential parts of the whole, in as small a compass as practicable.

In addition to the foregoing is "THE FAMILY CIRCLE," a goodly number of recently written, original articles, on the subject of Parental Discipline, the duties of husbands and wives, parents and children, ministers and people;—Education in its various branches, courtesy, politeness of manners, temperance in all things, health of body, mind, and soul; "holiness to the Lord"; modesty, purity of thought, word, and action.

"The family is a little book,
The children are the leaves,
The parents are the cover, that
Protecting beauty gives"

The Bible will be the text book. "To the law and the testimony, if they speak not according to this word it is because there is no light in them."—Isa. 8: 20.

Bro. Newton is one of the living christians of these last days. If you wish to get a book worth five times the cost of it, send for "Home Thrusts."—Ed.

"THE POPE AND THE CONGRESS."

It is evidently the aim of Napoleon III. to have the Pope attend the proposed conference of the nations, at Paris, and then be crowned, making it the most important and imposing conference ever held in the world. Events are beginning to assume great proportions, thereby indicating greater changes at hand. To the student of prophecy all seems plain. We are almost to the great day of the Lord. Now is the time for heart work, and a thorough inspection of all our motives and principles to see if we are doing all to the Lord. We should be in a state of preparation to meet the Bridegroom; while the world is preparing for WAR.

We clip the following from the Catholic of Jan. 2nd, 1864:—

"THE POPE AND THE CONGRESS.—From certain expressions which fell from the Holy Father to-day, at an audience afforded to a gentleman of my acquaintance, it seems most probable that he will accept the invitation to preside at the expected Congress, the more so as guarantees have been offered as to the exclusion of all matters calculated to offend the dignity or wound the susceptibilities of the Vicar of Christ. . . . Moreover, by agreeing to preside, he will do away with the objection already raised by the enemies of the Holy See that the common Father of the Faithful refused to sanction by his presence an Assembly of Sovereigns convened for the purpose of avoiding the evils of a European war. The moral effect of the visit of the Holy Father to Paris cannot, it seems to me, be over-estimated. Enthroned for the time in the Tuileries, his presence will be an occasion of rallying for the friends of religion, and a salutary pressure cannot fail to be exerted on the councils of the forthcoming Congress, and I may add, on the future policy of the Emperor.

Notwithstanding the Renans, the Dumases, et hoc genus omne, who by their scepticism and impious writings bring discredit on the literature of that country, France is a great Catholic nation, and the French here say that in the event of his going, Pius IX. will be borne from Marseilles to Paris on the shoulders of the people. No doubt an unprecedented amount of enthusiasm would be manifested on the occasion, and the journey of the Holy Father would be an extraordinary and triumphant ovation."

For the World's Crisis.

ENGLISH SENTIMENT,

Not about the war, but about books and theology. I have lately received a letter from the Rev. Edward White, of London, known to some people in this country by his "Life in Christ," and who is now editor of the Christian Spectator. At the risk of some praise of my own doings, I venture the following extracts:—

"I received and read your small work (Christ our Life) with great interest. It is a capital introduction to the subject."

"Have lost no opportunity of referring to the book (Debt and Grace) in suitable terms when I can in the Christian Spectator. Its name and quality are at least known among the Dissenters; but in England I don't think one in a thousand really cares what becomes of mankind at the last judgment. The speculative power seems quite dead on such topics among the orthodox; and as for the heretics, they are all Universalists, and reckon such notions as ours very foolish."

"In England the controversies that excite interest are fundamental, and relate to the authority of Scripture. What the Bible really teaches seems to be a secondary concern."

"I can judge of the alteration of English opinion only by my own position, who am a sort of barometer. When I came to London twelve years ago, I was a marked man—rather feared, and much avoided. I am now living on equal terms with all my neighbor ministers, admitted to their pulpits, and their people read my magazine freely. This looks as if they were not so shocked as they once were. In fact all tell me that our witnessing has taken effect at least in removing violent prejudice and in bringing popular language nearer to the Scripture."

"Those who have read your book all agree with me that it is one of the very best we have received on any theological subject from the United States, and is a model of learning, fairness, and sagacity."

"H. W. Beecher's visit has done good," etc. C. F. H.

For the World's Crisis.

"THE CHRISTIAN LIFE."

The project of this monthly is abandoned, at least for a year. It is not one on which I had really set my heart—indeed it is n't well to set one's heart on any thing but Christ. But I should have been very willing to undertake it on fair encouragement. A good first number might bring three or four times as many names as any other advertisement. But three or four times forty-five names—the number now obtained—is no guarantee of a support. Happily I have nothing to tempt me into a pecuniary adventure, though I have very much to be thankful for in generous favors from various friends. If all in debt could be advised to stay out of it so gently, the world would be quite millennial. I only hope I shall deserve to stay out of debt, by help of grace.

A very few persons have paid for the magazine. Their money will be refunded, or used as they may direct. I should also thank some friends for the efforts they have made, and for offers of future aid. And to all I may say that though they may not see such a "Christian Life" as I have proposed in print, the practice of it, God helping, lies in the power of each and all. C. F. H.

THE RIGHT SPIRIT.

One of our most earnest and successful laborers,—Bro. C. B. Turner, of the Empire State,—closes up the old year very appropriately with eight new subscribers, and the following note:—

"This makes, in all, since the first day of January last, fifty-four subscribers. Hope, with the new year, to commence a more vigorous prosecution of the war."

That's it. Just what we want. A more vigorous prosecution of the war! Let it ring through all our ranks, from one end of the Lord's army to the other,—A MORE VIGOROUS PROSECUTION OF THE WAR! The fight is a good one, and the reward glorious. Who will enlist, and do valiant service the coming year? W. B. H.

OMITTED.—In our list of brethren and sisters who obtained subscribers in 1863, the name of Sr. N. M. Henry was overlooked. She sent us eight subscribers in the year. Any other omission that may be discovered will be cheerfully rectified. W. B. H.

For the World's Crisis.

GOODNESS OF GOD.

Dear reader, have you ever meditated upon the power, wisdom and goodness of God, and wisely upon the signs of the times? If you have not, I would invite your attention to the book of nature, and the volume of inspiration for your consideration and instruction. They both teach us that there is a God who hath created the heavens and the earth, who ruleth and governeth all things therein. He hath created the angels above ministering spirits to do his will, and also man upon earth (the noblest part of creation) to serve him; the beasts of the field, and the animals that range the forest; the birds that fly in the air, the fishes that swim in the sea, the trees that flourish, and the flowers that bud and blossom beneath the sun for his honor and glory.

On him we are all dependent for life and every breath we draw. And as we are informed by divine revelation, he is a God of love. But notwithstanding his love and goodness to man, he often afflicts us with pain and anguish for our sins. Our follies are numerous, and we are sure to bring upon ourselves trouble. But thanks to the Giver of all good, amid all the scenes of earth which cause the heart to weep and the breast to heave with anguish, we may find a safe refuge and a sure fountain of peace in him.

God has revealed himself to us a kind and indulgent Father, whose wisdom never errs, whose goodness never fails, and though He causes grief for a season, "Yet will He have compassion according to the multitude of his mercies," which are as universal as his power, and as lasting as his existence. To him we are invited to look for our safety and support. "Look unto me" (saith the sacred volume) "and be ye saved, all the ends of the earth, for I am God and there is none else." Then let the wayward and rebellious heed the call, and turn from all their evil pursuits and raise their thoughts and affections from earth to the realms of bliss, from whence the waters of life flow that fill the soul with peace and gladness.

As christians, let us never despair, though the dark clouds of adversity and bloodshed hang over us, and the waves of affliction dash in upon us. Let not the blessed truth ever depart from us, that God who is almighty in power, infinite in wisdom, perfect in goodness, holy in justice, doeth all his will and pleasure, both in the armies of heaven and among the inhabitants of earth, and hath not left us without the glad assurance that he will not cast off forever, because his compassion faileth not. Would that these glorious truths of divine revelation might ever be had in view and with their full weight sink deep into the hearts of men. Then the bitter streams of sorrow would cease to flow, and the despairing cries of the fearful would be changed into cheerfulness, gratitude and praise; and universal resignation, joy and peace would change the kingdom of this world into the kingdom of our blessed Lord and Savior. Then all wars and commotions would cease to invade the earth, and all would be at peace; and its excellence would "cover the earth as the water fill the sea."

A few words upon the signs of the times. There has been much said upon the darkening of the sun, and the moon's not giving her light, and the stars falling from heaven, etc. I dare not say but those have been omens of what is to follow; but be this as it may, it appears that God now is doing a great work upon the earth; that he is about to cleanse his sanctuary. He has suffered our enemies to rush in upon us with great slaughter, blood and carnage. Such a war as we have now upon us has never been known in any nation, to my knowledge. All this cannot take place without an emblem of some future reciprocation. It appears as near as I can discern that God is about to give his children a new earth, wherein dwelleth righteousness. For we can see by the signs of the times, that the kings and queens of the earth have fallen, and lie under the cloud of darkness; and the stars—the great men—even among ourselves, have fallen so low that they have seceded from one of the best governments in the world, wherein they have had their greatest enjoyments and happiness.

Our sins as individuals and as a nation, have been odious in the sight of God, therefore we should not think it strange if he is now visiting us in judgment,—that he is preparing the way for the coming of Christ. It appears that the day of his wrath is now upon us, "and who shall be able to stand?" He that is serving God and looking for the Redeemer, who is able to lift us far above this terrible conflagration, and at length in his own time give us a new world wherein dwelleth righteousness, that never shall be removed.

Dear reader, is it not high time that we have our lamps trimmed and burning, that we may meet the Bridegroom in peace whenever he shall come,—that we may enter in through the gates into the city, to the royal marriage feast of the Lamb? J. ELKINS.

Fisherville, N. H.

For the World's Crisis.

REPORT

OF THE MAINE SECOND ADVENT MINISTERIAL CONFERENCE.

Friday, Jan. 1st. Met according to appointment at ten o'clock, A. M. Held an informal session. Met for business at 2 o'clock. Meeting opened by prayer. Eld. L. L. Howard was chosen Moderator, and Eld. C. H. Leverton Secretary. Listened to remarks by the Chair, and others, respecting the object for which the conference was called.

Moved, That the Chair appoint a committee of three, to report business to come before the conference. Carried. Brn. N. G. Reed, I. R. Hall and F. A. Baker were appointed.

The committee reported the following matters to be considered:

1. That the Second Advent ministers of the State of Maine form themselves into a body, who shall look after each other's interest in a scriptural manner.

2. That the manner of forming this body be open for investigation.

The first was adopted. The second item was tabled, to be taken up on the morrow.

Moved, That the Chair appoint a committee of three to investigate the matter of church government, as taught in the N. T. Brn. I. Damman, R. R. York and I. R. Hall were appointed.

Adjourned till Saturday, 9 o'clock A. M.

Friday evening, we listened to a profitable discourse delivered with much earnestness by Bro. F. A. Baker. Text, Luke 21: 34.

Saturday, 9 o'clock A. M. Assembled for business. The report of the committee upon church government being called for, was read, which was as follows:

A church is a company of believers in Christ, united in the order of the gospel.

The order of the gospel we understand to be as follows:

The Officers of the church are Bishops or Elders, and Deacons.

Bishops or Elders are those called of God to preach the gospel, set apart by laying on of hands; and are to feed the flock of God, and take the general oversight thereof. The qualifications necessary for such are described in 1 Tim. 3: 1–7; Titus 1: 5–9; and other passages.

Deacons are those in the church who are set apart by the laying on of hands, for the work of attending to the temporal interests of the church. Compare Acts 6: 1–6; Phil. 1: 1; and 1 Tim. 3: 8, 10, 12.

Church discipline should be attended to according to the rule laid down by the Savior, in Matt. 18: 15–17, and Luke 17: 3, 4. Also by the apostle in 1 Cor. 5: 2, and 2 Thess. 3: 6, with other scriptures.

The committee's report was adopted.

Moved, That we recommend to all the churches of our faith to organize and discipline according to the conclusions of the committee upon church government, as above named. Carried.

Moved, That we take from the table the item relating to the manner of forming ourselves into a body, etc. Carried.

Moved, That we who are here assembled organize as a Ministerial Conference, by choice of President and Secretary; said conference to meet once a year, or more, to transact business for the interest of the church and ministry, and to be named The Maine Second Advent Ministerial Conference. Carried.

Moved, That the present Secretary and President stand for the ensuing year. Carried.

Moved, That Brn. L. L. Howard, I. C. Wellcome and R. R. York be chosen as a committee of said conference, to be empowered to give Letters of Commendation to those whom their body shall advise. And also to recommend to the conference such ministers as they may deem proper. Carried.

Moved, That the ministers forming this body have their names recorded by the Secretary. Carried.

Names.—L. L. Howard, C. H. Leverton, Israel Damman, D. M. Hanscomb, Nicholas G. Reed, Fred. A. Baker, John Morrill, John R. Hall, Jeremiah Carr, R. R. York, Wm. H. Mitchell, I. C. Wellcome, John Wheeler.

Moved, That Brn. N. G. Reed and I. Damman have each a letter of commendation.—Carried.

Moved, That the Eastern Quarterly Conference retain for the present the name formerly assigned it—Maine Eastern Quarterly Conference. Carried.

Moved, That a report of this conference be sent to the Crisis for publication. Carried.

Moved, That we adjourn this conference, to meet with the Maine Annual Conference of the present year. Carried.

Saturday evening, met to hear the word of God. Bro. L. L. Howard interested us for a time, by speaking from Rev. 22: 14.

Sabbath, A. M. Convened at half-past ten. Listened again to a discourse by Bro. L. L. Howard. Text,—Matt. 24: 30. Bro. H. preached the truth with his usual earnestness. P. M. Bro. Baker addressed us. Text, 1 John 3: 3. The church was much edified. After preaching, a number of testimonies were given. The Spirit was present in much power. In the evening we had another glorious meeting. Bro. Mitchell presented for our consideration Rev. 16: 15. Much important truth was advanced in an interesting manner. The discourse was followed by a number of warm exhortations.

The evening closed this very profitable conference. Union with Christ and each other seemed to be the predominating desire of each. And in our business transactions, although all could not see alike on all points, yet a spirit of forbearance was manifested throughout. May this meeting redound to the glory of God, and tend to promote the interests of the church.

L. L. HOWARD, President.
C. H. LEVERTON, Secretary.

For the World's Crisis.

AT HOME AGAIN.

BRO. GRANT:—By the blessing of God, I have been enabled to return home to my family once more, after an absence of three weeks. I have been trying to comfort the church. The Lord has helped me to declare his word. Brethren have been comforted, sinners convicted of the truth.

When I see a world lying in wickedness, men hasting to the judgment, and that day so near, my heart is stirred within me, and I am compelled to leave my dear family, and hasten on from place to place, as the Master directs, to declare the counsel of God, and to lift up my voice in warning to a guilty world, pointing them to the slain Lamb of God, who can give them eternal life. Precious boon! to be with God forever, to bask in the sunshine of his eternal glory. O Lord! what wilt thou have thy servant to do, that he may be sure of an entrance through the gates into the city of our God?

My faith is strong in God. My soul is striving for glory. "There remaineth a rest for the people of God"; how sweet the thought to the tried and tempest-tossed soul. It cheers the christian heart, and he is enabled to bear the toils of life with patience, waiting for the great day to come that will usher in that rest.

Brn., let us endure hardships as good soldiers, fight the fight of faith, and lay hold upon the promises of God, for it is he that endureth unto the end that is to be saved. Pray for me, that I may be faithful to my mission, and be found giving meat to the household of faith when the Master comes. I must be there, let it cost what it will. Thy Bro., loving and waiting for the coming of Jesus. GEO. A. STREETER.

Athol, Mass., Nov. 21st, 1863.

For the World's Crisis.

CONFERENCE REPORT.

The Christian Quarterly Conference met at Frankfort Mills, Waldo Co., Me., Thursday, Dec. 24th, 1863. Preaching at 6 o'clock P. M. by Bro. Israel Damman. Text, John 8: 46.

Met Friday morn, at 9 o'clock, for prayer and conference. Preaching at 10 o'clock by Bro. C. H. Leverton, from Rev. 22: 12. Met at 2 o'clock P. M. Preaching by Bro. I. Damman, from Luke 21: 36. Also at 6—sermon by Bro. N. G. Reed. Text, Matt. 24: 34.

Saturday morning, 9 o'clock. Conference business.

1st. Elected Bro. Israel Damman, Chairman.

2nd. Bro. Moses Young, Clerk.

3d. Voted we refer the boundaries and name of this conference to the ministerial conference to be held at Augusta, Jan. 1st, 1864.

4th. Voted we take the Scriptures of the New Testament as our rule of faith and practice; and as to discipline, it be referred to the conference before mentioned, to report as soon as circumstances permit.

Sermon at two o'clock by Bro. I. Damman, from 1 Tim. 6: 11.

Saturday Eve, 6 o'clock, preaching by Bro. C. H. Leverton. Text, Micah 4: 8.

Sabbath Morn, 9 o'clock. Prayer and conference. Preaching at 10 o'clock by Bro. N. G. Reed. Text, Amos 3: 7. At 2 o'clock, sermon by Bro. Damman, from Luke 23: 43. At 6 o'clok, preaching by Bro. Leverton, from Heb. 4: 9.

Good attention and the best of order prevailed during the meeting. Nothing more manifest in preachers and hearers than the honor and glory of God. Each of the preachers exhibited a zeal and deep feeling worthy their calling. Union and harmony controlled every exhibition of the meeting.

In addition to the preachers before named who attended the meeting, were Bro. Morrill of Newbury, and Bro. Baker of Frankfort Mills. The brethren with whom Bro. Baker labors express great regard toward him.

Bro. C. H. Leverton reports success in various towns, vis: Burlington, Lincoln, Lee, and other towns in which he has been laboring during the past season; that many have been converted; that the preaching of the Second Advent faith is well received; that a

For the World's Crisis.

CHRISTIAN FRIENDSHIPS.

We are human. That great fact is full of meaning. I cannot make the statement without hearing hearts beat, and feeling the warm breath of humanity on my cheek. It suggests to one the idea of a great surging ocean, on which are innumerable barks guided by a strong hand, or driven about by the waves, or stranded all along its shores; and, as it ebbs, the blackened hulls overgrown with weeds and corals appear here and there to show where some mariner went down, some poor, human soul; and it flows again, and leaves no trace of the poor wrecked one.

We are human, and in the midst of all this surging life, these billows, and deeps between them, where men go up into the sunshine and down into the shadows, our humanity needs an answering nature to help it in the midst of the watery billows. This is just as true of christians as of others; and it may be more so. Our Father recognized this fact when he sent Jesus into the world. O! how that dear name suggests a melting, tender, human heart; one that knew what trials, what weariness, what tears mean. Jesus' nature on earth was warm with human feeling, and by this simple plan God has taught us that when in the flesh, while mortal, we need human hands to help us, human hearts to feel for us, and human prayers to intercede for us. He has said, "My grace shall be sufficient for thee," and there is "grace" in all human helps, when that human is christianized.

God is himself almighty, but he does not display his almighty wisdom by directly stretching out his hands to help, so much as by meeting the needs of the christian's human heart by sending him one of "like passions" to lead him along. The angels have their mission; they are "all ministering spirits, sent forth to minister to those who shall be heirs of salvation"; and so christians have their ministries—human ministries. Their friendships are specially precious, specially valuable.

Do we need encouragements to believe? The great cloud of witnesses "who through faith subdued kingdoms, stopped the mouths of lions, escaped the edge of the sword, waxed valiant in fight, turned to flight the armies of the aliens, and wrought righteousness," were human; they were MEN.

Do we need encouragements to pray? "Elias was a man, subject to like passions as we are" (the sensibilities of humanity). He prayed, and God heard him. Are we in trouble? Some good christian soul, who has "borne the burden" of trial, is just the one to speak the consoling word.

Do we need reproof? Who can cut to the quick so tenderly as a brother christian? The apostle gave the direction that put the christian in his proper place as a human being, when he said, "Rejoice with those that do rejoice, and weep with those that weep."

Now as christianity gives all christians a common interest, which is a mutual interest and excites mutual friendship, it is easy to see and for such to feel the value of "christian friendship." They are bound together by the blessed ties because human blood has been shed, for the blood that flowed from the cross flowed warm from a human heart: so that the christian's relations are "blood relations," and his friendships spring from that, and are strengthened by their fitness for each other.

Every christian has his or her mission, however weak and useless poor little self may seem. We are all mortal, and as such cannot look on God; so he has put his Spirit into christian hearts, and told all to walk in love, and comfort one another. He does give us direct help, but it is a sort of help that humanity cannot give; and as christians can help each other so wonderfully, they learn to esteem the fellowship of the saints more highly than any other. They all know that the great secret of these friendships, of their power to comfort, is christian experience. Angels could never occupy this place, and Raphael's eloquence could never touch, comfort and cheer the heart like the christian's, because he never has tasted the bitterness of sin, nor the sweets of redeeming love; when a tear of sympathy from a fellow christian will by the reflection of the Sun of Righteousness span the sad-clouded soul with the bow of peace.

Christians are "chosen out of the world," and so are friends. They are separated from the world like those left by a ship on an island, and their common condition in this respect makes them appreciate each other. They are all bound to the same home. This friendship is of such a nature it makes the most it possibly can of those who are trying to go home. It does not bitterly chide, but tenderly admonishes, and shows by even that admonishing that it means to advance the brother or sister the most he or she possibly can. O! it is sweet to know that such a friendship is to be eternal; that these christians, "the excellent of the earth," "will meet around the throne," and with Jesus enjoy an unending friendship. L. C. McKINSTRY.

UNCLE SAM ON RELIGIOUS GAMBLING.

We rather think that all that kind of fashionable lottery-gambling, so much in vogue, to raise money at church-fairs, religious festivals, and other public gatherings, has at last been pretty effectually knocked on the head. Hereafter, if any of our "Sisters of Charity" desire to sell, by lottery, either a doll-baby, a loaf of plum cake, or a "picture by one of the old masters," to raise money for a church, or an orphan asylum, or any other benevolent object, they must first take out a license and pay a thousand dollars for the privilege of this sort of gambling. And if said sisters neglect or refuse to take out such license as aforesaid, they will be liable to a little smart-money in the shape of a penalty of three times the amount of the license, viz., three thousand dollars. Heretofore, there has been a vast amount of conscience-dodging in such matters. Now, all archbishops who carry the keys of Saint Peter, ministers of the "regular succession"—in the "direct line from Saint Paul"—Puritan descendants of John Knox and President Edwards, blameless and circumspect elders and deacons, and the whole rank and file of zealous strategic, male and female religious financiers, will please take notice that, while Uncle Sam don't say—mind you—that lottery-gambling, even to fill the treasury of the Lord, is proper business for you or anybody else to engage in, yet, if you will do it, you must pay roundly for it. Here is the law. Read it:

"Lottery-ticket dealers shall pay one thousand dollars for each license. Every person, association, firm or corporation, who shall make, sell, or offer to sell, lottery-tickets or fractional parts thereof, or any token, certificate or device, representing or intended to represent a lottery-ticket, or any fractional part thereof, or any policy of numbers, in any lottery, or shall manage any lottery, or prepare schemes of lotteries, or superintend the drawing of any lottery, shall be deemed a lottery-ticket dealer under this act.—Independent.

The World's Crisis
AND SECOND ADVENT MESSENGER.

Boston, Tuesday, January 12, 1864.

WAR MEETINGS.

At the present time, war meetings take the lead, as of first importance. It seems as though people thought that enlisting in the army was almost equivalent to becoming a soldier of Christ; that, at least, it is an important step towards salvation. If the ministers of the day would make as earnest efforts to win souls to Christ, as to get them to join the army, we think a goodly number would be converted. It is alarming, indeed, to see how fast the mass of church members are conforming to the spirit and manners of the world. Every year makes a great change. Unless the current is stayed soon, terrible results must follow. People have already lost nearly all respect and reverence for nominal christianity, on account of its great abuse by its professed supporters. They look upon the whole as a system of priestcraft and partyism, and see no cause for changing their course of life in order to be saved, provided the majority of church members are on the safe side. The church and world now mingle in common. The same scenes of amusement answer for both; and they stand side by side in the bloody strife of these last days. O! that some power might awake them from their deadly slumbers, that they might see how near we are to the great day of the Lord, and make preparation for the event.

This state of things is one of the signs of the times. It seems certain that our Savior will soon appear to take those who "love his appearing."

We clip the following from the Boston Journal of Jan. 6th, 1864:—

"RECRUITING IN WORCESTER.—The citizens of Worcester, under the lead of their energetic Mayor, are making great exertions to raise the quota of troops required of them. War meetings have been of almost nightly occurrence for several weeks, and we learn from the Spy that meetings were held not only on Saturday afternoon and evening, but again on Sunday evening. Mechanics' Hall was crowded by an immense audience assembled to help forward the work of procuring volunteers. Hon. Charles Allen presided, and the united choirs of various churches in the city participated in the exercises. John B. Gough was among the speakers. Mayor Lincoln has issued a card calling upon the citizens to close their places of business daily at 3 o'clock until the 6th inst., and devote as much time as possible to raising recruits. About fifty men are needed to complete the city's quota."

Let us be as active to get the "quota" for the Lord's army. Let each one try to persuade at least one to be a christian soldier; to "put on the whole armor of God," and to fight the good fight of faith," that at last he may "lay hold on eternal life."

THE STATE OF EUROPE.

Europe is now in a very critical condition, and her affairs are continually becoming more complicated. The general impression is that a great war is inevitable, and will probably begin this year. All are making preparations upon a grand scale; and we have no doubt that when the onset comes, every thing in the line of war implements, whether for land or sea, will be called into active service. The one great business of the world, at the present time, is preparation for war,—one of the most terrible kind.

Says a Catholic paper of Jan. 2nd, 1864:—"Europe has been for a year on the brink of war, the shock of which cannot much longer be averted. Mutual diffidence between the great powers, has led to the maintaining by each of immense standing armies, at once a burden to their own, and a menace to neighboring peoples. Meanwhile the best tactician of the century, sitting at Paris, quietly bides his time. It is a Napoleonic 'idea' to have a settlement with each and every one of the powers that signed the act of Vienna. Austria and Russia have been humbled, the Bourbons that acted for France on that occasion, are persecuted whenever opportunity offers, the turn of Prussia and England has yet to come. Meanwhile eighteen hundred and sixty-four opens with several questions menacing war. The most pressing is that of Schleswig-Holstien, the most momentous the Polish, the most difficult, of immediate solution, to settle the Italian, the most lasting, the one which is the beginning and end of all European diplomacy, is also its Gordian knot, the Eastern. Europe has enough to do with her own troubles, without attempting in the proposed Congress, as a Paris paper suggests, to send for 'Presidents Lincoln and Davis,' to settle their little differences."

In the same paper,—The Catholic—next after what we have just quoted, we find the following:—

"Meanwhile, the church appointed of God to bring salvation to all men is quietly and successfully doing her work. She is everywhere extending her missions, adding new members to her fold, creating new institutions to meet new wants. The world witnessing new exhibitions of her undying energy, respects or fears her more and more every day. Protestantism is going the way of all her enemies, to final and utter dissolution; and soon she will be face to face alone with the latest production of darkness, modern infidelity."

Still she boasts, "I sit a queen, and am no widow, and shall see no sorrow."

A STORM COMING.

Some are beginning to wake up to a sense of the awful state of the things in the world, and to sound a note of alarm; while others cry out against all such as "croakers." It will soon be seen, we think, that the most ardent have had but a faint glimpse of the terrible storm now about to burst upon a wicked world. The muttering thunder of the approaching conflict is distinctly heard in the distance. It is sure to come, and those who are not hid in the "Rock of Ages," are in a most alarming condition. O that something might awake them before it shall be too late!

We clip the following from the Boston Journal of Jan. 4th, 1864:—

"EUROPE AND THE NEW YEAR.

A brief glance at the leading states of Europe will show that the new year does not open upon them much more auspiciously than upon us, even considering the matter from the peace point of view alone. England, which is giving us such affectionate sermons on the evils of war, now has no less than three wars on her hands, viz.: with New Zealand, Japan, and the hill tribes of India. If the two latter, which have just commenced, shall be distinguished by the obstinacy of the former, which is yet far from being finished; there is no foretelling the total draft which will be made for men and money during the coming year. But besides these contests on the outskirts of her dominions, the prospects of England at home are far from being pacific. She has just now, in the matter of the European Congress, for the first time since the Crimean war, broken decisively with the policy of Louis Napoleon, and the result remains to be seen. If any seeds of resentment are implanted in the mind of that inscrutable monarch, Europe is full of chances which may speedily give them growth and maturity, as we shall see in running over the existing and contingent troubles.

The principal safeguard against any such resentment on the part of France lies in her own insecure position. The decided and increasing opposition of the city of Paris—which, in the long run, is France—to the Emperor's administrative policy, is significant of serious developments hereafter. Whether the Emperor now yields to it, or resumes violent repressive efforts, his dynasty is equally endangered. The dilemma is quite as bad in the case of his Mexican policy, upon which profound dissatisfaction exists throughout France. The Polish insurrection is taxing all the powers of Russia, while success, which seems quite as far off as in our own war, is, unlike ours, running counter to the moral sentiment of the age. The Schleswig-Holstein dispute, which may at any moment be launched into bloodshed, threatens to involve Denmark and Sweden with all the lesser German States, even if Austria and Prussia are not dragged in, in which case no assignable limits could be set to the war. Austria, besides, is threatened with another struggle in Italy in the spring, where Garibaldi is impatiently waiting for the hour of action to strike. In addition to these sources of trouble, the question of the Danubian principalities, and the case of the 'sick man' of Turkey, are as far from settlement as ever. It is no wonder, in view of this situation, that every nation in Europe is arming at such a rate, that that cause alone threatens to bring, in time, a general condition of bankruptcy. Surely, the new year is not all bright on the other side of the water any more than on this."

DARK OMENS.

It should cause deep sadness in the hearts of the true disciple of Jesus, when he sees how many are departing from the faith in these last days. When professed ministers backslide from the Lord, it must be expected that many lay members will follow their example. "Like people, like priest." They say practically, we have tried the service of the Lord, and have become tired of it, and advise all others to give it up, and try to enjoy the pleasures of the world, buy and sell and get gain, for we know not what shall be hereafter.

Burleigh, the well known correspondent of the Boston Journal, says:—

"One notices in New York a large number of clergymen who are not employed in their profession—many of them once celebrated as Pastors, Professors and Doctors of Divinity—celebrities in their day and generation, but for some cause have left their charges or their chairs; many of them are unemployed, and earn a precarious living. Why they prefer to remain in and around New York in large numbers with only a scanty support at best, while the West is suffering for preachers and offers the inducement of a good living, is a mystery. But to my knowledge, repeated efforts have been made to start some of these gentlemen West without success. Many are in secular business, and while they write themselves 'Rev.' appear on platforms and sometimes in the pulpit, they drive a thriving trade among the speculators of the day. Bishops from different dioceses spend a good portion of the year in New York, and Doctors of Divinity can be seen daily in Wall street where the bulls and bears hold their fierce combat. The novel and light literature of the day, which the fathers would not have touched with a pair of tongs, emanate from clergymen or clergymen's families."

THE MORALITY OF WAR.

We clip the following sensible remarks on "the morality of war," from Zion's Herald. We are glad to know that some dare speak the truth on this subject. We hope to see more raised up who will be faithful in sounding the alarm. The writer says:—

"War is a barbarous institution. Its spirit was first seen when Cain raised his hand to slay his brother; for in spilling the blood of that righteous man he not only acted the part of an assassin, but also acted the part of an offensive warrior. From that sad day the "voice of blood" has been sounding among the nations of earth, carrying sorrow and sadness to many a heart. . . . War is one of the greatest calamities that can befall a nation. It is the greatest demon that ever sported on the plains of hell, or exerted an influence among nations. . . . War appeals to the unsanctified passions of man for support. Its basis is the carnal mind—the culmination of ambition and revenge. History no where records a war based on christian sentiments—'love to God and man.' It is the nature of war to lay aside christian graces, kindness, humanity and love, and on the field of battle substitute revenge, hatred and malice. This has been clearly demonstrated on the sunny plains of the South during the year that is past; while some of the most shocking and unnatural crimes that ever entered into the human mind, have been committed in connection with war. In ancient history this is most strikingly illustrated. Innocent women and children were slain, dressed, and boiled in cauldrons, in order to strike a terror on the surrounding country, by making the people believe that the soldiers lived on human flesh. In Labaume's narrative of the campaign in Russia, we are presented with some of the most horrible details of sorrow and suffering that it is possible for man to endure. No asylum was respected; one hospital containing 20,000 wounded Russians was needlessly set on fire; half burned wretches were seen crawling and screeching in the flames; and this was sport for the demon soldiers without, while the innocent were crying for death to end their agonies. Says Rocca in his memoirs of war in Spain, 'The habit of danger made us look upon death as one of the ordinary circumstances of life. The indifference manifested towards the wounded and dying amounts to irony. Nothing is more frightful than the want of feeling which characterizes the French soldiery.' But we need not go far back in history to learn this, for some of us know from personal experience that the worst passions of men are cultivated, yea, triumph in the day of battle. The morals of the camp are far below the precepts Christ taught in his Sermon on the Mount. How very soon do our young men learn to swear like pirates and blaspheme like demons. Does a man fear God and love his Savior? Is he honest, sober, chaste and upright in his deportment? Has he a tender conscience, a nice sense of religion, and a keen appetite for the Bible? That man has two battles to fight at once. Occasionally we have a general who has 'Christ in his heart,' a praying captain and a devoted soldier; but this is the exception and not the rule. The voice of war is, 'the worse the man the better the soldier.' War tramples all heavenly injunctions under its bloody feet. It strikes into darkness all that is 'lovely and of good report,' and sends death, grim and horrid, over armies and nations."

"Can we, by any show of reasoning, be said to love our enemies, and yet join in shooting them down by hundreds? Our citizenship is said to be in heaven; can we then take part in contests for the support of an earthly government? It is to me a matter of much sorrow that so few ministers can be found, in these times, that are not involved in the spirit of war that fills our country. The ministers of the 'Prince of Peace' are found, on all sides, ready to offer their aid in the service of the god of war."

Daily observation more and more confirms the position that war in all its aspects is unchristian, and results only in evil. But few remain long in the army without being ruined morally and physically.

To us, nothing seems more opposed to the principles of a free government, as ours is said to be, than to attempt to force a christian man to go and help slaughter his fellow beings whom his Savior has taught him to love. Yet it is stranger still to hear the professed ministers of the Prince of peace urging his followers to engage in the bloody strife. What strange times are these! May the Lord help us all to keep free from the spirit of murder, and to stand waiting for the return of the blessed Redeemer.

IT MAY BE SO.

The following from the Boston Investigator contains a remark worthy of consideration. Every minister should inquire, Am I in that class who would "not be very glad to see him?" The Investigator says:—

"Perhaps some of our readers are not aware of the object to which The World's Crisis is devoted. It is a Second Advent publication, and its chief purpose seems to be to prove that Christ is soon to come and reign on the earth. Where he is to reside when he gets here, is not stated; but if he has no more to do with priests than he had when he was on earth before, they will not be very glad to see him."

As "to where he is to reside when he gets here," we would say to the Investigator, we think the Scriptures most plainly teach that Mt Zion shall be his habitation, when it is restored to its Eden state, and crowned by the New Jerusalem,—the city of the Great King. Then we shall have a Prince of Peace, reigning in righteousness; and till that glad day comes, evil men and seducers will "wax worse and worse, deceiving and being deceived."

A NEW WORK.

"HOME THRUSTS," OR "MUCH IN LITTLE—LITTLE IN MUCH."

"HOME THRUSTS," says an eminent and forcible writer, "are what we need, must have—things practical, pointed—the flint, the fire, the hammer, the holy unction, Sinai's crash, the lightning's flash; fire on fire: Household preaching, things that cut to the quick! 'sharper than any two-edged sword,' that tell on the conscience 'Thou art the man!' 'Small bullets do great execution,' an article pithily expressed, full of faith and the Holy Spirit, is often quoted from one end of the land to the other, and becomes a sword for millions."

THIS Volume of nearly 400 pages is an epitome or synopsis of some seventeen years of Editorial labor; containing the best, choicest—the most pointed, life-giving, soul-cheering, reformatory articles inserted in THE GOLDEN RULE, and other Periodicals, during the space of seventeen years. These articles on various subjects of light, life and salvation, have been revised, many of them re-written, put anew into the Gospel crucible, and in a condensed form, giving merely the cream, the marrow, the soul, the life, the power, the essential parts of the whole, in as small a compass as practicable.

In addition to the foregoing is "THE FAMILY CIRCLE," a goodly number of recently written, original articles, on the subject of Parental Discipline, the duties of husbands and wives, parents and children, ministers and people;—Education in its various branches, courtesy, politeness of manners, temperance in all things, health of body, mind, and soul; "holiness to the Lord"; modesty, purity of thought, word, and action.

"The family is a little book,
The children are the leaves,
The parents are the cover, that
Protecting beauty gives."

The Bible will be the text book. "To the law and the testimony, if they speak not according to this word it is because there is no light in them."—ISA. 8: 20.

Bro. Newton is one of the living christians of these last days. If you wish to get a book worth five times the cost of it, send for "Home Thrusts."—Ed.

"THE POPE AND THE CONGRESS."

It is evidently the aim of Napoleon III. to have the Pope attend the proposed conference of the nations, at Paris, and then be crowned, making it the most important and imposing conference ever held in the world. Events are beginning to assume great proportions, thereby indicating greater changes at hand. To the student of prophecy all seems plain. We are almost to the great day of the Lord. Now is the time for heart work, and a thorough inspection of all our motives and principles to see if we are doing all to the Lord. We should be in a state of preparation to meet the Bridegroom; while the world is preparing for WAR.

We clip the following from the Catholic of Jan. 2nd, 1864:—

"THE POPE AND THE CONGRESS.—From certain expressions which fell from the Holy Father to-day, at an audience afforded to a gentleman of my acquaintance, it seems most probable that he will accept the invitation to preside at the expected Congress, the more so as guarantees have been offered as to the exclusion of all matters calculated to offend the dignity or wound the susceptibilities of the Vicar of Christ. . . . Moreover, by agreeing to preside, he will do away with the objection already raised by the enemies of the Holy See that the common Father of the Faithful refused to sanction by his presence an Assembly of Sovereigns convened for the purpose of avoiding the evils of a European war. The moral effect of the visit of the Holy Father to Paris cannot, it seems to me, be over-estimated. Enthroned for the time in the Tuileries, his presence will be an occasion of rallying for the friends of religion, and a salutary pressure cannot fail to be exerted on the councils of the forthcoming Congress, and I may add, on the future policy of the Emperor.

Notwithstanding the Renans, the Dumases, et hoc genus omne, who by their scepticism and impious writings bring discredit on the literature of that country, France is a great Catholic nation, and the French here say that in the event of his going, Pius IX. will be borne from Marseilles to Paris on the shoulders of the people. No doubt an unprecedented amount of enthusiasm would be manifested on the occasion, and the journey of the Holy Father would be an extraordinary and triumphant ovation."

For the World's Crisis.

ENGLISH SENTIMENT.

Not about the war, but about books and theology. I have lately received a letter from the Rev. Edward White, of London, known to some people in this country by his "Life in Christ," and who is now editor of the Christian Spectator. At the risk of some praise of my own doings, I venture the following extracts:—

"I received and read your small work (Christ our Life) with great interest. It is a capital introduction to the subject."

"Have lost no opportunity of referring to the book (Debt and Grace) in suitable terms when I can in the Christian Spectator. Its name and quality are at least known among the Dissenters; but in England I don't think one in a thousand really cares what becomes of mankind at the last judgment. The speculative power seems quite dead on such topics among the orthodox; and as for the heretics, they are all Universalists, and reckon such notions as ours very foolish."

"In England the controversies that excite interest are fundamental, and relate to the authority of Scripture. What the Bible really teaches seems to be a secondary concern."

"I can judge of the alteration of English opinion only by my own position, who am a sort of barometer. When I came to London twelve years ago, I was a marked man—rather feared, and much avoided. I am now living on equal terms with all my neighbor ministers, admitted to their pulpits, and their people read my magazine freely. This looks as if they were not so shocked as they once were. In fact all tell me that our witnessing has taken effect at least in removing violent prejudice and in bringing popular language nearer to the Scripture."

"Those who have read your book all agree with me that it is one of the very best we have received on any theological subject from the United States, and is a model of learning, fairness, and sagacity."

"H. W. Beecher's visit has done good," etc. C. F. H.

For the World's Crisis.

"THE CHRISTIAN LIFE."

The project of this monthly is abandoned, at least for a year. It is not one on which I had really set my heart—indeed it isn't well to set one's heart on any thing but Christ. But I should have been very willing to undertake it on fair encouragement. A good first number might bring three or four times as many names as any other advertisement. But three or four times forty-five names—the number now obtained—is no guarantee of a support. Happily I have nothing to tempt me into a pecuniary adventure, though I have very much to be thankful for in generous favors from various friends. If all in debt could be advised to stay out of it so gently, the world would be quite millennial. I only hope I shall deserve to stay out of debt, by help of grace.

A very few persons have paid for the magazine. Their money will be refunded, or used as they may direct. I should also thank some friends for the efforts they have made, and for offers of future aid. And to all I may say that though they may not see such a "Christian Life" as I have proposed in print, the practice of it, God helping, lies in the power of each and all. C. F. H.

THE RIGHT SPIRIT.

One of our most earnest and successful laborers,—Bro. C. B. Turner, of the Empire State,—closes up the old year very appropriately with eight new subscribers, and the following note:—

"This makes, in all, since the first day of January last, fifty-four subscribers. Hope, with the new year, to commence a more vigorous prosecution of the war."

That's it. Just what we want. A more vigorous prosecution of the war! Let it ring through all our ranks, from one end of the Lord's army to the other,—A MORE VIGOROUS PROSECUTION OF THE WAR! The fight is a good one, and the reward glorious. Who will enlist, and do valiant service the coming year? W. B. H.

OMITTED.—In our list of brethren and sisters who obtained subscribers in 1863, the name of Sr. N. M. Henry was overlooked. She sent us eight subscribers in the year. Any other omission that may be discovered will be cheerfully rectified. W. B. H.

For the World's Crisis.

GOODNESS OF GOD.

Dear reader, have you ever meditated upon the power, wisdom and goodness of God, and wisely upon the signs of the times? If you have not, I would invite your attention to the book of nature, and the volume of inspiration for your consideration and instruction. They both teach us that there is a God who hath created the heavens and the earth, who ruleth and governeth all things therein. He hath created the angels above ministering spirits to do his will, and also man upon earth (the noblest part of creation) to serve him; the beasts of the field, and the animals that range the forest; the birds that fly in the air, the fishes that swim in the sea, the trees that flourish, and the flowers that bud and blossom beneath the sun for his honor and glory.

On him we are all dependent for life and every breath we draw. And as we are informed by divine revelation, he is a God of love. But notwithstanding his love and goodness to man, he often afflicts us with pain and anguish for our sins. Our follies are numerous, and we are sure to bring upon ourselves trouble. But thanks to the Giver of all good, amid all the scenes of earth which cause the heart to weep and the breast to heave with anguish, we may find a safe refuge and a sure fountain of peace in him.

God has revealed himself to us a kind and indulgent Father, whose wisdom never errs, whose goodness never fails, and though He causes grief for a season, "Yet will He have compassion according to the multitude of his mercies," which are as universal as his power, and as lasting as his existence. To him we are invited to look for our safety and support. "Look unto me" (saith the sacred volume) "and be ye saved, all the ends of the earth, for I am God and there is none else." Then let the wayward and rebellious heed the call, and turn from all their evil pursuits and raise their thoughts and affections from earth to the realms of bliss, from whence the waters of life flow that fill the soul with peace and gladness.

As christians, let us never despair, though the dark clouds of adversity and bloodshed hang over us, and the waves of affliction dash in upon us. Let not the blessed truth ever depart from us, that God who is almighty in power, infinite in wisdom, perfect in goodness, holy in justice, doeth all his will and pleasure, both in the armies of heaven and among the inhabitants of earth, and hath not left us without the glad assurance that he will not cast off forever, because his compassion faileth not. Would that these glorious truths of divine revelation might ever be had in view and with their full weight sink deep into the hearts of men. Then the bitter streams of sorrow would cease to flow, and the despairing cries of the fearful would be changed into cheerfulness, gratitude and praise; and universal resignation, joy and peace would change the kingdom of this world into the kingdom of our blessed Lord and Savior. Then all wars and commotions would cease to invade the earth, and all would be at peace; and its excellence would "cover the earth as the water fill the sea."

A few words upon the signs of the times. There has been much said upon the darkening of the sun, and the moon's not giving her light, and the stars falling from heaven, etc. I dare not say but those have been omens of what is to follow; but be this as it may, it appears that God now is doing a great work upon the earth; that he is about to cleanse his sanctuary. He has suffered our enemies to rush in upon us with great slaughter, blood and carnage. Such a war as we have now upon us has never been known in any nation, to my knowledge. All this cannot take place without an emblem of some future reciprocation. It appears as near as I can discern that God is about to give his children a new earth, wherein dwelleth righteousness. For we can see by the signs of the times, that the kings and queens of the earth have fallen, and lie under the cloud of darkness; and the stars—the great men—even among ourselves, have fallen so low that they have seceded from one of the best governments in the world, wherein they have had their greatest enjoyments and happiness.

Our sins as individuals and as a nation, have been odious in the sight of God, therefore we should not think it strange if he is now visiting us in judgment,—that he is preparing the way for the coming of Christ. It appears that the day of his wrath is now upon us, "and who shall be able to stand?" He that is serving God and looking for the Redeemer, who is able to lift us far above this terrible conflagration, and at length in his own time give us a new world wherein dwelleth righteousness, that never shall be removed.

Dear reader, is it not high time that we have our lamps trimmed and burning, that we may meet the Bridegroom in peace whenever he shall come,—that we may enter in through the gates into the city, to the royal marriage feast of the Lamb? J. ELKINS.

Fisherville, N. H.

For the World's Crisis.

REPORT

OF THE MAINE SECOND ADVENT MINISTERIAL CONFERENCE.

Friday, Jan. 1st. Met according to appointment at ten o'clock, A. M. Held an informal session. Met for business at 2 o'clock. Meeting opened by prayer. Eld. L. L. Howard was chosen Moderator, and Eld. C. H. Leverton Secretary. Listened to remarks by the Chair, and others, respecting the object for which the conference was called.

Moved, That the Chair appoint a committee of three, to report business to come before the conference. Carried. Brn. N. G. Reed, I. R. Hall and F. A. Baker were appointed.

The committee reported the following matters to be considered:

1. That the Second Advent ministers of the State of Maine form themselves into a body, who shall look after each other's interest in a scriptural manner.

2. That the manner of forming this body be open for investigation.

The first was adopted. The second item was tabled, to be taken up on the morrow.

Moved, That the Chair appoint a committee of three to investigate the matter of church government, as taught in the N. T. Brn. I. Damman, R. R. York and I. R. Hall were appointed.

Adjourned till Saturday, 9 o'clock A. M.

Friday evening, we listened to a profitable discourse delivered with much earnestness by Bro. F. A. Baker. Text, Luke 21: 34.

Saturday, 9 o'clock A. M. Assembled for business. The report of the committee upon church government being called for, was read, which was as follows:

A church is a company of believers in Christ, united in the order of the gospel.

The order of the gospel we understand to be as follows:

The Officers of the church are Bishops or Elders, and Deacons.

Bishops or Elders are those called of God to preach the gospel, set apart by laying on of hands; and are to feed the flock of God, and take the general oversight thereof. The qualifications necessary for such are described in 1 Tim. 3: 1–7; Titus 1: 5–9; and other passages.

Deacons are those in the church who are set apart by the laying on of hands, for the work of attending to the temporal interests of the church. Compare Acts 6: 1–6; Phil. 1: 1; and 1 Tim. 3: 8, 10, 12.

Church discipline should be attended to according to the rule laid down by the Savior, in Matt. 18: 15–17, and Luke 17: 3, 4. Also by the apostle in 1 Cor. 5: 2, and 2 Thess. 3: 6, with other scriptures.

The committee's report was adopted.

Moved, That we recommend to all the churches of our faith to organize and discipline according to the conclusions of the committee upon church government, as above named. Carried.

Moved, That we take from the table the item relating to the manner of forming ourselves into a body, etc. Carried.

Moved, That we who are here assembled organize as a Ministerial Conference, by choice of President and Secretary; said conference to meet once a year, or more, to transact business for the interest of the church and ministry, and to be named The Maine Second Advent Ministerial Conference. Carried.

Moved, That the present Secretary and President stand for the ensuing year. Carried.

Moved, That Brn. L. L. Howard, I. C. Wellcome and R. R. York be chosen as a committee of said conference, to be empowered to give Letters of Commendation to those whom their body shall advise. And also to recommend to the conference such ministers as they may deem proper. Carried.

Moved, That the ministers forming this body have their names recorded by the Secretary. Carried.

Names.—L. L. Howard, C. H. Leverton, Israel Damman, D. M. Hanscomb, Nicholas G. Reed, Fred. A. Baker, John Morrill, John R. Hall, Jeremiah Carr, R. R. York, Wm. H. Mitchell, I. C. Wellcome, John Wheeler.

Moved, That Brn. N. G. Reed and I. Damman have each a letter of commendation.—Carried.

Moved, That the Eastern Quarterly Conference retain for the present the name formerly assigned it—Maine Eastern Quarterly Conference. Carried.

Moved, That a report of this conference be sent to the Crisis for publication. Carried.

Moved, That we adjourn this conference, to meet with the Maine Annual Conference of the present year. Carried.

Saturday evening, met to hear the word of God. Bro. L. L. Howard interested us for a time, by speaking from Rev. 22: 14.

Sabbath, A. M. Convened at half-past ten. Listened again to a discourse by Bro. L. L. Howard. Text,—Matt. 24: 30. Bro. H. preached the truth with his usual earnestness. P. M. Bro. Baker addressed us. Text, 1 John 3: 3. The church was much edified. After preaching, a number of testimonies were given. The Spirit was present in much power. In the evening we had another glorious meeting. Bro. Mitchell presented for our consideration Rev. 16: 15. Much important truth was advanced in an interesting manner. The discourse was followed by a number of warm exhortations.

The evening closed this very profitable conference. Union with Christ and each other seemed to be the predominating desire of each. And in our business transactions, although all could not see alike on all points, yet a spirit of forbearance was manifested throughout. May this meeting redound to the glory of God, and tend to promote the interests of the church.

L. L. HOWARD, President.
C. H. LEVERTON, Secretary.

For the World's Crisis.

AT HOME AGAIN.

BRO. GRANT:—By the blessing of God, I have been enabled to return home to my family once more, after an absence of three weeks. I have been trying to comfort the church. The Lord has helped me to declare his word. Brethren have been comforted, sinners convicted of the truth.

When I see a world lying in wickedness, men hasting to the judgment, and that day so near, my heart is stirred within me, and I am compelled to leave my dear family, and hasten on from place to place, as the Master directs, to declare the counsel of God, and to lift up my voice in warning to a guilty world, pointing them to the slain Lamb of God, who can give them eternal life. Precious boon! to be with God forever, to bask in the sunshine of his eternal glory. O Lord! what wilt thou have thy servant to do, that he may be sure of an entrance through the gates into the city of our God?

My faith is strong in God. My soul is striving for glory. "There remaineth a rest for the people of God"; how sweet the thought to the tried and tempest-tossed soul. It cheers the christian heart, and he is enabled to bear the toils of life with patience, waiting for the great day to come that will usher in that rest.

Brn., let us endure hardships as good soldiers, fight the fight of faith, and lay hold upon the promises of God, for it is he that endureth unto the end that is to be saved. Pray for me, that I may be faithful to my mission, and be found giving meat to the household of faith when the Master comes. I must be there, let it cost what it will. Thy Bro., loving and waiting for the coming of Jesus. GEO. A. STREETER.

Athol, Mass., Nov. 21st, 1863.

For the World's Crisis.

CONFERENCE REPORT.

The Christian Quarterly Conference met at Frankfort Mills, Waldo Co., Me., Thursday, Dec. 24th, 1863. Preaching at 6 o'clock P. M. by Bro. Israel Damman. Text, John 8: 46.

Met Friday morn, at 9 o'clock, for prayer and conference. Preaching at 10 o'clock by Bro. C. H. Leverton, from Rev. 22: 12. Met at 2 o'clock P. M. Preaching by Bro. I. Damman, from Luke 21: 36. Also at 6—sermon by Bro. N. G. Reed. Text, Matt. 24: 34.

Saturday morning, 9 o'clock. Conference business.

1st. Elected Bro. Israel Damman, Chairman.

2nd. Bro. Moses Young, Clerk.

3d. Voted we refer the boundaries and name of this conference to the ministerial conference to be held at Augusta, Jan. 1st, 1864.

4th. Voted we take the Scriptures of the New Testament as our rule of faith and practice; and as to discipline, it be referred to the conference before mentioned, to report as soon as circumstances permit.

Sermon at two o'clock by Bro. I. Damman, from 1 Tim. 6: 11.

Saturday Eve, 6 o'clock, preaching by Bro. C. H. Leverton. Text, Micah 4: 8.

Sabbath Morn, 9 o'clock. Prayer and conference. Preaching at 10 o'clock by Bro. N. G. Reed. Text, Amos 3: 7. At 2 o'clock, sermon by Bro. Damman, from Luke 23: 43. At 6 o'clok, preaching by Bro. Leverton, from Heb. 4: 9.

Good attention and the best of order prevailed during the meeting. Nothing more manifest in preachers and hearers than the honor and glory of God. Each of the preachers exhibited a zeal and deep feeling worthy their calling. Union and harmony controlled every exhibition of the meeting.

In addition to the preachers before named who attended the meeting, were Bro. Morrill of Newbury, and Bro. Baker of Frankfort Mills. The brethren with whom Bro. Baker labors express great regard toward him.

Bro. C. H. Leverton reports success in various towns, viz: Burlington, Lincoln, Lee, and other towns in which he has been laboring during the past season; that many have been converted; that the preaching of the Second Advent faith is well received; that a large field is open for labor in the north part of the State.

Bro. L. Damman reports encouragingly. Says we shall yet see reformation. Bro. N. G. Reed's record is good. "We are confident he is a faithful minister of Jesus Christ. Bro. J. Morrill presents a bold front in the cause of Jesus Christ. An honest minister of Jesus. With us the harvest is great, the laborers few. Pray God for us, to send more laborers into his vineyard.

Voted, the time and place of meeting for holding the next conference be left with the Chairman and Clerk. MOSES YOUNG.

For the World's Crisis.

THE RADICAL, OR TAP-ROOT.

Reader, did you ever observe in most vegetation that one root extends straight into the earth in the same manner as the stem or stalk or trunk does in the air? This is called the radical, or tap-root. It fixes the tree or plant firm in the ground. Were you to attempt to remove a plant that has been standing for some time, you would find this root clings with great strength, and penetrates to a greater or less depth as the height of the plant demands. The roots which spread either way may easily be cut, but unless the radical is cut the plant still remains. This is one reason why trees and plants must be transplanted when young.

What a beautiful illustration of our own character! In our natural condition we are like the tree that has not been transplanted.

Our heart has become fixed in sin and taken deep root. We require transplanting, that our nature may be changed into a better soil, where we may become a new creature, be born again.

The effort is made, and, as is the case with the tree, it is easy to cut the roots that spread out; that is, to abstain from many of our sins, and thus in a degree reform. But this is not conversion. There still remains something which is not uprooted, some one pleasure which seems too great a sacrifice for religion. This is generally the idol of our heart. There lies our tap-root, and hard indeed is the task to uproot it. Till this is accomplished vain is the conversion.

In Judas, covetousness might be termed his radical root. His love of money led him to betray his Master. Ananias and his wife serve as an illustration of this kind. They had reformed, but the radical root yet stood, and this withheld them from giving their whole hearts to God.

We need not go back to those times for examples, for often in this age do we see such. And have we not all felt a like powerful hold in our own hearts? Let us examine ourselves and see if there be any thing that has not been given up, any thing that we love better than Christ. He wants the whole heart. We must give this, that we may be placed in his garden to be watered and nourished by the Holy Spirit freely showered upon us, enabling us to bear fruit unto righteousness and gain an inheritance everlasting in the kingdom to come. M. B. REYNOLDS.

North Kingston, R. I.

Obituaries.

JULIA A. SCOTT.

Died at Vernon, Vt., Dec. 18th, 1863, Julia A. Scott, aged twenty-two years.

The subject of this notice gave her heart to the Lord at the early age of twelve, and has ever since been a meek and faithful follower of the Redeemer. Much of the time, for eight years past, she has been an invalid, and at times has suffered much. But she meekly, patiently, bore all her pain without a murmur. By her sweet and amiable disposition she twined around her existence the friendship and affection of all who became acquainted with her. Her last moments were peaceful and serene, unclouded by a doubt, unshadowed by a fear. The hour of death, long delayed, came at last, and like a soft zephyr of spring she passed from life into that dreamless sleep that knows no waking till the last trump shall call the saints from the dominion of the enemy. May the blessed assurance that she sleeps in Jesus comfort those who so deeply mourn her loss, and bind their hearts yet more strongly to Him who has promised to bring the saints with him, and join in a long and glad reunion all who love him. Words of consolation and hope were spoken by Eld. Bennet at the funeral, that brought a ray of sunlight from beyond the dark valley.

By request, the following lines were composed by the writer, and read at the close of the services:

We chant a dirge of sorrow
For thee, our Julia dear,
With mingled notes of sadness
Around thy lonely bier.

We gaze upon thy features,
In death so calm and still,
With thoughts of bitter anguish,
That parting scenes doth fill.

We weep, but not distrusting
The hand that laid thee low,
Will call thee from thy slumbers
When life's sweet morn shall glow.

Thy heart, so pure and lovely
Through all the years of pain,
Ne'er breathed a saddened murmur
To mock the ear again.

Thou'st passed from earth as fadeth
The shadow from the hills;
Sweet as the zephyr sigheth
When us its music thrills.

Now sweetly rest thee, Julia,
Free from all pain and care;
We'd not to earth recall thee,
Its grief and woe to share;

But fain would live each moment
To greet thee on a shore,
Where never death shall sunder,
Nor part the loved ones more.

Farewell then, dearest Julia,
Farewell till we shall meet
Around the throne forever,
To chant the triumph sweet.

Palmer, Mass. O. P. ALLEN.

GEORGE W. LAMBERT.

Died in Falmouth, Me., Nov. 29th, 1863, of quick consumption, Bro. George W. Lambert, aged twenty-seven years, nine months.

Our beloved Bro. George has fallen a victim to death. He has left a young companion and one child, with a large circle of friends, to mourn his departure. The church in Biddeford feel the loss of a faithful member and highly esteemed Bro., but we mourn not as those who have no hope, for we believe he is among those who died in faith, and sleep in Jesus, and that the Spirit that raised up Jesus dwelt in him, and will quicken him to life again.

Bro. Lambert was converted under the labors of Bro. George Champlain, in Biddeford, in 1859, and baptized by the same, and united with the Second Advent church in Biddeford at its organization. He was a devoted christian, and joyfully anticipated the advent of his Savior. He could not believe that death had marked him for its prey, but thought to the last that he should get well. He expressed a strong hope in Christ, and prayed when he had strength of mind. He was conscious to the last, and fell asleep suddenly, but easily, to awake no more till the last trump shall sound to call forth the sleeping millions from their cold, dusty beds. He rests in peace. A crown of life awaits him, and Jesus will come in a little while to give him a body like his glorious body, in the home prepared for the weary.

Bro. Lambert moved to his native place, Falmouth, three weeks previous to his death, where his funeral was attended by Bro. B. S. Emery, of Portland, Me. He comforted the afflicted ones with the hope of the resurrection from the dead.

Yes, the time is quickly passing,
Soon we'll hear the Savior's voice;
Then he'll bid the dead awaken,—
All his saints in him rejoice.

JULIA A. LIBBEY.

SAMUEL ORCUTT.

Died in Amherst, Me., Dec. 7th, 1863, Samuel Orcutt, aged 59 years, 9 months, 17 days.

Thus has a family circle been entered by the enemy Death, and a loved one taken from us, a husband and father laid in the cold grave to await the sound of the last trumpet that will awake all that sleep in Jesus to a newness of life. In his death not only his family but the entire community will suffer loss, for a good and faithful man has left us. He was respected by every one that knew him. All his business relations were honorable, and such as to leave behind him not only an enduring name for integrity and honest dealing, but an universal regret that he is gone. He has for many years been a believer in the Advent of Christ and all its kindred doctrines. But he was suddenly called away; only two hours after he was first attacked he was gone,—supposed to be a disease of the heart. He was not aware that his illness was serious until he was past speaking.

He has left a wife, four daughters, one son, (the son in the army) to mourn his departure. May we all be sustained by infinite grace, and be prepared for the coming of Christ, and to meet the loved one gone before. M. J. F.

BERTHA CELESTA WILKINS.

Bertha Celesta Wilkins, youngest daughter of Thomas and Mary A. Wilkins, of Dorchester, Mass., died of scarlet fever, Jan. 2nd, 1864, aged four years and fourteen days.

For a fifth time have our brother and sister been called to mourn the loss of a child,—four of them having died of scarlet fever. Bertha was a gleam of sunshine in the house, the pet of the whole loving family, and the friend of the transient pilgrims who turned aside to tarry with them for a night. Though young, she seemed to love the Savior, and she would comfort her mother under former bereavements with the hope of the resurrection and the coming of Jesus Christ.

Prof. Hudson was present at the funeral, and assisted the writer in ministering consolation to the afflicted family; and though the loss was severe and bitter, yet to the question, "Is it well with thee? Is it well with thy husband? Is it well with the child?" the answer I trust, came from the heart, "It is well." 2 Kings 4: 26. May God comfort the afflicted ones, and bring them to meet the loved and lost in the goodly land where there shall be no more death. H. L. HASTINGS.

NANCY BRYANT.

Died, Sept. 29th, 1863 Nancy Bryant, wife of Jonathan Bryant, aged sixty-four years and nine days.

Of her it may be truly said she was a pattern of piety through the severest trials. She united with the church about the year 1842, and has been a consistent christian since. Her children can but remember her good example, and though they weep for the loss of the tenderest of mothers, they know that when the Lord himself shall descend from heaven, with a shout, with the voice of the archangel, and with the trump of God, the dead in Christ shall rise first, and their mother will come forth with all the righteous to receive an inheritance which is incorruptible, undefiled, and that fadeth not away.

"Asleep in Jesus, blessed sleep!
From which none ever wake to weep."

ABBIE S. BRYANT.

CLARK HENRY BRYANT.

Died in Moultonborough, N. H., August 25th, 1863, of diphtheria, Clark Henry, only son of Henry M. and Abbie S. Bryant, aged three years, two months, and six days.

Clark was a remarkable child, and early evinced an uncommon degree of affection. He was one of the best as well as most beautiful little darlings it has been my lot to behold. But death loves a shining mark. How sweet the promise that death, and him that had the power of death, is soon to be destroyed.

"The light has gone out from our cottage home,
All joy from our hearts is fled;
We hear his light footsteps no more round the room,
For our sweet little darling is dead.
• • • • • • • •
O! winds, whisper softly above his new grave,
And pale stars your purest light shed,
Disturb not the rest of our precious one here,
But whisper soft notes o'er his head.

He's coming again from the enemy's land,
When Jesus descends from the skies,
To wake all the children who sleep in his name,
Then our sweet little one will arise."

ABBIE S. BRYANT.

CHARLES WEBSTER.

Died in East Poultney, Vt., Dec. 2d, 1863, of brain fever, Bro. Charles Webster, aged forty-six years.

Bro. W. was among "the poor of this world, rich in faith," having "a good report of them which are without."

"Hope made for him a pillow,
And Faith a garment rare,
To wrap him in his slumbers
Till Christ his home prepare."

He leaves a wife and five children to feel his loss. May God supply all their need. H. F. C.

SIMEON W. SHAW.

Died in Holderness, N. H., Nov. 24th, 1863, of typhoid fever, Simeon W. Shaw, aged forty-one years and nineteen days.

He was a firm believer in the speedy coming of Christ near at hand, and has left a wife and daughter, with a large circle of friends, to mourn his loss, he being the first out of nine brothers and sisters taken by the hand of the enemy. O when will cease his awful reign? WM. S. SHAW.

Summary of News.

FOREIGN.

GREAT BRITAIN.

Business was suspended from Dec. 24 to the 23th on account of the holidays.

The Army and Navy Gazette says the Messrs. Laird have refused several offers for their Mersey rams, declaring that they are not for sale.

It is understood that the U. S. Ministers at both London and Paris are making continued efforts to prevent the steamer Rappahannock leaving Calais for the high seas as a Confederate cruiser. The stores for the ship had reached Calais from England.

THE HOLSTIEN QUESTION.

At a meeting at Altona, in which thousands took part, Prince Frederick was formally proclaimed Duke of Holstein amid the greatest enthusiasm.

The town was subsequently illumined, and great crowds traversed the streets, singing the national song of Holstein. Order was maintained.

Telegraphic communication with Holstein was interrupted at noon of the 25th.

It was reported that the General commanding the Austrian troops in Hamburg had been recalled.

The Saxon troops entered Altona on the 24th ult. The Danes left as the Federal troops appeared.

The proclamation of the General Commissioners in Holstein, declares that they assume the administration of affairs without prejudice to the temporarily suspended rights of the Sovereign.

SPAIN.

A bill has been introduced in Congress fixing the strength of the Spanish army for 1864 at 100,000 men.

HUNGARY.

There are rumors of insurrectionary movements in Hungary, and Austria is taking precautions.

☞ It is asserted that England and Russia have begun to exercise pressure on Denmark in reference to the Holstein question; but that when General Fleury inquired of the Emperor of the French whether he was to act in concert with those Powers, he was ordered to leave Copenhagen immediately.

The following is the reply of the Emperor of the French to the Senate's address:

"Good is the sole motive power of my actions both at home and abroad. I desire the appeasing of passions with concord and union. I direct all my wishes to the moment when the great questions which divide governments and peoples will be pacifically solved by European abitrement. This wish was that of Napoleon, when he wrote from St. Helena that 'to fight in Europe is to make civil war.' May not this great thought, a utopia in the past, shortly become a reality? It is always an honor to proclaim a principle tending to remove the prejudices of another age. Let us unite our efforts for this noble end, and let us only study obstacles to vanquish them, and incredulity to confound it."

DOMESTIC.

Philadelphia, Jan. 7. The evening Bulletin has a Cincinnati dispatch, dated Cumberland, Md., 6th, which says an overwhelming force under Jones made a descent upon a small body of our troops stationed near Jonesville, Va., consisting of 280 men of an Illinois regiment, under Major Reeves, and 18 men of Weill's Ohio Battery, on Sunday last.

A desperate resistance was made by our troops, continuing from 7 A. M., until 3 P. M., when we were obliged to surrender. The attacking force numbered about 4000 men. The force captured were guarding a county which was our main reliance for forage.

New York, Jan. 7. Recent St. Louis papers state that Capt. Pizard, formerly a post captain in the naval service of France, has been in St. Louis for several days past. He went to the West, it is supposed, on an important mission for his government. He represents that it is no less than examining into the practicability and means of supplying the Emperor Napoleon's forces in Mexico with commissariat necessities via the Mississippi river.

Washington, Jan. 7. The Potomac river was frozen over last night and the vessels at the wharves had to cut their way into the channel.

The World's dispatch states that Gen. Meade is now in permanent command of the Army of the Potomac.

Gen. Rosecrans has not been assigned to the command of the Department of Missouri.

New York, Jan. 9th. The Herald has the following:

Cumberland, Md., Jan. 8th. The garrison at Petersburg, Va., was surrounded to-day. Fitz Hugh Lee and Rosser are moving between New Creek and Petersburg. The enemy drove our forces out of Burlington to-day. This place is threatened, and much excitement prevails here to-night. It seems probable that we will be attacked here to-morrow morning. The passenger trains on the railroad have been stopped; other trains nevertheless are running.

The enemy yesterday captured a train of thirty-six wagons. They are reported to be moving in three columns. Imboden has been attacked at Winchester and driven back.

THE FRENCH DESIGN IN MEXICO.—We take the following from the Paris correspondence of the London Army and Navy Gazette:

"There is an opinion here that troubles may arise with Banks on the Rio Grande. Banks is supposed to have some mission to aid the Mexicans, and several French steam frigates (to believe La Presse) have been detached to watch his movements. War vessels are also being dispatched to the Pacific coast to render the blockade of all Mexico effective.

The Constitutionnel exposes government views on this unpopular subject. This paper shows that the real object of the French invading Mexico was to prevent the extension of Yankee power. The Stars and Stripes may soon float over Vera Cruz and Acapulco, and the vast Mexican empire will then merge into the great American Republic. So formidable an increase of power would menace the liberty and peace of the world. When such sentiments are published in a semi-official paper, when the Mexican expedition is readily owned to be directed more against what the States may become than what Mexico was, it is time for French people to look with alarm on every movement which may bring Washington and Paris into hostile collision. Gallic eagles hovering about Matamoras, and the bird of 'freedom' on the Rio Grande, are in dangerous proximity."

DISSATISFACTION IN GEORGIA.—Deserters from the rebel army daily come into our lines at Chattanooga. Among the poorer classes of Georgians a fearful state of destitution is said to exist; and the denunciation of the rebellion and the rebel government is loud and emphatic, especially where there is no military surveillance over them. Refugees from the interior of the State estimate that fully two-thirds of the total population, if allowed a fair expression of opinion, would elect to return to the Union. Such statements must be received with considerable allowance, but there is doubtless a good deal of discontent among the people.

☞ The central arsenal of the rebel government has been removed from Richmond to Columbia, South Carolina, which act is supposed to preface an hegira of the government of the Confederacy and the establishment of its headquarters in the hot-bed of secession.

FUNERAL OF ARCHBISHOP HUGHES.—New York, Jan. 7th.—Archbishop Hughes was buried to-day from St. Patrick's Cathedral. High mass was celebrated by Bishop Timon of Buffalo.

Bishop McCloskey pronounced the funeral discourse. Hundreds of Catholic clergymen were present and the Cathedral was crowded to its utmost limits. After the ceremonies the body of the deceased Bishop was interred in a tomb under the Cathedral with impressive religious exercises.

Delegations of both branches of the City Government, and from all the Catholic Charitable and Religious Societies, and many distinguished persons from all parts of the United States were present.

THE AMNESTY AT THE SOUTH.—A letter from Natchez says that persons recently from the interior South are of the opinion that the President's offer of free pardon will have an excellent effect as soon as it becomes known. Prominent Mississippians say the plan for reconstruction will be gladly accepted by the people of that State as soon as sufficient portion of the territory is in our hands to allow a tenth part of the voting population an opportunity to express themselves.

The Storm at the West.

A train on the Michigan Central road got stuck thirteen miles from Chicago, and the Cleveland Herald gives the following account of the sufferings of the passengers:

"The cars on that road are provided with patent stoves, which will burn only when the cars are in motion, and consequently when the cars stopped the fires went out. The weather was intensely cold, the thermometer being thirty-two degrees below zero, and the sufferings of the passengers became intense, particularly those of the women and children. No fire could be started for a sufficient length of time to do any good. The top of the pipe would become red-hot and set fire to the top of the car several times, which was only put out by cutting away the woodwork.

There were five passenger cars in the train, well filled—about one hundred and fifty in all, a large number of whom were women and children. What added to the dreariness of the scene, as the night wore on, was, that the lights as well as the fire gave out, the cold increased in intensity, and the snow became four or five feet in depth, in huge drifts. By this time all the passengers became completely chilled through. The women and children were elevated on the top of the seats, where the air was warmer, and every thing done for their comfort that could be; but without fire, lights or food, out on a bleak prairie, their suffering was terrible.

They lay there from Thursday afternoon till Friday morning, when a train on the Michigan Southern road arrived, which also became blockaded, and could proceed no further. Preparations were immediately made to remove the passengers to the Michigan Southern cars, where warmth could be procured. A perfect stampede occurred, passengers fearing they would be left. Many of the women and children were unable to help themselves, and had to be carried from one car to the other. They remained on the Michigan Southern cars till Saturday night, suffering from the cold and want of food. They were finally taken off by sleighs and carried to Chicago.

There were none frozen to death, but large numbers were badly frost-bitten, some so severely that they will lose their hands or feet. The officers of both trains did every thing that could possibly be done under the circumstances for the comfort of passengers, and the two conductors are thought to be so badly frozen that they will never get over it.

It was impossible to do any thing to relieve the trains from the blockade, as no human being could stand the severity of the extreme cold for more than a minute or two without becoming enterely benumbed."

The transfer of the passengers to the Michigan Southern train is thus described by a correspondent of the Chicago Tribune:

"A distance of three hundred yards, more or less, was to be traversed. The snow was deeply drifted. The snow and frost-laden wind was sweeping the path like a storm of grape. But it was announced that the passengers would be taken to the city if they would instantly make an effort to reach the Southern train. Haste was necessary in order that the engines might not freeze up before we could get started. 'Don't a man of you start without taking a woman or a child with you,' shouted Carter. 'Wrap up, wrap up close,' shouted Butterfield, who in his anxiety for others forgot himself and froze his face, nose and ears—and women and children undertook the terrible passage. Cold as it was in the car, those who had not had occasion to expose themselves to the storm previously knew little of the ordeal through which they must pass in order to reach the other train. Strong men fell by the way—frail women dropped down unable to step, and were caught up in the strong arms of men and hurried to the cars insensible. Children, half-clad, were rescued half frozen.

Few who attempted the journey escaped being frost-bitten. White noses, ears, faces and hands marked most of the Central passengers and many of the Southern ones, who had nobly rendered aid in the transfer. The scenes on those cars, as the frozen passengers were helped in, beggars description. Men with frozen features rushed out for snow with which to extract the frost from the feet and hands and faces of the women and children, forgetting their own condition until made conscious of it by the painful tingling which follows neglect in such cases. Children were crying, women moaning and fainting, men shouting and rushing hither and thither, with snow and liquors."

Of the storm generally the Tribune says:

"From the eastern boundaries of the Ohio to the plains of Kansas; from the extreme south of Illinois to the northern limits of Michigan and Wisconsin, the storm has raged in uncontrolled fury. The vast expanse of territory known as the 'Northwest' has been bowed down by its visitation. Like the sirocco of the desert it has taken in its broad sweep almost a continent, and devastation has marked its course. On the level prairies of Illinois the storm has held high carnival, no natural barrier interposed to check its progress; it has leveled all before it in one fell swoop. For days—perhaps weeks—the sad record will meet with constant accessions, as from places situated outside of the regular line of railroad and telegraph communication the details will arrive.

Scores, perhaps hundreds of persons will have been lost, their property destroyed and their homes left desolate. Never since the bitter cold and snows of the winters of 1854–'55 and 1855–'56 have we experienced a storm any thing like that whose fury has just been expended. Indeed it has surpassed those bitter visitations, for although the snow was deeper the wind was not so strong nor the cold so severe. Then but a few persons were seriously injured. Now we have a great number who have lost the use of their limbs from the frost bite, and some have been lost."

The St. Louis Republican of the 4th inst., says they never experienced colder weather than was felt there on the first day of the new year, 1864, a day which may likely enough be spoken of for years as the Cold Friday. At 7 o'clock on the morning of that day the thermometer fell to 19.5 below zero, and a minimum thermometer of Green's construction indicated a temperature, some time before daylight, of twenty-two degrees below zero!

On the Mississippi, in Northern Illinois, the cold has been more intense than has ever been known. In Galena, February 9th, 1835, the mercury fell to 32 degrees below zero.

At Cairo, on the 2d inst., the thermometer was 14 degrees below zero. The Mississippi is frozen perfectly solid to its junction with the Ohio.

A dispatch to the Chicago Tribune from St. Louis states that on the North Missouri Railroad 10,000 hogs have frozen to death, and an immense number of cattle have frozen along all the railroads. In the city several persons have died from a similar cause, and the suffering of the poor reported to the authorities surpass belief. In Wisconsin trains were hedged in by snow drifts and remained for hours, unable to move. At Madison, on the 2d, the mercury was 39 degrees below zero. At Camp Randall the supply of wood became exhausted, and a large number of soldiers were badly frozen. At Oshkosh the mercury fell 38 below, one woman was frozen to death, and frozen hands and feet were numerous. At Milwaukee the thermometer ranged from 30 to 35 degrees below zero, with a driving wind most terrible to encounter. Frozen ears, noses and feet are innumerable, and many persons were picked up insensible on the streets. Ears and feet were frozen while going but a few blocks. Many employees of the railroads were badly frozen and crippled for life, and railroad travel was entirely suspended.

At Springfield, Ill., all railroad communication was suspended, with no prospect of being resumed for several days. The weather was bitter cold. Several soldiers froze to death at Camp Yates. A stage driver was found dead on his box, supposed to have frozen to death.

The Chicago papers record some painful incidents of suffering and death from cold in that city, during the late storm. A woman whose husband was recently killed in the war left her two boys, aged five and two years, in the house, to go and make some purchases, but got drunk. On returning, during the night, both children were found dead. On the floor lay the youngest child in a heap of snow; he was frozen stiff, and was of course dead. The eldest boy lay on the bed; he, too, was dead, but not quite cold. He had built a fire against a trunk which stood near, and a hole was burned in its side, another in the floor, and the bedclothes had been on fire. He had probably been asleep. The door having been left open, the room was filled with snow; and on awakening, perishing with cold, he found his brother dead. He then closed the door, lit a fire on the floor, and sank down benumbed with the cold. A soldier was found in the street unable to walk, and being taken to a police station both of his boots had to be cut off, his feet being badly frozen, and it is expected they will have to be amputated. Another man was picked up insensible. His legs were found to be frozen from his hips to his feet, and it is probable that both his legs must be amputated. A man who had both hands frozen put them into warm water, by which means they were rendered a mass of putrified flesh, and will probably have to be amputated.

A Clinton (Iowa) dispatch says the snow drifts along the railroad are from eight to ten feet deep, and half a mile long, packed hard enough to hold up teams. The thermometer was thirty degrees below zero.

The Pittsburg Chronicle says that two brakemen on the Oil Creek Railroad were frozen to death the other night, one of whom rolled off the car and the other was found at his post, his hand frozen to the brake wheel!

MARRIED.

At Ripley, N. Y., Dec. 30th, 1863, by Eld. J. T. Ongley, Bro. HARVEY E. DEWEY, of Arkwright, Chaut. Co., N. Y., to Sr. ELIZA M. AUSTIN, of Ripley, Chaut. Co., N. Y.

Notices.

Notice.

To the preaching brethren in Eastern New York, Western Mass. and Conn. Dear Brn:—At the last appointed conference at Bantam, Ct., there not being members present sufficient to do business, it was agreed that I should write to all the preachers in the limits of the conference, requesting their meeting in conference at East Otis, Mass., Jan. 20th, 1864, for the purpose of organizing upon a basis that would secure a mutual and harmonious co-operation in the work of the ministry. I have therefore written to most of you, and received in return several letters of encouragement. And of those to whom I have not written, I beg the acceptance of my apology, it being through negligence and not of design.

But relative to the appointment at Otis, I am informed that the brethren there would be glad of such a meeting, if they had a convenient place to hold it. But at this season of the year their meeting-house cannot be made comfortable for such an occasion; in view of which it appears to me necessary to postpone the appointment, and submit the question of a future meeting, time and place, to your consideration; requesting each and all, who are interested in the matter, to ascertain where and when such a meeting could be held agreeable to the wishes and convenience of the brethren, and send me information, and I will give notice accordingly. In behalf of the brethren,

T. S. CANFIELD.

Conference in Union Mills, Ind.

A covenant meeting of the church will be held at the usual hour, Saturday, Jan. 16th. In the evening I shall preach. Sabbath, Jan. 17th, preach in Union Mills, at 10 o'clock A. M., and in the evening at Stillwater Prairie. Resume the meetings at Union Mills Monday evening, Jan. 18th, and continue day and evening over the next Sabbath. All are invited. Let us have a grand rally in the name of the Lord. JOSHUA V. HIMES.

Wanted

One of the old 1843 Geographical Charts of the Four Kingdoms, painted in cloth; such as were used by our lecturers twenty years ago; also a set of the Symbolic Charts, presenting the metalic image, four beasts, etc., all in good repair. If you can spare me one for love or money, do not wait a month before replying, but write at once to, and oblige D. T. TAYLOR, Castleton, Rutland Co., Vt.

Notice.

There will be a series of meetings at South Butler, Wayne Co., N. Y., commencing Jan. 22nd, and continuing through the following week, and over Sunday, Jan. 31st. Eld. F. Burr, of Honeoye, is expected to help preach the word. Let the brethren and sisters in the surrounding country prepare to attend this meeting. Come with your hearts full of love, that by your earnest prayers and exhortations you may help on the car of truth. Modern infidelity must fall. C. B. TURNER.

Tract Notice.

Elder I. C. Wellcome, Yarmouth, Me., has a good supply of tracts and books, hymn books, etc., published by the C. P. Society, and by H. L. Hastings and others. Also, a great variety of other best works on the Advent, and inheritance of the saints.

Notice.

Elder Thomas Smith, Bangor, Me., has on hand for sale H. L. Hastings' "Signs of the Times," with an assortment of his various Tracts; also, the Tracts by Miles Grant, on "The Soul," "The Spirit," and "What is Man?" and other Advent tracts.

A Liberal Offer.

Being satisfied that time is short, and that what is done must be done quickly; and feeling anxious to do what we can to arouse a sleeping world and church, we make the following liberal offer:—Any one who will send three or more new subscribers to the Crisis for six months or one year, with advance pay for the same, shall receive at wholesale prices, including postage, any of our books and tracts they may select, amounting to one-third the value of the money sent. For instance, if they send three dollars, they receive one dollar's worth of books or tracts; for six dollars, we send them two dollars' worth; for twelve dollars, four dollars' worth, etc. Let every reader take hold of the work in earnest, and help scatter tracts, books and papers like autumnal leaves.

MILES GRANT, per order of Publishing Committee.

VALUABLE BOOKS FOR SALE.

BUCK: OUR LORD'S GREAT PROPHECY. An extended Exposition of Matthew xxiv. and its parallel passages, and an utter overthrow of the idea that Christ came when Jerusalem was destroyed. By D. D. Buck, a Methodist minister. 8vo. Cloth, $1.50 by mail.

TAYLOR: THE EMPHATIC NEW TESTAMENT, —the four Gospels,—compared with the various readings of the Vatican manuscript, edited, with an introductory Essay on Greek Emphasis, by John Taylor. 8vo; pp. 260. $1.50 by mail.

Much light is thrown upon many passages by the system of emphasis which the author has introduced, by which all the words regarded as emphatic are distinguished by peculiar type.

MOSHEIM: INSTITUTES OF ECCLESIASTICAL History, Ancient and Modern. By J. L. MOSHEIM. A new and literal translation from the Latin, with copious additional notes, original and selected, by James Murdock, D.D. 3 vols., 8vo; pp. 1461. $5.00 by express.

This is the best edition of this valuable history, and is far preferable to the other version by MACLAINE.

COUNCIL OF NICE. A Historical View of the Council of Nice, with a translation of documents, by Rev. Isaac Boyle, M.A. 8vo; pp. 62. By mail 50 cts.

KITTO: The Cyclopædia of Biblical Literature. Edited by John Kitto, D. D., F. S. A. Illustrated by numerous maps and engravings. 2 vols., 8vo., 1878 pages, double columns, half calf binding. Price $8.

HEBREW: The Englishman's Hebrew and Chaldee Concordance, by which an English reader can find the original Hebrew for any word in the English Bible, with all the places where it occurs. 2 vols. Cloth, $22, 1 vol. sheep, or half morocco, $23. 1763 pp.

MURDOCK: The New Testament, translated from the Syriac by James Murdock, D. D. 8vo., 515 pp. Price $2.

Address H. L. HASTINGS, Boston, Mass.

English Bibles for Sale.

1. DIAMOND, fine print, full references, morocco bound, $1.50, calf, $1.25; roan, gilt, $1.00; flexible binding, $1.00. Postage 12 cents.
2. PEARL, flat, full references, morocco, $2.25, roan, $1.50. Postage 16 cts.
3. NONPAREIL, 16 mo., references between the verses, or references in the margin, morocco, $3.00, calf, $2.50, roan, $2.00, references between verses, with gilt rims and clasps, $3.00. Postage 20 cts.
4. MINION, references between the verses, roan, $2.50. Postage 25 cts.
5. MINION, 8vo., marginal ref., flat and clear type, roan, $2.50.
6. TESTAMENTS, roan, gilt, smallest 25 cts; larger, 33 cts. Postage 6 cts.

Address MILES GRANT, Boston, Mass.

Price Reduced.

RESURRECTION OF THE WICKED. Discussion between M. Grant and J. T. Curry.

The advertised price of this Discussion is 25 cents, postage 2 cents. We have a quantity of them on hand, and will sell them hereafter for 20 cts., postage 2 cts. Send on your orders.

THE TWO WITNESSES, Moses and Elijah. By the Rev. I. P. Labagh. An argument to show that the two Witnesses (Rev. xi.) are neither the Old and New Testaments, nor the Waldenses and Albigenses, etc. etc., but rather Moses and Elias, and that the prophecy concerning them is yet to be literally fulfilled. Price in cloth 15 cts., paper 10 cents.

We think this work is the best on the Two Witnesses that we have ever read.—ED.

PHOTOGRAPHS OF ELD. EDWIN BURNHAM. A few copies of a large, beautiful and life-like Photograph, which the friends of Bro. Burnham will be glad to obtain. Sent by mail for $1.00. Those wishing them should order at once.

HIRAM MUNGER'S Life and Religious Experience. Including many singular circumstances connected with revivals and campmeetings. Written by himself. 50 cents, postage paid.

Appointments.

We would say to our preaching Brethren that it is necessary we should receive their appointments as early as TUESDAY MORNING, as our paper goes to press about noon; otherwise they will not be inserted till the week following.

LOWELL STREET CHAPEL, BOSTON, CORNER OF CAUSEWAY AND LOWELL STREETS. Meetings are held regularly three times every Sunday, and Tuesday and Friday evenings. Seats free.

APPOINTMENT FOR LOWELL STREET CHAPEL.

H. L. Hastings .... Sunday, Jan. 17th and onward for the present.

Lynn, Mass. .... Jan. 17th
Cabot, Vt., Thursday, P. M., Jan. 21st, and continue through the week and over the following Lord's day
On Friday, P. M., Jan. 22nd, Bro. Nathan Wheeler will be set apart for the work of the ministry.
Montreal, (Bonaventure Hall), Tuesday evening, Jan. 26th, and every evening for two weeks, including Lord's days, Jan. 31st and Feb. 7th. Brethren, pray for us.
MILES GRANT.

Dansville, N. Y. .... Sunday, Jan. 17th
South Butler .... Jan. 22d to 24th
Bristol .... Sunday, 10 1-2 o'clock, A. M., Jan. 31st
Honeoye .... Sunday, 2 o'clock, P. M., Jan. 31st
Dansville .... Sunday, Feb. 7th
F. BURR.

Lawrence, Mass. .... Jan. 24th
Haverhill, Mass. .... Jan. 31st
J. W. BRITTAN.

Athol, Mass., (as Bro. Sawtell may appoint), evening, Jan 22nd.
Northfield, Mass. .... Sunday, Jan. 24th
L. BOUTELL.

Danbury, N. H. .... Jan. 17th
Z. FORD.

Lawrence, Mass. .... Jan. 17th
W. S. CAMPBELL.

Eld. S. G. Mathewson will commence a series of lectures on the prophecies in Rutland, Vt., Jan. 13th, and continue over two Sundays.

Concord, N. H. .... Sunday, Feb. 7th
Exeter, N. H. .... Feb. 14th, 21st, and 28th
A. ROSS.

Exeter, R. I., (in the Garner school-house, as the Brn. may arrange), Jan. 24th.
Charleston, R. I., (in the Stone meeting-house), Feb. 7th
RUFUS W. PEIRCE.

Agawam .... Sunday, Jan. 24th
[No name accompanied this notice.]

Bro. Andrews' .... Saturday evening, Jan. 16th
Bradford Centre .... Sunday, Jan. 17th
JOSEPH W. WHITE.

South Newbury, N. H. .... Sunday, Jan. 24th
WM. SUTHERLAND.

Wells Forge .... Wednesday evening, Jan. 13th
Cold Spring .... Thursday evening, Jan. 14th
Round Hill (Chester) .... Sunday, Jan. 17th
WM. J. HALL.

Springfield, Mass., (Bro. Morgan's,) evening, Jan. 16th
Agawam .... Sunday, Jan. 17th
Sunday evening, as Bro. Sister shall appoint.
L. B. POTTER.

Pleasant Valley, Ct. .... Jan. 13th to 17th
Danielsonville, Ct. .... Jan. 22d
and over the Lord's day, and longer if the interest demands.
Lawrence, Mass. .... Sunday, Jan. 31st
A. ROSS.

Lee, N. H. .... Jan. 17th
J. W. BRITTAN.

Haverhill, Mass. .... Sunday, Jan. 17th
A. SIMPSON.

South Windsor, Ct. .... Jan. 17th
G. P. BABCOCK.

Blooming Valley, Crawford Co., Pa., Jan. 23d to the 29th.
Edinboro', Erie Co., Pa., Jan. 30th till March 3d
Brethren, please arrange for these meetings, and pray about them.
JOS. D. BROWN.

Collinsville, Ct. .... Jan. 17th
C. GOODRICH.

The Plains, Appanaug .... Jan. 16th
and over Lord's day.
Natic .... Jan. 18th
River Point .... Jan. 19th
Central .... Jan. 20th
Coventry, (Town House) .... Jan. 21st
Summet .... Jan. 22d
Danielsonville .... Jan. 23d
and over Lord's day.
J. J. NORTHUP.

Greeley .... Sunday, Jan. 17th
Manchester .... evening, Jan. 17th
and remain some days.
Intend to visit the brethren at Coffin's Grove.
P. W. HOYOR.

Business.

THE NEW TRACT FUND.

Two Thousand Dollars.

We, the undersigned, agree to give the sums affixed to our names, for the purpose of raising TWO THOUSAND DOLLARS to aid the Christian Publication Society in the gratuitous distribution of tracts; and our subscriptions shall be paid at the call of the Treasurer, as soon as one half of the amount shall be subscribed.

Pledges and payments to Jan. 1st,	$379 30
W. Watson	1.00
T. J. Philbrick	1.00

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

MRS. S. V. WHITAKER—Your Postmaster is mistaken. The postage on The Pilgrim is 12 cents a year for any number of papers weighing less than four ounces, when sent to one address. Your two copies, therefore, require but 12 cents postage.

H. A. ARNOLD—As the pamphlets and tracts are of different sizes, they cannot all be bound together. Your better way is to send for them, and have them bound yourself. He lives in Bangor.

S. SHIELD—As you did not send postage for the Lyre, we have taken it from your remittance, and Bro. C. C. can pay you 12 cents.

D. JONES—Received.

WM. FREEMAN OR TRUMAN sends us $5.00 to be credited on Crisis account, but gives neither his post office nor State. Will he inform us?

E. L. BURNAP—Out of "Controversy." Will send soon.

S. H. COVELL—It was received and acknowledged. Paid to No. 450.

CASH RECEIPTS TO JAN. 9, 1864.

The present No. of the Crisis is 432.

The No. which follows your name, is the No. to which your money pays.

Deduct the one from the other, and you will see how far you have paid in advance, or how much is due the office.

Make a memorandum of the same, and you will be reminded when your subscription expires.

G H Beck 449, S K Ford 433, E T Welsh 453, W Smith 453, J Merril 442, A Phinney 399, S Dodge 4 8, M J Koykendall 428, Mrs M Knapp 512, A Waterman 442, H C Smith 473, C Van Vliet 464, B Gidden 457, M Kelly 457, B S Miller 457, J Bell 457, T S Knowlton 462, L W Ranger 451, J E Smith 457, H A Arnold 485, S Sawyer 397, F M Berry 461, E H Balch 458, S E Hooper 399, R Clark 454, C B Hall 345, Mrs H S Ellis 451, D Spaulding 457, Wm S Hersey 457, Jas Hooper 457, W Kinney 457, C H Shepherd 457, B F Smith 457, W Smith 457, D C Fitch 457, S Roberts 442, H Oxford 484, R McFadden 428, B Sherry 457, J Douglas 470, Mrs M Ross 471, Wm Stark 481, O D Gibson 444, C N Buzzell 3 8, A P Moore —, C Bitgood 449, J Card 457, J S Read 457, E C Elliott 4 7, W M E Hawks 457, E H Downs 431, C W Osgood 431, Mrs M A Hardy 465, E Buckland 431, E Franchier 453, P Wheelock 459, J B Wait —, A Twiss 457, R Parmeter 449, J Flanders 444, P Gardner 443, R R Dore 462, R Orr 457, J B Newcomb 457, E Owen 457, M Cumiskee 457,—$1.00 each.

J Mitchell 432, Z Grovier 483, E T Welsh 482, E Sanderson 484, B Perkins 449, Dr J W Bane 482, C Stevens 466, D Watson 440, M P Pattee 482, C Corperon 489, Mrs L E Simpson 482, J P Racklif 482, L J Lane 482, A Sowle 430, S Stone 470, R Stayton 481, W Draper 433, P Fish 483, W Mc Andrews 483, J Higgins 4 3, L N Shaw 483, F Platt 483, Wm Freeman or Truman (What P. O.?), J Wilbur 483, M M Lockhart 482, T W Brooks 481, Mrs C M Stark 508, F S Ransom 478, T F Farnsworth 482, Mrs C Tillotson 456, A C Newell 459, A Shaw 483, W S Chipman 483, T D Bailey 468, A H Bolton 433, B R Stewart 494, W Mc Allister 483, I Ewell 442, J H Nash 416, S N Davis 4 8, J C Tibbetts 483,—$2.00 each.

S L Manley 441, A Fenton 457, J D Jones 443, B H Straight 431, V Burr 444, J B Patterson 444, C M Couch 444, J Ethridge 444, Mrs M B Dorr 444, S E Bettes 346, S F Hulbard 444, Mrs W L Browning 444,—50c each.

A Rowe $3.00, 478, W S Wadleigh $1.00, 360, Wm Bartholomew $1.00, 452, G A Smith 65c, 445, D Platt $1.00, 485, F Hale $1.50, 455, A Post $5.00, 503, S R Barber $5.00, ?, A B Doty 75c, 455.

FOR BOOKS AND TRACTS.

W Hayes 25c, P Fish $1.00, Z E Harris 25c, Thos Smith $2.00, J B Cranshaw 15c, E Hadley 12c, A Hawks $1.25, P W Southworth $1.25, E L Burnap 35c, A H Bolton 22c.

BOOKS AND TRACTS SENT.

By Mail.

P W Southworth, Volenia, Mich., H Babbitt, Ypsilanti, Mich., A H Bolton, E. Princeton, Vt.; C P Dow, Saxe's Mills, Vt.; O D Gibson, Houghtonville, Vt., S D Daniels, W. Suffield, Ct., Mrs S A Coburn, Haverhill, Mass.; E L Burnap, E. Calais, Vt.; E C Cowles, W. Groton, N. Y., P Wilson, New Oregon, Iowa; N W Eastman, Douglass, Iowa; Mrs E D Mitchell, Kennebunkport, Me., A W Griggs, Monmouth, Ill.; B Whitehouse, Alton, N. H.; Wm Prosser, Brothertown, Wis.

LETTERS RECEIVED.

M. H. Morrison, W. J., A C Judson, W Sheldon, J C Rogers, J Dudley, M S Horne, M P Lamprey, J Elkins, C H Leverton, N Grant, C N Buzzell, J Wilbur, A P Moore, J E Clark, J P Nelson, S Basford, J T Ongley, H H Clavey, A S Bryant.

POST OFFICE ADDRESS.

Eld. F. Burr—Dansville, Livingston Co., N. Y.

Eld. N. F. Nason—Newport, Me. Residence, North Palmyra.

☞ My address, until further notice, will be No. 128 High Street, Brooklyn, L. I., N. Y. I may be absent for a few days at some appointments, and will respond immediately on return. Come, dear friends, send in your orders and help scatter the light. S. S. BREWER.

Walter Pratt—New Bedford, Mass.

BOOKS AND TRACTS.

All publications sent by mail must be prepaid. The postage on Tracts is 2 cents for each FOUR OUNCES, or fractional part of four ounces; on Books, 4 cents for each FOUR OUNCES or fractional part of the same. For example, the postage on any one tract on this list is TWO CENTS, but three or four tracts may be in the same parcel at the same price. A Book weighing 4 ounces costs 4 cents postage, one weighing 5 ounces would cost 8 cents, or just as much as if it weighed 8 ounces.

MILES GRANT'S WORKS.

Resurrection of the Wicked. Discussion with Jos. T. Curry. "Do the Scriptures teach the Resurrection of the Wicked?" Phonographically reported by E. F. Woodward. 20c, postage 2c.

Eternal Suffering. Discussion with Dr. J. Litch. "Do the Scriptures teach the eternal conscious suffering of the Wicked?" 25c, postage 2c.

Spiritualism. Discussion with J. S. Loveland, "On Spiritualism and Immortality." 10c, postage 2c.

State of the Dead. Discussion with W. W. Clayton, "On the State of the Dead and the Punishment of the Wicked." 25c, postage 2c. Bound 35c, postage 5c.

Miles Grant's Tracts. 32 pages each. Price 5 cents single, 50 cents per dozen, $3.00 per hundred. Postage 2 cents for each package of four tracts or less.

What is Man? A Bible view of his creation; The meaning of Soul, Spirit, Death, and Hell.

The Soul, What is it? Or a careful examination of all the uses of the words nephesh and psuche as employed in the old and new Testaments.

The Spirit, What is it? Or a careful examination of all the uses of the words ruach and pneuma as found in the old and new Testaments.

The Rich Man and Lazarus. Thief on the Cross; Souls under the Altar; an exposition of Matthew 10: 28, Genesis 3: 17, &c.

C. F. HUDSON'S WORKS.

Debt and Grace. Or the Doctrine of a Future Life, by C. F. Hudson. A most learned and valuable work, exhibiting great candor, ability, and research, containing quotations from some four hundred writers of all ages and languages, and showing conclusively that eternal life is the peculiar privilege of the believer in Jesus Christ. 1 vol. 12 mo., pp. 482, price $1.25—post paid.

Christ our Life. The Scriptural Argument for Immortality through Christ alone. 160 pp. In cloth, 60c. Paper, 35c.

Human Destiny. A Critique on Universalism. Cloth, 35c. Paper, 25c. With the following and Mr. H.'s other Tracts, 235 pages, in cloth 60c.

The Doctrine of Endless Misery an occasion of Scepticism. From Sir James Stephen, with notes. 5c., postage 2c. $3.00 per 100.

Eternal Death in the literal sense is Eternal Punishment. 5c., postage 2c. $3.00 per 100.

The Rich Man and Lazarus. With remarks on Josephus. 5c., postage 2c. $3.00 per 100.

The Rights of Wrong; or, is Evil Eternal? With Reply to Dr. Mengel. 5c., postage 2c. $3.00 per 100.

Reviewers Reviewed. New edition with replies to articles in the Quarterlies, January, April, and September, 1862, and April and October, 1863. (Price 10c, postage 2c.)

JACOB BLAIN'S WORKS.

Death not Life; or, The Destruction of the Wicked Scripturally established. Price 25c, postage 2c. Bound 40c, postage 5c.

Glad Tidings; or, Bible Proof that Woe and Sin are to end in the universe by a literal destruction of wicked men and devils after the day of Judgment. 5c, postage 2c.

The Wicked not Immortal. Two hundred texts quoted to prove their destruction. 3c.

Bible Meaning of the Word Hell. 3c.

Endless Misery not a Bible Doctrine. 3c.

Smoke of Torment and Unquenchable Fire Explained. 3c.

The above five Tracts are parts of Death not Life.

Bible Meaning of Forever and Everlasting. 1c.

Letter of Rev. John Foster on Future Punishment. 2c.

BOOKS PUBLISHED BY H. L. HASTINGS, 167 HANOVER STREET, BOSTON, MASS. Single copies sent by mail, postpaid, on receipt of the price.

The Signs of the Times; or, A Glance at Christendom as it is. By H. L. Hastings. [illegible]

"I have been much impressed by the fearful truth, the honest boldness, and the real scriptural view of the whole argument, as well as by the hope and valuable collection of statistics brought together." —Rt. Rev. J. H. Ryder, Bishop of [illegible]

The Voice of the Church on the Coming and Kingdom of the Redeemer, or a History of the Doctrine of the Reign of Christ on Earth. By D. T. Taylor. Revised and edited by H. L. Hastings. 6th Edition. 420 pp. 12mo. Price $1.00.

Spiritualism a Satanic Delusion and a Sign of the Times. By William Ramsey, D. D. Edited by H. L. H. Price, cloth, 25c. Paper, 15c.

Thessalonica; or The Model Church. A sketch of Primitive Christianity. By H. L. H. 5c.

The Great Controversy between God and Man. Its origin, progress, and end. By H. L. Hastings.

Reasons for my Hope, and the Tokens of its Speedy Realization. By H. L. Hastings.

Thessalonica and Reasons for my Hope. Bound in one volume. Cloth, 75 cents.

Looking Forward, or the Prospects of the Church; being the concluding chapter of the Signs of the Times. Paper, 10 cents.

Future Punishment, as revealed in the Scriptures, in opposition to the Three Theories of Never-ending Sin and Misery, Eternal Misery without End, Restoration, and Universal Salvation. By H. L. Hastings. Cloth, $1. Paper, 50c.

Pauline Theology; or, The Scripture Doctrine of Future Punishment, as taught in the Epistles of Paul. By H. L. Hastings. 12th 1000. Paper, 10c.

The Old Paths; or, the Primitive Doctrine of a Future Life. By H. L. Hastings. 3d 1,000. Paper 12c.

Retribution; or, The Doom of the Ungodly, after the Resurrection of the Dead, Just and Unjust. By H. L. H. Paper, 10 cents.

Any of the above works will be sent by MAIL, POSTPAID, on receipt of the price.

MISCELLANEOUS.

Cruden's Condensed Concordance, by which any passage of Scripture, of which only a single word is remembered, can at once be found, and every place where any word occurs in the English Bible can be seen at a glance. Price $1.25, postage 36c.

The Life of Trust. An account of the Lord's Dealings with George Müller, Director of the Orphan Houses of Bristol, England. Price $1.25, postage 36c.

Two Hundred Stories for Children. An excellent and entertaining book for young and old, compiled by T. M. Preble. Price 60c, postage 8c.

A Treatise on the 24th and 25th chapters of Matthew, showing by copious extracts from History, the fulfillment of Christ's Prediction, and the Kingdom of God soon to come. By I. C. Wellcome. Price 25c, postage 4c.

Should Christians Fight? A pamphlet on War, embracing the Scripture argument against fighting, and the testimonies of the Primitive Church. By I. C. Wellcome. Price 15c, postpaid; 8 for $1.00.

The Bible from Heaven, or a dissertation on the Evidences of Christianity. By M. Hull. 25c, postage 4c.

America in Prophecy. Exposition of the 18th chap. of Isaiah, showing its application to the United States of America in the present conflict, and end of the dispensation. By O. R. Fassett. 5c, postage 2c.

The Celestial Railroad, or Modern Pilgrim's Progress. After the manner of Bunyan. Vividly representative of the present-day professors of religion. Price 5c, postage 2c.

The Three Kingdoms, or the Kingdom of God the Father, the kingdom of Satan, the kingdom of the Lord Jesus Christ; or a view of this world as it was, as it is, and as it is to be. By T. M. Preble. 15c, postage 2c.

The Ten Virgins, or Wisdom and Folly contrasted. By T. M. Preble. 5c, postage 2c.

The Two Adams. By T. M. Preble. An interesting tract. 5c, postage 2c.

Messiah's Mission, or an exposition of the Gospel Covenant, as comprehended in the Scriptures of truth. By C. F. Sweet. 25c, postage 2c.

The Excellency of the Lord's Anointed, or Christ the promised Messiah. By Mrs. Mary A. Seymour. 10c, postage 2c; $3.00 per 100.

Everybody's Book. The Bible View of the personality of God. The Devil: his origin, personality, power, and doom. By Thomas A. Smith. 5c, postage 2c.

Cook Book. By Dr. F. W. Hurd. This book gives instructions for preparing all the articles of food used at Dr. Jackson's celebrated health institution, denominated "Our Home," Dansville, N. Y. Price 15c, postage 2c.

Premature Decay of American Youth. By Dr. A. Stone. This is a valuable work, and should be read by all the young. 5c, postage 2c.

The Saint's Harvest, or an exposition of Matt. 24: 15, in connection with Dan. 12: 11-12. By H. K. Flagg. 5c, postage 2c.

The Old and New Covenant. Superiority of the New. By A. W. Sibley. 5c, postage 2c.

The Christian Lyre. A collection of Hymns and Tunes for Worship. Price 60c. $6.00 per dozen, postage 12c.

A Disquisition on the Prophecies. By F. H. Berick. Price 15c, postage 2c.

An Appeal to Pious Trinitarians. By H. Grew. Price 5c, postage 2c.

TRACTS

Issued by the Christian Publication Society.

16 pages for 1 cent; 1,500 for $1. By mail, 1,200 pages for $1. Single, by mail, 1 cent for every 12 pages, postage, 2 cents.

FREE TO THE POOR.

The Church not in Darkness; or, the duties of the times; the guilt of a slumbering world, and the duty of a faithful church. A stirring tract of 36 pages. By H. L. Hastings.

The Three Worlds; or, earth, past, present, and future. A graphic sketch of the old world, destroyed by the deluge; the present world reserved unto fire; and the new world which God shall create. By H. L. Hastings. 24 pages.

The Last Days. A calm, scriptural, and convincing argument, showing that the last days, marked by divine goodness and human iniquity, are even now upon us. By H. L. Hastings. 24 pages.

Plain Truths; or, Scripture and Tradition united. A condensed view of leading Scriptural statements regarding the world and man, the curse, the coming of the Redeemer, the resurrection of the dead, the renovation of the earth, and the expected portion of the church; presented in simple Scripture language, and confirmed by EIGHTY-EIGHT quotations from the writings of the most noted of the fathers, reformers, and ministers in all ages. A mild and unanswerable tract. By H. L. Hastings. 36 pages.

Will all Men be Saved? A pointed, pithy, earnest and conclusive argument against Universalism, said by a Methodist minister who had been converted from Universalism, to be the best thing he ever read on that subject. By H. L. Hastings. 28 pages.

A Voice of Warning from the Four Winds. A compilation of brief and thrilling testimonies to the fact of an approaching crisis, from numerous noted writers and speakers, journalists, statesmen, and divines, well adapted to impress the minds of the careless. By D. T. Taylor. 24 pages.

The New Heavens and New Earth. A collection of testimonies from about EIGHTY of the most noted of the great men in the church, from the times of the apostles down, showing a uniform faith in the doctrine of the new creation. By D. T. Taylor. 36 pages.

Ancient Landmarks. Six tracts of four pages each, containing the testimonies of twenty thousand Baptists on the kingdom; Adam Clarke on the duration of the earth; Matthew Henry on the hope of the church; the restitution, by Cyril, Bishop of Jerusalem, Methodius and Cyprian; a warning voice, by Cotton Mather; and loving Christ's appearing, by Richard Baxter. Arranged by H. L. Hastings. 24 pages.

The Duty of Christians in the present crisis. A letter to a Christian brother, by H. Grattan Guinness; with additional extracts from early Christian writers, by H. L. Hastings; showing that Christians have no part in the wars or governments of this world. 24 pages.

State of the Dead. By John Milton, author of "Paradise Lost," being extracts from his "Treatise on Christian Doctrine," giving his views upon the nature and condition of man in life and death. 24 pages.

Silence of the Scriptures respecting the immortality of the soul, or, of the man, or of the bad. By C. F. Hudson. A convincing tract, showing that upon these points the Scriptures are silent. 36 pages.

Immortality Through Christ Alone. The doctrine safe and salutary. By C. F. Hudson. 36 pages.

The Destiny of the Wicked. A solid mass of Scripture quotations, without note or comment, upon this subject. Arranged by H. L. Hastings. 12 pages.

The Advent at Hand. A summary of reasons for expecting the speedy close of the present, and the ushering in of a new dispensation. 12 pages.

S. S. BREWER'S TRACTS.

The Kingdom of God and the Signs of the Times. Price 20c, postage 2c.

The Days we Live in. Price 10c, postage 2c.

The Seven Seals. An Exposition of the Sixth Chapter of Revelation. Price 5c, postage 2c.

The Slaying of the Witnesses. Price 7c, postage 2c.

The Great Image soon to be dashed to pieces. Price 5c, postage 2c.

The Two-Horned Beast. Price 5c, postage 2c.

The Rich Man and Lazarus. Price 5c, postage 2c.

All orders for any of the above works should be addressed to MILES GRANT, Boston, Mass.

large field is open for labor in the north part of the State.

Bro. L. Damman reports encouragingly. Says we shall yet see reformation. Bro. N. G. Reed's record is good. We are confident he is a faithful minister of Jesus Christ. Bro. J. Morrill presents a bold front in the cause of Jesus Christ. An honest minister of Jesus. With us the harvest is great, the laborers few. Pray God for us, to send more laborers into his vineyard.

Voted, the time and place of meeting for holding the next conference be left with the Chairman and Clerk. MOSES YOUNG.

For the World's Crisis.

THE RADICAL, OR TAP-ROOT.

Reader, did you ever observe in most vegetation that one root extends straight into the earth in the same manner as the stem or stalk or trunk does in the air? This is called the radical, or tap-root. It fixes the tree or plant firm in the ground. Were you to attempt to remove a plant that has been standing for some time, you would find this root clings with great strength, and penetrates to a greater or less depth as the height of the plant demands. The roots which spread either way may easily be cut, but unless the radical is cut the plant still remains. This is one reason why trees and plants must be transplanted when young.

What a beautiful illustration of our own character! In our natural condition we are like the tree that has not been transplanted.

Our heart has become fixed in sin and taken deep root. We require transplanting, that our nature may be changed into a better soil, where we may become a new creature, be born again.

The effort is made, and, as is the case with the tree, it is easy to cut the roots that spread out; that is, to abstain from many of our sins, and thus in a degree reform. But this is not conversion. There still remains something which is not uprooted, some one pleasure which seems too great a sacrifice for religion. This is generally the idol of our heart. There lies our tap-root, and hard indeed is the task to uproot it. Till this is accomplished vain is the conversion.

In Judas, covetousness might be termed his radical root. His love of money led him to betray his Master. Ananias and his wife serve as an illustration of this kind. They had reformed, but the radical root yet stood, and this withheld them from giving their whole hearts to God.

We need not go back to those times for examples, for often in this age do we see such. And have we not all felt a like powerful hold in our own hearts? Let us examine ourselves and see if there be any thing that has not been given up, any thing that we love better than Christ. He wants the whole heart. We must give this, that we may be placed in his garden to be watered and nourished by the Holy Spirit freely showered upon us, enabling us to bear fruit unto righteousness and gain an inheritance everlasting in the kingdom to come. M. B. REYNOLDS.

North Kingston, R. I.

Obituaries.

JULIA A. SCOTT.

Died at Vernon, Vt., Dec. 18th, 1863, Julia A. Scott, aged twenty-two years.

The subject of this notice gave her heart to the Lord at the early age of twelve, and has ever since been a meek and faithful follower of the Redeemer. Much of the time, for eight years past, she has been an invalid, and at times has suffered much. But she meekly, patiently, bore all her pain without a murmur. By her sweet and amiable disposition she twined around her existence the friendship and affection of all who became acquainted with her. Her last moments were peaceful and serene, unclouded by a doubt, unshadowed by a fear. The hour of death, long delayed, came at last, and like a soft zephyr of spring she passed from life into that dreamless sleep that knows no waking till the last trump shall call the saints from the dominion of the enemy. May the blessed assurance that she sleeps in Jesus comfort those who so deeply mourn her loss, and bind their hearts yet more strongly to Him who has promised to bring the saints with him, and join in a long and glad reunion all who love him. Words of consolation and hope were spoken by Eld. Bennet at the funeral, that brought a ray of sunlight from beyond the dark valley.

By request, the following lines were composed by the writer, and read at the close of the services:

We chant a dirge of sorrow
For thee, our Julia dear,
With mingled notes of sadness
Around thy lonely bier.

We gaze upon thy features,
In death so calm and still,
With thoughts of bitter anguish,
That parting scenes doth fill.

We weep, but not distrusting
The hand that laid thee low,
Will call thee from thy slumbers
When life's sweet morn shall glow.

Thy heart, so pure and lovely
Through all the years of pain,
Ne'er breathed a saddened murmur
To mock the ear again.

Thou'st passed from earth as fadeth
The shadow from the hills;
Sweet as the zephyr sigheth
When us its music thrills.

Now sweetly rest thee, Julia,
Free from all pain and care;
We'd not to earth recall thee,
Its grief and woe to share;

But fain would live each moment
To greet thee on a shore,
Where never death shall sunder,
Nor part the loved ones more.

Farewell then, dearest Julia,
Farewell till we shall meet
Around the throne forever,
To chant the triumph sweet.

Palmer, Mass. O. P. ALLEN.

GEORGE W. LAMBERT.

Died in Falmouth, Me., Nov. 29th, 1863, of quick consumption, Bro. George W. Lambert, aged twenty-seven years, nine months.

Our beloved Bro. George has fallen a victim to death. He has left a young companion and one child, with a large circle of friends, to mourn his departure. The church in Biddeford feel the loss of a faithful member and highly esteemed Bro., but we mourn not as those who have no hope, for we believe he is among those who died in faith, and sleep in Jesus, and that the Spirit that raised up Jesus dwelt in him, and will quicken him to life again.

Bro. Lambert was converted under the labors of Bro. George Champlain, in Biddeford, in 1859, and baptized by the same, and united with the Second Advent church in Biddeford at its organization. He was a devoted christian, and joyfully anticipated the advent of his Savior. He could not believe that death had marked him for its prey, but thought to the last that he should get well. He expressed a strong hope in Christ, and prayed when he had strength of mind. He was conscious to the last, and fell asleep suddenly, but easily, to awake no more till the last trump shall sound to call forth the sleeping millions from their cold, dusty beds. He rests in peace. A crown of life awaits him, and Jesus will come in a little while to give him a body like his glorious body, in the home prepared for the weary.

Bro. Lambert moved to his native place, Falmouth, three weeks previous to his death, where his funeral was attended by Bro. B. S. Emery, of Portland, Me. He comforted the afflicted ones with the hope of the resurrection from the dead.

Yes, the time is quickly passing,
Soon we'll hear the Savior's voice;
Then he'll bid the dead awaken,—
All his saints in him rejoice.

JULIA A. LIBBEY.

SAMUEL ORCUTT.

Died in Amherst, Me., Dec. 7th, 1863, Samuel Orcutt, aged 59 years, 9 months, 17 days.

Thus has a family circle been entered by the enemy Death, and a loved one taken from us, a husband and father laid in the cold grave to await the sound of the last trumpet that will awake all that sleep in Jesus to a newness of life. In his death not only his family but the entire community will suffer loss, for a good and faithful man has left us. He was respected by every one that knew him. All his business relations were honorable, and such as to leave behind him not only an enduring name for integrity and honest dealing, but an universal regret that he is gone. He has for many years been a believer in the Advent of Christ and all its kindred doctrines. But he was suddenly called away; only two hours after he was first attacked he was gone,—supposed to be a disease of the heart. He was not aware that his illness was serious until he was past speaking.

He has left a wife, four daughters, one son, (the son in the army) to mourn his departure. May we all be sustained by infinite grace, and be prepared for the coming of Christ, and to meet the loved one gone before. M. J. F.

BERTHA CELESTA WILKINS.

Bertha Celesta Wilkins, youngest daughter of Thomas and Mary A. Wilkins, of Dorchester, Mass., died of scarlet fever, Jan. 2nd, 1864, aged four years and fourteen days.

For a fifth time have our brother and sister been called to mourn the loss of a child,—four of them having died of scarlet fever. Bertha was a gleam of sunshine in the house, the pet of the whole loving family, and the friend of the transient pilgrims who turned aside to tarry with them for a night. Though young, she seemed to love the Savior, and she would comfort her mother under former bereavements with the hope of the resurrection and the coming of Jesus Christ.

Prof. Hudson was present at the funeral, and assisted the writer in ministering consolation to the afflicted family; and though the loss was severe and bitter, yet to the question, "Is it well with thee? Is it well with thy husband? Is it well with the child?" the answer I trust, came from the heart, "It is well." 2 Kings 4: 26. May God comfort the afflicted ones, and bring them to meet the loved and lost in the goodly land where there shall be no more death. H. L. HASTINGS.

NANCY BRYANT.

Died, Sept. 29th, 1863 Nancy Bryant, wife of Jonathan Bryant, aged sixty-four years and nine days.

Of her it may be truly said she was a pattern of piety through the severest trials. She united with the church about the year 1842, and has been a consistent christian since. Her children can but remember her good example, and though they weep for the loss of the tenderest of mothers, they know that when the Lord himself shall descend from heaven, with a shout, with the voice of the archangel, and with the trump of God, the dead in Christ shall rise first, and their mother will come forth with all the righteous to receive an inheritance which is incorruptible, undefiled, and that fadeth not away.

"Asleep in Jesus, blessed sleep!
From which none ever wake to weep."

ABBIE S. BRYANT.

CLARK HENRY BRYANT.

Died in Moultonborough, N. H., August 25th, 1863, of diphtheria, Clark Henry, only son of Henry M. and Abbie S. Bryant, aged three years, two months, and six days.

Clark was a remarkable child, and early evinced an uncommon degree of affection. He was one of the best as well as most beautiful little darlings it has been my lot to behold. But death loves a shining mark. How sweet the promise that death, and him that had the power of death, is soon to be destroyed.

"The light has gone out from our cottage home,
All joy from our hearts is fled,
We hear his light footsteps no more round the room,
For our sweet little darling is dead.
• • • • • • •
O! winds, whisper softly above his new grave,
And pale stars your purest light shed,
Disturb not the rest of our precious one here,
But whisper soft notes o'er his head.

He's coming again from the enemy's land,
When Jesus descends from the skies,
To wake all the children who sleep in his name,
Then our sweet little one will arise."

ABBIE S. BRYANT.

CHARLES WEBSTER.

Died in East Poultney, Vt., Dec. 2d, 1863, of brain fever, Bro. Charles Webster, aged forty-six years.

Bro. W. was among "the poor of this world, rich in faith," having "a good report of them which are without."

"Hope made for him a pillow,
And Faith a garment rare,
To wrap him in his slumbers
Till Christ his home prepare."

He leaves a wife and five children to feel his loss. May God supply all their need. H. F. C.

SIMEON W. SHAW.

Died in Holderness, N. H., Nov. 24th, 1863, of typhoid fever, Simeon W. Shaw, aged forty-one years and nineteen days.

He was a firm believer in the speedy coming of Christ near at hand, and has left a wife and daughter, with a large circle of friends, to mourn his loss, he being the first out of nine brothers and sisters taken by the hand of the enemy. O when will cease his awful reign? WM. S. SHAW.

Summary of News.

FOREIGN.

GREAT BRITAIN.

Business was suspended from Dec. 24 to the 23th on account of the holidays.

The Army and Navy Gazette says the Messrs. Laird have refused several offers for their Mersey rams, declaring that they are not for sale.

It is understood that the U. S. Ministers at both London and Paris are making continued efforts to prevent the steamer Rappahannock leaving Calais for the high seas as a Confederate cruiser. The stores for the ship had reached Calais from England.

THE HOLSTIEN QUESTION.

At a meeting at Altona, in which thousands took part, Prince Frederick was formally proclaimed Duke of Holstein amid the greatest enthusiasm.

The town was subsequently illumined, and great crowds traversed the streets, singing the national song of Holstein. Order was maintained.

Telegraphic communication with Holstein was interrupted at noon of the 25th.

It was reported that the General commanding the Austrian troops in Hamburg had been recalled.

The Saxon troops entered Altona on the 24th ult. The Danes left as the Federal troops appeared.

The proclamation of the General Commissioners in Holstein, declares that they assume the administration of affairs without prejudice to the temporarily suspended rights of the Sovereign.

SPAIN.

A bill has been introduced in Congress fixing the strength of the Spanish army for 1864 at 100,000 men.

HUNGARY.

There are rumors of insurrectionary movements in Hungary, and Austria is taking precautions.

☞ It is asserted that England and Russia have begun to exercise pressure on Denmark in reference to the Holstein question; but that when General Fleury inquired of the Emperor of the French whether he was to act in concert with those Powers, he was ordered to leave Copenhagen immediately.

The following is the reply of the Emperor of the French to the Senate's address:

"Good is the sole motive power of my actions both at home and abroad. I desire the appeasing of passions with concord and union. I direct all my wishes to the moment when the great questions which divide governments and peoples will be pacifically solved by European abitrement. This wish was that of Napoleon, when he wrote from St. Helena that 'to fight in Europe is to make civil war.' May not this great thought, a utopia in the past, shortly become a reality? It is always an honor to proclaim a principle tending to remove the prejudices of another age. Let us unite our efforts for this noble end, and let us only study obstacles to vanquish them, and incredulity to confound it."

DOMESTIC.

Philadelphia, Jan. 7. The evening Bulletin has a Cincinnati dispatch, dated Cumberland, Md., 6th, which says an overwhelming force under Jones made a descent upon a small body of our troops stationed near Jonesville, Va., consisting of 280 men of an Illinois regiment, under Major Reeves, and 18 men of Weill's Ohio Battery, on Sunday last.

A desperate resistance was made by our troops, continuing from 7 A. M., until 3 P. M., when we were obliged to surrender. The attacking force numbered about 4000 men. The force captured were guarding a county which was our main reliance for forage.

New York, Jan. 7. Recent St. Louis papers state that Capt. Pizard, formerly a post captain in the naval service of France, has been in St. Louis for several days past. He went to the West, it is supposed, on an important mission for his government. He represents that it is no less than examining into the practicability and means of supplying the Emperor Napoleon's forces in Mexico with commissariat necessities via the Mississippi river.

Washington, Jan. 7. The Potomac river was frozen over last night and the vessels at the wharves had to cut their way into the channel.

The World's dispatch states that Gen. Meade is now in permanent command of the Army of the Potomac.

Gen. Rosecrans has not been assigned to the command of the Department of Missouri.

New York, Jan. 9th. The Herald has the following:

Cumberland, Md., Jan. 8th. The garrison at Petersburg, Va., was surrounded to-day. Fitz Hugh Lee and Rosser are moving between New Creek and Petersburg. The enemy drove our forces out of Burlington to-day. This place is threatened, and much excitement prevails here to-night. It seems probable that we will be attacked here to-morrow morning. The passenger trains on the railroad have been stopped; other trains nevertheless are running.

The enemy yesterday captured a train of thirty-six wagons. They are reported to be moving in three columns. Imboden has been attacked at Winchester and driven back.

THE FRENCH DESIGN IN MEXICO.—We take the following from the Paris correspondence of the London Army and Navy Gazette:

"There is an opinion here that troubles may arise with Banks on the Rio Grande. Banks is supposed to have some mission to aid the Mexicans, and several French steam frigates (to believe La Presse) have been detached to watch his movements. War vessels are also being dispatched to the Pacific coast to render the blockade of all Mexico effective.

The Constitutionnel exposes government views on this unpopular subject. This paper shows that the real object of the French invading Mexico was to prevent the extension of Yankee power. The Stars and Stripes may soon float over Vera Cruz and Acapulco, and the vast Mexican empire will then merge into the great American Republic. So formidable an increase of power would menace the liberty and peace of the world. When such sentiments are published in a semi-official paper, when the Mexican expedition is readily owned to be directed more against what the States may become than what Mexico was, it is time for French people to look with alarm on every movement which may bring Washington and Paris into hostile collision. Gallic eagles hovering about Matamoras, and the bird of 'freedom' on the Rio Grande, are in dangerous proximity."

DISSATISFACTION IN GEORGIA.—Deserters from the rebel army daily come into our lines at Chattanooga. Among the poorer classes of Georgians a fearful state of destitution is said to exist; and the denunciation of the rebellion and the rebel government is loud and emphatic, especially where there is no military surveillance over them. Refugees from the interior of the State estimate that fully two-thirds of the total population, if allowed a fair expression of opinion, would elect to return to the Union. Such statements must be received with considerable allowance, but there is doubtless a good deal of discontent among the people.

☞ The central arsenal of the rebel government has been removed from Richmond to Columbia, South Carolina, which act is supposed to preface an hegira of the government of the Confederacy and the establishment of its headquarters in the hot-bed of secession.

FUNERAL OF ARCHBISHOP HUGHES.—New York, Jan. 7th.—Archbishop Hughes was buried to-day from St. Patrick's Cathedral. High mass was celebrated by Bishop Timon of Buffalo.

Bishop McCloskey pronounced the funeral discourse. Hundreds of Catholic clergymen were present and the Cathedral was crowded to its utmost limits. After the ceremonies the body of the deceased Bishop was interred in a tomb under the Cathedral with impressive religious exercises.

Delegations of both branches of the City Government, and from all the Catholic Charitable and Religious Societies, and many distinguished persons from all parts of the United States were present.

THE AMNESTY AT THE SOUTH.—A letter from Natchez says that persons recently from the interior South are of the opinion that the President's offer of free pardon will have an excellent effect as soon as it becomes known. Prominent Mississippians say the plan for reconstruction will be gladly accepted by the people of that State as soon as sufficient portion of the territory is in our hands to allow a tenth part of the voting population an opportunity to express themselves.

The Storm at the West.

A train on the Michigan Central road got stuck thirteen miles from Chicago, and the Cleveland Herald gives the following account of the sufferings of the passengers:

"The cars on that road are provided with patent stoves, which will burn only when the cars are in motion, and consequently when the cars stopped the fires went out. The weather was intensely cold, the thermometer being thirty-two degrees below zero, and the sufferings of the passengers became intense, particularly those of the women and children. No fire could be started for a sufficient length of time to do any good. The top of the pipe would become red-hot and set fire to the top of the car several times, which was only put out by cutting away the woodwork.

There were five passenger cars in the train, well filled—about one hundred and fifty in all, a large number of whom were women and children. What added to the dreariness of the scene, as the night wore on, was, that the lights as well as the fire gave out, the cold increased in intensity, and the snow became four or five feet in depth, in huge drifts. By this time all the passengers became completely chilled through. The women and children were elevated on the top of the seats, where the air was warmer, and every thing done for their comfort that could be; but without fire, lights or food, out on a bleak prairie, their suffering was terrible.

They lay there from Thursday afternoon till Friday morning, when a train on the Michigan Southern road arrived, which also became blockaded, and could proceed no further. Preparations were immediately made to remove the passengers to the Michigan Southern cars, where warmth could be procured. A perfect stampede occurred, passengers fearing they would be left. Many of the women and children were unable to help themselves, and had to be carried from one car to the other. They remained on the Michigan Southern cars till Saturday night, suffering from the cold and want of food. They were finally taken off by sleighs and carried to Chicago.

There were none frozen to death, but large numbers were badly frost-bitten, some so severely that they will lose their hands or feet. The officers of both trains did every thing that could possibly be done under the circumstances for the comfort of passengers, and the two conductors are thought to be so badly frozen that they will never get over it.

It was impossible to do any thing to relieve the trains from the blockade, as no human being could stand the severity of the extreme cold for more than a minute or two without becoming enterely benumbed."

The transfer of the passengers to the Michigan Southern train is thus described by a correspondent of the Chicago Tribune:

"A distance of three hundred yards, more or less, was to be traversed. The snow was deeply drifted. The snow and frost-laden wind was sweeping the path like a storm of grape. But it was announced that the passengers would be taken to the city if they would instantly make an effort to reach the Southern train. Haste was necessary in order that the engines might not freeze up before we could get started. 'Don't a man of you start without taking a woman or a child with you,' shouted Carter. 'Wrap up, wrap up close,' shouted Butterfield, who in his anxiety for others forgot himself and froze his face, nose and ears—and women and children undertook the terrible passage. Cold as it was in the car, those who had not had occasion to expose themselves to the storm previously knew little of the ordeal through which they must pass in order to reach the other train. Strong men fell by the way—frail women dropped down unable to step, and were caught up in the strong arms of men and hurried to the cars insensible. Children, half-clad, were rescued half frozen.

Few who attempted the journey escaped being frost-bitten. White noses, ears, faces and hands marked most of the Central passengers and many of the Southern ones, who had nobly rendered aid in the transfer. The scenes on those cars, as the frozen passengers were helped in, beggars description. Men with frozen features rushed out for snow with which to extract the frost from the feet and hands and faces of the women and children, forgetting their own condition until made conscious of it by the painful tingling which follows neglect in such cases. Children were crying, women moaning and fainting, men shouting and rushing hither and thither, with snow and liquors."

Of the storm generally the Tribune says:

"From the eastern boundaries of the Ohio to the plains of Kansas; from the extreme south of Illinois to the northern limits of Michigan and Wisconsin, the storm has raged in uncontrolled fury. The vast expanse of territory known as the 'Northwest' has been bowed down by its visitation. Like the sirocco of the desert it has taken in its broad sweep almost a continent, and devastation has marked its course. On the level prairies of Illinois the storm has held high carnival, no natural barrier interposed to check its progress; it has leveled all before it in one fell swoop. For days—perhaps weeks—the sad record will meet with constant accessions, as from places situated outside of the regular line of railroad and telegraph communication the details will arrive.

Scores, perhaps hundreds of persons will have been lost, their property destroyed and their homes left desolate. Never since the bitter cold and snows of the winters of 1854–'55 and 1855–'56 have we experienced a storm any thing like that whose fury has just been expended. Indeed it has surpassed those bitter visitations, for although the snow was deeper the wind was not so strong nor the cold so severe. Then but a few persons were seriously injured. Now we have a great number who have lost the use of their limbs from the frost bite, and some have been lost."

The St. Louis Republican of the 4th inst., says they never experienced colder weather than was felt there on the first day of the new year, 1864, a day which may likely enough be spoken of for years as the Cold Friday. At 7 o'clock on the morning of that day the thermometer fell to 19.5 below zero, and a minimum thermometer of Green's construction indicated a temperature, some time before daylight, of twenty-two degrees below zero!

On the Mississippi, in Northern Illinois, the cold has been more intense than has ever been known. In Galena, February 9th, 1835, the mercury fell to 32 degrees below zero.

At Cairo, on the 2d inst., the thermometer was 14 degrees below zero. The Mississippi is frozen perfectly solid to its junction with the Ohio.

A dispatch to the Chicago Tribune from St. Louis states that on the North Missouri Railroad 10,000 hogs have frozen to death, and an immense number of cattle have frozen along all the railroads. In the city several persons have died from a similar cause, and the suffering of the poor reported to the authorities surpass belief. In Wisconsin trains were hedged in by snow drifts and remained for hours, unable to move. At Madison, on the 2d, the mercury was 39 degrees below zero. At Camp Randall the supply of wood became exhausted, and a large number of soldiers were badly frozen. At Oshkosh the mercury fell 38 below, one woman was frozen to death and frozen hands and feet were numerous. At Milwaukee the thermometer ranged from 30 to 35 degrees below zero, with a driving wind most terrible to encounter. Frozen ears, noses and feet are innumerable, and many persons were picked up insensible on the streets. Ears and feet were frozen while going but a few blocks. Many employees of the railroads were badly frozen and crippled for life, and railroad travel was entirely suspended.

At Springfield, Ill., all railroad communication was suspended, with no prospect of being resumed for several days. The weather was bitter cold. Several soldiers froze to death at Camp Yates. A stage driver was found dead on his box, supposed to have frozen to death.

The Chicago papers record some painful incidents of suffering and death from cold in that city, during the late storm. A woman whose husband was recently killed in the war left her two boys, aged five and two years, in the house, to go and make some purchases, but got drunk. On returning, during the night, both children were found dead. On the floor lay the youngest child in a heap of snow; he was frozen stiff, and was of course dead. The eldest boy lay on the bed, he, too, was dead, but not quite cold. He had built a fire against a trunk which stood near, and a hole was burned in its side, another in the floor, and the bedclothes had been on fire. He had probably been asleep. The door having been left open, the room was fileld with snow; and on awakening, perishing with cold, he found his brother dead. He then closed the door, lit a fire on the floor, and sank down benumbed with the cold. A soldier was found in the street unable to walk, and being taken to a police station both of his boots had to be cut off, his feet being badly frozen, and it is expected they will have to be amputated. Another man was picked up insensible. His legs were found to be frozen from his hips to his feet, and it is probable that both his legs must be amputated. A man who had both hands frozen put them into warm water, by which means they were rendered a mass of putrified flesh, and will probably have to be amputated.

A Clinton (Iowa) dispatch says the snow drifts along the railroad are from eight to ten feet deep, and half a mile long, packed hard enough to hold up teams. The thermometer was thirty degrees below zero.

The Pittsburg Chronicle says that two brakemen on the Oil Creek Railroad were frozen to death the other night, one of whom rolled off the car and the other was found at his post, his hand frozen to the brake wheel!

MARRIED.

At Ripley, N. Y., Dec. 30th, 1863, by Eld. J. T. Ongley, Bro. HARVEY E. DEWEY, of Arkwright, Chaut. Co., N. Y., to Sr. ELIZA M. AUSTIN, of Ripley, Chaut. Co., N. Y.

Notices.

Notice.

To the preaching brethren in Eastern New York, Western Mass. and Conn. Dear Brn:—At the last appointed conference at Bantam, Ct., there not being members present sufficient to do business, it was agreed that I should write to all the preachers in the limits of the conference, requesting their meeting in conference at East Otis, Mass., Jan. 20th, 1864, for the purpose of organizing upon a basis that would secure a mutual and harmonious co-operation in the work of the ministry. I have therefore written to most of you, and received in return several letters of encouragement. And of those to whom I have not written, I beg the acceptance of my apology, it being through negligence and not of design.

But relative to the appointment at Otis, I am informed that the brethren there would be glad of such a meeting, if they had a convenient place to hold it. But at this season of the year their meeting-house cannot be made comfortable for such an occasion; in view of which it appears to me necessary to postpone the appointment, and submit the question of a future meeting, time and place, to your consideration; requesting each and all, who are interested in the matter, to ascertain where and when such a meeting could be held agreeable to the wishes and convenience of the brethren, and send me information, and I will give notice accordingly. In behalf of the brethren,

T. S. CANFIELD.

Conference in Union Mills, Ind.

A covenant meeting of the church will be held at the usual hour, Saturday, Jan. 16th. In the evening I shall preach. Sabbath, Jan. 17th, preach in Union Mills, at 10 o'clock A. M., and in the evening at Stillwater Prairie. Resume the meetings at Union Mills Monday evening, Jan. 18th, and continue day and evening over the next Sabbath. All are invited. Let us have a grand rally in the name of the Lord. JOSHUA V. HIMES.

Wanted

One of the old 1843 Geographical Charts of the Four Kingdoms, painted in cloth; such as were used by our lecturers twenty years ago; also a set of the Symbolic Charts, presenting the metalic image, four beasts, etc., all in good repair. If you can spare me one for love or money, do not wait a month before replying, but write at once to, and oblige D. T. TAYLOR, Castleton, Rutland Co., Vt.

Notice.

There will be a series of meetings at South Butler, Wayne Co., N. Y., commencing Jan. 22nd, and continuing through the following week, and over Sunday, Jan. 31st. Eld. F. Burr, of Honeoye, is expected to help preach the word. Let the brethren and sisters in the surrounding country prepare to attend this meeting. Come with your hearts full of love, that by your earnest prayers and exhortations you may help on the car of truth. Modern infidelity must fall. C. B. TURNER.

Tract Notice.

Elder I. C. Wellcome, Yarmouth, Me., has a good supply of tracts and books, hymn books, etc., published by the C. P. Society, and by H. L. Hastings and others. Also, a great variety of other best works on the Advent, and inheritance of the saints.

Notice.

Elder Thomas Smith, Bangor, Me., has on hand for sale H. L. Hastings' "Signs of the Times," with an assortment of his various Tracts; also, the Tracts by Miles Grant, on "The Soul," "The Spirit," and "What is Man?" and other Advent tracts.

A Liberal Offer.

Being satisfied that time is short, and that what is done must be done quickly; and feeling anxious to do what we can to arouse a sleeping world and church, we make the following liberal offer:—Any one who will send three or more new subscribers to the Crisis for six months or one year, with advance pay for the same, shall receive at wholesale prices, including postage, any of our books and tracts they may select, amounting to one-third the value of the money sent. For instance, if they send three dollars, they receive one dollar's worth of books or tracts; for six dollars, we send them two dollars' worth; for twelve dollars, four dollars' worth, etc. Let every reader take hold of the work in earnest, and help scatter tracts, books and papers like autumnal leaves.

MILES GRANT, per order of Publishing Committee.

VALUABLE BOOKS FOR SALE.

BUCK: OUR LORD'S GREAT PROPHECY. An extended Exposition of Matthew xxiv, and its parallel passages, and an utter overthrow of the idea that Christ came when Jerusalem was destroyed. By D. D. Buck, a Methodist minister. 8vo. Cloth, $1.50 by mail.

TAYLOR: THE EMPHATIC NEW TESTAMENT,—the four Gospels,—compared with the various readings of the Vatican manuscript, edited, with an introductory Essay on Greek Emphasis, by John Taylor. 8vo; pp. 260. $1.50 by mail.

Much light is thrown upon many passages by the system of emphasis which the author has introduced, by which all the words regarded as emphatic are distinguished by peculiar type.

MOSHEIM: INSTITUTES OF ECCLESIASTICAL History, Ancient and Modern. By J. L. MOSHEIM. A new and literal translation from the Latin, with copious additional notes, original and selected, by James Murdock, D.D. 3 vols., 8vo, pp. 1461. $5.00 by express.

This is the best edition of this valuable history, and is far preferable to the other version by MACLAINE.

COUNCIL OF NICE. A Historical View of the Council of Nice, with a translation of documents, by Rev. Isaac Boyle, M. A. 8vo; pp. 62. By mail 50 cts.

KITTO: The Cyclopædia of Biblical Literature. Edited by John Kitto, D. D., F. S. A. Illustrated by numerous maps and engravings. 2 vols., 8vo., 1878 pages, double columns, half calf binding. Price $8.

HEBREW: The Englishman's Hebrew and Chaldee Concordance, by which an English reader can find the original Hebrew for any word in the English Bible, with all the places where it occurs. 2 vols. Cloth, $22, 1 vol. sheep, or half morocco, $23. 1763 pp.

MURDOCK: The New Testament, translated from the Syriac by James Murdock, D. D. 8vo., 515 pp. Price $2.

Address H. L. HASTINGS, Boston, Mass.

English Bibles for Sale.

1. DIAMOND, fine print, full references, morocco bound, $1.50, calf, $1.25; roan, gilt, $1.00; flexible binding, $1.00. Postage 12 cents.
2. PEARL, flat, full references, morocco, $2.25, roan, $1.50. Postage 16 cts.
3. NONPAREIL, 16 mo., references between the verses, or references in the margin, morocco, $3.00; calf, $2.50, roan, $2.00; references between verses, with gilt rims and clasps, $3.00. Postage 20 cts.
4. MINION, references between the verses, roan, $2.50. Postage 25 cts.
5. MINION, 8vo., marginal ref., flat and clear type, roan, $2.50.
6. TESTAMENTS, roan, gilt, smallest 25 cts; larger, 33 cts. Postage 6 cts.

Address MILES GRANT, Boston, Mass.

Price Reduced.

RESURRECTION OF THE WICKED. Discussion between M. Grant and J. T. Curry.

The advertised price of this Discussion is 25 cents, postage 2 cents. We have a quantity of them on hand, and will sell them hereafter for 20 cts., postage 2 cts. Send on your orders.

THE TWO WITNESSES, Moses and Elijah. By the Rev. I. P. Labagh. An argument to show that the two Witnesses (Rev. xi.) are neither the Old and New Testaments, nor the Waldenses and Albigenses, etc. etc., but rather Moses and Elias, and that the prophecy concerning them is yet to be literally fulfilled. Price in cloth 15 cts., paper 10 cents.

We think this work is the best on the Two Witnesses that we have ever read.—ED.

PHOTOGRAPHS OF ELD. EDWIN BURNHAM. A few copies of a large, beautiful and life-like Photograph, which the friends of Bro. Burnham will be glad to obtain. Sent by mail for $1.00. Those wishing them should order at once.

HIRAM MUNGER'S Life and Religious Experience. Including many singular circumstances connected with revivals and campmeetings. Written by himself. 50 cents, postage paid.

Appointments.

We would say to our preaching Brethren that it is necessary we should receive their appointments as early as TUESDAY MORNING, as our paper goes to press about noon; otherwise they will not be inserted till the week following.

LOWELL STREET CHAPEL, BOSTON, CORNER OF CAUSEWAY AND LOWELL STREETS. Meetings are held regularly three times every Sunday, and Tuesday and Friday evenings. Seats free.

APPOINTMENT FOR LOWELL STREET CHAPEL.

H. L. Hastings........Sunday, Jan. 17th and onward for the present.

Lynn, Mass........Jan. 17th
Cabot, Vt., Thursday, P. M., Jan. 21st, and continue through the week and over the following Lord's day
On Friday, P. M., Jan. 22nd, Bro. Nathan Wheeler will be set apart for the work of the ministry.
Montreal, (Bonaventure Hall), Tuesday evening, Jan. 26th, and every evening for two weeks, including Lord's days, Jan. 31st and Feb. 7th. Brethren, pray for us.
MILES GRANT.

Dansville, N. Y........Sunday Jan. 17th
South Butler........Jan. 22d to 24th
Bristol........Sunday, 10 1-2 o'clock, A. M., Jan. 31st
Honeoye........Sunday, 2 o'clock, P. M., Jan. 31st
Dansville........Sunday, Feb. 7th
F. BURR.

Lawrence, Mass........Jan. 24th
Haverhill, Mass........Jan. 31st
J. W. BRITTAN.

Athol, Mass., (as Bro. Sawtell may appoint), evening, Jan 22nd.
Northfield, Mass........Sunday, Jan. 24th
L. BOUTELL.

Danbury, N. H........Jan. 17th
Z. FORD.

Lawrence, Mass........Jan. 17th
W. S. CAMPBELL.

Eld. S. G. Mathewson will commence a series of lectures on the prophecies in Rutland, Vt., Jan. 13th, and continue over two Sundays.

Concord, N. H........Sunday, Feb. 7th
Exeter, N. H........Feb. 14th, 21st, and 28th
A. ROSS.

Exeter, R. I., (in the Garner school-house, as the Brn. may arrange), Jan. 24th.
Charleston, R. I., (in the Stone meeting-house), Feb. 7th
RUFUS W. PEIRCE.

Agawam........Sunday, Jan. 24th
[No name accompanied this notice.]

Bro. Andrews'........Saturday evening, Jan. 16th
Bradford Centre........Sunday, Jan. 17th
JOSEPH W. WHITE.

South Newbury, N. H........Sunday, Jan. 24th
WM. SUTHERLAND.

Wells Forge........Wednesday evening, Jan. 13th
Cold Spring........Thursday evening, Jan. 14th
Round Hill (Chester)........Sunday, Jan. 17th
WM. J. HALE.

Springfield, Mass., (Bro. Morgan's,) evening, Jan. 16th
Agawam........Sunday, Jan. 17th
Sunday evening, as Bro. Sister shall appoint.
L. B. POTTER.

Pleasant Valley, Ct........Jan. 13th to 17th
Danielsonville, Ct........Jan. 22d
and over the Lord's day, and longer if the interest demands.
Lawrence, Mass........Sunday, Jan. 31st
A. ROSS.

Lee, N. H........Jan. 17th
J. W. BRITTAN.

Haverhill, Mass........Sunday, Jan. 17th
A. SIMPSON.

South Windsor, Ct........Jan. 17th
G. P. BABCOCK.

Blooming Valley, Crawford Co., Pa., Jan. 23d to the 29th.
Edinboro', Erie Co., Pa., Jan. 30th till March 3d
Brethren, please arrange for these meetings, and pray about them.
JOS. D. BROWN.

Collinsville, Ct........Jan. 17th
C. GOODRICH.

The Plains, Appanaug........Jan. 16th
and over Lord's day.
Natic........Jan. 18th
River Point........Jan. 19th
Central........Jan. 20th
Coventry, (Town House)........Jan. 21st
Summet........Jan. 22d
Danielsonville........Jan. 23d
and over Lord's day.
J. J. NORTHUP.

Greeley........Sunday, Jan. 17th
Manchester........evening, Jan. 17th
and remain some days.
Intend to visit the brethren at Coffin's Grove.
P. W. HOYON.

Business.

THE NEW TRACT FUND.

Two Thousand Dollars.

We, the undersigned, agree to give the sums affixed to our names, for the purpose of raising TWO THOUSAND DOLLARS to aid the Christian Publication Society in the gratuitous distribution of tracts; and our subscriptions shall be paid at the call of the Treasurer, as soon as one half of the amount shall be subscribed.

Pledges and payments to Jan. 1st,	$379 30
W. Watson	1.00
T. J. Philbrick	1.00

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

MRS. S. V. WHITAKER—Your Postmaster is mistaken. The postage on The Pilgrim is 12 cents a year for any number of papers weighing less than four ounces, when sent to one address. Your two copies, therefore, require but 12 cents postage.

H. A. ARNOLD—As the pamphlets and tracts are of different sizes, they cannot all be bound together. Your better way is to send for them, and have them bound yourself. He lives in Bangor.

S. SHIELD—As you did not send postage for the Lyre, we have taken it from your remittance, and Bro. C. C. can pay you 12 cents.

D. JONES—Received.

WM. FREEMAN OR TRUMAN sends us $5.00 to be credited on Crisis account, but gives neither his post office nor State. Will he inform us?

E. L. BURNAP—Out of "Controversy." Will send soon.

S. H. COVELL—It was received and acknowledged. Paid to No. 450.

CASH RECEIPTS TO JAN. 9, 1864.

The present No. of the Crisis is 432.

The No. which follows your name, is the No. to which your money pays.

Deduct the one from the other, and you will see how far you have paid in advance, or how much is due the office

Make a memorandum of the same, and you will be reminded when your subscription expires.

G H Beck 449, S K Ford 433, E T Welsh 453, W Smith 450, J Merril 442, A Phinney 399, S Dodge 478, M J Koykendall 428, Mrs M Knapp 512, A Waterman 442, H C Smith 473, C Van Vliet 464, B Gudden 457, M Kelly 457, B S Miller 457, J Bell 457, T S Knowlton 462, L W Ranger 451, J E Smith 457, A Arnold 485, S Sawyer 397, F M Berry 461, F H Balch 458, S E Hooper 39?, R Clark 454, C B Hall 335, Mrs H S Ellis 457, D Spaulding 457, Wm S Hersey 457, Jas Hooper 457, W Kinney 457, C H Shepherd 457, B F Smith 457, S W Smith 457, D C Fitch 457, S Roberts 442, H Oxford 484, R Mc Fadden 428, B Shorey 457, J Douglas 470, Mrs M M Ross 471, Wm Stark 481, O D Gibson 444, C N Buzzell 3?8, A P Moore —, C Bitgood 449, J Card 457, J S Read 457, E C Elliott 457, W M E Hawks 457, E H Downs 431, C W Osgood 431, Mrs M A Hardy 465, E Buckland 431, E Franchier 455, P Wheelock 439, J B Wait —, A Twiss 437, R Parmeter 449, J Flanders 444, P Gardner 443, R R Dore 462, R Orn 457, J B Newcomb 457, E Owen 457, M Cumiskee 457,—$1.00 each

J Mitchell 432, Z Grosier 483, E T Welsh 482, E Sanderson 484, B Perkins 443, Dr J W Bane 482, C Stevens 466, D Watson 440, M P Pattee 482, C Corperon 489, Mrs L E Simpson 482, J P Racklif 482, L J Lane 482, A Bowle 430, S Stone 470, R Stayton 481, W Draper 433, P Fish 483, W Mc Andrews 483, J Higgins 468, L N Shaw 483, F Platt 483, Wm Freeman or Truman (What P. O.?), J Wilbur 483, M M Lockhart 462, T W Brooks 481, Mrs C M Stark 508, F S Ransom 478, T F Farnsworth 482, Mrs C Tillotson 456, A C Newell 459, A Shaw 483, W S Chipman 483, T D Bailey 468, A H Bolton 433, S R Stewart 491, Wm Mc Allister 483, I Ewell 442, J H Nash 416, S N Davis 458, J C Tibbetts 483,—$2.00 each.

S L Manley 441, A Fenton 457, J D Jones 443, B H Straight 431, V Burr 444, J B Patterson 444, C M Couch 444, J Ethridge 444, Mrs M B Dorr 444, S E Bettes 346, S F Hulbard 444, Mrs W L Browning 444,—50c each

A Rowe $3.00, 478, W S Wadleigh $1.00, 380; Wm Bartholomew $4.00, 452, G A Smith 65c, 445, D Platt $1.00, 485, F Hale $1.50, 455, A Post $5.00, 303, S R Barber $5.00, ?; A B Doty 75c, 450.

FOR BOOKS AND TRACTS.

W Hayes 25c, P Fish $1.00, Z E Harris 25c, Thos Smith $2.00, J B Cranshaw 15c, E Hadley 12c, A Hawks $1.25, P W Southworth $1.25, E L Burnap 35c, A H Bolton 22c.

BOOKS AND TRACTS SENT.

BY MAIL.

P W Southworth, Volenia, Mich., H Babbitt, Ypsilanti, Mich., A H Bolton, E. Princeton, Vt.; C P Dow, Saxe's Mills, Vt., O D Gibson, Houghtonville, Vt.; S D Daniels, W. Suffield, Ct., Mrs S A Coburn, Haverhill, Mass.; E L Burnap, E. Calais, Vt.; E C Cowles, W. Groton, N. Y.; P Watson, New Oregon, Iowa; N W Eastman, Douglass, Iowa; Mrs E D Mitchell, Kennebunkport, Me., A W Griggs, Monmouth, Ill.; B Whitehouse, Alton, N. H.; Wm Prosser, Brothertown, Wis.

LETTERS RECEIVED.

M. H. Morrison, W. J., A C Judson, W Sheldon, J C Rogers, J Dudley, M S Horne, M P Lamprey, J Elkins, C H Leverton, N Grant, C N Buzzell, J Wilbur, A P Moore, J E Clark, J P Nelson, S Basford, J T Ongley, H H Clavey, A S Bryant.

POST OFFICE ADDRESS.

Eld F. Burr—Dansville, Livingston Co., N. Y.

Eld. N. P. Nason—Newport, Me. Residence, North Palmyra.

☞ My address, until further notice, will be No. 128 High Street, Brooklyn, L. I., N. Y. I may be absent for a few days at some appointments, and will respond immediately on return. Come, dear friends, send in your orders and help scatter the light. S. S. BREWER.

Walter Pratt—New Bedford, Mass.

BOOKS AND TRACTS.

All publications sent by mail must be prepaid. The postage on Tracts is 2 cents for each FOUR OUNCES, or fractional part of four ounces; on Books, 4 cents for each FOUR OUNCES or fractional part of the same. For example, the postage on any one tract on this list is TWO CENTS, but three or four tracts may be sent in the same parcel at the same price. A Book weighing 4 ounces costs 4 cents postage, one weighing 5 ounces would cost 8 cents, or just as much as if it weighed 8 ounces.

MILES GRANT'S WORKS.

Resurrection of the Wicked. Discussion with Jos. T. Curry. "Do the Scriptures teach the Resurrection of the Wicked?" Phonographically reported by E. P. Woodward. 25c, postage 2c.

Eternal Suffering. Discussion with Dr. J. Litch. "Do the Scriptures teach the eternal conscious suffering of the Wicked?" 25c, postage 4c.

Spiritualism. Discussion with J. S. Loveland, "On Spiritualism and Immortality." 10c, postage 2c.

State of the Dead. Discussion with W. W. Clayton, "On the State of the Dead and the Punishment of the Wicked." 25c, postage 2c. Bound 30c, postage 4c.

Miles Grant's Tracts. 32 pages each. Price 5 cents single, 50 cents per dozen, $2.00 per hundred. Postage 2 cents for each package of four tracts or less.

What is Man? A Bible view of his creation; The meaning of Soul, Spirit, Death, and Hell.

The Soul, What is it? Or a careful examination of all the uses of the words nephesh and psuke as employed in the old and new Testaments.

The Spirit, What is it? Or a careful examination of all the uses of the words ruach and pneuma as found in the old and new Testaments.

The Rich Man and Lazarus. Thief on the Cross; Souls under the Altar; an exposition of Matthew 10: 28, Genesis 35: 18, &c.

C. F. HUDSON'S WORKS.

Debt and Grace. Or the Doctrine of a Future Life, by C F. Hudson. A most learned and valuable work, exhibiting great candor, ability, and research, containing quotations from some four hundred writers of all ages and languages, and showing conclusively that eternal life is the peculiar privilege of the believer in Jesus Christ. 1 vol. 12 mo., pp. 483, price $1.25—post paid.

Christ our Life. The Scriptural Argument for Immortality through Christ alone. 160 pp. In cloth, 40c. Paper, 25c.

Human Destiny. A Critique on Universalism. Cloth, 30c. Paper, 20c. With the following and Mr. H.'s other Tracts, 228 pages in all, 50c.

The Doctrine of Endless Misery an occasion of Scepticism. From Sir James Stephen, with notes. 3c., postage 2c. $2.00 per 100.

Eternal Death in the literal sense is Eternal Punishment. 3c., postage 2c. $2.00 per 100.

The Rich Man and Lazarus. With remarks on Josephus. 3c., postage 2c. $2.00 per 100.

The Rights of Wrong; or, is Evil Eternal? With Reply to Dr. Mangel. 3c., postage 2c. $2.00 per 100.

Reviewers Reviewed. New edition with replies to articles in the Quarterlies, January, April, and September, 1861, and April and October, 1862. (Price 10c., postage 2c.)

JACOB BLAIN'S WORKS.

Death not Life; or, The Destruction of the Wicked Scripturally established. Price 25c, postage 5c. Bound 40c, postage 8c.

Glad Tidings; or, Bible Proof that Woe and Sin are to end in the universe by a literal destruction of wicked men and devils after the day of Judgment. 5c, postage 2c.

The Wicked not Immortal. Two hundred texts quoted to prove their destruction. 2c.

Bible Meaning of the Word Hell. 3c.

Endless Misery not a Bible Doctrine. 3c.

Smoke of Torment and Unquenchable Fire Explained. 1c.

The above five Tracts are parts of Death not Life.

Bible Meaning of Forever and Everlasting. 1c.

Letter of Rev. John Foster on Future Punishment. 2c.

BOOKS PUBLISHED BY H. L. HASTINGS, 187 HANOVER STREET, BOSTON, MASS.

[illegible]

The Signs of the Times; or, A Glance at Christendom [illegible]

The Voice of the Church on the Coming and Kingdom of the Redeemer [illegible]

Spiritualism a Satanic Delusion and a Sign of the Times. [illegible]

Thessalonica; or, The Model Church. A sketch of Primitive Christianity. [illegible]

The Great Controversy between God and Man. [illegible]

Reasons for my Hope, and the Tokens of its Speedy Realization. [illegible]

Thessalonica and Reasons for my Hope. Bound in one volume. [illegible]

Looking Forward; or, the Prospects of the Church; [illegible]

Future Punishment, as revealed in the Scriptures, [illegible]

Pauline Theology; or, The Scripture Doctrine of Future Punishment, as taught in the Epistles of Paul. By H. L. Hastings. [illegible]

The Old Paths; or, the Primitive Doctrine of a Future Life. [illegible]

Retribution; or, The Doom of the Ungodly, after the Resurrection of the Dead, Just and Unjust. [illegible]

MISCELLANEOUS.

Cruden's Condensed Concordance, by which any [illegible]

The Life of Trust. An account of the Lord's Dealings with George Müller. [illegible]

Two Hundred Stories for Children. An excellent and entertaining book for young and old, compiled by T. M. Preble. [illegible]

A Treatise on the 24th and 25th chapters of Matthew, [illegible]

Should Christians Fight? A pamphlet on War, [illegible]

The Bible from Heaven, or a dissertation on the Evidences of Christianity. [illegible]

America in Prophecy. Exposition of the 13th chap. [illegible]

The Celestial Railroad, or Modern Pilgrim's Progress. [illegible]

The Three Kingdoms, or the Kingdom of God the [illegible]

The Ten Virgins, or Wisdom and Folly contrasted. By T. M. Preble. [illegible]

The Two Adams. By T. M. Preble. An interesting tract. [illegible]

Messiah's Mission, or an exposition of the Gospel Covenant. [illegible]

The Excellency of the Lord's Anointed, or Christ [illegible]

Everybody's Book. The Bible View of the personality of God. [illegible]

Cook Book. By Dr. F. W. Hurd. This book gives [illegible]

Premature Decay of American Youth. By Dr. A. Stone. [illegible]

The Saint's Harvest, or an exposition of Matt. 24: 14, in connection with Dan. 12: 11-13. [illegible]

The Old and New Covenant. Superiority of the New. [illegible]

The Christian Lyre. A collection of Hymns and Tunes for Worship. [illegible]

A Disquisition on the Prophecies. By F. H. Berick. [illegible]

An Appeal to Pious Trinitarians. By H. Grew. [illegible]

TRACTS

Issued by the Christian Publication Society.

[illegible]

FREE TO THE POOR.

The Church not in Darkness; or, the duties of the church [illegible]

The Three Worlds; or, earth, past, present, and future. [illegible]

The Last Days. A calm, scriptural, and convincing argument [illegible]

Plain Truths; or, Scripture and Tradition united. [illegible]

Will all Men be Saved? A pointed, pithy, earnest [illegible]

A Voice of Warning from the Four Winds. [illegible]

The New Heavens and New Earth. A collection of [illegible]

Ancient Landmarks. Six tracts of four pages each. [illegible]

The Duty of Christians in the present crisis. [illegible]

State of the Dead. By John Milton, author of "Paradise Lost." [illegible]

Silence of the Scriptures respecting the immortality of the soul. [illegible]

Immortality Through Christ Alone. The doctrine [illegible]

The Destiny of the Wicked. A solid mass of Scripture. [illegible]

The Advent at Hand. A summary of reasons for [illegible]

S. S. BREWER'S TRACTS.

The Kingdom of God and the Signs of the Times. Price 10c, postage 2c.

The Days we Live in. Price 10c, postage 2c.

The Seven Seals. An Exposition of the Sixth Chapter of Revelation. [illegible]

The Slaying of the Witnesses. Price 7c, postage 2c.

The Great Image soon to be smashed to pieces. Price [illegible]

The Two-Horned Beast. Price 5c, postage 2c.

The Rich Man and Lazarus. Price 5c, postage 2c.

MILES GRANT, Boston, Mass.

For the World's Crisis.

MAN.

God formed man from dust of earth,
Six days from creation's birth,
'TWAS DUST AND BREATH, the entire whole,
That God pronounced a LIVING SOUL!
Placed him in Eden, said, Rely,
If disobedient, thou shalt die,
Now freely eat of all you see,
Except that one forbidden tree.
We read next what the Lord God did,
He took from Adam's side a rib.
That Adam should not dwell alone,
Made him a help-meet from this bone.
Then brought her straightway to the man,
And called her by the name woman.
Ah! fatal hour when mother Eve
Did eat and thus the Lord God grieve.
And Adam took from out Eve's hand,
Then eat, and broke the Lord's command.
God for this act to him did say,
To you I now declare this day,
Because you've listened to your wife,
You now have forfeited your life.
My prohibition you did break,
The ground is cursed for your sake;
It thorns and thistles now shall yield,
Thy food shall be herbs of the field.
God banished Adam and his wife
From eating of the tree of life,
And entail on their progeny
A future endless misery.
To gain thy bread by sweat thou must,
Till thou return again to dust.
From Eden now I will thee spurn,
To dust thou shalt again return.
Thou shalt be as before thy birth,
A part and parcel of the earth.
The breath which I at first did give,
That made thee walk and think and live,
It shall return again to me,
And then unconscious thou shalt be.
'T will make no difference, slave, nor king,
The dead will know not any thing.
Jesus the mighty died to save,
And bring the dead up from their grave;
When he returns his saints shall be
Awaked to immortality.
O come! Lord Jesus, haste away!
And bring the Coronation Day.

South Glastenbury, Ct. S. S. BREWER.

Correspondence.

From Bro. B. Spaulding.

BRO. GRANT:—Since writing last, I have visited Dorchester, where are a few good brethren and sisters isolated and scattered, and I love to visit such and comfort them with the soon coming of Jesus.

I visited the brethren at East Canaan and Orange, found them holding on to the truths of God's word, determined to live and go through in spite of all the trials of the way. Some unpleasant feelings disturb their peace, yet I trust they will lay them aside, and come out right at last.

At Danbury I found things not as I wished, there is a drawing apart. O! if they would only draw together, what a strong band they would be! They have numbers, talents, gifts, pecuniary means in a sufficient quantity to supply all their wants, but they lack union and brotherly love. Their minds are well enlightened on the gospel plan of salvation and restitution. O! that brethren would lay aside these weights, and love as brethren, be pitiful, courteous, kind, think and let think, speak and let speak. While they have the privilege to enjoy their own opinion; let others do the same, and yet hold fellowship with them, and live in harmony and brotherly love, and unite their efforts in the good cause. What an amount of good might be effected! How many would look on and say, Behold! how these brethren love one another!

I am grieved to see so much of this disunion, this unsympathizing state of feeling all over the country. It does seem as though the one great subject of the soon coming kingdom might and ought to swallow up all these minor subjects.

At Wilmot I found a few true to the cause, yet circumstances were against us, and did not accomplish much there. I have been hospitably received every where, and found all that readiness to communicate I could wish to ask. God bless the good brethren and sisters.

The infirmities of age are upon me. I find the cold north country too severe for my constitution, and I propose staying at home until warm weather. I love the work as well as ever. I enjoy it, am satisfied with my station, and with my salary too. The good Lord has blessed me spiritually and temporally. Blessed be his name! I hope to be able to work in the vineyard while I live, and to be changed in the twinkling of an eye, when Jesus comes, and rise with the resurrected ones to meet the Lord in the air, and descend with them to Mount Olives, or the cleansed sanctuary, where the Lord my God and all his saints will come.

Yours looking for the King,
New London, N. H. B. SPAULDING.

From Sr. L. B. Weaver.

Brethren and sisters in Christ:—Oftentimes is my heart cheered and encouraged by reading your excellent articles in our paper. My situation is a very trying one, but the bright prospect of eternal life cheers me in this world of affliction. It rejoices my aching heart to know that deliverance is soon to be given. I sigh for rest. With a body constantly racked with pain, how sweet the thought of rest. None but those in a like situation can ever know the sweet consolation that such a hope gives them. For many long months I have not been able to sit up, and have suffered so much that I long to sleep in Jesus, yet it is all right, for—

"He orders all things for the best,
Then why should I repine?"

Our suffering time will soon be past, and then the glory will come. How precious the thought to me to know that in that "better land" the inhabitants shall never say "I am sick!" With one of old I can truly say that "wearisome days and troublesome nights are appointed to me;" but in the golden city there will be no night—one unending day. It is soul-cheering and hope-inspiring.

"I long to be there!"

I can make any sacrifice if I can have a home in the kingdom of God. Ah! yes, I must be there, to meet the dear ones that now are sleeping in yonder burying-ground, awaiting the voice of God to bid them arise!

"Let thy kingdom, blessed Saviour,
Come and bid our sorrows cease."

Oh! how sweet it will be to meet our dear friends again. Let the day dawn! Let the saints be gathered home, where sorrow can come no more, where death shall never have admittance. No sickness shall be there, no watchings around the sick bed, no farewell tears shed, for God's own soft hand shall wipe all tears away. And there shall be no more pain, "for the former things are passed away." No more sleepless nights, no more tossing to and fro upon the bed with a body so distressed that life is almost burdensome. Thank God! the scene will be changed. I long to bask in the sunshine of his eternal glory and pluck ambrosial fruit from off the tree of life, and be permitted to walk forth and view the new earth o'er. How sweet it will be to one who has not walked for nine long, weary years. Lord, hasten the time!

And now may the blessing of heaven be and abide with all the dear saints, and we be permitted at last to meet in the kingdom, is the prayer of your afflicted sister,

Athol, Mass. LUTHERA B. WEAVER.

From Sr. N. Colburn.

BRO. GRANT:—I would return my humble thanks to God, to yourself, and also to Bro. C. P. Dow, for the reception of your excellent paper, the World's Crisis. I esteem it a great privilege to peruse its pages; it cheers my lone heart to hear from those of like precious faith through its columns. I believe the doctrine it advocates is founded on the word of God, and is calculated to shed rays of divine light upon the pilgrim's pathway, and to cheer each saint of God while traveling through this howling wilderness. I shall read with interest, then scatter abroad, so long as you see fit to forward to me; and should I regain my health, shall feel it a duty and privilege to send in my name as a subscriber.

I have been confined to my bed and room the most of the time for the last two years; but as I have of late begun to amend a little, I think God is about to remove the disease, and again bless me, his unworthy child, with a degree of health and strength. If so, I hope to spend the strength given in a way which will please the Giver.

I do hope to be faithful in the service of my blessed Master. O that I might be the means in the hands of God of leading souls to Christ! It would be blessed to be wholly given up to the work. The greater the work, the greater the blessing.

I trust, dear brother, you can testify to this truth. You are engaged in a great and glorious work, and God has blessed your labors, to the good of many souls. Go on, finish the work God has given you to do. The time of reward draws near.

And when it is well with you, remember us in this cold region around Magog and Bolton Mountains. Pray that the word of the Lord may have free course with us and be glorified, even as it is with you. And to God we will ascribe all the glory through Jesus Christ forever. Peace be unto the saints, and love with faith from God the Father and the Lord Jesus Christ. The grace of our Lord Jesus Christ be with you all. O! that we may love God with all the heart, and each other in word and deed.

Your unworthy and afflicted sister,
Magog, C. E. NAOMI COLBURN.

From Bro. S. Woodruff.

BRETHREN AND SISTERS:—This is New Year's morning. Blessings divine fill my heart, and I can but say, "Let every thing that hath breath praise the Lord." I feel solemn this morning, yet blessed, for I have peace in Christ.

Let us from this day be filled with the Spirit of Christ, that our labors in the Lord the coming year may be more effectual than the past, for what are we without the Spirit of Christ? Many there are yet who are indifferent toward the great subject of salvation. O may our hearts and minds be filled with the word of the Lord, for there is yet power in the gospel, and such as live for it may have it. Brethren, let us live for it. Men may preach till Jesus comes, if they have lost their power in the gospel it will avail nothing.

When Paul reasoned with Felix of righteousness, temperance and judgment to come, Felix trembled. There was power in his words, and why? Because his walk was close with God. He mingled not in worldly amusements, but communed with God and had fellowship with his Son. So let us walk, my brethren, that we may have power in the gospel, and many harder hearts yet be made to tremble and feel the importance of seeking refuge in Christ in order to escape the storm that is gathering over this doomed world.

The world looks dark and drear, but in the Lord we have light, and with this "blessed hope" we can overcome the world and reign with Christ at last. S. WOODRUFF.

Lovely Street, Jan. 1st, 1864.

From Sr. S. A. Coburn.

DEAR FRIENDS OF THE CRISIS:—An affectionate and kindly greeting to you one and all. Will you bid me welcome to a little space in your paper? I feel really indebted to many of you for very much of instruction; and a great deal of good cheer have I received as I have read your communications from week to week; and though I may not hope to instruct, (feeling sensibly that I have need to learn rather than teach), perhaps I may be enabled now and then to give a word of cheer, that some sad pilgrim Zionward, seeing, may "take better heart," and press on to the journey's end with a quicker, firmer step. If I may but do this, surely I shall not have used my pen in vain. Very much have we need of each other's cheer, for the path is rugged, the perils thicken, the dangers increase as we approach the haven of rest; and we have need to give and receive to and from each other all the consolation possible, lest we be discouraged and faint by the way.

I am one with you, dear brethren and sisters, in the faith and hope of Jesus' soon coming; I verily believe the Judge standeth at the door; "Signs there's no mistaking proclaim the Messiah near." Our labor for ourselves and others will soon and forever have ceased. Soon it will be said of him that is holy, "let him be holy still," and of him that is filthy, "let him be filthy still." In view of these solemn facts, let us all be earnest and active in warning those within the sphere of our influence to flee from the wrath to come. Let us live wholly devoted to the service of God, daily renewing the consecration which we doubtless made at the commencement of this new year; and, if possible, daily making it more entire. Come dear friends of the coming One, le tus pledge heart and hands anew to meet each other and the Savior in the better home—the promised land.

Your sister striving for the kingdom,
S. A. COBURN.
Haverhill, Jan. 4th, 1864.

From Sr. M. E. P.

To my unconverted friends:—I hope you are not altogether regardless of the interest of your soul. God has endowed you with ability to serve him; and I hope you will not reject the kind offers of mercy nor grieve away the Holy Spirit. O that you in your youthful days would forsake your vanities and secure an interest in the Savior. Remember, this life is passing away and you have a great work to do to prepare to meet your God in peace. O! do not neglect your soul's eternal interest, I beseech you! Can you not be prevailed upon to seek the Lord before it shall be too late? I feel concerned for you and much desire your conversion to God. I want you to have religion and be happy. You have in vain sought for happiness in the world and its fashions; they cannot satisfy your spiritual thirst. Come, then, and lay hold on eternal life, and you will find substantial enjoyment. The Lord is waiting to be gracious.

He is waiting for your compliance to his terms. O! do not grieve the Holy Spirit, I entreat you. Every thing this earth can afford is transitory and yields no substantial enjoyment. We behold the flower that blossoms in the morning. It looks beautiful. We wish it would continue forever. We look again, it withers and dies. Thus are our lives passing away. We appear for a little season in the world and bid fair for a long life, but very soon we droop and die. But there is a source whence true happiness is derived. That God who has created us rational and intelligent creatures has provided a way whereby we may escape the pollutions of the world and be made happy. He has provided for us an infinite fountain of grace to which we may come and receive mercy—even life forevermore. I cannot promise you any honors in this world, but if faithful you will have life everlasting when the Lord comes to take the faithful children home.

The Lord is soon coming to judge the world. Get ready to meet him in peace, is the desire of my heart; and again I say, be ready to meet your God.

New Durham, N. H.

From Sr. H. G. Whitman.

BRETHREN AND SISTERS:—I am trying to serve the Lord and find an entrance into that land of rest. Earthly joys are transient and uncertain. The cup of pleasure is sweet at first to the perverted taste, but it leaves behind a bitterness that fills the soul with woe. And, ah! how soon those joys dim when death's shadows fall upon them. Such joys as these can never satisfy my soul, I long for something better, lasting as eternity.

My judgment tells me that I am passing away. All flesh is as grass. Our life is but a vapor that appeareth but for a little while, and then vanisheth away. And sometimes when sorrows approach and days of darkness and trial come life seems long enough.

"I would not live alway."

Life is uncertain. "We all do fade as a leaf." We wither, droop and die; but soon Jesus will come, and those that are in their graves will come forth. Then I shall behold my dear little daughter that cruel death tore from my fond embrace and left me to mourn. My heart is well-nigh broken, and my eyes drowned in tears; but very soon she will come forth crowned with immortal beauty, to die no more. O! glory to God! death will soon be destroyed and him that hath the power of death.

I long for that blessed day to dawn. Earth has no charms for me. The night shadow is not long. The morn will break in glory soon. Our Redeemer liveth! He has burst the grave, vanquished death, and made known the path of life to those who follow him. He is the first fruits of them that slept. He will come soon and gather his ransomed ones home. He hath the keys of hell and of death, and will unlock those dark graves, and his jewels which are hid in dust and darkness shall come forth. I shall behold Him. Mine eyes shall see the King in his beauty. The trumpet shall sound and the dead shall be raised. I shall see loved faces, hear loved voices, never to part again. I shall see Abraham, Isaac and Jacob in the kingdom of God.

O! it will be a glorious day. I hope to behold its light and see my blessed Savior in peace, be kept by his power and saved by his grace, that I may have confidence and not be ashamed before him at his coming.

Your sister in affliction,
Athol Depot, Mass. H. G. WHITMAN.

For the World's Crisis.

COMING TO CHRIST.

"He doeth all things well."

In early childhood I felt that I was a sinner before God, and was warned to repent and turn from my sins and worship God. Later, I thought I could not leave the world with all its alluring charms, and companions whom I loved. I loved the giddy halls of mirth. I thought I loved them too well to forsake all for Christ; but with a burdened heart I resolved to seek the Lord.

In after years, my companion being drafted, I flew to the Lord for relief. I promised the Lord, if he would devise some means to keep him from that dreadful war, I would serve him while life remained. As time passed away, to my joy and surprise he was safe from that draft. What was I to do then? Pay my vows to God?

A few days after this, there being a conference meeting at Bro. H.'s, I went, forgetting my promises to my dear Redeemer. I had not been there but a few moments before I felt most solemnly impressed. At length one of my schoolmates arose and said, "All that will come may come." These words pierced my very heart. I could not refrain from weeping, making every effort to conceal my feelings.

As soon as the meeting closed, I made my way to the door. Meeting Bro. York, he asked me if I wanted religion. I told him that I did. He asked me a few questions. I could not answer them. Tears choked my utterance. I left him, and on my way home thought of my promises to God, and that I would try to pray. On arriving home I found some who did not want me to leave them and the vain world and all its charms for Christ. So I neglected that opportunity.

A short time after this I went to a little prayer meeting. At its commencement the request was made for all that wanted religion to manifest it by rising. Tremblingly I arose on my feet. At the close of the meeting the request was made again. I arose again, and four more arose with me. This gave me little strength, but still I wanted religion in one hand and the world in the other. Many times I went away alone and tried to pray, but could not. But when I was willing to forsake all for Christ, I found him to be precious to my soul. "In the day thou seekest me with all thine heart I will be found of thee." I went forward in baptism. This was a happy day to my soul.

I am still pressing my way onward to that land where sorrow never comes, where sickness or death cannot enter and tear our loved ones from our side.

Perhaps some sinner's eye may chance to rest on these lines. Do not neglect offered mercy. Do not thrust Him from your arms.

"Once he died for your behavior,
Now he calls you to his arms."
"Life is the time to serve the Lord,
The time to insure the great reward;
And while the lamp holds out to burn,
The vilest sinner may return."

Levant, Me. A. QUIMBY.

For the World's Crisis.

TESTIMONIES FOR CHRISTIANITY.

NUMBER SEVEN.

The following is the testimony of Josephus A. D. 70, copied from his History of the Jews.

After relating a sedition of the Jews against Pontius Pilate, which the latter had quelled, he says:

"Now there was about this time JESUS, a wise man, if it be lawful to call him a man, for he performed many wonderful works. He was the teacher of such men as received the truth with pleasure. He drew over to him many of the Jews, and also many of the Gentiles. This was the Christ. And when Pilate at the instigation of the principal men among us, had condemned him to the cross, those who had loved him from the first did not cease to adhere to him, for he appeared to them alive again, on the third day; the divine prophets having foretold these and ten thousand other wonderful things concerning him, and the sect of christians, so named from him, subsists to this time."

Lardner says the above words "are found in all the copies of Josephus' works, which are now extant, whether printed or manuscript," and he also states that they were "quoted by writers in the third and fourth centuries."

Thus I have copied a few of the testimonies that are given by heathen writers concerning christianity. Many more might be added. Sufficient have been given to show the existence of christianity for the past eighteen hundred and thirty years.

Plymouth, Mass. F. H. BURBANK.

GREAT EARTHQUAKE OF REV. 6: 12.

"And I beheld," says John in the Revelation, "when he had opened the sixth seal, and lo there was a great earthquake." Rev. 6: 12. The opening of the sixth seal was marked by the great earthquake of Lisbon, in 1755. New facts of history concerning that terrible event are continually coming to light, which will be of interest to the student of prophecy. We find the following in the Scientific American of Dec. 12, 1863:

"On November 1, 1755, a terrific earthquake took place at Lisbon. In about eight minutes most of the houses, and upward of 50,000 inhabitants, were swallowed up, and whole streets buried. The cities of Coimbra, Oporto, and Braga, suffered dreadfully, and the town of St. Ubes was wholly overturned. Whilst some of the inhabitants ran affrightedly to pray in churches to the images of the Virgin or their patron saints; others, hardened wretches, the denizens of jails, loosened from their captivity by the shock, perpetrated murders and unheard-of cruelties, and pillaged the wounded and frightened inhabitants. In Spain, a large part of Malaga was destroyed, and the area of destruction extended to Fez, in Morocco, one-half of which was thrown down, killing 10,000 Moors. Above half of the island of Maderia became waste; and even the island of Myteline, in the Archipelago, suffered so much from the shock that 2,000 houses were thrown down. This awful earthquake extended 5,000 miles, even to Scotland. In England, various singular phenomena, unaccountable until the news of the earthquake arrived, were observed. The hot well at Bristol became red as blood, and so thick and turbid that the water could not be drank. Water in a common well turned as black as ink, and was unfit for use for a fortnight, and the tide of the river Avon turned back, contrary to its usual course. It was no wonder, therefore, that men's hearts failed them through fear, nor were the men of science able satisfactorily to account for the wonders which they beheld."

As the earth waxes old, it would be natural to expect that these spasms of nature would increase in frequency and power; a supposition of which the following facts would seem to afford some proof:

"In 1840, at Mount Ararat, 3137 houses were thrown down, and many hundreds of people perished; at Zante, in the same year, many were killed from the same cause; at Cape Haytien, St. Domingo, in 1842, two-thirds of the town were thrown down, and between 4,000 and 5,000 people killed. In 1857, in Clabria, Montemarro and other towns were destroyed, and it is said that 22,000 lives were lost in a few seconds; it is calculated that out of a population of six millions, the unfortunate kingdom of Naples lost in seventy-five years 111,000 inhabitants. Nearly the last great earthquake recorded is no later than March 20, 1861, when the city of Mendoza in South America was overthrown, two-thirds of it destroyed, and 7,000 lives were lost! There was also a terrible one in Manilla during last year."—Advent Review.

WORTHY CONSIDERATION.

The following, from Zion's Herald, we think will be both interesting and profitable to some besides the readers of the Herald.—ED.

STOP! STOP!

"Stop what? Stop thief?"

"No! No! Stop my paper."

"Why stop your paper, my friend?"

"Just because they publish some things that I dislike, and exclude from their columns some things that I like."

"Come, now, Mr. Correspondent, as I feel a leetle Mondayish this nice Monday morning, and unfit for any heavier work, I want to have a little palaver with you.

"Suppose you take for a seat that deal box in the corner, covered with hypocritical chintz, to make people believe it is a very nice lounge, and I occupy the only chair my study affords; and suppose, further, that for your name and my name we substitute X and Y, as algebraists do for unknown quantities; we can hold our palavar incog., and nobody be able to find out the 'great unknown' characters whose wisdom sheds such radiance on the public mind."

Y. Now, X, let us have it out. Why have you written to our editor to stop your paper?

X. For several very good reasons, one of which is, that I am at liberty to do what I will with my own.

Y. A very good reason it would be, if you had any thing of your own. But I deny that any thing possessed by you is your own in such a sense as to make it a matter of indifference in what way you employ it, or whether you employ it at all. If you wish it to be inferred that the two dollars' subscription which you pay for your paper are so far your own that you are not accountable to the Giver for the use of them, I deny your position in toto. Do not scratch the back of your head, man! You cannot pull the answer out thence.

X. Well, now, Y, I think you are rather hard on a poor fellow; but the fact is, I do not like his doctoring at all. It don't suit me, no how.

Y. His doctrine, I suppose you mean. Well; I confess I do not always think it suits myself exactly, although at times it "shoots" me in rather a tender place. If he were to labor in order to suit you or me, he must necessarily offend some one else; and I suppose you would consider that person very shabby if he were to stop his paper for an article, the publication of which gave you pleasure.

X. Well, I do not like his politics, and that is another reason.

Y. Very possibly, indeed. Perhaps he does not like yours. Has he ever tried to injure you on that ground?

X. Me? I do not know that he has. Neither have I tried to injure—

Y. Out with it, man! rather, I would say, do not let it out. You were very near telling a lie, my brother, for you have tried to injure him.

X. Me? How? When?

Y. By stopping your paper. You know that the publication of a paper involves a great expense. There are rent, wages, paper, type, ink, presses and a multitude of which you and I know nothing, to be provided and paid for. You knew that withdrawing your subscription would injure him to the exact amount of that subscription. Did you not secretly wish it was more, in order that the injury might be greater?

X. To be plain with you, I do not like some of his doctoring, and he has inserted too much of what I do not like.

Y. Myself and others do not like some things either, and think he has inserted too much of them. Had we not all better stop our papers—I mean all on each side of every vexed question, and then where will be our denominational organ? He can look to those only for support in carrying on his enterprise who agree in some leading principles, and who agree to differ on other topics. You remind me very strongly of a man of whom I read when a school-boy, Procrustes by name.

X. Do I? Pray, how do I resemble him?

Y. He had a favorite bedstead, just the right length for a man, he thought. He used to catch travelers, as the story goes, tie them to his bedstead, and cut them short if they were too long for it, or stretch them out to the length of it if they were too short. But tell me, honestly, can you get a paper for the same amount of money per annum, containing the same amount of general information, together with so much of a purely moral and religious nature, and which comes so near to your own sentiments in religious matters—one which you are not afraid to hand to your children?

X. Well, Elder, you tell me to answer honestly. To be honest, then, I—I—I—I cannot.

Y. Then, why stop your paper?

X. Because I was a fool, Elder, and that is the truth!" [Exeunt ambo.]

"WHIP OLD GRAY, THEN."

The late venerable Rev. Abner Goff, of the Ohio Conference, told a story in his lifetime running somewhat thus: He had been superintending and preaching at a campmeeting where the supply of preachers was abundant enough, but where the willing Spirit did not prevail. A special sermon was to be preached and nobody seemed willing for the work. The hour drawing rapidly on, the lot fell on Jonah. Abner must preach, or the hungry people go unfed. With some impatience and great hesitation he at last yielded to fill the gap; but after entering the desk he apologized to the congregation for his frequent appearance before them by telling a story. It was a hint to the men in the pulpit with him that had great meaning. There was a farmer who had a four-horse team. The horses, one excepted, were difficult to drive. He changed drivers often, but to little purpose. His last driver was sent to draw a log from the clearing to a sawmill, and on his return the wagon and horses stopped in a valley, and a man on a hill-top seeing the halt cried out:

"What's the matter?"

"Matter enough," was the ready response.

"There's but one horse in the team that'll pull."

"What horse is that?"

"Old Gray."

"Whip Old Gray, then; it's no use to whip the others."

As in the team case, so in most churches. There is some old Gray who is willing enough to do the work, and does do a good deal, but the trouble is, he cannot draw all the load and the balky horses too. He would like to foot the preacher's salary, the sexton's bill, the wood, coal, candle and oil bills, but his pocket is not long enough nor strong enough. Yet there is always some man willing enough in every society to play the censor, and cry out, while he does nothing himself, "There's but one man in the church that'll give any thing—Old Gray. Whip Old Gray; if he don't pull the load'll never move.—Western Christian Advocate.

HOW THE SWISS LIVE.

As much as by anything I am surprised at the places deemed habitable and actually inhabited. On the sides of mountains, on the edges of precipices, upon steeps which the children of the plains would hesitate to climb as a feat of daring, are seen, not single cottages alone, but groups of them, and large neighborhoods. Indeed, half the people of Switzerland seem to love to live on shelves, and I suppose they can crawl along perpendicular places by some provision as flies have; otherwise it is difficult to see how they ascend and descend. And how children are brought up, I can't imagine. I should expect four out of five, the moment they stepped out of the door, to fall down into some lake or gorge. Yet the population continues to increase and maintain its numbers. They are children of the air. They are forever surrounded by mountains, than which nothing is more beautiful, and nothing more sublime, except the clouds that solemnly sweep their tops, and hold mysterious communion with them.—H. W. Beecher.

TO YOUNG MEN.

Idleness is the great destroyer of young men. It is sure to work out the ruin of the most talented or well inclined. Give a young man plenty to do and he is safe, and will reflect honor both on himself and the community in which he lives. Allow him to spend his hours in idleness—to loaf around barrooms—stand on the street corners or stay about home, with no higher ambition than just to eat, drink, sleep and smoke, and you lay for him the broad foundation of future disgrace. Parents, you may depend upon it, that your grown-up boys find little that adds to their manhood in the walks of idleness. Better to give them some honorable trade than to trust to chance for some windfall of luck or fortune to benefit them in after-life.

If there are any young men out of employment who may, perchance, read this article, let them impress this great truth upon their minds, that time, even though it brings no money, is valuable. Self-improvement should be kept up, so that every spare hour may bring to its possessors some valuable acquisition. Enrich your minds by the careful study of some good work, for you may rest assured your labor is none the less for being intelligent. Better to spend your time over some good and valuable book that shall impart some useful knowledge, than to waste it along with your money, as well as your health, over cigars, the brandy bottle or games of chance. Better be found studying at home, thereby improving and disciplining your mind, than to be seen on the street corners with hands in pockets, a cigar between your lips—the very picture of laziness. Not that we can all become great men, but we can useful citizens.

Finally, remember that nothing can be accomplished without great labor. Excellence in every trade or profession depends upon it, and if you will it and persevere for it, success and excellence will be yours in the end. It is not your idlers that make their mark in the world, but your earnest go-ahead men who never stop for little troubles or give up for great ones, but who go forward, determined to be, and do something in this world. Young man, turn over a new leaf—place before you the object of your desires and work for it. Be careful of your pennies, for as Dr. Franklin used to say, a pin a day is a groat a year, not by being stingy or mean, but by being prudent, and a few years will find you far advanced in honor and on the highway to competency and respectability.—Ex.

The Children's Corner.

PLEDGE OF THE TRY COMPANY.

We, the Undersigned, hereby pledge ourselves to abstain from Tea, Coffee, Tobacco, and all Intoxicating Drinks as a Beverage.

THE HEART MAKES THE GENTLEMAN.

"I shan't do any such thing! I've done errands enough for one day."

Who do you think said this, my little reader? You don't know, and I'll tell you as nearly as I can without giving the boy's name in full.

I was strolling up a pleasant, retired street one day, inhaling the sweet breath of the flowers, and listening to the sweeter song of the birds, and feeling very happy that God had made such a beautiful world for me to live in, when these harsh, discordant words

"I shan't do any such thing! I've done errands enough for one day."

I looked up, expecting to see some rough, coarse-looking boy, who didn't know any better than to use such language, but, to my perfect astonishment, there stood Harry G., a boy thirteen years old,—quite old enough to know how to talk better, you will say, and so I thought. And he was a boy who would have felt himself very much disgraced by patched clothes or unblacked boots or a cap a little out of the fashion.

You will be very much surprised, I know, when I tell you that Harry G. was known as "the most gentlemanly boy in town." I had myself the same impression of him, for I had often been at his father's house, and been greeted by him with the most gentlemanly bow, and the most graceful shake of the hand.

But facts are facts. There stood Harry G., and there I stood listening to his coarse, wicked language. Feeling curious to know how such a "little gentleman" would talk when, as he thought, no one was listening, I stepped aside, behind a tree, that I might remain unnoticed.

"You must go, my son," said his mother, who was standing on the front steps of her house. There was no anger or excitement in the tones of her voice, but she mildly insisted upon his going.

"You kept me running all the morning, and I'm not going over there."

"You must, my son," said his mother, in the same mild tone; "and if you continue to refuse, and intend to carry your point and disobey me, I shall compel you to go. I have never struck you a blow in my life, my son, but if you don't go and do this errand for me, I shall tell your father, and we will decide upon some way of punishing you."

"Well, I have to go to school, and I can't be errand-boy, and every thing else."

"I know you go to school, my son, and I always try to be considerate and never send you on an errand when you are tired. To-day is Saturday and there is no school and you don't seem at all tired."

"Well, I shall be if I trot way over there; I've been there once to-day."

"Don't let me hear another saucy word, my son," replied his mother. "I have told you to go and do that errand, and if you refuse to go, you do it at your peril."

"I can go, then, I suppose," answered the boy, "I can go if it almost kills me."

This was said in a low, muttering tone, and his mother didn't hear it.

He went and did the errand, but not with a willing heart, or in the spirit of loving obedience, and so the act had no beauty or merit in my eyes.

"A little gentleman!" said I to myself. "The most gentlemanly boy in town!" How little people know about Harry G., I thought. It's true he does know how to offer his hand with a great deal of grace, and he makes a perfect bow, and he is always well-dressed; but he does not honor his father and mother," and, in the sight of God, whose command is, "Honor thy father and mother," he is not a gentleman.

A boy may go about with patched knees and toes out of his boots and be a gentleman; and a boy may dress as those who live in king's palaces dress, and be no gentleman.

Let every boy remember that it is the heart that makes the gentleman.

I have seldom seen a boy who was not ambitious to be called a perfect little gentleman. Boys consider it a great honor to be regarded as very gentlemanly; but that boy who does not honor his father and mother, and thus win the approval of that God who sees every heart, has no claim to the honor of being called a gentleman.

"Honor thy father and thy mother," is one of God's sweetest and best commandments, and I am sorry for the boy who does not try, by daily filial obedience, to obey this great commandment.—Tract Journal.

THE DISCONTENTED PENDULUM.

When people, now grown, were children, they used to read the following story with profit. We copy it here that children may read it now.—Eds. Independent.

An old clock, that had stood for fifty years in a farmer's kitchen, without giving its owner any cause of complaint, early one summer's morning, before any one of the family were stirring, suddenly stopped. Upon this, the dial-plate changed countenance with alarm; the hands made a vain effort to continue their course; the wheels remained motionless with surprise; the weights hung speechless; and each member felt disposed to lay the blame on the other. At length the dial instituted a formal inquiry as to the cause of the stagnation, when hands, wheels, weights, with one voice, protested their innocence.

But now a faint tick was heard below from the pendulum, who thus spoke: "I confess myself to be the sole cause of the stoppage, and I am willing, for the general satisfaction, to assign my reasons. The truth is, I am tired of ticking." Upon hearing this, the old clock became so enraged, that it was on the point of striking. "Lazy wire," exclaimed the dial-plate, holding up its hands. "Very good!" replied the pendulum, "it is vastly easy for you, Mrs. Dial, who have always, as everybody knows, set yourself above me; it is vastly easy for you, I say, to accuse other people of laziness; you who have had nothing to do all your life, but to stare people in the face and to amuse yourself with all that goes on in the kitchen. Think, I beseech you, how you would like to be shut up for life in this dark closet, and to wag backward and forward, year after year, as I do."

"As to that," said the dial, "is there not a window in your house on purpose for you to look through?" "For all that," resumed the pendulum, "it is very dark here, and although there is a window, I dare not stop, even for an instant, to look out at it. Besides, I am really tired of my way of life, and if you wish I will tell you how I took this disgust to my employment. I happened to be thinking this morning, how many times I should have to tick in the course of the next twenty-four hours; perhaps some one of you above there can tell me the exact sum." The minute-hand, being quick at figures, presently replied, "Eighty-six thousand, four hundred times." "Exactly so," replied the pendulum; "well, I appeal to you all, if the very thought of this was not enough to fatigue any one; and when I began to multiply the strokes of one day by those of months and years, really it is no wonder that I felt discouraged at the prospect. So after a great deal of reasoning and hesitation, thinks I to myself, I'll stop."

The dial could scarcely keep its countenance during this harangue, but resuming its gravity, it thus replied: "Dear Mr. Pendulum, I am really astonished that such a useful, industrious person as yourself should have been seized with this sudden weariness. It is true you have done a great deal of work in your time; so have we all, and are likely to do; which, although it may fatigue us to to think of, the question is whether it will fatigue us to do. Would you do me the favor to give half-a-dozen strokes to illustrate my argument?"

The pendulum complied, and ticked six times at the usual pace. "Now," resumed the dial, "may I be allowed to inquire if that exertion is at all fatiguing or disagreeable to you?" "Not in the least," replied the pendulum, "it is not of six strokes I complain, nor of sixty, but of millions." "Very good," replied the dial; "but recollect that although you may think of a million of strokes in a second, you are only required to execute but one; and however often you may hereafter have to swing, a second will be given you each time to swing in, which is all the time you can possibly use." "That consideration staggers me, I confess," said the pendulum. "Then I hope," resumed the dial-plate, "that we shall all return to our duty immediately, for the maids will lie too late in bed if we stand idling thus."

Upon this the weights, who had never been accused of light conduct, used all their influence in persuading him to proceed; when, as if with one consent, the wheels began to turn, the hands began to move, the pendulum began to swing, and to its credit ticked as loud and regularly as ever; while a red beam of the rising sun that streamed through a hole in the window-shutter, shining full upon the dial-plate, it brightened up, as if nothing had been the matter.

When the farmer came down to breakfast that morning, upon looking at the clock, he declared his watch had gained half an hour in the night.

THE RESULT OF STREET EDUCATION.

Keep your children off the street. By that we mean, do not let them make acquaintance on the sidewalks. If they frequent the public schools, you must establish a sort of verbal quarantine at your own door, and examine the youthful tongue once a day, to see if it has not a secretion of slang upon it.

Mrs. Careful's little son Manfred came running into the paternal mansion the other day, shouting to the cook:—"Now, then, old girl, slap up that dinner."

"Why, Manfred!" began the astonished mother, "where did you learn such language? who have you been playing with?"

"Me," said the hopeful, "I generally play with Dick Turner, 'cause he's a bully boy with a glass eye. That's so."

The fond mother was about to express some astonishment at the optical misfortune of Dick, when the son continued:—

"Ma, I'm going to buy a plug. Jem Smith wears one, and I'm as big as he."

"A plug!" gasped the mother.

"Yes, sir-ee, a plug. I've got the spondulics salted down in my box, sure; it's bound to come."

The mother at this juncture ordered the youngster up stairs, and sent for a man servant to interpret the slang.

TRIFLES.—Never be cast down by trifles. If a spider breaks his thread twenty times, twenty times will he mend it again. Make up your mind to do a thing, and you will do it. Fear not if trouble comes upon you.

Troubles never stop forever,
The darkest day will pass away.

For the World's Crisis

ENIGMA.

I am composed of 6 letters.
My 5, 3, 1, is a delineation of the earth.
My 4, 3, 5, is a vessel used to give light.
My 3, 2, 1, is a venomous reptile.
My 3, 4, 5, 6, is what we all should give.
My 5, 3, 2, 6, is an assemblage.
My 2, 3, 4, is the nick-name of a female.
My 2, 3, 5, is the nick-name of a male.
My 2, 3, 5, 1, is corn ground coarsely.
My 3, 2, is a Roman weight of six ounces.
My 2, 3, 1, is the juice of plants.
My 3, 4, 3, 6, is an exclamation.
My 4, 3, 1, is the loose part of a coat.
My 1, 3, 4, 5, is the name of a tree.
My 1, 3, 4, 4, is a covering for the dead.
My 3, 4, 1, 6, is a range of mountains.
My 3, 2, 6, is a beast of burden.
My 4, 3, 5, 4, is an object of worship in Thibet.
My 4, 3, 5, 1, 3, 6, 2, is a part of a horse.
My whole is what David sung.

Peace Dale, R. I. C. A. K.

The World's Crisis

AND SECOND ADVENT MESSENGER.

TERMS:

A single copy, one year	$2.00
A single copy, six months	1.00
A single copy, three months	.50
5 copies, six months, when sent to one address	4.50
10 copies, six months, when sent to one address	8.00
20 copies, six months, when sent to one address	15.00
30 copies, six months, when sent to one address	22.00

PAYABLE IN ADVANCE.

These terms, allowing a subscription of 50 cents for three months, place the paper within reach of all who are able to pay any thing. The reduction in price, where five or more papers are sent to one address, enables subscribers, by combining, to receive a large number at reduced rates; thus supplying the poor in their neighborhood.

We propose that those who have ability, when sending their own subscriptions, also send what they are willing to give to aid in circulating the Crisis among the poor who we have always with us.

POSTAGE.—The postage, in the United States, on each single copy of the Crisis, is 20 cents a year, payable quarterly, in advance, at the office of delivery.

TO CANADA SUBSCRIBERS.—As the postage on each paper sent to Canada and the British Provinces (20 cents a year) must be prepaid in Boston, the price to Canada subscribers is $2.20 a year, or $1.10 for six months. $2.00 pays for 47 Nos.; $1.00 for 23 Nos.; 50 cents for 12 Nos.

RULES FOR CORRESPONDENTS.—Over all matters not intended for publication, write PRIVATE.

Over all business matters, write BUSINESS.

Over all articles for the paper, write FOR THE CRISIS.

All articles should be accompanied by the writer's name, for the Editor's information, even if it is not published.

When the names of new subscribers are sent, please say they are new, and it will save us much labor.

PRIVATE LETTERS.—Those wishing to address the Editor on matters not connected with the office, will please write the word PRIVATE on the outside of the envelope

Please put the business matters and appointments on a piece of paper separate from other communications.

All persons writing to the office should give DISTINCTLY and PLAINLY the Post Office, County and State at which they wish to be addressed; and all orders, subscriptions, communications and remittances, should be plainly directed to MILES GRANT, BOSTON, MASS.

PUBLISHED ALSO AT THE SAME OFFICE,

THE YOUNG PILGRIM,

A NEW ILLUSTRATED SUNDAY SCHOOL PAPER,

DEVOTED TO

The Interests of our Children and Youth.

TERMS:

For a single copy, 25 cents a year; and at the same rate for any number of copies under ten.

10 copies, when sent to one address	$2.00
20 copies, when sent to one address	3.80
30 copies, when sent to one address	5.40
40 copies, when sent to one address	6.80
50 copies, when sent to one address	8.00
100 copies, when sent to one address	15.00

PAYABLE ALWAYS IN ADVANCE.

TO CANADA SUBSCRIBERS.—37 cents a year for every single copy; and at the same rate for any number of copies under ten. For every 10 copies, sent to one address, 12 cents additional to the above rates.

POSTAGE—(12 cents a year, for every single copy, and the same for every 10 copies or less to one address) must be paid quarterly in advance, at the office where the paper is received.

All communications and remittances should be addressed to THE YOUNG PILGRIM, CRISIS BOX, BOSTON, MASS.

T. C. PARKMAN

The World's Crisis

AND SECOND ADVENT MESSENGER.

"BEHOLD, I COME QUICKLY; AND MY REWARD IS WITH ME."

WHOLE NO. 433. BOSTON, TUESDAY, JANUARY 19, 1864. VOL. XVIII.—NO. 18.

The Worlds' Crisis

AND SECOND ADVENT MESSENGER,

Issued every Tuesday Afternoon, at

167 HANOVER STREET, BOSTON.

MILES GRANT, EDITOR.

EDITORIAL COMMITTEE:

H. L. HASTINGS, D. T. TAYLOR,
H. F. CARPENTER.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEE:

H. V. DAVIS, S. S. BREWER,
A. ROSS, J. G. HAMBLIN,
SOLOMON HOVEY.

GEO. T. ADAMS, TREASURER.

☞ THE CRISIS is devoted to the exposition of all Bible truth; especially the doctrine of the immediate, personal coming and reign of Christ on the earth; holiness of heart; the unconscious state of the dead; their literal resurrection, and the final destruction of the wicked.

For the World's Crisis.

RESIGNATION.

One prayer I have,—all prayer is one
When I am wholly thine;
Thy will, my God, thy will be done,
And let that will be mine.
All-wise, Almighty and All-good,
In thee I firmly trust,
Thy ways unknown or understood,
Are merciful and just.

Thy gifts are only then enjoyed
When used as talents lent,
Those talents only well employed
When in thy service spent.
And though thy wisdom takes away,
Shall I arraign thy will?
No, let me bless thy name and say—
The Lord is gracious still.

A pilgrim through the earth I roam,
Of nothing long possessed,
And all must fall when we go home,
For this is not our rest.
Write but my name upon the roll
Of thy redeemed above,
Then heart and mind, and strength, and soul,
Shall love thee for thy love.

North Dana, Mass. LUTHERIA B. WEAVER.

For the World's Crisis.

WHAT IS A JEW?

And to whom do the Promises Belong?

NUMBER TWO.

After all, there are those who maintain that outward circumstances, such as the flesh, nationality, etc., make a Jew—God's word to the contrary notwithstanding.—Rom. 2:28, 29. Such seem very positive also, by their declarations, that Gentiles by birth can have no right whatever to the name and privileges of Israel. But if they will read Paul's letter to the Ephesians, especially the second chapter, they will see that Gentiles who once had no privilege to the body politic of Israel, by being converted to Christ, were recognized as members of Israel's commonwealth, and thus eligible to all the privileges and immunities of God's Israel, especially the "covenant of promise."

Just listen to the effort of an apostle to inspire gratitude in these converted Gentiles, by referring them to the sad state they once occupied, and the hopeful and happy condition they then enjoyed in consequence of receiving Christ:—

"Wherefore remember, that ye being in time past Gentiles in the flesh who are called Uncircumcision by that which is called the Circumcision in the flesh made by hands; that at that time ye were without Christ, being aliens from the commonwealth of Israel, and strangers from the covenants of promise, having no hope, and without God in the world. But now, in Christ Jesus, ye, who sometimes were far off, are made nigh by the blood of Christ."—Eph. 2:11-13.

Thus far the apostle. Methinks I hear these newly adopted Israelites ruminating thus: "Is it possible that we, who are by birth idolaters, never having been allowed to mingle at all with God's Israel, and consequently have no share in the 'covenants of promise' made by God to that people, shall now be considered as one of their number, and consequently share in all that was promised to them?" "Yes," says inspiration, "the middle wall of partition between us is broken down." Listen to inspiration still further:—"Now therefore ye are no more strangers and foreigners, but fellow-citizens with the saints, and of the household of God." Does not this passage prove that "the saints" and "the household of God" are here used synonymously with Israel? The 11th and 12th verses declare they were in time past Gentiles and "aliens from the commonwealth of Israel, and strangers from the covenants of promise." "But NOW" ye are no more, or no longer, strangers and foreigners from the commonwealth of Israel.

If the name Israel is only to be used in a national capacity, why such expressions as "Israel after the flesh"; "Jews outwardly"; "They are not all Israel which are of Israel"? If it only took outward circumstances, as the flesh, nationality, etc., would not all that thus belonged to them be Israel? And yet, some will maintain that all the natural or fleshly descendants are Israel, and consequently heirs to exceeding great and precious promises. Look here. Does God ever make special promises of future good to the children of the Devil? Well, Christ told the Jews their father was the Devil! There is so much in the volume of inspiration to prove conclusively that God is no respecter of persons, but only of character, that I think it must be apparent to all Bible readers that the same character, possessing the same resources or privileges for light, will be regarded the same by the Judge when he comes to take vengeance on those who know not God.

Now let us take the language of infidels, such as Paine and Voltaire, and compare it with the language of both ancient and modern Jews, and we shall find it identical; so much so, that we should have no doubt but the same heart (morally) indited both; and if their words are to justify or condemn them, what can be the difference in their doom? Let us imagine ourselves at the judgment, and the Lord addresses Paine and Voltaire thus:—"Did you receive my Son?"—"By no means," say they. "We declared his birth to be illegitimate; that he was low, and associated with the vilest of both sexes; an especial favorite of courtesans. In fine, he was an imposter." Well, the Lord says they must be "burned up root and branch." A Jew then appears, and the Lord addresses the same question to him, and he uses the same language to answer as did the these infidels, having in this world lived side by side. Now according to the belief of some, the Lord will say to the last,—"Because you are a natural descendant of Abraham, you may have an opportunity to secure eternal life. You see my Son has returned; you have witnessed the triple glory surrounding him; what hinders your receiving him? If this would not be respecting persons, I am unable to understand what respect of persons would be.

"But," says the objector, "there is to be a great change when Christ comes the second time. He is then to make the 'new covenant,' promised in Jer. 31st." This is a great mistake, because there is positive Bible proof that we are now living under that covenant. Paul says, God had made him an able minister of the New Covenant.—2 Cor. 3:6. Testament and Covenant are precisely the same. If Paul was an able minister of the New Covenant, we have been under the New Covenant for 1800 years at least; and what a mistake to put in the future what is 1800 years in the past! Then right in connection with this declaration of the apostle, ver. 3, he tells the Corinthian church they were the ones who had the law written on their hearts, just what God promised under the New Covenant of Jer. 31. Please read Jer. 31:33, and compare it with 2 Cor. 3:3, and see if there is not a perfect fulfillment. But is Jer. 31:39 fulfilled under this covenant? Most certainly. This covenant carries us into the New Earth. Therefore, I cannot look for any covenant to be made in the future, because I plainly see it far in the past; and besides it involves us in very fearful consequences—consequences as dire as the death of Christ the second time. It is distinctly stated that Jesus Christ is the Mediator of the new covenant.—Heb. 12:29. Then read the declaration in Heb. 9:16—"For where a testament is, there must also of necessity be the death of the testator." So if Christ makes a new covenant at his second coming, he must die before it can be put in force, according to the 17th ver.,—"For a testament is of force after men are dead: otherwise it is of no strength at all while the testator liveth."

Some quote Ezek. 37:24, 25, arbitrarily claiming a fulfillment after the second advent: "And David my servant shall be king over them; and they all shall have one shepherd: they shall also walk in my judgments, and observe my statutes, and do them. And they shall dwell in the land that I have given unto Jacob my servant, wherein your fathers have dwelt, and they shall dwell therein, even they, and their children, and their children's children for ever: and my servant David shall be their prince for ever." This scripture is quoted to prove the return of the Jews as a nation; that is, the fleshly descendants of Abraham, after Christ comes the second time. You see that DAVID is to be their king, and this they claim is LITERAL. But these same literalists claim a SPIRITUAL DAVID; that this same David is Christ. O consistency, thou art a jewel. Why may not others on the same principle claim a spiritual Israel, and a literal and fleshly David?

Again, it is urged that the city described by Ezekiel synchronizes with that in Revelation. Though there may be points of similarity, there are so many things which positively forbid identity, that it would seem to be doing great violence to the Scriptures thus to wrest them from their appropriate place.

It is proclaimed by some that God is now preparing a people to officiate as priests and kings in the age to come; and the condition of being thus highly honored is, to believe in the Jews' return. I do not understand this to be in harmony with the apostle Peter, who in his "General Epistle" to the "elect" told them they were "a chosen generation, a royal priesthood, an holy nation, a peculiar people." In Ezek. 43:19, and 49:15, it appears the priests must be Levites. It is admitted that those prepared will be immortalized when Christ comes the second time, after which, they neither marry nor are given in marriage; but in Ezek. directions are given whom the priests may marry; "neither shall they take for their wives a widow, nor her that is put away: but they shall take maidens of the seed of the house of Israel, or a widow that had a priest before." According to this scripture, priests die there and leave widows, who are at liberty to marry other priests.

It is taught that Christ is the Prince in Ezek. But the Prince there is to offer a sin-offering for himself, as well as for all the people of the land. This would be worse than applying the 72nd Ps. to Christ in the age to come, where it says "The heathen . . . and the uttermost parts of the earth" are given to Christ, and he is to "break them with a rod of iron, . . . and dash them in pieces like a potter's vessel," (which by the way does not look much like converting them!) but in Ezekiel, the priest is forbidden to oppress the people thus:—"Moreover the priest shall not take of the people's inheritance by oppression, to thrust them out of their possession; but he shall give his sons inheritance out of his own possession: that my people be not scattered every man from his possession."

There are many other points which show a striking dissimilarity; but, as I am already transcending the law of "short articles," this must suffice for the present.

Sandy Hill, N. Y. B. MATHEWSON.

☞ If you would have a blessing upon your riches, bestow a portion of them in charity.

"THE SIGNS OF THE TIMES."

Under the above heading, the editor and publisher of "The Vials," Torquay, England, Dec. 1st, 1863, says:—

Many people will tell you that it is presumptuous to observe the "Signs of the Times;" and that by so doing we are taking upon ourselves the character of a prophet. But we find a very different verdict pronounced in Scripture. The Scribes and Pharisees were not prophets, yet our Lord expressly condemns them, not for observing, but for neglecting the Signs of the Times. If the Pharisees were condemned for over-looking those signs, so may we be condemned; and never before was there a moment in which such "Signs of the Times" were offered to our contemplation. Never before was there a moment so ominous of a judgment to come.

It is one of the marks of the Last Antichrist that "all the world should wonder after the Beast!" and that all should say "Who is able to make war with him?" Has not one man arisen befor our eyes in whom these two characteristics meet! One man, emerging from the obscurity of private life, from exile, and from prison, has placed himself—by divine permission—at the head of all human affairs. All the world fixes its eyes upon his movements—waits upon his breath—scans his impenetrable looks—conjectures his resolves—and arrays its hopes and fears in humble obedience to his dictation. He says to mankind—"rejoice," and they rejoice; he says—"tremble," and they tremble; he says—"be at peace," and they drop their weapons; he says—"let it be war," and Europe is in arms. Such an accumulation of power on the one hand, and of imbecility on the other, the world has never witnessed before. To compare with him the greatest of the Roman emperors would be absurd. The Roman emperors were, indeed, more absolute in their power, as far as that power reached; but they were far more limited in their influence. They were utterly unknown beyond the limits of the British seas to the west, and of the Euphrates to the east. He extends his influence across the Atlantic to the west; and is master of whole regions beyond the Ganges to the east. And that power, though not absolute, is REAL. It is not like the nominal power of the British Queen. Were we to utter one word in an offensive tone, Canada and Australia would revolt. We can only keep together half our empire by humoring and yielding to it. But the power of the French Emperor is REAL and indisputable; and his influence in the four quarters of the globe is much greater than our influence even in many parts of our own imaginary empire. A man must be blind indeed who has not discovered, for example, that our immense province of Australia is virtually an independent empire, and cares next to nothing for our home government. Whereas by the weight of his military power, the French monarch compels every empire of the globe to watch his looks, to hang upon his words, and to regulate its movements like a satellite revolving round its primary planet. He has become the sun in the system of the world's empires. Is not this one of the "Signs of the Times," where all the world is wondering after ONE MAN? (Rev. 13.)

Another sign has just appeared, and one deserving of our attention. In the last number we spoke of the Last Antichrist; and combatted the favorite Protestant error that the Last Antichrist was the Pope. We have often said that when the Last Antichrist appears he will pull down the Pope, assume his place, and set himself up to be worshiped as a god. The Pope, we believe, will subside into the character of the False Prophet, and will act as the minister of the "Beast." If we bear this in mind we shall be the more impressed by what is taking place in Paris. For more than half a century a statue of the great Napoleon has stood on the summit of a triumphant column at Paris, in the ordinary dress of the original—the well-known riding coat and the hat. That statue has just been removed, and is to be replaced by another in the costume of an ancient Roman emperor. One part of that costume is the memorable laurel crown, the "Stephanos" of the Book of Revelation. (Rev. 6.) By this means the Napoleonic dynasty will be exhibited as the direct representative of the ancient Roman emperors, and as the continuation of the Roman line, which was snapped asunder 1400 years ago by the Gothic invasion. The line fell to the ground, and was trailed in the dust of fourteen centuries. The first Napoleon raised it from the dust, and the third Napoleon has received it from the hands of his great predecessor. He now exhibits the Roman dynasty, revived in the Napoleonic line; and he does this at the central point of power, civilization and intellect, in PARIS—the political capital of the world. The statue wears the Roman crown, or "Stephanos;" the coins and the medals of Napoleon the Third bear the same crown upon their obverse; and it may be said, with truth, that now, at last, the "Stephanos" of the First Seal has been given to one man, who has both the WILL and the POWER to go forth conquering and to conquer. (Rev. 6.) What may actually happen we do not at present inquire; but the facts which we have stated are well worth noticing, and are in complete accordance with prophecy. At present we have to view this subject in a different light. A few years ago the statue of Napoleon was removed from its pedestal to make room for the new one in the garb of a Roman emperor. The good taste of the change was very much questioned in Paris; upon which an article appeared in the French journals assigning the reason of the change. And what was the reason assigned? That the Roman dress was necessary for the "APOTHEOSIS" of the emperor. Nothing less than the Apotheosis! The ancient Roman emperors, after death, were raised to the rank of gods by the servile flattery of the senate. They were worshiped as gods, and sacrifices were offered to them. Now, we are told that the first Napoleon is to be honored with an "Apotheosis"—that is to say, that HE, like the Roman Cæsars, is to be regarded as a GOD. "The new dress is necessary for the Apotheosis." So that the deity of Napoleon is publicly announced at Paris. The dead emperor is declared to be a god already; and the LIVING emperor is only the continuation of the DEAD one. The next step will be the deification of Napoleon the Third, as the immediate consequence of the deification of Napoleon the First. We see how the world is being prepared for the worship of a MAN. First the dead man is deified, which is a wise and cautious beginning. The dead are out of sight. We may fancy them to be gods. Being thus habituated to man-worship in one form, we are brought to endure it in another form more direct in itself, and more likely at first sight to shock our feeling of propriety. We are brought to endure it in the case of a LIVING man. Immense military power, and a series of victories will greatly assist the imagination; and as Napoleon the Third hopes and intends to conquer on all sides, he reckons eventually on the deification of HIMSELF as the representative of Napoleon the First.

It is by such a process as this that the worship of the Last Antichrist will be brought about. Not at once, lest the world be shocked, but by the worship of the DEAD as a preparation for the worship of the LIVING. It is then that the Pope will be overthrown, for there cannot be two lions in one forest, and the Last Antichrist will usurp his place, and more than usurp his deification. The last state of man-worship will be worse than the first. And here we wish to repeat the warning so often given before. The time will come when some powerful emperor will overturn both Popery and the Pope. That moment the Protestant world will load him with its praises. The "Record" newspaper will call him a man of God, as it has done in the case of a godless prime minister. He who destroys Popery must necessarily be a man of God! That man will be worse than the Pope. He will establish a religion worse than Popery. But if you allow ignorant men to persuade you that there is no Antichrist after the Pope, you must of necessity believe that he who overturns the Pope is the best of Protestants—you will follow him, and be lost for ever.

It has been said that Popery is the Devil's master-piece. This is a mistake, the Devil has achieved one work more masterly still. He has persuaded Protestants to throw all the sins, and crimes, and judgments of modern times upon the head of the Pope. Is there a sin mentioned in Scripture—it is Popery. Is there a judgment threatened—it is for the Church of Rome. Protestantism is clear of all the terrors of the prophetic Scriptures, and has nothing to look for but eternal glory! Protestants are "the called, the chosen, and the faithful," of the Book of Revelation. They have nothing to fear in the day of the Lord. That day is for Popery, not for them. Against such madness as this the SNARE is provided. The man who overturns the Pope will be the last and worst Antichrist. Protestants will adore him because he is the enemy of POPERY. They will adhere to the Man of Sin, thinking him the Man of God; and the murderers of the Japanese, the opium poisoners of China, will be caught in their own net. They loved the false doctrine that there was no Antichrist but the Pope. They cheered on the men who invented and circulated the falsehood. They shall be deservedly taken in the falsehood which they have devised. "God shall send them strong delusion that they may believe a LIE." (2 Thess. 2.) The truth is, of course, that Popery is ONE form of Antichristianism, that Infidelity is another form, and that our corrupt Protestantism is the third, and in some respects the WORST.

For the World's Crisis.

2300 DAYS.

Dan. 8:14.—"And he said unto me, unto 2300 days, then shall the sanctuary be cleansed." Also verse 19,—"For at the time appointed the end shall be." To me it is evident that the 2300 days and the time appointed are the same, and that they reach to the consummation or end of this age, or till God's kingdom comes, when those that are ready will go in and mercy's door will be forever shut. Oh! brethren and sisters, let us all be ready and waiting, loving each other fervently, and God, and his dear Son's appearing supremely.

Some may inquire, when will the 2300 days end? My belief is that they will end before the close of 1866, for I think the days are 2300 years, and that exactly sixty-nine sevens or four hundred and eighty-three years ended at the cross, leaving 1817 to be fulfilled after the cross, which cannot be later than A. D. 49, for the Jews declared that Christ was not fifty years old, so he could not be over forty-nine, to which add 1817, and we have only 1866. I do not see how it can pass that time. Let us be ready. Amen.

If we take the signs in the 24th of Matthew, to precede his (Christ's) second coming, we may look for him any moment, or at least for the sign when all the tribes of the earth mourn, when, as I understand, there will be no farther probation for sinners. May God help us to work while the day lasts.

The disciples inquired of Jesus what would be the sign of his coming, and the end of the world, or age? and Jesus told them plainly—Matt. 24:7,—"For nation shall rise again nation," which does not take place till near 500 of the christian era. Then the fifteenth verse, Daniel's "Abomination" or the Papal Persecution, which, according to Scripture and history, occupying 1260 years, could not have ended till about the time the sun was supernaturally darkened, on the 19th of May, 1780. In fact, that is the first sign, as Luke records it. Signs in the sun, then, as I think the Savior fixes it, the generation that sees the first sign, or darkening of the sun will not pass away till Jesus comes in the clouds of heaven.

Consequently I am firm in the belief that the race of people that was alive in 1780, or were eighty-three years old last May, will not all pass away, or die before the coming of Christ with power and great glory. Then truly significant is the language of Peter—"What manner of persons ought we to be in all holy conversation and godliness." Dear waiting ones, let us be sober, and watch, for, says the Revelator, "If they will not watch, I will come as a thief, and they shall not know what hour I will come." Then if we will watch, and heed the prophetic periods and signs that are in the past, we may know he is near. Amen. IRA FANCHER.

Sandy Hill, N. Y., Jan. 1st, 1864.

For the World's Crisis.

SAINTS' HOME.

There is a house not made with hands,
A port of endless rest,
Where all the pilgrims soon will meet,
Soon lean on Jesus' breast;
Soon every boist'rous storm outride,
Soon reach that blissful shore,
Beyond this dark and rolling tide,
Where sorrow comes no more.

Soon will they reach the heavenly plain,
Where every tear'll be dry;
Yes, soon in glory they will reign,
With Jesus ever nigh;
Soon leave this world of hopes and fears,
To dwell with their dear Lord,—
Beyond this dreary vale of tears
Receive the great reward.

Soon the last warning will be heard,
Sinner, will you not come?
Soon the last prayer for you be made,
Soon you will hear your doom.
Awake! O sinner, now awake,
And to the Savior fly;
Prepare, before it is too late,
To meet him in the sky.

Utica, Ill. L. A. SMITH.

SCRIPTURE EXPOSITION.

1. "O that my words were now written! O that they were printed in a book! that they were graven with an iron pen and lead in the rock forever! For I know that my Redeemer liveth, and that he shall stand at the latter day upon the earth; and though after my skin worms destroy this body, yet in my flesh shall I see God; whom I shall see for myself, and mine eyes shall behold, and not another; though my reins be consumed within me."—Job 19:23-27.

Some think this passage refers simply to events in this life. I view this passage, however, as referring to the period of time when Job should be raised from the grave; because Job expected no temporal deliverance; for had he, he would not have cursed the day of his birth, and said: "My days are past, my purposes are broken off, even the thoughts of my heart." "If I wait the grave is mine house; I have made my bed in the darkness. I have said to corruption, Thou art my father; to the worm, thou art my mother, and my sister. And where is now my hope? as for my hope who shall see it?" "My death is corrupt, my days are extinct, the graves are ready for me." Does this look as though he expected temporal deliverance? "Though he slay me, yet will I trust in him." Does not this point to a future life? "O that my words were now written! O that they were inscribed in the book! That with an iron style they were inscribed in the rock forever!" A book would not be needed to refresh the memories of those who heard the expressions of his faith, if he was but looking to a temporal deliverance. And what means the "iron pen?" the engraving of his words upon a "rock forever?" Is it that because in a few days his words shall become true? Is it not rather, that in future ages men might be reminded of his faith, as written in the solid ROCK? Then his redemption is yet future.

The German of Luther reads: "Uch, dass meine reden geschrieben wurden! Uch, dass sil in ein Buch gestellet wurden! Mit einem isernem Griffel auf Bley, und sum ewigen Gedachtnisse, in inen Fels gehanen wurden! Uber ech weiss dass mein Arloser labet; und er wird mich hernoch ans der Arda anferwecken," etc. This is the interpretation: "O that my words were now written! O that they were put in the book! That they were written with an iron style on lead. That they were engraven in a ROCK, and dedicated to the generations forever. For I know that my Redeemer liveth, and he will hereafter awaken me out of the earth, and will return to me my skin, and I shall see God in my flesh, himself shall I see, mine eyes shall behold him and not a strangar." The latest and best translators refer this language of Job to an existence beyond the grave. "Ewald, in many respects the ablest of the recent translators and interpreters of the book, regards this as undeniable; and the view which restricts the language to an earthly hope, as opposed to the proper forces of the words, to the connection of thought, and to the spirit and tenor of the whole book." Book of Job, with critical notes. Bible Union pp. 4 to 6. Adam Clark says: "I arrive at the conclusion, that the prophecy in question was not designed to point out the future prosperity of Job, but rather the future redemption of mankind by Jesus Christ, and the general resurrection of the human race." And in this view concur the following: Coverdale, Dr. Chaloner, Rev. John Fry, B. A., Dr. Hales, R. W. Landis, Parens, Poole, Piscator, Lightfoot, Witsius, Calvin, Pfeiffer, Junius, Tremellius, Shultens, and a host of others. And T. H. Horne says this view "is now generally received."

2. But man dieth, and wasteth away; yea, man giveth up the Ghost, and where is he? As the waters fall from the sea, and the flood decayeth and drieth up; so man lieth down and riseth not; till the heavens be no more, they shall not awake, nor be raised out of their sleep. O that thou wouldst hide me in the grave, that thou wouldst keep me secret, until thy wrath be past, that thou wouldst appoint me a set time, and remember me! If a man die, shall he live again? All the days of my appointed time will I wait, till my change come. Thou shalt call and I will answer thee; thou wilt have a desire to the work of thine hands."—Job 14:10-12.

One writer has said, "The body sinks under the stroke of death and ceases to exist. But does the spirit likewise cease to exist?" To attempt to decide this question, by bringing texts to prove that man, as man, ceases to exist in this world, and shall be here no more; or to present texts to prove that man has a spirit that is immortal; or to say that the Patriarch was not unmindful of his better and deathless spirit, is trifling with the subject. Whoever denied that man has a spirit? It is only denied that it has a conscious existence after the death of the body. The Patriarch never once mentioned that he had a "better and deathless spirit." Neither does he intimate that he expects to join "the happy spirits in the invisible world? Are happy spirits there? Perish the thought.

Again, it is remarked: "If the phrase, 'till the heavens be no more,' signifies what the fair interpretation intends to mean, that is never, then it follows, if the passage is to be literally interpreted, that man is never to be raised from the dead." And in another place it is said, "Man, as man, does not in reality exist, and never shall till the heavens pass away." But, according to this writer's views, the heavens will never pass away, and he says, that, when man dies, he will not again in reality exist till the heavens do pass away; so, following this reasoning, when man dies, that will be the end of him. Is not this the same doctrine that France imbibed, when she wrote on the cenotaphs, of her dead, "Death is an eternal sleep?" What says the word about the heavens passing away? "But the day of the Lord will come as a thief in the night; in the which the heavens shall pass away with a great noise." "Nevertheless, we, according to His promise, look for new heavens and a new earth, wherein dwelleth righteousness." The heavens therefore are to pass away and man is to be raised from the dead.

3. A writer remarks, "Equally apparent is the folly of endeavoring to reconcile the idea of sleep with extinction and unconsciousness of being." Now, be it remembered, Christ endeavored to reconcile unconsciousness of being with the idea of sleep. Christ said to his disciples, "Lazarus sleepeth, I go that I may wake him." The disciples remarked, "If he sleepeth, he doeth well." Christ replied plainly, "Lazarus is dead." "That they sleep," is said of those who die in the Lord, but not in regard to the wicked. A man soundly asleep is all unconscious of existence. So with the dead; they exist in some form, but they themselves are not cognizant of existence. The dead are not totally destroyed; if they were, there could be no resurrection. A tree exists, but who supposes that it is aware of the fact? There can be existence without a knowledge of that existence. A man under the influence of fainting is utterly insensible, both as regards himself and others; yet he does exist for all that.

4. In the Bible we read, "God is one." It is proper, therefore, to use the expression. The immortality of the soul is not taught in the Bible. It is not, therefore, proper to say, "immortal soul." In Job 4:17, the opposite doctrine is stated. "Shall mortal man be more just than God?" It is not necessary to coin language, when the Bible is so explicit.

Again, it is urged that the soul's immortality is silently assumed and taken for granted, in the Scripture. Admit this, for argument's sake; and then compare the treatment of this supposed doctrine, with the scriptural treatment of another doctrine—that of the Divine Existence, a doctrine undoubtedly taken for granted in the Bible, and with which the doctrine in question is often associated as one of the main pillars of religious truth. If these two are the cardinal truths of religion, they should receive similar treatment, in the revelation of divine character and human destiny. If one of these doctrines is stated explicitly and categorically, we should expect the same of the other. If one of them is not directly stated, but is explicitly assumed, with frequent mention or allusion, we should expect the same of the other. If one is assumed implicitly and silently, or taken for granted as a doctrine, we should expect the same of the other.

Now, what are the facts? The divine existence is not asserted categorically, or named as a proposition. It is assumed as too clear for argument. It is a truth of the religious consciousness, to prove which would be preposterous. The Bible never goes into debate with the Atheist. But so far from being assumed tacitly, the divine existence is named and alluded to, and involved in various forms of speech. It stands out in bold relief, on the pages of the Bible. It meets the reader at every turn. Two short books, Esther and the Song of Solomon, do not contain expressions of the existence of God; in every other it is the apple of gold in the picture of silver. It is the Koh-i-noor, the mountain of light, that illumines the volume. It is the central truth that makes the Bible the word of God. It is the Shekinah that imparts sacredness to the book, so that even the sceptics have approached it with awe, as standing on holy ground. And lest this one great truth should weary the devout reader with monotony, it appears in endlessly varying forms, in manifold names of the divine Being, and of his glorious attributes. And to arrest the attention and invite the study of reluctant men, the Bible yields a thousand expressions of the power, wisdom and goodness of God. If we strike from the record those passages which tell us of His being and His works, we lessen the dimensions of the volume; we make it a book without sense or meaning; we exchange its radiant light for midnight darkness. But if we expunge from the same book all those passages in which the immortality of the soul is mentioned, or expressly assumed, we leave the volume unchanged. It might have been written just as we have it; and the revelation would have been just as complete as it is, if the sacred writers had conspired, with uniform consent, to avoid all reference or allusion to that form of doctrine, sometimes called, "one of the two cardinal truths of religion." The immortality of the soul is named neither abstractly nor concretely. Whence this contrast in the scriptural treatment of the two ideas? Will it be said that the immortality of the soul is sufficiently clear to man's unaided reason? That important truth ought to be surpassingly clear to human reason, which need not be named in a Revelation. Wherever the doctrine of the soul's immortality has obtained, it has created various modes of expression that reveal the sentiment. Why, then, are these expressions altogether avoided or ignored in the Bible? He who had the words of eternal life, never said that all men were to exist forever. It becomes, then, a fair question, whether the taking for granted the immortality of the soul is not extra scriptural—an assumption out of the Bible, but foreign to it.—Herald of Gospel Liberty.

MAN MADE IN THE IMAGE OF GOD.

We take two plain and positive statements of the word of God, place them side by side, and draw a simple, legitimate conclusion.

1. "God formed man of the dust of the ground."

2. "God created man in his own image, in the image of God created he him."

CONCLUSION. That which was formed of dust was made in the image of God.

But it is objected that God is "without body or parts," and therefore this conclusion must be erroneous; that man was morally in the image of God. That his likeness to God must be a moral likeness. That man was like God in moral character, or in his attributes, or both. Those ministers that say, as many do, that man lost the image of his Creator, in his fall, must refer to man's moral character; for they do not wish to be understood that he lost the immortality of the soul. Now man could have no real, positive moral character, till he had formed it by his own action in reference to moral law. When first created, his character was not formed. He was innocent, and pronounced very good; but it could not then be said to him, "Well done"; for he had done nothing to form a character either way. But man was made in the image God. Then, if we understand it of moral of image, it could mean nothing more than innocence. The tiger, and every four-footed beast, were equally innocent, were "very good"; but it is evident they were not created in the image of God. Man's innocence, then, was not what distinguished him, as being in the image of God.

"Admitted," says an objector; "but the image of God was found in the natural attributes of the soul. Thus:

1. Man was made in the image of God.
2. But God is immortal.
3. Therefore man was made immortal."

Now, my friend, if that argument is good and sound, another formed upon the same plan would be equally good. But by forming syllogisms after your pattern we might make it appear that man is omnipotent, omniscient and omnipresent; yes, and further, that man "only hath immortality," for this is affirmed of God.

This mode of arguing proves too much; therefore it proves nothing. Hence, we must take the most simple and obvious conclusion, namely, that man was made in the form of God. Christ was in the "form of God," and is the "express image of his Father's person." Col. 1:15; Phil. 2:6; Heb. 1:3. In Gen. 9:6, we read, "Whoso sheddeth man's blood, by man shall his blood be shed; for in the image of God made he man." And an apostle says, that men "are made after the similitude of God."

Daniel says of the Father, "The Ancient of days did sit, whose garment was white as snow, and the hair of his head like pure wool; his throne was like the fiery flame, and his wheels as burning fire."—Chap. 7:9. John describes the Son as follows: "One like unto the Son of man, clothed with a garment down to the foot, and girt about the paps with a golden girdle. His head and his hairs were white like wool, as white as snow; and his eyes were as a flame of fire; and his feet like unto fine brass, as it burned in a furnace."—Rev. 1:13-15. A comparison of these scriptures would give us the idea that the Son had the personal appearance of the Father.

"That view is grossly material," says one. If it is so, the fault is in the Bible. Why not say finely material? We "believe that God is"; others say they believe he is—immaterial. We do not say that he is of the earth, earthy; but man thus formed of the dust of the earth, was made in the image of God. This fact has no bearing on the question of the immortality of the soul.—R. F. COTTRELL.—Adv. Review.

HUMAN NATURE.

"There is a great deal of human nature in man." It crops out occasionally in boys. One of the urchins in the school-ship Massachusetts, who was quite sick, was visited by a kind lady. The little fellow was suffering acutely, and his visitor asked him if she could do anything for him.

"Yes," replied the patient, "read to me."

"Will you have a story?" asked the lady.

"No," answered the boy; "read from the Bible—read about Lazarus;" and the lady complied.

The next day the visit was repeated, and again the boy asked the lady to read.

"Shall I read from the Bible?" she inquired.

"O, no," was the reply; "I am better to-day; read me a love story."

T. C. PARKMAN

The World's Crisis

AND SECOND ADVENT MESSENGER.

"BEHOLD, I COME QUICKLY; AND MY REWARD IS WITH ME."

WHOLE NO. 433. BOSTON, TUESDAY, JANUARY 19, 1864. VOL. XVIII.—NO. 18.

The Worlds' Crisis

AND SECOND ADVENT MESSENGER,

Issued every Tuesday Afternoon, at

167 HANOVER STREET, BOSTON.

MILES GRANT, EDITOR.

EDITORIAL COMMITTEE:

H. L. HASTINGS, D. T. TAYLOR, H. F. CARPENTER.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEE:

H. Y. DAVIS, S. S. BREWER, A. ROSS, J. G. HAMBLIN, SOLOMON HOVEY.

GEO. T. ADAMS, TREASURER.

☞ THE CRISIS is devoted to the exposition of all Bible truth; especially the doctrine of the immediate, personal coming and reign of Christ on the earth; holiness of heart; the unconscious state of the dead; their literal resurrection, and the final destruction of the wicked.

For the World's Crisis.

RESIGNATION.

One prayer I have,—all prayer is one
When I am wholly thine;
Thy will, my God, thy will be done,
And let that will be mine.
All-wise, Almighty and All-good,
In thee I firmly trust,
Thy ways unknown or understood,
Are merciful and just.

Thy gifts are only then enjoyed
When used as talents lent,
Those talents only well employed
When in thy service spent.
And though thy wisdom takes away,
Shall I arraign thy will?
No, let me bless thy name and say—
The Lord is gracious still.

A pilgrim through the earth I roam,
Of nothing long possessed,
And all must fall when we go home,
For this is not our rest.
Write but my name upon the roll
Of thy redeemed above,
Then heart and mind, and strength, and soul,
Shall love thee for thy love.

North Dana, Mass. LUTHERIA B. WEAVER.

For the World's Crisis.

WHAT IS A JEW?
And to whom do the Promises Belong?

NUMBER TWO.

After all, there are those who maintain that outward circumstances, such as the flesh, nationality, etc., make a Jew—God's word to the contrary notwithstanding.—Rom. 2: 28, 29. Such seem very positive also, by their declarations, that Gentiles by birth can have no right whatever to the name and privileges of Israel. But if they will read Paul's letter to the Ephesians, especially the second chapter, they will see that Gentiles who once had no privilege to the body politic of Israel, by being converted to Christ, were recognized as members of Israel's commonwealth, and thus eligible to all the privileges and immunities of God's Israel, especially the "covenant of promise."

Just listen to the effort of an apostle to inspire gratitude in these converted Gentiles, by referring them to the sad state they once occupied, and the hopeful and happy condition they then enjoyed in consequence of receiving Christ:—

"Wherefore remember, that ye being in time past Gentiles in the flesh who are called Uncircumcision by that which is called the Circumcision in the flesh made by hands; that at that time ye were without Christ, being aliens from the commonwealth of Israel, and strangers from the covenants of promise, having no hope, and without God in the world. But now, in Christ Jesus, ye, who sometimes were far off, are made nigh by the blood of Christ."—Eph. 2: 11-13.

Thus far the apostle. Methinks I hear these newly adopted Israelites ruminating thus: "Is it possible that we, who are by birth idolaters, never having been allowed to mingle at all with God's Israel, and consequently have no share in the 'covenants of promise' made by God to that people, shall now be considered as one of their number, and consequently share in all that was promised to them?" "Yes," says inspiration, "the middle wall of partition between us is broken down." Listen to inspiration still further:—"Now therefore ye are no more strangers and foreigners, but fellow-citizens with the saints, and of the household of God." Does not this passage prove that "the saints" and "the household of God" are here used synonymously with Israel? The 11th and 12th verses declare they were in time past Gentiles and "aliens from the commonwealth of Israel, and strangers from the covenants of promise." "But NOW" ye are no more, or no longer, strangers and foreigners from the commonwealth of Israel.

If the name Israel is only to be used in a national capacity, why such expressions as "Israel after the flesh"; "Jews outwardly"; "They are not all Israel which are of Israel"? If it only took outward circumstances, as the flesh, nationality, etc., would not all that thus belonged to them be Israel? And yet, some will maintain that all the natural or fleshly descendants are Israel, and consequently heirs to exceeding great and precious promises. Look here. Does God ever make special promises of future good to the children of the Devil? Well, Christ told the Jews their father was the Devil! There is so much in the volume of inspiration to prove conclusively that God is no respecter of persons, but only of character, that I think it must be apparent to all Bible readers that the same character, possessing the same resources or privileges for light, will be regarded the same by the Judge when he comes to take vengeance on those who know not God.

Now let us take the language of infidels, such as Paine and Voltaire, and compare it with the language of both ancient and modern Jews, and we shall find it identical; so much so, that we should have no doubt but the same heart (morally) indited both; and if their words are to justify or condemn them, what can be the difference in their doom? Let us imagine ourselves at the judgment, and the Lord addresses Paine and Voltaire thus:—"Did you receive my Son?"—"By no means," say they. "We declared his birth to be illegitimate; that he was low, and associated with the vilest of both sexes; an especial favorite of courtesans. In fine, he was an impostor." Well, the Lord says they must be "burned up root and branch." A Jew then appears, and the Lord addresses the same question to him, and he uses the same language to answer as did the these infidels, having in this world lived side by side. Now according to the belief of some, the Lord will say to the last,—"Because you are a natural descendant of Abraham, you may have an opportunity to secure eternal life. You see my Son has returned; you have witnessed the triple glory surrounding him; what hinders your receiving him? If this would not be respecting persons, I am unable to understand what respect of persons would be.

"But," says the objector, "there is to be a great change when Christ comes the second time. He is then to make the 'new covenant,' promised in Jer. 31st." This is a great mistake, because there is positive Bible proof that we are now living under that covenant. Paul says, God had made him an able minister of the New Covenant.—2 Cor. 3: 6. Testament and Covenant are precisely the same. If Paul was an able minister of the New Covenant, we have been under the New Covenant for 1800 years at least; and what a mistake to put in the future what is 1800 years in the past! Then right in connection with this declaration of the apostle, ver. 3, he tells the Corinthian church they were the ones who had the law written on their hearts, just what God promised under the New Covenant of Jer. 31. Please read Jer. 31: 33, and compare it with 2 Cor. 3: 3, and see if there is not a perfect fulfillment. But is Jer. 31: 39 fulfilled under this covenant? Most certainly. This covenant carries us into the New Earth. Therefore, I cannot look for any covenant to be made in the future, because I plainly see it far in the past; and besides it involves us in very fearful consequences—consequences as dire as the death of Christ the second time. It is distinctly stated that Jesus Christ is the Mediator of the new covenant.—Heb. 12: 29. Then read the declaration in Heb. 9: 16—"For where a testament is, there must also of necessity be the death of the testator." So if Christ makes a new covenant at his second coming, he must die before it can be put in force, according to the 17th ver.,—"For a testament is of force after men are dead: otherwise it is of no strength at all while the testator liveth."

Some quote Ezek. 37: 24, 25, arbitrarily claiming a fulfillment after the second advent: "And David my servant shall be king over them; and they all shall have one shepherd: they shall also walk in my judgments, and observe my statutes, and do them. And they shall dwell in the land that I have given unto Jacob my servant, wherein your fathers have dwelt, and they shall dwell therein, even they, and their children, and their children's children for ever: and my servant David shall be their prince for ever." This scripture is quoted to prove the return of the Jews as a nation; that is, the fleshly descendants of Abraham, after Christ comes the second time. You see that DAVID is to be their king, and this they claim is LITERAL. But these same literalists claim a SPIRITUAL DAVID; that this same David is Christ. O consistency, thou art a jewel. Why may not others on the same principle claim a spiritual Israel, and a literal and fleshly David?

Again, it is urged that the city described by Ezekiel synchronizes with that in Revelation. Though there may be points of similarity, there are so many things which positively forbid identity, that it would seem to be doing great violence to the Scriptures thus to wrest them from thei. appropriate place.

It is proclaimed by some that God is now preparing a people to officiate as priests and kings in the age to come; and the condition of being thus highly honored is, to believe in the Jews' return. I do not understand this to be in harmony with the apostle Peter, who in his "General Epistle" to the "elect" told them they were "a chosen generation, a royal priesthood, an holy nation, a peculiar people." In Ezek. 43: 19, and 49: 15, it appears the priests must be Levites. It is admitted that those prepared will be immortalized when Christ comes the second time, after which, they neither marry nor are given in marriage; but in Ezek. directions are given whom the priests may marry; "neither shall they take for their wives a widow, nor her that is put away: but they shall take maidens of the seed of the house of Israel, or a widow that had a priest before." According to this scripture, priests die there and leave widows, who are at liberty to marry other priests.

It is taught that Christ is the Prince in Ezek. But the Prince there is to offer a sin-offering for himself, as well as for all the people of the land. This would be worse than applying the 72nd Ps. to Christ in the age to come, where it says "The heathen . . . and the uttermost parts of the earth" are given to Christ, and he is to "break them with a rod of iron, . . . and dash them in pieces like a potter's vessel," (which by the way does not look much like converting them!) but in Ezekiel, the priest is forbidden to oppress the people thus:—"Moreover the priest shall not take of the people's inheritance by oppression, to thrust them out of their possession; but he shall give his sons inheritance out of his own possession: that my people be not scattered every man from his possession."

There are many other points which show a striking dissimilarity; but, as I am already transcending the law of "short articles," this must suffice for the present.

Sandy Hill, N. Y. B. MATHEWSON.

☞ If you would have a blessing upon your riches, bestow a portion of them in charity.

"THE SIGNS OF THE TIMES."

Under the above heading, the editor and publisher of "The Vials," Torquay, England, Dec. 1st, 1863, says:—

Many people will tell you that it is presumptuous to observe the "Signs of the Times;" and that by so doing we are taking upon ourselves the character of a prophet. But we find a very different verdict pronounced in Scripture. The Scribes and Pharisees were not prophets, yet our Lord expressly condemns them, not for observing, but for neglecting the Signs of the Times. If the Pharisees were condemned for over-looking those signs, so may we be condemned; and never before was there a moment in which such "Signs of the Times" were offered to our contemplation. Never before was there a moment so ominous of a judgment to come.

It is one of the marks of the Last Antichrist that "all the world should wonder after the Beast!" and that all should say "Who is able to make war with him?" Has not one man arisen befor our eyes in whom these two characteristics meet! One man, emerging from the obscurity of private life, from exile, and from prison, has placed himself—by divine permission—at the head of all human affairs. All the world fixes its eyes upon his movements—waits upon his breath—scans his impenetrable looks—conjectures his resolves—and arrays its hopes and fears in humble obedience to his dictation. He says to mankind—"rejoice," and they rejoice; he says—"tremble," and they tremble; he says—"be at peace," and they drop their weapons; he says—"let it be war," and Europe is in arms. Such an accumulation of power on the one hand, and of imbecility on the other, the world has never witnessed before. To compare with him the greatest of the Roman emperors would be absurd. The Roman emperors were, indeed, more absolute in their power, as far as that power reached; but they were far more limited in their influence. They were utterly unknown beyond the limits of the British seas to the west, and of the Euphrates to the east. He extends his influence across the Atlantic to the west; and is master of whole regions beyond the Ganges to the east. And that power, though not absolute, is REAL. It is not like the nominal power of the British Queen. Were we to utter one word in an offensive tone, Canada and Australia would revolt. We can only keep together half our empire by humoring and yielding to it. But the power of the French Emperor is REAL and indisputable; and his influence in the four quarters of the globe is much greater than our influence even in many parts of our own imaginary empire. A man must be blind indeed who has not discovered, for example, that our immense province of Australia is virtually an independent empire, and cares next to nothing for our home government. Whereas by the weight of his military power, the French monarch compels every empire of the globe to watch his looks, to hang upon his words, and to regulate its movements like a satellite revolving round its primary planet. He has become the sun in the system of the world's empires. Is not this one of the "Signs of the Times," where all the world is wondering after ONE MAN? (Rev. 13.)

Another sign has just appeared, and one deserving of our attention. In the last number we spoke of the Last Antichrist; and combatted the favorite Protestant error that the Last Antichrist was the Pope. We have often said that when the Last Antichrist appears he will pull down the Pope, assume his place, and set himself up to be worshiped as a god. The Pope, we believe, will subside into the character of the False Prophet, and will act as the minister of the "Beast." If we bear this in mind we shall be the more impressed by what is taking place in Paris. For more than half a century a statue of the great Napoleon has stood on the summit of a triumphant column at Paris, in the ordinary dress of the original—the well-known riding coat and the hat. That statue has just been removed, and is to be replaced by another in the costume of an ancient Roman emperor. One part of that costume is the memorable laurel crown, the "Stephanos" of the Book of Revelation. (Rev. 6.) By this means the Napoleonic dynasty will be exhibited as the direct representative of the ancient Roman emperors, and as the continuation of the Roman line, which was snapped asunder 1400 years ago by the Gothic invasion. The line fell to the ground, and was trailed in the dust of fourteen centuries. The first Napoleon raised it from the dust, and the third Napoleon has received it from the hands of his great predecessor. He now exhibits the Roman dynasty, revived in the Napoleonic line; and he does this at the central point of power, civilization and intellect, in PARIS—the political capital of the world. The statue wears the Roman crown, or "Stephanos;" the coins and the medals of Napoleon the Third bear the same crown upon their obverse; and it may be said, with truth, that now, at last, the "Stephanos" of the First Seal has been given to one man, who has both the WILL and the POWER to go forth conquering and to conquer. (Rev. 6.) What may actually happen we do not at present inquire; but the facts which we have stated are well worth noticing, and are in complete accordance with prophecy. At present we have to view this subject in a different light. A few years ago the statue of Napoleon was removed from its pedestal to make room for the new one in the garb of a Roman emperor. The good taste of the change was very much questioned in Paris; upon which an article appeared in the French journals assigning the reason of the change. And what was the reason assigned? That the Roman dress was necessary for the "APOTHEOSIS" of the emperor. Nothing less than the Apotheosis! The ancient Roman emperors, after death, were raised to the rank of gods by the servile flattery of the senate. They were worshiped as gods, and sacrifices were offered to them. Now, we are told that the first Napoleon is to be honored with an "Apotheosis"—that is to say, that HE, like the Roman Cæsars, is to be regarded as a GOD. "The new dress is necessary for the Apotheosis." So that the deity of Napoleon is publicly announced at Paris. The dead emperor is declared to be a god already; and the LIVING emperor is only the continuation of the DEAD one. The next step will be the deification of Napoleon the Third, as the immediate consequence of the deification of Napoleon the First. We see how the world is being prepared for the worship of a MAN. First the dead man is deified, which is a wise and cautious beginning. The dead are out of sight. We may fancy them to be gods. Being thus habituated to man-worship in one form, we are brought to endure it in another form more direct in itself, and more likely at first sight to shock our feeling of propriety. We are brought to endure it in the case of a LIVING man. Immense military power, and a series of victories will greatly assist the imagination; and as Napoleon the Third hopes and intends to conquer on all sides, he reckons eventually on the deification of HIMSELF as the representative of Napoleon the First.

It is by such a process as this that the worship of the Last Antichrist will be brought about. Not at once, lest the world be shocked, but by the worship of the DEAD as a preparation for the worship of the LIVING. It is then that the Pope will be overthrown, for there cannot be two lions in one forest, and the Last Antichrist will usurp his place, and more than usurp his deification. The last state of man-worship will be worse than the first. And here we wish to repeat the warning so often given before. The time will come when some powerful emperor will overturn both Popery and the Pope. That moment the Protestant world will load him with its praises. The "Record" newspaper will call him a man of God, as it has done in the case of a godless prime minister. He who destroys Popery must necessarily be a man of God! That man will be worse than the Pope. He will establish a religion worse than Popery. But if you allow ignorant men to persuade you that there is no Antichrist after the Pope, you must of necessity believe that he who overturns the Pope is the best of Protestants—you will follow him, and be lost for ever.

It has been said that Popery is the Devil's master-piece. This is a mistake, the Devil has achieved one work more masterly still. He has persuaded Protestants to throw all the sins, and crimes, and judgments of modern times upon the head of the Pope. Is there a sin mentioned in Scripture—it is Popery. Is there a judgment threatened—it is for the Church of Rome. Protestantism is clear of all the terrors of the prophetic Scriptures, and has nothing to look for but eternal glory! Protestants are "the called, the chosen, and the faithful," of the Book of Revelation. They have nothing to fear in the day of the Lord. That day is for Popery, not for them. Against such madness as this the SNARE is provided. The man who overturns the Pope will be the last and worst Antichrist. Protestants will adore him because he is the enemy of POPERY. They will adhere to the Man of Sin, thinking him the Man of God; and the murderers of the Japanese, the opium poisoners of China, will be caught in their own net. They loved the false doctrine that there was no Antichrist but the Pope. They cheered on the men who invented and circulated the falsehood. They shall be deservedly taken in the falsehood which they have devised. "God shall send them strong delusion that they may believe a LIE." (2 Thess. 2.) The truth is, of course, that Popery is ONE form of Antichristianism, that Infidelity is another form, and that our corrupt Protestantism is the third, and in some respects the WORST.

For the World's Crisis.

2300 DAYS.

Dan. 8: 14.—"And he said unto me, unto 2300 days, then shall the sanctuary be cleansed." Also verse 19,—"For at the time appointed the end shall be." To me it is evident that the 2300 days and the time appointed are the same, and that they reach to the consummation or end of this age, or till God's kingdom comes, when those that are ready will go in and mercy's door will be forever shut. Oh! brethren and sisters, let us all be ready and waiting, loving each other fervently, and God, and his dear Son's appearing supremely.

Some may inquire, when will the 2300 days end? My belief is that they will end before the close of 1866, for I think the days are 2300 years, and that exactly sixty-nine sevens or four hundred and eighty-three years ended at the cross, leaving 1817 to be fulfilled after the cross, which cannot be later than A. D. 49, for the Jews declared that Christ was not fifty years old, so he could not be over forty-nine, to which add 1817, and we have only 1866. I do not see how it can pass that time. Let us be ready. Amen.

If we take the signs in the 24th of Matthew, to precede his (Christ's) second coming, we may look for him any moment, or at least for the sign when all the tribes of the earth mourn, when, as I understand, there will be no farther probation for sinners. May God help us to work while the day lasts.

The disciples inquired of Jesus what would be the sign of his coming, and the end of the world, or age? and Jesus told them plainly—Matt. 24: 7,—"For nation shall rise again nation," which does not take place till near 500 of the christian era. Then the fifteenth verse, Daniel's "Abomination" or the Papal Persecution, which, according to Scripture and history, occupying 1260 years, could not have ended till about the time the sun was supernaturally darkened, on the 19th of May, 1780. In fact, that is the first sign, as Luke records it. Signs in the sun, then, as I think the Savior fixes it, the generation that sees the first sign, or darkening of the sun will not pass away till Jesus comes in the clouds of heaven.

Consequently I am firm in the belief that the race of people that was alive in 1780, or were eighty-three years old last May, will not all pass away, or die before the coming of Christ with power and great glory. Then truly significant is the language of Peter—"What manner of persons ought we to be in all holy conversation and godliness." Dear waiting ones, let us be sober, and watch, for, says the Revelator, "If they will not watch, I will come as a thief, and they shall not know what hour I will come." Then if we will watch, and heed the prophetic periods and signs that are in the past, we may know he is near. Amen. IRA FANCHER.

Sandy Hill, N. Y., Jan. 1st, 1864.

For the World's Crisis.

SAINTS' HOME.

There is a house not made with hands,
A port of endless rest,
Where all the pilgrims soon will meet,
Soon lean on Jesus' breast;
Soon every boist'rous storm outride,
Soon reach that blissful shore,
Beyond this dark and rolling tide,
Where sorrow comes no more.

Soon will they reach the heavenly plain,
Where every tear'll be dry;
Yes, soon in glory they will reign,
With Jesus ever nigh;
Soon leave this world of hopes and fears,
To dwell with their dear Lord,—
Beyond this dreary vale of tears
Receive the great reward.

Soon the last warning will be heard;
Sinner, will you not come?
Soon the last prayer for you be made,
Soon you will hear your doom.
Awake! O sinner, now awake,
And to the Savior fly;
Prepare, before it is too late,
To meet him in the sky.

Utica, Ill. L. A. SMITH.

SCRIPTURE EXPOSITION.

1. "O that my words were now written! O that they were printed in a book! that they were graven with an iron pen and lead in the rock forever! For I know that my Redeemer liveth, and that he shall stand at the latter day upon the earth; and though after my skin worms destroy this body, yet in my flesh shall I see God; whom I shall see for myself, and mine eyes shall behold, and not another; though my reins be consumed within me."—Job 19: 23-27.

Some think this passage refers simply to events in this life. I view this passage, however, as referring to the period of time when Job should be raised from the grave; because Job expected no temporal deliverance; for had he, he would not have cursed the day of his birth, and said: "My days are past, my purposes are broken off, even the thoughts of my heart." "If I wait the grave is mine house; I have made my bed in the darkness. I have said to corruption, Thou art my father; to the worm, thou art my mother, and my sister. And where is now my hope? as for my hope who shall see it?" "My death is corrupt, my days are extinct, the graves are ready for me." Does this look as though he expected temporal deliverance? "Though he slay me, yet will I trust in him." Does not this point to a future life? "O that my words were now written! O that they were inscribed in the book! That with an iron style they were inscribed in the rock forever!" A book would not be needed to refresh the memories of those who heard the expressions of his faith, if he was but looking to a temporal deliverance. And what means the "iron pen?" the engraving of his words upon a "rock forever?" Is it that because in a few days his words shall become true? Is it not rather, that in future ages men might be reminded of his faith, as written in the solid ROCK? Then his redemption is yet future.

The German of Luther reads: "Uch, dass meine reden geschrieben wurden! Uch, dass sil in ein Buch gestellet wurden! Mit einem isernem Griffel auf Bley, und sum ewigen Gedachtnisse, in inen Fels gehanen wurden! Uber ech weiss dass mein Arloser labet; und er wird mich hernoch an der Arda anferwecken," etc. This is the interpretation: "O that my words were now written! O that they were put in the book! That they were written with an iron style on lead. That they were engraven in a ROCK, and dedicated to the generations forever. For I know that my Redeemer liveth, and he will hereafter awaken me out of the earth, and will return to me my skin, and I shall see God in my flesh, himself shall I see, mine eyes shall behold him and not a strangar." The latest and best translators refer this language of Job to an existence beyond the grave. "Ewald, in many respects the ablest of the recent translators and interpreters of the book, regards this as undeniable; and the view which restricts the language to an earthly hope, as opposed to the proper forces of the words, to the connection of thought, and to the spirit and tenor of the whole book." Book of Job, with critical notes. Bible Union pp. 4 to 6. Adam Clark says: "I arrive at the conclusion, that the prophecy in question was not designed to point out the future prosperity of Job, but rather the future redemption of mankind by Jesus Christ, and the general resurrection of the human race." And in this view concur the following: Coverdale, Dr. Chaloner, Rev. John Fry, B. A., Dr. Hales, R. W. Landis, Parens, Poole, Piscator, Lightfoot, Witsius, Calvin, Pleiffer, Junius, Tremellius, Shultens, and a host of others. And T. H. Horne says this view "is now generally received."

2. But man dieth, and wasteth away; yea, man giveth up the Ghost, and where is he? As the waters fall from the sea, and the flood decayeth and drieth up; so man lieth down and riseth not; till the heavens be no more, they shall not awake, nor be raised out of their sleep. O that thou wouldst hide me in the grave, that thou wouldst keep me secret, until thy wrath be past, that thou wouldst appoint me a set time, and remember me! If a man die, shall he live again? All the days of my appointed time will I wait, till my change come. Thou shalt call and I will answer thee; thou wilt have a desire to the work of thine hands."—Job 14: 10-12.

One writer has said, "The body sinks under the stroke of death and ceases to exist. But does the spirit likewise cease to exist?" To attempt to decide this question, by bringing texts to prove that man, as man, ceases to exist in this world, and shall be here no more; or to present texts to prove that man has a spirit that is immortal; or to say that the Patriarch was not unmindful of his better and deathless spirit, is trifling with the subject. Whoever denied that man has a spirit? It is only denied that it has a conscious existence after the death of the body. The Patriarch never once mentioned that he had a "better and deathless spirit." Neither does he intimate that he expects to join "the happy spirits in the invisible world? Are happy spirits there? Perish the thought.

Again, it is remarked: "If the phrase, 'till the heavens be no more,' signifies what the fair interpretation intends to mean, that is never, then it follows, if the passage is to be literally interpreted, that man is never to be raised from the dead." And in another place it is said, "Man, as man, does not in reality exist, and never shall till the heavens pass away." But, according to this writer's views, the heavens will never pass away, and he says, that, when man dies, he will not again in reality exist till the heavens do pass away; so, following this reasoning, when man dies, that will be the end of him. Is not this the same doctrine that France imbibed, when she wrote on the cenotaphs, of her dead, "Death is an eternal sleep?" What says the word about the heavens passing away? "But the day of the Lord will come as a thief in the night; in the which the heavens shall pass away with a great noise." "Nevertheless, we, according to His promise, look for new heavens and a new earth, wherein dwelleth righteousness." The heavens therefore are to pass away and man is to be raised from the dead.

3. A writer remarks, "Equally apparent is the folly of endeavoring to reconcile the idea of sleep with extinction and unconsciousness of being." Now, be it remembered, Christ endeavored to reconcile unconsciousness of being with the idea of sleep. Christ said to his disciples, "Lazarus sleepeth, I go that I may wake him." The disciples remarked, "If he sleepeth, he doeth well." Christ replied plainly, "Lazarus is dead." "That they sleep," is said of those who die in the Lord, but not in regard to the wicked. A man soundly asleep is all unconscious of existence. So with the dead; they exist in some form, but they themselves are not cognizant of existence. The dead are not totally destroyed; if they were, there could be no resurrection. A tree exists, but who supposes that it is aware of the fact? There can be existence without a knowledge of that existence. A man under the influence of fainting is utterly insensible, both as regards himself and others; yet he does exist for all that.

4. In the Bible we read, "God is one." It is proper, therefore, to use the expression. The immortality of the soul is not taught in the Bible. It is not, therefore, proper to say, "immortal soul." In Job 4: 17, the opposite doctrine is stated. "Shall mortal man be more just than God?" It is not necessary to coin language, when the Bible is so explicit.

Again, it is urged that the soul's immortality is silently assumed and taken for granted, in the Scripture. Admit this, for argument's sake; and then compare the treatment of this supposed doctrine, with the scriptural treatment of another doctrine—that of the Divine Existence, a doctrine undoubtedly taken for granted in the Bible, and with which the doctrine in question is often associated as one of the main pillars of religious truth. If these two are the cardinal truths of religion, they should receive similar treatment, in the revelation of divine character and human destiny. If one of these doctrines is stated explicitly and categorically, we should expect the same of the other. If one of them is not directly stated, but is explicitly assumed, with frequent mention or allusion, we should expect the same of the other. If one is assumed implicitly and silently, or taken for granted as a doctrine, we should expect the same of the other.

Now, what are the facts? The divine existence is not asserted categorically, or named as a proposition. It is assumed as too clear for argument. It is a truth of the religious consciousness, to prove which would be preposterous. The Bible never goes into debate with the Atheist. But so far from being assumed tacitly, the divine existence is named and alluded to, and involved in various forms of speech. It stands out in bold relief, on the pages of the Bible. It meets the reader at every turn. Two short books, Esther and the Song of Solomon, do not contain expressions of the existence of God; in every other it is the apple of gold in the picture of silver. It is the Koh-inoor, the mountain of light, that illumines the volume. It is the central truth that makes the Bible the word of God. It is the Shekinah that imparts sacredness to the book, so that even the sceptics have approached it with awe, as standing on holy ground. And lest this one great truth should weary the devout reader with monotony, it appears in endlessly varying forms, in manifold names of the divine Being, and of his glorious attributes. And to arrest the attention and invite the study of reluctant men, the Bible yields a thousand expressions of the power, wisdom and goodness of God. If we strike from the record those passages which tell us of His being and His works, we lessen the dimensions of the volume; we make it a book without sense or meaning; we exchange its radiant light for midnight darkness. But if we expunge from the same book all those passages in which the immortality of the soul is mentioned, or expressly assumed, we leave the volume unchanged. It might have been written just as we have it; and the revelation would have been just as complete as it is, if the sacred writers had conspired, with uniform consent, to avoid all reference or allusion to that form of doctrine, sometimes called, "one of the two cardinal truths of religion." The immortality of the soul is named neither abstractly nor concretely. Whence this contrast in the scriptural treatment of the two ideas? Will it be said that the immortality of the soul is sufficiently clear to man's unaided reason? That important truth ought to be surpassingly clear to human reason, which need not be named in a Revelation. Wherever the doctrine of the soul's immortality has obtained, it has created various modes of expression that reveal the sentiment. Why, then, are these expressions altogether avoided or ignored in the Bible? He who had the words of eternal life, never said that all men were to exist forever. It becomes, then, a fair question, whether the taking for granted the immortality of the soul is not extra scriptural—an assumption out of the Bible, but foreign to it.—Herald of Gospel Liberty.

MAN MADE IN THE IMAGE OF GOD.

We take two plain and positive statements of the word of God, place them side by side, and draw a simple, legitimate conclusion.

1. "God formed man of the dust of the ground."

2. "God created man in his own image, in the image of God created he him."

CONCLUSION. That which was formed of dust was made in the image of God.

But it is objected that God is "without body or parts," and thefefore this conclusion must be erroneous; that man was morally in the image of God. That his likeness to God must be a moral likeness. That man was like God in moral character, or in his attributes, or both. Those ministers that say, as many do, that man lost the image of his Creator, in his fall, must refer to man's moral character; for they do not wish to be understood that he lost the immortality of the soul. Now man could have no real, positive moral character, till he had formed it by his own action in reference to moral law. When first created, his character was not formed. He was innocent, and pronounced very good; but it could not then be said to him, "Well done"; for he had done nothing to form a character either way. But man was made in the image God. Then, if we understand it of moral of image, it could mean nothing more than innocence. The tiger, and every four-footed beast, were equally innocent, were "very good"; but it is evident they were not created in the image of God. Man's innocence, then, was not what distinguished him, as being in the image of God.

"Admitted," says an objector; "but the image of God was found in the natural attributes of the soul. Thus:

1. Man was made in the image of God.
2. But God is immortal.
3. Therefore man was made immortal."

Now, my friend, if that argument is good and sound, another formed upon the same plan would be equally good. But by forming syllogisms after your pattern we might make it appear that man is omnipotent, omniscient and omnipresent; yes, and further, that man "only hath immortality," for this is affirmed of God.

This mode of arguing proves too much; therefore it proves nothing. Hence, we must take the most simple and obvious conclusion, namely, that man was made in the form of God. Christ was in the "form of God," and is the "express image of his Father's person." Col. 1: 15; Phil. 2: 6; Heb. 1: 3. In Gen. 9: 6, we read, "Whoso sheddeth man's blood, by man shall his blood be shed; for in the image of God made he man." And an apostle says, that men "are made after the similitude of God."

Daniel says of the Father, "The Ancient of days did sit, whose garment was white as snow, and the hair of his head like pure wool; his throne was like the fiery flame, and his wheels as burning fire."—Chap. 7: 9. John describes the Son as follows: "One like unto the Son of man, clothed with a garment down to the foot, and girt about the paps with a golden girdle. His head and his hairs were white like wool, as white as snow; and his eyes were as a flame of fire; and his feet like unto fine brass, as it burned in a furnace."—Rev. 1: 13-15. A comparison of these scriptures would give us the idea that the Son had the personal appearance of the Father.

"That view is grossly material," says one. If it is so, the fault is in the Bible. Why not say finely material? We "believe that God is"; others say they believe he is—immaterial. We do not say that he is of the earth, earthy; but man thus formed of the dust of the earth, was made in the image of God. This fact has no bearing on the question of the immortality of the soul.—R. F. COTTRELL.—Adv. Review.

HUMAN NATURE.

"There is a great deal of human nature in man." It crops out occasionally in boys. One of the urchins in the school-ship Massachusetts, who was quite sick, was visited by a kind lady. The little fellow was suffering acutely, and his visitor asked him if she could do anything for him.

"Yes," replied the patient, "read to me."

"Will you have a story?" asked the lady.

"No," answered the boy; "read from the Bible—read about Lazarus;" and the lady complied.

The next day the visit was repeated, and again the boy asked the lady to read.

"Shall I read from the Bible?" she inquired.

"O, no," was the reply; "I am better today; read me a love story."

CAN THE SOUL BE KILLED?

"Fear not them which kill the body, but are not able to kill the soul; but rather fear Him which is able to destroy both soul and body in hell."—Matt. 10: 28.

These words are commonly supposed to teach that the essential nature of man resides in his soul, which is said to be a substance quite distinct from the body, which is only, we are told, a machine, constructed for the purpose of enabling the soul to live in, and hold intercourse with, this material world. They are further asserted to imply the indestructibility and deathlessness of the soul, which, it is affirmed, is altogether beyond the reach of any mortal injury, and that the utmost man can do is to destroy the material machine, or body, and effect its separation from the soul, which soars away to some new place, and in a new condition of existence.

Now I ask the candid and intelligent reader on what authority does he suppose that the soul is a distinct subsistence—a complete organization in itself—and constituting the human personality, apart from the body? Is this extensively prevalent notion derived from the Bible? Will the reader pause to recal any portion of the sacred Scriptures where the soul is so described as containing in itself the essential properties of the human being, and capable of a separate state of existence?

* * * * * * * *

If we are to hold the popular opinions about the human soul, what does our text mean? In reply to this question, I request the reader to examine the parallel passage as recorded in Luke 12: 4, 5: "I say unto you, my friends, be not afraid of them that kill the body, and after that have no more that they can do: but I will forewarn you whom ye shall fear: fear Him who, after he hath killed, hath power to cast into hell." In this version of our Lord's words, the word "soul" does not occur; and instead of "are not able to kill the soul," we have the words "have no more that they can do." The meaning, then, is clearly the following: Although wicked men are able to kill the Lord's people, they can do no more than this; they have no power to keep them dead; they cannot destroy the soul or life which the Lord has promised to give his people, by raising them from the dead to die no more.

The word "soul" is to be understood in this passage the same in meaning with the word life: in proof of which I ask the reader's consideration of the following passages which occur in Matt. 16: 25, 26: "Whosoever will save his life shall lose it, and whosoever will lose his life for my sake find it: for what is a man profited if he gain the whole world and lose his own soul? or what shall a man give in exchange for his soul?" Now the word translated life twice in the 25th verse, and soul twice in the 26th verse, is one and the same Greek word in all four places. Why should one word receive different translations in two such closely connected and current texts? The answer is plain. The translators of the Bible held the popular heathen notions about the human soul, and therefore to have used the word "soul" in the 25th ver. would have grated upon their ears. "Whosoever will save his soul shall lose it [!], and whosoever will lose his soul [!] for my sake, shall find it." Hence they employed the word "life" in this verse, and the word "soul" in the verse following! But there is evidently no good reason why one Greek word, occurring as it does in this passage four times consecutively, should be translated by two English words. If the reader will substitute the word life in the 26th verse for the word soul, as is done in the previous verse, he will find a natural, and, as I believe, the strictly correct meaning of our Lord's words: "Whosoever will save his life shall lose it, and whosoever will lose his life for my sake shall find it: for what is a man profited if he shall gain the whole world and lose his own life? or what shall a man give in exchange for his life?" What our Lord says here is very plain; "Whosoever will save his life [in this world, at the expense of his duty to me,] shall lose it [in the world to come]. And whosoever will lose his life [in this world] for my sake, shall find it [in the world to come]. For what is a man profited if he shall gain the whole [present] world, and lose his own life [in the world to come]? or what shall a man give in exchange for his [future and everlasting] life?" To lose the soul then, does not mean that the soul as a separate being, without a body, goes away to be everlastingly tormented; but means to lose the blessed privilege of endless life. When the soul is lost, the man himself, in his entire and complete nature, is lost, or cast away from conscious and endless existence, as Luke in the parallel passage to that we are now considering, most clearly represents. "For what is a man advantaged if he gain the whole world and lose himself, or be cast away?"—Chap. 9: 25.

The text at the head of these remarks is but partially and imperfectly understood by those who quote it with so much assurance in proof that the soul, as a separate being, cannot, and will not, be ever destroyed. What our Lord says is, that man is not able to kill the soul, or destroy the life which he will give his people; but he himself is able to kill the soul, and cut off the wicked from having endless life. "Fear him who is able to destroy both soul and body in hell." And as our Lord warns mankind to fear him as having the power to destroy the whole man in the all-consuming fires of hell, he evidently implies that such is the punishment which he will visit upon the wicked. The miserable subjects of the future punishment will not be perpetuated in conscious sin and suffering, but shall be burnt up as chaff or stubble in the lake of fire which shall flow around the burning world. "The heavens and the earth which are now, by the same word are kept in store, reserved unto fire against the day of judgment, and perdition of ungodly men." 1 Peter, chap. 3, v. 7.—Rev. J. Panton Ham.

Increase of Cities.—The city of London, in ten years, has increased in population 441,753; New York, 290,164 souls, or 56.37 per cent.; and Philadelphia 222,484 inhabitants, or 65.43 per cent. The average number of houses built during ten years in London, was 5,349; in New York, 1,668; and in Philadelphia 2,905. London has been settled 2,000 years, New York 249 years, and Philadelphia 176.

Preaching without Notes.—Perhaps I have preached five thousand sermons, on all kinds of subjects, and on a great variety of occasions, and I did not know beforehand one single sentence that I should utter; and were I to preach before the king, or the two universities, I must preach in this way or not at all.—Dr. Adam Clark.

He cannot bear praise who cannot bear condemnation.

The World's Crisis
AND SECOND ADVENT MESSENGER.

Boston, Tuesday, January 19, 1864.

Postage on Canada Papers.—We have concluded to let our brethren in the British Provinces have the Crisis at the same price as those in the States. In other words, we will pay the postage to the line; hence those taking the paper will pay only two dollars a year, instead of $2.26, as formerly.

APPROACHING REVOLUTIONS IN EUROPE.

All things in the political sky of Europe indicate a general storm of thrilling interest, that will result in mighty upheavings and overturnings among the powers now holding sway over the people. The prospect is now that 1864 will not pass before its commencement. When it begins its results will be startling. Praise the Lord for the bright omens showing that earth's dreary night of sorrow is about to close, when "the saints of the Most High shall take the kingdom for ever, even for ever and ever."

The Paris correspondent of the New York Commercial Advertiser says:—

"There is now no doubt but that the revolutionary party in Italy, Hungary, Germany and France are organizing for a supreme effort the coming spring. The Emperor sees it, and by private communications is urging his Congress on the different European Powers. What the influence of Napoleon could not effect the pressure of events may, and the chances of a Congress of Ministers are now altogether reasonable. What is most singular, the Germans are laboring hard to stimulate the revolution. They believe they can start it in the Schleswig-Holstein affair, and that once started, such an upsetting of affairs may take place as will enable them to establish the German liberal Empire under one head. The Hungarians are also moving in the matter, and nobody is as far advanced in it as the Italians, so that if the liberals in any part of Europe can manage to add to that of Poland another movement, the whole series of magazines may explode."

WHY IS IT SO?

It is clearly evident that those churches which are dependent on piety instead of wealth and fashion for their support, are fast dying out. "Why is it so?" The answer is not difficult. A real living church usually does best when poor; but as soon as vital godliness departs, it dwindles away; whereas, a rich church may be still further from the Lord, and yet make a great show with its wealth, and attract the worldly and fashionable; in other words have "a form of godliness, but denying the power thereof." This state of things is very apparent through the length and breadth of the land, with very few exceptions. Unless there is a waking up soon, the results must be terrible; indeed, they are already so.

Mr. C. C. Goss has been preaching a series of discourses in New York on the moral aspects of the city. The following is an extract from his statements, taken from one of our exchanges:—

"Below Fourteenth Street there are fifteen wards, and seven above. Two-thirds of the territory is above, half the population below. The increase in population during five years has been 58,672. In spite of this, forty-seven church edifices have become extinct in twenty years, and in thirty instances none have been erected in their place. There are now only one hundred and twenty-three places of worship of all kinds—only eighty pastors to 500,000 persons; only 25,000 are found in the churches at any one time. Mr. Goss showed that the mortality down-town was greater than up-town, caused by the crowded condition in which many lived. Six thousand families live under-ground. The youth, too, are growing up immoral and dangerous. In the down-town region there are 80,000 between the ages of five and fifteen; over 54,000 of these are as yet unreached by Sunday School effort; they are the Goths and Vandals of our city. He also showed that much the largest half of our police and police expenses are down-town; eighty out of the one hundred and twenty-two engine companies are there; also all of our places of amusement, from the respectable to the immoral; thieves, gamblers, and all other vile characters, lurk in secret there. After the legitimate business of the day ends, the nefarious night business begins. Cheap suburban homes, cheap railroad fare, and a practical application of the principles of the gospel, were the remedies presented for the existing evil."

We think missionaries need not go to foreign lands to find work. There is a wide and growidg field in all our great cities. Iniquity truly abounds, and the love of many waxes cold. The days of Noah and Lot are upon us. Are we awake to the perils of these times? Are we doing our duty to all around us? Christian soldier, gird on your armor, and prepare for a fierce onset from the enemy. Let us not be cowards in the last conflict. "Stand up for Jesus."

THE HOLY LAND.

It will be seen by the following from the Jewish Messenger, that the land of promise is still trodden down by the Gentiles. When their times run out, then comes the time to cleanse the sanctuary,—the land promised to Abraham, Isaac and Jacob. Till that time arrives, all efforts to restore prosperity must prove to be only so many failures. Yet we have the best of reasons for believing that the time is very near at hand, when the kingdom of God will be established, and his will be done on earth as now in heaven."

"The Holy Land.—Jerusalem, Sept. 24.—The country is infested with Bedouins, who are more rapacious and daring than in former years. The pressure of the Government from Damascus has resulted in uniting the tribes beyond Jordan for mutual defence, in a manner hitherto unknown, and the tribes beyond support the tribes on this side of Jordan, in their lawless proceedings. One action has been already fought between them and the Turkish troops from Acre. The latter were successful, and obtained a large booty of sheep, camels, &c. The Beni-Saker (sons of the hawk) have, however, repaid themselves by attacking about a fortnight ago the village of Deddewan, near Bethel, and carrying off about 2,500 sheep and other cattle. Another raid which they made a few days since near Safaleh was attended with results still more disastrous, for they not only plundered the peasantry, but also killed sixteen persons. The Saamari are actively employed, and about the same time attacked Urtas, maimed several of the villagers, and carried off all their goods. From the gardens (which are English property) they take away whatever fruits or vegetables they require.

The immediate vicinity of Jerusalem is also becoming disturbed and unsafe. On last Saturday week, a party of the Beni-Saker met the doctor of the Latin Convent about two miles from the city, and, after firing at him, proceeded to rob him of all he possessed. Finally, a rope was tied round his neck, and he was dragged along by one of the horsemen. The villagers of Shaaphat, observing his condition, came to his deliverance. One of the freebooters then again fired at him, but as he threw himself upon the ground, the bullet passed over his body. Thus rescued, he was brought back late in the night, stabbed in several places by the lances of his assailants. The captain of a French man-of-war has since been sent to strengthen the Consul in demanding reparation from the local authorities. To visit the Jordan is at present impossible, or, indeed to go any distance from the city is insecure, without an escort of soldiers furnished by the Pasha. When we reflect that during the last four years two English persons have been murdered without any justice having been obtained—that in last April Viscount Atcheson and his party were not only robbed, but narrowly escaped being killed, and that the number of travelers from all parts of the world is very much on the increase,—it seems desirable, if the present state of things is not speedily reformed, that the European Powers should assume the joint protectorate of the Holy Land."—Levant Herald.

THE STATE OF ITALY.

The affairs of Italy are in a state of fermentation, and we may look for stirring times there during the year. The Italians are determined to be free from the Papal yoke which has been so long upon their necks. The hatred of the harlot power, on the "seven hills," is becoming very strong and deep-seated. The time is at hand for the "woman" to begin to drink her bitter cup. There is no escape. A higher than man has spoken, and the wheels of time have brought us to the time for the fulfillment of what the prophet has uttered relative to the overthrow of the great anti-christian power whose seat is at Rome.

The following from the Boston Journal shows what is expected:—

"Expected War for the Freedom of Italy.—New York, Jan. 13*th*. The Post says late news by private letter and otherwise from Italy gives information of an intended agitation there on the Venetian question. Garibaldi has issued a proclamation from Caprera, urging the people to be faithful to the leadership of Victor Emmanuel. The Italian army is permeated with the idea of a speedy war for the deliverance of Venice. During the past year the opening of the spring of 1864 has been looked to as the signal for the beginning of a final effort to make Italy free in fact as well as in name, and the next few months may bring us the most exciting news from Venice and Rome."

TEACHINGS OF SPIRITS.

The spirits, who are giving instruction through their mediums, all deny that Jesus is our Savior, as taught in the Holy Scriptures. They admit he was a good man,—nothing more; and claim that his blood was of no more value in the plan of salvation, than of any of the martyrs. No man can be a Spiritualists, and a christian at the same time; hence all that is said about "Christian Spiritualists" is mere talk about what does not exist. The two are completely antagonistic to each other. If one is true, the other is false. Christianity is true; therefore Spiritualism cannot be.

We clip the following from the Banner of Light (?), Dec 5, '63. The answers are given by a spirit:—

"Q.—Are we to understand that there is a class of spirits in the spirit world known as angels?

A.—No; you should not understand anything of the kind. All spiritual beings have once been human beings. We are aware that your Ancient Record teaches otherwise; that there is a class of intelligences in the spirit spheres who never had a human existence; who always have and ever will exist in spirit, because they are children of eternity. We have never met with such a race of intelligences, and are quite sure that they never did exist except in the fancy of the dark ages."

"Q.—Is it reasonable to pray to God as a distinct being?

A.—No, not when spiritually considered. We only use that term because it serves us best, not because we believe in a personal Deity, a Supreme personal God, who created and is governing all things. We merely use the term relatively. Do you understand us?"

LET IT ALONE.

Let it alone. Let what alone? The intoxicating bowl. Never taste a drop of its contents. Avoid it utterly. Go not in the way of it. Shun it as you would the bite of a rattlesnake. It leads to eternal death, and makes one miserable all the way there. Read the following as given by Mr. Gough in one of his lectures, and then resolve to be a temperance man,—a real teetotaler, of the most rigid character. Mr. Gough says:—

"A graduate of one of the universities of Great Britain came to me shaking and trembling. He said he had 'come to me as he would go to a physician.' I said, 'You must stop drinking.' 'I cannot.' 'You will die.' 'I am afraid I shall; I give it up; I cannot.' My wife and two gentlemen were present. I said, 'What good does the drink do you?' 'No good.' 'Why do you drink?' 'I must have it.' Thinking that being an educated man he might give me some ideas, I asked him, 'Will you tell me how you feel before you begin to drink, and afterwards?' I shall never forget! He stood up and said, 'All I can say is, I must have it.' 'Why?' 'I feel as if there were insects in my veins! Oh! it is horrible, horrible! I touch my coat, I touch my hands, and I jump? Oh! I shall go mad—mad—mad! If I could not get it without having a sound tooth torn out of my jaw, bring the instrument and wrench it out; I must have the drink, you see; so I get it, And then I stand still, that I may not disturb its effect. That's what I want, I want relief; and I feel it. Quick, quick, hot, it sends the blood through my veins; the insects are gone and I begin to perspire. Yes, I am better, better, better! it's what I want,—it's coming, it's coming, it has come to me,—relief,—like a flash of summer lightning, and it has gone, and I get another.' 'Then,' I said, 'you will die.' 'I am afraid I shall; can you save me?' 'No, unless you stop drinking.' 'I cannot die.' 'I have not offered a prayer to God for sixteen years.' 'You must give it up.' 'I cannot.' I said, 'God will help you.' 'No, he won't.' 'I will,' said I; 'my wife and I will take care of you for four days, if you will. I have just four days to spare for you.' We took him, though we could get no promise from him. We nursed him night and day. The third afternoon he sat with me, his hand in mine, and I spoke to him of God, and Christ and eternity. He said, 'I am a man of some common sense, I believe; and am very well aware that I can never be happy in another world.' He then went out and cut his throat from ear to ear. Oh, my friends, shall we not try to save our fellow-men from such a fate?"

THE EUROPEAN CONGRESS.

We may expect important results from the Congress of Sovereigns in Europe. It is one of Napoleon's shrewd plans to obtain power and influence. In 1815 the powers of Europe united to put down the Napoleonic Dynasty, and now they are about to unite in its elevation. This looks like the fulfillment of the prophecy of Rev. 17th Chap., relative to the last head of the Scarlet colored beast, which went into the "bottomless pit," or political grave, and afterwards came out to the astonishment of all. Events are fast approaching the grand focal point of prophecy, when we may look for the personal advent of our Savior.

The following is from The Catholic:—

The Congress and the Sovereigns.—The Memorial Diplomatique says:—'Out of the twenty sovereigns and free towns to which the letter of invitation to the Congress was addressed, nine sovereigns—the Pope, the Queen of Spain, the King of the Belgians, and the Kings of Sweden, Portugal, Italy, and Denmark, the Sultan, and the King of the Greeks—have formally promised to appear in person.' The Dilomatique likewise adds:—'King Leopold, although reigning over a State of small extent, has succeeded, by his talents and his great experience, in acquiring the esteem and respect of the other sovereigns to such a point that he has become in a certain measure the arbitrator of the difficulties which may arise between them, as we have had recently several examples. The adhesion of that monarch has, therefore, a special importance, and he has given it entirely and absolutely to the idea of a Congress, in an autograph letter, short, but inspired by the best feelings, addressed to the Emperor of the French. This reply is an ample justification of the principles of humanity and prudence which have inspired the great design of Napoleon III.'

THE POPE'S REPLY TO FRANCE.

The following is the text of the answer of His Holiness to the Emperor's invitation to attend the Congress:—

Imperial Majesty,—The thought which your Majesty expresses of being able to establish without shock in Europe—would to God elsewhere also—with the concurrence of the Sovereigns or of their representatives, a system which calms men's minds, and restores peace, tranquility, and order to the numerous countries where, unhappily, these benefits are lost, is a design which greatly honors your Majesty, and which, with the co-operation of all, assisted by Divine grace, would produce the best results. We co-operate, therefore, in so laudable a project in a perfectly cordial spirit, and can now earnestly assure your Majesty that all our moral support will be afforded to the Congress, in order that the principles of justice, in these days so much misunderstood and trodden under foot, may be re-established to the advantage of society in its present agitated state, so that violated rights may be admitted, in order to be asserted in favor of those who have had to suffer by their violation, and especially in order that the real pre-eminence which belongs naturally to the Catholic religion, as the only true one, may be re-established, especially in Catholic countries.

Your Majesty cannot hesitate to believe that the Vicar of Jesus Christ, either from the duties of his sublime representation or from the conviction he entertains that in the Catholic faith in conjunction with practice is to be found the sole means proper to moralize the people, cannot in the midst of congresses, even political ones, fail in his obligation to sustain with the greatest rigor the rights of our most august religion, which is One, Holy, Catholic, Apostolic, and Roman.

The confidence which we express of seeing violated rights vindicated, springs from the conscientious duty imposed upon us by their guardianship. In showing ourselves full of solicitude on the subject of these rights, we do not wish your Majesty ever to suppose that we could entertain any doubt with regard to those appertaining to this Holy See, since, besides the other motives which militate in its favor, we have also the assurances which your Majesty has several times given and caused to be given publicly—assurances which it would seem to us offensive to doubt, coming from so high and powerful a Sovereign.

After this preliminary explanation, which has seemed to us all the more opportune that we better understand your Majesty's thought, we are happy to add that we applaud material progress, and desire besides that nations should be in a position to enjoy peaceably their property, as much for the profit that they derive therefrom as for the occupation which it gives them. We could not say as much in the case of our being invited to satisfy certain aspirations of some fractions of these nations—aspirations which cannot be reconciled with the principles above enunciated.

We entertain the hope that your Majesty, with your high perspicacity, will recognize in our frank communication the character of loyalty which always accompanies the acts of the Apostolic See, and at the same time the evidence of the great esteem which we entertain towards your august person, to whom we have in no way hesitated to speak thus explicitly in a matter of so much importance.

Hereupon, with the assurance of our paternal affection, we give your Majesty, your august Consort, and the Imperial Prince our Apostolic Benediction.

Given in our Palace of the Vatican, the 10th November, 1863. Pius P. P. IX."

LOUIS NAPOLEON AND THE BATTLE OF ARMAGEDDON.

The above is the title of a work issued by Bro. M. Baxter, of the Episcopal church. He endeavors to show that Christ will come in some six or seven years, and that Napoleon III. will be the head of the antichristian system now spreading over our world. The following is an extract from his work:—

"In the Appendix to this work, a list is given of more than fifty writers, such as the Hon. Gerard Noel, Rev. Drs. J. Cumming, A. Keith, G. S. Faber, S. H. Tyng, G. Duffield, Bickersteth, etc., all of whom have demonstrated the coming of Christ to be about the period from 1864 to 1869. And some of these writers, as for instance, Frere, Verner, Purdon, Scott, Phillips, Shimeall, etc., firmly maintain the view that Louis Napoleon is the Antichrist and Eighth Head of the Beast. Among other expositors who have written more upon the general outlines than the chronology of prophecy, there may be mentioned the Earl of Carlisle, the Duke of Manchester, the late Bishops of Durham and Norwich, Lord Congleton, Sir E. Denny, etc., according to whose views the end of this dispensation is close at hand. The two last named writers have specially shown in their works that Christ will come to take away the wise virgins before Antichrist's three and a half years' persecution, and will remain in the pavilion-cloud during its continuance, and then descend at its termination upon Mt. Olivet at the Battle of Armageddon.

But although there is almost an unanimous belief among those who have honestly and laboriously investigated the prophecies, that desolating judgments are now about to descend upon the world, in connection with Christ's coming; yet among the majority* of professing christians there is no such belief, owing to their utter ignorance and disregard of prophetic truth. As very few were watching for Christ's first advent, although his appearance, as the Messiah, was distinctly foretold to take place sixty-nine weeks or 483 years after the seventh year of Artaxerxes; so scarcely any are really watching for his second advent, although it is explicitly predicted to occur during the five years preceding the end of the 6000, 2520, 2500, 2300, and 1335 years, and under the seventh year-day vial, trumpet, and seal, and at the time of the eighth Head of the Beast. The text, 'Of that day and that hour knoweth no man, no, . . . not the Son,' (Mark 13: 32), which is continually quoted by scoffers in support of the idea that the time of Christ's advent can never be discovered, evidently was only spoken in the present tense, to the then existing generation, and can not be true at the present period, for the Son of Man must now be fully aware of the day and hour of his approaching advent; and moreover, since those words were uttered, our knowledge of the future has been much increased by the gift of the Holy Ghost on the day of Pentecost, and the bestowment of the book of Revelation, 'to show the things which shall be hereafter.' Under any circumstances, the concealment of the day and hour could not necessarily prevent the discovery of the month, or even the week, of Christ's advent.

A leading event, in connection with our Savior's return, is the manifestation of Antichrist or the Man of Sin, as foretold in 2 Thess. 2: 3; 'That day (the day of Christ) shall not come, except there come the (Gr.) falling away first, and that Man of Sin be revealed, the son of perdition, who opposeth and exalteth himself above all that is called God, or that is worshiped; so that he, as God, sitteth in the temple of God, showing himself that he is God . . . whom the Lord shall consume with the spirit of his mouth, and destroy with the brightness of his coming.' Also in 1 John 2: 18, 22; 'As ye have heard that the (Gr.) Antichrist shall come, even now are there many Antichrists, whereby we know that it is the last time. . . . He is the (Gr.) Antichrist that denieth the Father and the Son.' From these and other passages, it has long been concluded, that although many Antichrists have arisen, such as the Pope and Mahomet, yet there is a particular and individual Antichrist to arise, just before Christ's advent, who is generally called the Personal or Infidel Antichrist, and who is to be worshiped as God in the temple at Jerusalem, and is utterly to deny the existence of Jehovah and of Christ. His exploits are fully described in Daniel 11 and Revelation 17: and also in the literal-day fulfillment of Daniel 7, 8, 11, and Revelation 9, 11, 13, although the year-day fulfillment of these chapters relates to Popery and Mahometanism.

This great Personal Antichrist is distinctly foreshown to be none other than Louis Napoleon, who is consequently very soon to acquire supreme ascendancy over the whole of Christendom, and for three and a half years is ruthlessly to slay nearly every one who will not acknowledge him to be God. Christendom will then become a slaughter-house or shambles, in which tens of thousands of Christ's sheep will be butchered, and scarcely any one will escape the awful ordeal of being put to the test, whether they will confess Christ and be killed, perhaps with dreadful tortures; or whether they will acknowledge Napoleon to be God, and thus purchase temporary safety at the cost of eternal damnation. Those who choose the latter alternative will be branded in their forehead or hand with Napoleon's name, or the number 666, or some particular mark, just as cattle have stamped upon them the name of their owner, (Rev. 13.) This exterminating persecution is the leading feature in the three and a half years Great Tribulation; there will, however, be superadded unparalled wars, earthquakes, pestilences, and famines.

Such is the temptation which shall come upon all the world, to try them that dwell upon the earth." Its universal prevalence, at least throughout Christendom, is declared in the most emphatic terms. The personal Antichrist is to obtain "power over all kindreds, and tongues, and nations;" "to make war with the saints, and to overcome them," (Rev. 13;) "to make war with the saints and prevail against them until the Ancient of Days comes," (Dan. 7: 21:) "to be worshiped by all the saints that dwell upon the† earth," except the saints: "to make the world a wilderness," (Isaiah 14: 17.) It would evidently be impossible for him "to overcome the saints," unless his persecution extended to every place where they could be found; nor would the company of saints, that is to be specially hid in the wilderness, be particularly mentioned, unless to show that they alone are to be exempted from the persecution.

In view of the nearness of these overwhelmingly crushing judgments, how criminal is the conduct of those whose duty it is to admonish persons of approaching calamities, but who are giving no real attention to prophecy, and even smiting those of their fellow servants who do proclaim these truths. How many there are, who in the excitement and agitation of having to chose between worshiping Antichrist or being put to death, will choose the former, and receive the fatal mark; whereas, had they been forewarned of the great trial coming upon them, they would have prepared to witness a bold confession, even unto death. A terrible day of reckoning is close at hand, when the treacherous and blind leaders of the blind, who make a mock at prophecy and prophetic expositors, will be confronted by the bitter reproaches of those whom they have lulled into false security, by crying peace and safety, when sudden destruction is about to descend with the fury of an avalanch.

The mistaken idea that if we are born again and prepared for death, we are also prepared for the second advent, leads many to neglect prophecy; for they naturally think that the study of it is not at all necessary to salvation. But although salvation from hell-fire may be obtained by the new birth and true faith in Christ's atonement, yet salvation from the shame and misery of being left on the earth at Christ's coming can only be obtained by real belief in the immediate nearness of his advent, and by faithful confession of that belief. The distinction drawn between the wise and foolish virgins, and between the faithful and evil servant, who is cut off (Gr.) and left to endure the Great Tribulation, (Matt. 24: 45–51) as well as other Scripture statements, such as in Heb. 9: 28, 2 Tim. 4: 8, Rev. 16: 15, etc., plainly show that many who are true children of God, but unbelievers in the nearness of the advent, and in a backsliding and lukewarm state, will not be caught up to meet Christ (Rev. 14: 1–5) at his coming in the air before the three and one half years Great Tribulation; but will be left to endure the awful woe of the Tribulation, and if they survive, will be caught up in the Second Translation, after the three and one half years, (Matt. 24: 31.) It is a painful but undeniable fact, that a great many pious persons are exceedingly prejudiced and hostile against the view of Christ's advent being close at hand: they assert that it is sufficient if we prepare for death, and that death is the coming of Christ; but they will soon discover to their sorrow that the prophecies can not be neglected with impunity, and that readiness for death is not necessarily readiness for the second advent.

* This is not so much the case in England, where the study of prophecy is extensively pursued, as throughout America, in which country the prophecies of Daniel and Revelation very rarely form the subject of a pulpit discourse, except in the churches of the Second Advent sect, which are only few in number. In consequence of prophecy being thus universally neglected and ignored, there exists such a general ignorance and disbelief of it, that it is exceedingly difficult to get persons even to listen to the subject. The author having given lectures upon this subject in upwards of a hundred different localities in America, including Washington, Philadelphia, New York, Boston, Toronto, Detroit, etc., can testify to the contempt and hostility which in most cases these views have to encounter. A better hearing is given to the subject in the Protestant part of Canada than anywhere else, owing probably to the absence of Spiritualism, Universalism, and Unitarianism.

† The expression "upon the earth," cannot, in its literal fulfillment, be merely limited to Europe, for the very same Greek words are used in the Lord's prayer in the sentence, "Thy will be done upon the earth as it is in heaven," (Matt. 6: 10, Luke 11: 2.) Although inaccurately translated in earth in Matthew and Luke, yet the Greek words are precisely the same as in Rev. 13: 8.

WHO WILL BE ONE?

One of what? One of a thousand who will work for The Crisis the current year. It seeks a wider field of usefulness, and, if possible, would double, this year, the number of new subscribers obtained the last. Who will help, and do what they can to bring the light and cheer of its weekly visits into four thousand new hearts and homes?

Come, brethren and sisters, here is a chance to do good, and to get your reward for it too, —one third of all monies sent, in Books and Tracts, and the "Well done!" of the Master when he comes.

Four thousand new subscribers before 1865, —ten thousand in all! Shall we have them? Who will be one of five hundred, to get one? One of two hundred, to get two? One of one hundred, to get three? One of fifty, to get four? One of forty, to get five? Of thirty, to get ten? Of fifteen, to get twenty? Of ten, to get thirty? Of five, to get forty? Of three, to get fifty? Of two, to get one hundred?

Who will be one? and which one will you be? Can't tell till you try? Well, who will try? W. B. H.

Life of Hiram Munger.—The last edition of this work is exhausted. We shall therefore not be able to fill any more orders for it at present. Should another edition be published, due notice will be given.

☞ "The Two Witnesses" are all sold. No more orders for them can be filled.

☞ We received eighty-five new subscribers last week. Keep at work brethren. It pays well.

For the World's Crisis.

NOTE FROM ELD. HIMES.

Bro. Grant:—I thank you sincerely for the christian and liberal treatment I have received from you and the patrons of the Advent cause as connected with the Crisis. I have perhaps occupied more space in your columns than was my right. Yet I hope no injustice has been done to the cause, or to individual patrons of the paper. My position as to a field of labor and particular work is somewhat changed; but I hope to continue in the same fraternal relations with all. The readers of the Crisis will hear from me still as circumstances may call.

My field of labor, as most of your readers already know, is to be in this western country; though I shall still visit other fields, as duty may seem to call. I shall still publish the "Voice," as it may be called for by the wants of the cause, and continue my missionary work as usual.

I have made a great sacrifice, in my time of life, in breaking up my home and my happy relations in the East; but I do it cheerfully for Christ and his suffering cause in this part of the vineyard. I ask the prayers and sympathies of old fellow-laborers, that I may be sustained in my new field. Besides, while I labor mostly among the destitute, I shall need all the material aid that the stewards of Christ may be disposed to give for the help of such destitute fields.

My address is Buchanan, Mich.

Jan. 8th, 1864. Joshua V. Himes.

For the World's Crisis.

REPORT OF ROUND POND CONF.

The brethren assembled as per appointment. But few came from abroad, and as nearly all the families in the place have sickness, of diphtheria, canker-rash, mumps, and measles, it seemed as though the Lord governed the arrangement, for we had just enough to work. The weather was cold, but fair. The ministers present were Elds. N. G. Reed, J. R. Hall, Isaac Wight, J. C. Wheeler, I. C. Wellcome. The social meetings were reviving and strengthening. The Lord blessed us abundantly, and we felt that the communion of saints was truly sweet. The preaching was good, and the congregations large and attentive. The interest increased to the last. The impressions made by the word were manifest. Some seemed to wish they were christians, and many seemed persuaded that "the day of the Lord is at hand." The brethren and sisters who attended were cheered by the prospect of soon gaining the everlasting rest.

We parted with the joyous hope of soon meeting in the kingdom of God. The friends entertained us very kindly, and did something worthy of the faith, to aid in preaching the gospel. May the Lord bless and keep them and us until Jesus comes to give us eternal life. I. C. Wellcome.

Round Pound, Me., Jan. 11th, '63.

For the World's Crisis.

MY JOURNEYINGS.

Jan. 5th. For the past two months I have been laboring in Plymouth, Mass. Meetings were held every evening in the week, in various parts of the town. Very interesting meetings were held at North-town, distant from Plymouth proper about two miles. Brn. Dunn, Alexander and Richard McLane, Sr. Lyons, and their families reside at this place, together with others of like precious faith with us. Our meetings there were attended by persons of many persuasions.

Bro. R. McLane, with his companion, were sorely afflicted in the loss of one of their little ones, a boy eight years old. He died of brain fever, after an illness of three or four days. I was called to attend the funeral, which occurred on Sunday, Dec. 20th, and endeavored to give comfort, according to the instruction of Paul in 1 Thess. 4: 13–18.

Another member of the household of faith, one of the church in Plymouth, has recently been called to mourn over the death of her husband, to whom she had been married but a few months. She has been deeply afflicted, having lost a dear babe, an affectionate father, and a kind husband within thirty months. May the Lord sustain Sr. Braley in all her trials.

There are many in Plymouth who are on their way to attend the great campmeeting on Mount Zion. They find some portions of the journey very rugged, but their faces are set Zionward as a flint, and by the grace of God they will obtain the crown.

Spent most of five days in Carver, a town six miles from P., where interesting meetings cheered our hearts.

Left P. on Jan. 5th, bidding adieu to some whom I shall never see again until I meet them in the kingdom. Made a few calls in Boston, Somerville, Charlestown and Lynn, and finally brought up in Salem, Ms., where I am to labor in the gospel of Christ. The church and society have given me a hearty welcome, and, what is very encouraging, they pray for me, that I may have much of the Spirit to direct. When a church prays for its pastor, and that pastor prays too, God will bless. I hope that the blessing of God will attend our efforts for the salvation of souls; that the parents may rejoice in seeing their children rejoicing in the love of Christ; that all may rejoice in the conversion of fathers and mothers, brothers and sisters, friends and neighbors. Brethren and sisters, pray for us, that sinners may be converted and God's name hallowed more in this place.

My Post Office address, until further notice, will be Salem, Mass.

F. H. Burbank.

For the World's Crisis.

DRAFTING.

As many who believe that it is wrong to bear arms, i. e., at least, for christians to do so, may be liable to be drafted, if volunteers are not found in sufficient number, I thought I would say a few words for the benefit of such. We, as a body of christians, who are looking for the return of the Savior from heaven, do not wish to get involved in the affairs of the world no more than is necessary for the good of our fellow-men, to rescue them from its snares, and save them from the doom which awaits an ungodly world. Hence you, who may be liable to bear arms to fight and kill your fellow-men, instead of rendering evil for evil, wish to save men's souls instead of destroying. If you are called into service, put your trust in God, and be bold in his cause, and he will make a way for your escape. I am glad he is able and all-powerful, and will save those who call upon his name. I understand that no sect nor party is exempt now, except on account of age, or physical or mental disability. We must expect that the faith of God's people will be tried as it has been in past ages, but "all things are possible to him that believeth"; and all whose names are found written in the book of life will be delivered. We may suffer wrongfully, but we will not do wrong, nor do evil that good may come. The world and popular professors I fear are going down the current together; and it seems to me it is high time that every one who names the name of Christ should come out from them, and follow his example and seek the honor that cometh from God alone. God grant that we may all meet in that world where all is peace and love, and live forever in the paradise of God.

T. L. Waugh.

For the World's Crisis.

TRIALS.

These form the bitter ingredients in the cup of human life, and however we may shrink from it, there is no possibility of the cup passing unless we drink it; they are the thorns which are thickly strewn in every path leading through the world's wilderness, and though our oft bleeding feet would fain seek a thornless road, we find it not; constantly are we reminded that this is not a sorrowless state; no where in the present world do we find bliss without alloy; sorrow is often our bosom companion; it is the twin-sister of our joy, it is with us in every hour of care, perplexity and diappointment—with us as we watch around the sick and dying bed of our loved ones, and lingering with many among the graves of the departed.

Many are disposed to murmur in the trial-hour and to feel as though some strange and unnecessary thing had happened to them; but such have not a realizing sense that all the trying scenes through which mankind are called to pass are permitted by One who knows the end from the beginning, and who is "too wise to act in vain, too good to give one needless pain," and those things which at the time of their occurrence seem to be against us, often prove to have been the things most needed for our well being even in this world. I recollect that one of the slips which were given me to copy when learning to write at school, read like this, "Disappointments are often blessings in disguise;" the words remained in memory, but not until riper years were they appreciated, nor their truth experienced. Now I know that the way which I in my ignorance and selfishness had marked for myself to tread, was not the one best calculated to lead me to true life, peace and joy; therefore I rejoice that trials have crossed my track—that cherished hopes have been blighted, and lofty aspirations brought low; and my cry is—

"Not mine, O God, but thine the choice;
In things or great or small,
Mark thou my way for me."

The true christian has every reason to rejoice even in the severest trials, for he may recognize these as proofs of a Father's love; says the great apostle, "What Son is he whom the Father loveth that he chasteneth not?" and he "Scourgeth every son whom he receiveth;" and the same has said, "No affliction for the present seemeth joyous but grievous; but afterward it yieldeth the peaceable fruits of righteousness, in them that are exercised thereby." Ah, let us see that we are of that class, then let the trials come thicker and faster, and the blessed fruit of righteousness will abound more and more. A parallel passage to this is, "Tribulation worketh patience," etc. How many can bear witness that the hasty, impatient spirit has been calmed and schooled to quietude and patience by the subduing influence of trials.

Another great benefit of trials is, that they draw us near our Heavenly Father. The prophet in speaking of a certain class, says, "In the day of their prosperity they forget me, but in the time of their trouble they called upon me." Is this not true of many at the present day? Often the christian will enjoy an interval of comparitive prosperity—trials' waves for a time recede; his substance increases, his loved ones are spared and all things go well. But he almost forgets the Giver of

CAN THE SOUL BE KILLED?

"Fear not them which kill the body, but are not able to kill the soul; but rather fear Him which is able to destroy both soul and body in hell."—Matt. 10: 28.

These words are commonly supposed to teach that the essential nature of man resides in his soul, which is said to be a substance quite distinct from the body, which is only, we are told, a machine, constructed for the purpose of enabling the soul to live in, and hold intercourse with, this material world. They are further asserted to imply the indestructibility and deathlessness of the soul, which, it is affirmed, is altogether beyond the reach of any mortal injury, and that the utmost man can do is to destroy the material machine, or body, and effect its separation from the soul, which soars away to some new place, and in a new condition of existence.

Now I ask the candid and intelligent reader on what authority does he suppose that the soul is a distinct subsistence—a complete organization in itself—and constituting the human personality, apart from the body? Is this extensively prevalent notion derived from the Bible? Will the reader pause to recal any portion of the sacred Scriptures where the soul is so described as containing in itself the essential properties of the human being, and capable of a separate state of existence?

* * * * * * *

If we are to hold the popular opinions about the human soul, what does our text mean? In reply to this question, I request the reader to examine the parallel passage as recorded in Luke 12: 4, 5: "I say unto you, my friends, be not afraid of them that kill the body, and after that have no more that they can do: but I will forewarn you whom ye shall fear: fear Him who, after he hath killed, hath power to cast into hell." In this version of our Lord's words, the word "soul" does not occur; and instead of "are not able to kill the soul," we have the words "have no more that they can do." The meaning, then, is clearly the following: Although wicked men are able to kill the Lord's people, they can do no more than this; they have no power to keep them dead; they cannot destroy the soul or life which the Lord has promised to give his people, by raising them from the dead to die no more.

The word "soul" is to be understood in this passage the same in meaning with the word life, in proof of which I ask the reader's consideration of the following passages which occur in Matt. 16: 25, 26: "Whosoever will save his life shall lose it, and whosoever will lose his life for my sake find it: for what is a man profited if he gain the whole world and lose his own soul? or what shall a man give in exchange for his soul?" Now the word translated life twice in the 25th verse, and soul twice in the 26th verse, is one and the same Greek word in all four places. Why should one word receive different translations in two such closely connected and current texts? The answer is plain. The translators of the Bible held the popular heathen notions about the human soul, and therefore to have used the word "soul" in the 25th ver. would have grated upon their ears. "Whosoever will save his soul shall lose it [!], and whosoever will lose his soul [!] for my sake, shall find it." Hence they employed the word "life" in this verse, and the word "soul" in the verse following! But there is evidently no good reason why one Greek word, occurring as it does in this passage four times consecutively, should be translated by two English words. If the reader will substitute the word life in the 26th verse for the word soul, as is done in the previous verse, he will find a natural, and, as I believe, the strictly correct meaning of our Lord's words: "Whosoever will save his life shall lose it, and whosoever will lose his life for my sake shall find it: for what is a man profited if he shall gain the whole world and lose his own life? or what shall a man give in exchange for his life?" What our Lord says here is very plain; "Whosoever will save his life [in this world, at the expense of his duty to me,] shall lose it [in the world to come]. And whosoever will lose his life [in this world] for my sake, shall find it [in the world to come]. For what is a man profited if he shall gain the whole [present] world, and lose his own life [in the world to come]? or what shall a man give in exchange for his [future and everlasting] life?" To lose the soul then, does not mean that the soul as a separate being, without a body, goes away to be everlastingly tormented; but means to lose the blessed privilege of endless life. When the soul is lost, the man himself, in his entire and complete nature, is lost, or cast away from conscious and endless existence, as Luke in the parallel passage to that we are now considering, most clearly represents. "For what is a man advantaged if he gain the whole world and lose himself, or be cast away?"—Chap. 9: 25.

The text at the head of these remarks is but partially and imperfectly understood by those who quote it with so much assurance in proof that the soul, as a separate being, cannot, and will not, be ever destroyed. What our Lord says is, that man is not able to kill the soul, or destroy the life which he will give his people; but he himself is able to kill the soul, and cut off the wicked from having endless life. "Fear him who is able to destroy both soul and body in hell." And as our Lord warns mankind to fear him as having the power to destroy the whole man in the all-consuming fires of hell, he evidently implies that such is the punishment which he will visit upon the wicked. The miserable subjects of the future punishment will not be perpetuated in conscious sin and suffering, but shall be burnt up as chaff or stubble in the lake of fire which shall flow around the burning world. "The heavens and the earth which are now, by the same word are kept in store, reserved unto fire against the day of judgment, and perdition of ungodly men." 1 Peter, chap. 3, v. 7.—Rev. J. Panton Ham.

Increase of Cities.—The city of London, in ten years, has increased in population 441,753; New York, 290,164 souls, or 56.37 per cent., and Philadelphia 222,484 inhabitants, or 65.43 per cent. The average number of houses built during ten years in London, was 5,349; in New York, 1,668; and in Philadelphia 2,805. London has been settled 2,000 years, New York 249 years, and Philadelphia 176.

Preaching without Notes.—Perhaps I have preached five thousand sermons, on all kinds of subjects, and on a great variety of occasions, and I did not know beforehand one single sentence that I should utter; and were I to preach before the king, or the two universities, I must preach in this way or not at all.—Dr. Adam Clark.

He cannot bear praise who cannot bear condemnation.

The World's Crisis
AND SECOND ADVENT MESSENGER.

Boston, Tuesday, January 19, 1864.

Postage on Canada Papers.—We have concluded to let our brethren in the British Provinces have the Crisis at the same price as those in the States. In other words, we will pay the postage to the line; hence those taking the paper will pay only two dollars a year, instead of $2.26, as formerly.

APPROACHING REVOLUTIONS IN EUROPE.

All things in the political sky of Europe indicate a general storm of thrilling interest, that will result in mighty upheavings and overturnings among the powers now holding sway over the people. The prospect is now that 1864 will not pass before its commencement. When it begins its results will be startling. Praise the Lord for the bright omens showing that earth's dreary night of sorrow is about to close, when "the saints of the Most High shall take the kingdom for ever, even for ever and ever."

The Paris correspondent of the New York Commercial Advertiser says:—

"There is now no doubt but that the revolutionary party in Italy, Hungary, Germany and France are organizing for a supreme effort the coming spring. The Emperor sees it, and by private communications is urging his Congress on the different European Powers. What the influence of Napoleon could not effect the pressure of events may, and the chances of a Congress of Ministers are now altogether reasonable. What is most singular, the Germans are laboring hard to stimulate the revolution. They believe they can start it in the Schleswig-Holstein affair, and that once started, such an upsetting of affairs may take place as will enable them to establish the German liberal Empire under one head. The Hungarians are also moving in the matter, and nobody is as far advanced in it as the Italians, so that if the liberals in any part of Europe can manage to add to that of Poland another movement, the whole series of magazines may explode."

WHY IS IT SO?

It is clearly evident that those churches which are dependent on piety instead of wealth and fashion for their support, are fast dying out. "Why is it so?" The answer is not difficult. A real living church usually does best when poor; but as soon as vital godliness departs, it dwindles away; whereas, a rich church may be still further from the Lord, and yet make a great show with its wealth, and attract the worldly and fashionable; in other words have "a form of godliness, but denying the power thereof." This state of things is very apparent through the length and breadth of the land, with very few exceptions. Unless there is a waking up soon, the results must be terrible; indeed, they are already so.

Mr. C. C. Goss has been preaching a series of discourses in New York on the moral aspects of the city. The following is an extract from his statements, taken from one of our exchanges:—

"Below Fourteenth Street there are fifteen wards, and seven above. Two-thirds of the territory is above, half the population below. The increase in population during five years has been 58,672. In spite of this, forty-seven church edifices have become extinct in twenty years, and in thirty instances none have been erected in their place. There are now only one hundred and twenty-three places of worship of all kinds—only eighty pastors to 500,000 persons; only 25,000 are found in the churches at any one time. Mr. Goss showed that the mortality down-town was greater than up-town, caused by the crowded condition in which many lived. Six thousand families live under-ground. The youth, too, are growing up immoral and dangerous. In the down-town region there are 80,000 between the ages of five and fifteen; over 54,000 of these are as yet unreached by Sunday School effort; they are the Goths and Vandals of our city. He also showed that much the largest half of our police and police expenses are down-town; eighty out of the one hundred and twenty-two engine companies are there; also all of our places of amusement, from the respectable to the immoral; thieves, gamblers, and all other vile characters, lurk in secret there. After the legitimate business of the day ends, the nefarious night business begins. Cheap suburban homes, cheap railroad fare, and a practical application of the principles of the gospel, were the remedies presented for the existing evil."

We think missionaries need not go to foreign lands to find work. There is a wide and growidg field in all our great cities. Iniquity truly abounds, and the love of many waxes cold. The days of Noah and Lot are upon us. Are we awake to the perils of these times? Are we doing our duty to all around us? Christian soldier, gird on your armor, and prepare for a fierce onset from the enemy. Let us not be cowards in the last conflict. "Stand up for Jesus."

THE HOLY LAND.

It will be seen by the following from the Jewish Messenger, that the land of promise is still trodden down by the Gentiles. When their times run out, then comes the time to cleanse the sanctuary,—the land promised to Abraham, Isaac and Jacob. Till that time arrives, all efforts to restore prosperity must prove to be only so many failures. Yet we have the best of reasons for believing that the time is very near at hand, when the kingdom of God will be established, and his will be done on earth as now in heaven."

"The Holy Land.—Jerusalem, Sept. 24.—The country is infested with Bedouins, who are more rapacious and daring than in former years. The pressure of the Government from Damascus has resulted in uniting the tribes beyond Jordan for mutual defence, in a manner hitherto unknown, and the tribes beyond support the tribes on this side of Jordan, in their lawless proceedings. One action has been already fought between them and the Turkish troops from Acre. The latter were successful, and obtained a large booty of sheep, camels, &c. The Beni-Saker (sons of the hawk) have, however, repaid themselves by attacking about a fortnight ago the village of Deddewan, near Bethel, and carrying off about 2,500 sheep and other cattle. Another raid which they made a few days since near Safeleh was attended with results still more disastrous, for they not only plundered the peasantry, but also killed sixteen persons. The [illegible] are actively employed, and about the same time attacked Urtas, maimed several of the villagers, and carried off all their goods. From the gardens (which are English property) they take away whatever fruits or vegetables they require.

The immediate vicinity of Jerusalem is also becoming disturbed and unsafe. On last Saturday week, a party of the Beni-Saker met the doctor of the Latin Convent about two miles from the city, and, after firing at him, proceeded to rob him of all he possessed. Finally, a rope was tied round his neck, and he was dragged along by one of the horsemen. The villagers of Shaaphat, observing his condition, came to his deliverance. One of the freebooters then again fired at him, but as he threw himself upon the ground, the bullet passed over his body. Thus rescued, he was brought back late in the night, stabbed in several places by the lances of his assailants. The captain of a French man-of-war has since been sent to strengthen the Consul in demanding reparation from the local authorities. To visit the Jordan is at present impossible, or, indeed to go any distance from the city is insecure, without an escort of soldiers furnished by the Pasha. When we reflect that during the last four years two English persons have been murdered without any justice having been obtained—that in last April Viscount Atcheson and his party were not only robbed, but narrowly escaped being killed, and that the number of travelers from all parts of the world is very much on the increase,—it seems desirable, if the present state of things is not speedily reformed, that the European Powers should assume the joint protectorate of the Holy Land."—Levant Herald.

THE STATE OF ITALY.

The affairs of Italy are in a state of fermentation, and we may look for stirring times there during the year. The Italians are determined to be free from the Papal yoke which has been so long upon their necks. The hatred of the harlot power, on the "seven hills," is becoming very strong and deep-seated. The time is at hand for the "woman" to begin to drink her bitter cup. There is no escape. A higher than man has spoken, and the wheels of time have brought us to the time for the fulfillment of what the prophet has uttered relative to the overthrow of the great anti-christian power whose seat is at Rome.

The following from the Boston Journal shows what is expected:—

"Expected War for the Freedom of Italy.—New York, Jan. 13th. The Post says late news by private letter and otherwise from Italy gives information of an intended agitation there on the Venetian question. Garibaldi has issued a proclamation from Caprera, urging the people to be faithful to the leadership of Victor Emmanuel. The Italian army is permeated with the idea of a speedy war for the deliverance of Venice. During the past year the opening of the spring of 1864 has been looked to as the signal for the beginning of a final effort to make Italy free in fact as well as in name, and the next few months may bring us the most exciting news from Venice and Rome."

TEACHINGS OF SPIRITS.

The spirits, who are giving instruction through their mediums, all deny that Jesus is our Savior, as taught in the Holy Scriptures. They admit he was a good man,—nothing more; and claim that his blood was of no more value in the plan of salvation, than of any of the martyrs. No man can be a Spiritualists, and a christian at the same time; hence all that is said about "Christian Spiritualists" is mere talk about what does not exist. The two are completely antagonistic to each other. If one is true, the other is false. Christianity is true; therefore Spiritualism cannot be.

We clip the following from the Banner of Light (?), Dec 5, '63. The answers are given by a spirit:—

"Q.—Are we to understand that there is a class of spirits in the spirit world known as angels?

A.—No; you should not understand anything of the kind. All spiritual beings have once been human beings. We are aware that your Ancient Record teaches otherwise; that there is a class of intelligences in the spirit spheres who never had a human existence; who always have and ever will exist in spirit, because they are children of eternity. We have never met with such a race of intelligences, and are quite sure that they never did exist except in the fancy of the dark ages."

"Q.—Is it reasonable to pray to God as a distinct being?

A.—No, not when spiritually considered. We only use that term because it serves us best, not because we believe in a personal Deity, a Supreme personal God, who created and is governing all things. We merely use the term relatively. Do you understand us?"

LET IT ALONE.

Let it alone. Let what alone? The intoxicating bowl. Never taste a drop of its contents. Avoid it utterly. Go not in the way of it. Shun it as you would the bite of a rattlesnake. It leads to eternal death, and makes one miserable all the way there. Read the following as given by Mr. Gough in one of his lectures, and then resolve to be a temperance man,—a real teetotaler, of the most rigid character. Mr. Gough says:—

"A graduate of one of the universities of Great Britain came to me shaking and trembling. He said he had 'come to me as he would go to a physician.' I said, 'You must stop drinking.' 'I cannot.' 'You will die.' 'I am afraid I shall; I give it up; I cannot.' My wife and two gentlemen were present. I said, 'What good does the drink do you?' 'No good.' 'Why do you drink?' 'I must have it.' Thinking that being an educated man he might give me some ideas, I asked him, 'Will you tell me how you feel before you begin to drink, and afterwards?' I shall never forget! He stood up and said, 'All I can say is, I must have it.' 'Why?' 'I feel as if there were insects in my veins! Oh! it is horrible, horrible! I touch my coat, I touch my hands, and I jump? Oh! I shall go mad—mad—mad! If I could not get it without having a sound tooth torn out of my jaw, bring the instrument and wrench it out; I must have the drink, you see; so I get it. And then I stand still, that I may not disturb its effect. That's what I want, I want relief; and I feel it. Quick, quick, hot, it sends the blood through my veins; the insects are gone and I begin to perspire. Yes, I am better, better, better! it's what I want,—it's coming, it's coming, it has come to me,—relief,—like a flash of summer lightning, and it has gone, and I get another.' 'Then,' I said, 'you will die.' 'I am afraid I shall; can you save me?' 'Not unless you stop drinking.' 'I cannot die; I have not offered a prayer to God for sixteen years.' 'You must give it up.' 'I cannot.' I said, 'God will help you.' 'No, he won't.' 'I will,' said I; 'my wife and I will take care of you for four days, if you will. I have just four days to spare for you.' We took him, though we could get no promise from him. We nursed him night and day. The third afternoon he sat with me, his hand in mine, and I spoke to him of God, and Christ and eternity. He said, 'I am a man of some common sense, I believe; and am very well aware that I can never be happy in another world.' He then went out and cut his throat from ear to ear. Oh, my friends, shall we not try to save our fellow-men from such a fate?"

THE EUROPEAN CONGRESS.

We may expect important results from the Congress of Sovereigns in Europe. It is one of Napoleon's shrewd plans to obtain power and influence. In 1815 the powers of Europe united to put down the Napoleonic Dynasty, and now they are about to unite in its elevation. This looks like the fulfillment of the prophecy of Rev. 17th Chap., relative to the last head of the Scarlet colored beast, which went into the "bottomless pit," or political grave, and afterwards came out to the astonishment of all. Events are fast approaching the grand focal point of prophecy, when we may look for the personal advent of our Savior.

The following is from The Catholic:—

The Congress and the Sovereigns.—The Memorial Diplomatique says:—'Out of the twenty sovereigns and free towns to which the letter of invitation to the Congress was addressed, nine sovereigns—the Pope, the Queen of Spain, the King of the Belgians, and the Kings of Sweden, Portugal, Italy, and Denmark, the Sultan, and the King of the Greeks—have formally promised to appear in person.' The Diplomatique likewise adds:—'King Leopold, although reigning over a State of small extent, has succeeded, by his talents and his great experience, in acquiring the esteem and respect of the other sovereigns to such a point that he has become in a certain measure the arbitrator of the difficulties which may arise between them, as we have had recently several examples. The adhesion of that monarch has, therefore, a special importance, and he has given it entirely and absolutely to the idea of a Congress, in an autograph letter, short, but inspired by the best feelings, addressed to the Emperor of the French. This reply is an ample justification of the principles of humanity and prudence which have inspired the great design of Napoleon III.'

THE POPE'S REPLY TO FRANCE.

The following is the text of the answer of His Holiness to the Emperor's invitation to attend the Congress:—

Imperial Majesty,—The thought which your Majesty expresses of being able to establish without shock in Europe—would to God elsewhere also—with the concurrence of the Sovereigns or of their representatives, a system which calms men's minds, and restores peace, tranquility, and order to the numerous countries where, unhappily, these benefits are lost, is a design which greatly honors your Majesty, and which, with the co-operation of all, assisted by Divine grace, would produce the best results. We co-operate, therefore, in so laudable a project in a perfectly cordial spirit, and can now earnestly assure your Majesty that all our moral support will be afforded to the Congress, in order that the principles of justice, in these days so much misunderstood and trodden under foot, may be re-established to the advantage of society in its present agitated state, so that violated rights may be admitted, in order to be asserted in favor of those who have had to suffer by their violation, and especially in order that the real pre-eminence which belongs naturally to the Catholic religion, as the only true one, may be re-established, especially in Catholic countries.

Your Majesty cannot hesitate to believe that the Vicar of Jesus Christ, either from the duties of his sublime representation or from the conviction he entertains that in the Catholic faith in conjunction with practice is to be found the sole means proper to moralize the people, cannot in the midst of congresses, even political ones, fail in his obligation to sustain with the greatest rigor the rights of our most august religion, which is One, Holy, Catholic, Apostolic, and Roman.

The confidence which we express of seeing violated rights vindicated, springs from the conscientious duty imposed upon us by their guardianship. In showing ourselves full of solicitude on the subject of these rights, we do not wish your Majesty ever to suppose that we could entertain any doubt with regard to those appertaining to this Holy See, since, besides the other motives which militate in its favor, we have also the assurances which your Majesty has several times given and caused to be given publicly—assurances which it would seem to us offensive to doubt, coming from so high and powerful a Sovereign.

After this preliminary explanation, which has seemed to us all the more opportune that we better understand your Majesty's thought, we are happy to add that we applaud material progress, and desire besides that nations should be in a position to enjoy peaceably their property, as much for the profit that they derive therefrom as for the occupation which it gives them. We could not say as much in the case of our being invited to satisfy certain aspirations of some fractions of these nations—aspirations which cannot be reconciled with the principles above enunciated.

We entertain the hope that your Majesty, with your high perspicacity, will recognize in our frank communication the character of loyalty which always accompanies the acts of the Apostolic See, and at the same time the evidence of the great esteem which we entertain towards your august person, to whom we have in no way hesitated to speak thus explicitly in a matter of so much importance.

Hereupon, with the assurance of our paternal affection, we give your Majesty, your august Consort, and the Imperial Prince our Apostolic Benediction.

Given in our Palace of the Vatican, the 10th November, 1863. Pius P. P. IX."

LOUIS NAPOLEON AND THE BATTLE OF ARMAGEDDON.

The above is the title of a work issued by Bro. M. Baxter, of the Episcopal church. He endeavors to show that Christ will come in some six or seven years, and that Napoleon III. will be the head of the antichristian system now spreading over our world. The following is an extract from his work:—

"In the Appendix to this work, a list is given of more than fifty writers, such as the Hon. Gerard Noel, Rev. Drs. J. Cumming, A. Keith, G. S. Faber, S. H. Tyng, G. Duffield, Bickersteth, etc., all of whom have demonstrated the coming of Christ to be about the period from 1864 to 1869. And some of these writers, as for instance, Frere, Verner, Purdon, Scott, Phillips, Shimeall, etc., firmly maintain the view that Louis Napoleon is the Antichrist and Eighth Head of the Beast. Among other expositors who have written more upon the general outlines than the chronology of prophecy, there may be mentioned the Earl of Carlisle, the Duke of Manchester, the late Bishops of Durham and Norwich, Lord Congleton, Sir E. Denny, etc., according to whose views the end of this dispensation is close at hand. The two last-named writers have specially shown in their works that Christ will come to take away the wise virgins before Antichrist's three and a half years' persecution, and will remain in the pavilion-cloud during its continuance, and then descend at its termination upon Mt. Olivet at the Battle of Armageddon.

But although there is almost an unanimous belief among those who have honestly and laboriously investigated the prophecies, that desolating judgments are now about to descend upon the world, in connection with Christ's coming; yet among the majority* of professing christians there is no such belief, owing to their utter ignorance and disregard of prophetic truth. As very few were watching for Christ's first advent, although his appearance, as the Messiah, was distinctly foretold to take place sixty-nine weeks or 483 years after the seventh year of Artaxerxes; so scarcely any are really watching for his second advent, although it is explicitly predicted to occur during the five years preceding the end of the 6000, 2520, 2500, 2300, and 1335 years, and under the seventh year-day vial, trumpet, and seal, and at the time of the eighth Head of the Beast. The text, 'Of that day and that hour knoweth no man, no, . . . not the Son,' (Mark 13: 32), which is continually quoted by scoffers in support of the idea that the time of Christ's advent can never be discovered, evidently was only spoken in the present tense, to the then existing generation, and can not be true at the present period, for the Son of Man must now be fully aware of the day and hour of his approaching advent; and moreover, since those words were uttered, our knowledge of the future has been much increased by the gift of the Holy Ghost on the day of Pentecost, and the bestowment of the book of Revelation, 'to show the things which shall be hereafter.' Under any circumstances, the concealment of the day and hour could not necessarily prevent the discovery of the month, or even the week, of Christ's advent.

A leading event, in connection with our Savior's return, is the manifestation of Antichrist or the Man of Sin, as foretold in 2 Thess. 2: 3; 'That day (the day of Christ) shall not come, except there come the (Gr.) falling away first, and that Man of Sin be revealed, the son of perdition, who opposeth and exalteth himself above all that is called God, or that is worshiped; so that he, as God, sitteth in the temple of God, showing himself that he is God . . . whom the Lord shall consume with the spirit of his mouth, and destroy with the brightness of his coming.' Also in 1 John 2: 18, 22; 'As ye have heard that the (Gr.) Antichrist shall come, even now are there many Antichrists, whereby we know that it is the last time. . . . He is the (Gr.) Antichrist that denieth the Father and the Son.' From these and other passages, it has long been concluded, that although many Antichrists have arisen, such as the Pope and Mahomet, yet there is a particular and individual Antichrist to arise, just before Christ's advent, who is generally called the Personal or Infidel Antichrist, and who is to be worshiped as God in the temple at Jerusalem, and is utterly to deny the existence of Jehovah and of Christ. His exploits are fully described in Daniel 11 and Revelation 17: and also in the literal-day fulfillment of Daniel 7, 8, 11, and Revelation 9, 11, 13, although the year-day fulfillment of these chapters relates to Popery and Mahometanism.

This great Personal Antichrist is distinctly foreshown to be none other than Louis Napoleon, who is consequently very soon to acquire supreme ascendancy over the whole of Christendom, and for three and a half years is ruthlessly to slay nearly every one who will not acknowledge him to be God. Christendom will then become a slaughter-house or shambles, in which tens of thousands of Christ's sheep will be butchered, and scarcely any one will escape the awful ordeal of being put to the test, whether they will confess Christ and be killed, perhaps with dreadful tortures; or whether they will acknowledge Napoleon to be God, and thus purchase temporary safety at the cost of eternal damnation. Those who choose the latter alternative will be branded in their forehead or hand with Napoleon's name, or the number 666, or some particular mark, just as cattle have stamped upon them the name of their owner, (Rev. 13.) This exterminating persecution is the leading feature in the three and a half years Great Tribulation; there will, however, be superadded unparalled wars, earthquakes, pestilences, and famines.

Such is the temptation which shall come upon all the world, to try them that dwell upon the earth." Its universal prevalence, at least throughout Christendom, is declared in the most emphatic terms. The personal Antichrist is to obtain "power over all kindreds, and tongues, and nations;" "to make war with the saints, and to overcome them," (Rev. 13;) "to make war with the saints and prevail against them until the Ancient of Days comes," (Dan. 7: 21:) "to be worshiped by all the saints that dwell upon the† earth," except the saints: "to make the world a wilderness," (Isaiah 14: 17.) It would evidently be impossible for him "to overcome the saints," unless his persecution extended to every place where they could be found; nor would the company of saints, that is to be specially hid in the wilderness, be particularly mentioned, unless to show that they alone are to be exempted from the persecution.

In view of the nearness of these overwhelmingly crushing judgments, how criminal is the conduct of those whose duty it is to admonish persons of approaching calamities, but who are giving no real attention to prophecy, and even smiting those of their fellow servants who do proclaim these truths. How many there are, who in the excitement and agitation of having to chose between worshiping Antichrist or being put to death, will choose the former, and receive the fatal mark; whereas, had they been forewarned of the great trial coming upon them, they would have prepared to witness a bold confession, even unto death. A terrible day of reckoning is close at hand, when the treacherous and blind leaders of the blind, who make a mock at prophecy and prophetic expositors, will be confronted by the bitter reproaches of those whom they have lulled into false security, by crying peace and safety, when sudden destruction is about to descend with the fury of an avalanch.

The mistaken idea that if we are born again and prepared for death, we are also prepared for the second advent, leads many to neglect prophecy; for they naturally think that the study of it is not at all necessary to salvation. But although salvation from hell-fire may be obtained by the new birth and true faith in Christ's atonement, yet salvation from the shame and misery of being left on the earth at Christ's coming can only be obtained by real belief in the immediate nearness of his advent, and by faithful confession of that belief. The distinction drawn between the wise and foolish virgins, and between the faithful and evil servant, who is cut off (Gr.) and left to endure the Great Tribulation, (Matt. 24: 45–51) as well as other Scripture statements, such as in Heb. 9: 28, 2 Tim. 4: 8, Rev. 16: 15, etc., plainly show that many who are true children of God, but unbelievers in the nearness of the advent, and in a backsliding and lukewarm state, will not be caught up to meet Christ (Rev. 14: 1–5) at his coming in the air before the three and one half years Great Tribulation; but will be left to endure the awful woe of the Tribulation, and if they survive, will be caught up in the Second Translation, after the three and one half years, (Matt. 24: 31.) It is a painful but undeniable fact, that a great many pious persons are exceedingly prejudiced and hostile against the view of Christ's advent being close at hand: they assert that it is sufficient if we prepare for death, and that death is the coming of Christ: but they will soon discover to their sorrow that the prophecies can not be neglected with impunity, and that readiness for death is not necessarily readiness for the second advent.

* This is not so much the case in England, where the study of prophecy is extensively pursued, as throughout America, in which country the prophecies of Daniel and Revelation very rarely form the subject of a pulpit discourse, except in the churches of the Second Advent sect, which are only few in number. In consequence of prophecy being thus universally neglected and ignored, there exists such a general ignorance and disbelief of it, that it is exceedingly difficult to get persons even to listen to the subject. The author having given lectures upon this subject in upwards of a hundred different localities in America, including Washington, Philadelphia, New York, Boston, Toronto, Detroit, etc., can testify to the contempt and hostility which in most cases these views have to encounter. A better hearing is given to the subject in the Protestant part of Canada than anywhere else, owing probably to the absence of Spiritualism, Universalism, and Unitarianism.

† The expression "upon the earth," cannot, in its literal fulfillment, be merely limited to Europe, for the very same Greek words are used in the Lord's prayer in the sentence, "Thy will be done upon the earth as it is in heaven," (Matt. 6: 10, Luke 11: 2.) Although inaccurately translated in earth in Matthew and Luke, yet the Greek words are precisely the same as in Rev. 13: 8.

WHO WILL BE ONE?

One of what? One of a thousand who will work for The Crisis the current year. It seeks a wider field of usefulness, and, if possible, would double, this year, the number of new subscribers obtained the last. Who will help, and do what they can to bring the light and cheer of its weekly visits into four thousand new hearts and homes?

Come, brethren and sisters, here is a chance to do good, and to get your reward for it too, —one third of all monies sent, in Books and Tracts, and the "Well done!" of the Master when he comes.

Four thousand new subscribers before 1865, —ten thousand in all! Shall we have them? Who will be one of five hundred, to get one? One of two hundred, to get two? One of one hundred, to get three? One of fifty, to get four? One of forty, to get five? Of thirty, to get ten? Of fifteen, to get twenty? Of ten, to get thirty? Of five, to get forty? Of three, to get fifty? Of two, to get one hundred?

Who will be one? and which one will you be? Can't tell till you try? Well, who will try?

W. B. H.

Life of Hiram Munger.—The last edition of this work is exhausted. We shall therefore not be able to fill any more orders for it at present. Should another edition be published, due notice will be given.

☞ "The Two Witnesses" are all sold. No more orders for them can be filled.

☞ We received eighty-five new subscribers last week. Keep at work brethren. It pays well.

For the World's Crisis.

NOTE FROM ELD. HIMES.

Bro. Grant:—I thank you sincerely for the christian and liberal treatment I have received from you and the patrons of the Advent cause as connected with the Crisis. I have perhaps occupied more space in your columns than was my right. Yet I hope no injustice has been done to the cause, or to individual patrons of the paper. My position as to a field of labor and particular work is somewhat changed; but I hope to continue in the same fraternal relations with all. The readers of the Crisis will hear from me still as circumstances may call.

My field of labor, as most of your readers already know, is to be in this western country; though I shall still visit other fields, as duty may seem to call. I shall still publish the "Voice," as it may be called for by the wants of the cause, and continue my missionary work as usual.

I have made a great sacrifice, in my time of life, in breaking up my home and my happy relations in the East; but I do it cheerfully for Christ and his suffering cause in this part of the vineyard. I ask the prayers and sympathies of old fellow-laborers, that I may be sustained in my new field. Besides, while I labor mostly among the destitute, I shall need all the material aid that the stewards of Christ may be disposed to give for the help of such destitute fields.

My address is Buchanan, Mich.

Jan. 8th, 1864. Joshua V. Himes.

For the World's Crisis.

REPORT OF ROUND POND CONF.

The brethren assembled as per appointment. But few came from abroad, and as nearly all the families in the place have sickness, of diphtheria, canker-rash, mumps, and measles, it seemed as though the Lord governed the arrangement, for we had just enough to work. The weather was cold, but fair. The ministers present were Elds. N. G. Reed, J. R. Hall, Isaac Wight, J. C. Wheeler, I. C. Wellcome. The social meetings were reviving and strengthening. The Lord blessed us abundantly, and we felt that the communion of saints was truly sweet. The preaching was good, and the congregations large and attentive. The interest increased to the last. The impressions made by the word were manifest. Some seemed to wish they were christians, and many seemed persuaded that "the day of the Lord is at hand." The brethren and sisters who attended were cheered by the prospect of soon gaining the everlasting rest.

We parted with the joyous hope of soon meeting in the kingdom of God. The friends entertained us very kindly, and did something worthy of the faith, to aid in preaching the gospel. May the Lord bless and keep them and us until Jesus comes to give us eternal life.

I. C. Wellcome.

Round Pound, Me., Jan. 11th, '63.

For the World's Crisis.

MY JOURNEYINGS.

Jan. 5th. For the past two months I have been laboring in Plymouth, Mass. Meetings were held every evening in the week, in various parts of the town. Very interesting meetings were held at North-town, distant from Plymouth proper about two miles. Brn. Dunn, Alexander and Richard McLane, Sr. Lyons, and their families reside at this place, together with others of like precious faith with us. Our meetings there were attended by persons of many persuasions.

Bro. R. McLane, with his companion, were sorely afflicted in the loss of one of their little ones, a boy eight years old. He died of brain fever, after an illness of three or four days. I was called to attend the funeral, which occurred on Sunday, Dec. 20th, and endeavored to give comfort, according to the instruction of Paul in 1 Thess. 4: 13–18.

Another member of the household of faith, one of the church in Plymouth, has recently been called to mourn over the death of her husband, to whom she had been married but a few months. She has been deeply afflicted, having lost a dear babe, an affectionate father, and a kind husband within thirty months. May the Lord sustain Sr. Braley in all her trials.

There are many in Plymouth who are on their way to attend the great campmeeting on Mount Zion. They find some portions of the journey very rugged, but their faces are set Zionward as a flint, and by the grace of God they will obtain the crown.

Spent most of five days in Carver, a town six miles from P., where interesting meetings cheered our hearts.

Left P. on Jan. 5th, bidding adieu to some whom I shall never see again until I meet them in the kingdom. Made a few calls in Boston, Somerville, Charlestown and Lynn, and finally brought up in Salem, Ms., where I am to labor in the gospel of Christ. The church and society have given me a hearty welcome, and, what is very encouraging, they pray for me, that I may have much of the Spirit to direct. When a church prays for its pastor, and that pastor prays too, God will bless. I hope that the blessing of God will attend our efforts for the salvation of souls; that the parents may rejoice in seeing their children rejoicing in the love of Christ; that all may rejoice in the conversion of fathers and mothers, brothers and sisters, friends and neighbors. Brethren and sisters, pray for us, that sinners may be converted and God's name hallowed more in this place.

My Post Office address, until further notice, will be Salem, Mass.

F. H. Burbank.

For the World's Crisis.

DRAFTING.

As many who believe that it is wrong to bear arms, i. e., at least, for christians to do so, may be liable to be drafted, if volunteers are not found in sufficient number, I thought I would say a few words for the benefit of such. We, as a body of christians, who are looking for the return of the Savior from heaven, do not wish to get involved in the affairs of the world no more than is necessary for the good of our fellow-men, to rescue them from its snares, and save them from the doom which awaits an ungodly world. Hence you, who may be liable to bear arms to fight and kill your fellow-men, instead of rendering evil for evil, wish to save men's souls instead of destroying. If you are called into service, put your trust in God, and be bold in his cause, and he will make a way for your escape. I am glad he is able and all-powerful, and will save those who call upon his name. I understand that no sect nor party is exempt now, except on account of age, or physical or mental disability. We must expect that the faith of God's people will be tried as it has been in past ages, but "all things are possible to him that believeth"; and all whose names are found written in the book of life will be delivered. We may suffer wrongfully, but we will not do wrong, nor do evil that good may come. The world and popular professors I fear are going down the current together; and it seems to me it is high time that every one who names the name of Christ should come out from them, and follow his example and seek the honor that cometh from God alone. God grant that we may all meet in that world where all is peace and love, and live forever in the paradise of God.

T. L. Waugh.

For the World's Crisis.

TRIALS.

These form the bitter ingredients in the cup of human life, and however we may shrink from it, there is no possibility of the cup passing unless we drink it; they are the thorns which are thickly strewn in every path leading through the world's wilderness, and though our oft bleeding feet would fain seek a thornless road, we find it not; constantly are we reminded that this is not a sorrowless state; no where in the present world do we find bliss without alloy; sorrow is often our bosom companion; it is the twin-sister of our joy, it is with us in every hour of care, perplexity and disappointment—with us as we watch around the sick and dying bed of our loved ones, and lingering with many among the graves of the departed.

Many are disposed to murmur in the trial-hour and to feel as though some strange and unnecessary thing had happened to them; but such have not a realizing sense that all the trying scenes through which mankind are called to pass are permitted by One who knows the end from the beginning, and who is "too wise to act in vain, too good to give one needless pain," and those things which at the time of their occurrence seem to be against us, often prove to have been the things most needed for our well being even in this world. I recollect that one of the slips which were given me to copy when learning to write at school, read like this, "Disappointments are often blessings in disguise;" the words remained in memory, but not until riper years were they appreciated, nor their truth experienced. Now I know that the way which I in my ignorance and selfishness had marked for myself to tread, was not the one best calculated to lead me to true life, peace and joy; therefore I rejoice that trials have crossed my track—that cherished hopes have been blighted, and lofty aspirations brought low; and my cry is—

"Not mine, O God, but thine the choice;
In things or great or small,
Mark thou my way for me."

The true christian has every reason to rejoice even in the severest trials, for he may recognize these as proofs of a Father's love; says the great apostle, "What Son is he whom the Father loveth that he chasteneth not?" and he "Scourgeth every son whom he receiveth;" and the same has said, "No affliction for the present seemeth joyous but grievous; but afterward it yieldeth the peaceable fruits of righteousness, in them that are exercised thereby." Ah, let us see that we are of that class, then let the trials come thicker and faster, and the blessed fruit of righteousness will abound more and more. A parallel passage to this is, "Tribulation worketh patience," etc. How many can bear witness that the hasty, impatient spirit has been calmed and schooled to quietude and patience by the subduing influence of trials.

Another great benefit of trials is, that they draw us near our Heavenly Father. The prophet in speaking of a certain class, says, "In the day of their prosperity they forget me, but in the time of their trouble they called upon me." Is this not true of many at the present day? Often the christian will enjoy an interval of comparitive prosperity—trials' waves for a time recede; his substance increases, his loved ones are spared and all things go well. But he almost forgets the Giver of all his blessings, and instead of offering praise to him, he is absorbed in adorning his gifts; then in mercy God takes something of what he gave, and reminds his child of his departure from him. How few can bear prosperity; blessed be God that he knows how much of it we can bear, and that to those who commit themselves into his hands, he will give or withhold it in just the degree that will result in their best good.

It is by trials that we become purified from earth's dross, and thus fitted to enter the everlasting kingdom; they are a part of the all-wise discipline which every heir of glory must submit to; many and oftimes peculiar they are, but faith must be tried to see if it is insuring; even the Captain of our salvation was made perfect through suffering, and it is not strange that his followers should drink of the same cup. If we suffer with him, we shall also reign with him. The suffering must precede the reigning,—the sorrow, the joy,—the humiliation, the glorification. Of the redeemed ones, it is said, "These came out of great tribulation," etc. Ah! methinks that if when standing on the sea of glass with all the ransomed, we are permitted to look back and review the trial-scenes through which we have passed on our way thither, we shall say we endured none too much,—all was needed to perfect us to dwell where Jesus gives to overcomers a crown immortal, a kingdom eternal and a life-evermore.

O! tried fellow pilgrim, take hold of the strong consolation which is in store for thee. Let adversity's dark waters roll never so deep, let its waves rise never so high, they cannot overwhelm thee while thou makest the eternal God thy refuge; he will and does sustain thee. There is one passage of Holy Writ which I deem exceeding precious: "All things work together for good to them that love God." This has been the Gibraltar of my soul while passing through a series of varied and perplexing trials; on it I have firmly rested; it has buoyed me up in many an hour, when without this precious assurance I should have sunk in the dark gulf of despair. I do believe all things, whether sad or joyous, are for my good if I love God.

Brother, sister, do you believe this? then why so constantly wish that this, that, or the other thing were different? Rise and be of good cheer. This brief trial time will end in everlasting rejoicing; soon and forever thy sadness shall cease, and the sorrowless state be thine—thine eternally.

"Why speak of the trials, the sadness and gloom,
When the ceaseless glory is so soon to come?"

Haverhill. S. A. Coburn.

Correspondence.

From Bro. J. Croffut.

Bro. Grant:—I have never written ought for the Crisis, but I have long wished to do so, and have often made up my mind that I would do it, and now through the abundant mercy of my Father in heaven, I set myself to the pleasant, and I hope, not unprofitable task of saluting you, and all who love the appearing of the Lord Jesus Christ. I get an occasional number of the Crisis from Sr. Dannet, in which I find the names of many former acquaintances; cheering indeed to me to know they are still living and active laborers in the field. O Father! give them hearts and ability to sow good seed, that they may bring their sheaves with them rejoicing! I joyfully remember you, and all the laborers in the gospel, and mention you in my prayer that God will use you for his glory, and assist you in the good work of saving sinners through preaching the glorious gospel of God.

It is now about five years since I have been much of the time kept in the house, from a badly injured leg and rheumatism, and I am almost entirely dependent, speaking humanly—but God is my portion, I shall not want. O it is a sweet blessedness to have so kind a friend to go to, as is my Heavenly Father and my Savior Jesus. "Praise the Lord, O my soul, and all that is within me bless his holy name." I rejoice in all my afflictions and do ardently praise the Lord. I have hope in Jesus that he will yet heal me and enable me to testify, to his mercy and power to heal. I trust to his promises, "Ask and ye shall receive,"—"Whatsoever ye shall ask in my name that will I do, that the Father may be glorified in the Son. If ye shall ask any thing in my name I will do it."

I believe these promises, and that they are for me, and so I have committed all into the hand of him who gave himself for me, and I am enabled by his grace to rejoice always. O that I could express the unbounded love of God to poor me. Praise him all ye saints of his, and be not silent. "Holy, holy, holy Lord God Almighty, which was, and is, and is to come."

Brethren, sisters, children of God, old and young, great and small, learned and unlearned, listen. The last great work of earth is upon us! The gathering of the nations is begun! The clarion of war is sounding and reverberates through all the earth, and war is preparing! The mighty men are arousing, and nations are hastening the completion of life-destroying materials of the most astounding character. "Watch, therefore." The sixth angel has sounded, and now has elapsed more than twenty years of "Quickly," and who can say how soon the seventh angel will sound! when God "will once more shake the earth," and "not only the earth but heaven also." Sinner—

"'Tis the last call of mercy,"

will you heed it? You are now lovingly invited to come to Christ, to make yourself a friend of God, to become reconciled to God, and thus secure happiness. Happiness forever. Eternal life in glory. Will you still refuse the affectionate pressing invitation of the King of kings, "Come unto me—I will give you rest." Who else can do this? Who else has ever offered to do it? The blood of Jesus was shed for you, will you apply it? Will you take it to your salvation? O the precious blood of Christ cleanses from all sin! Nothing else will do it! How shall I value that blood? It is invaluable; and yet it is free! free for sinners, rebels, backsliders, yea, the chief of sinners.

O come, then, you who have till now refused the proffered mercy, friendship and love of the holy Jesus, come and participate in the blessedness that is ready for you, and let there be joy for you in the presence of the angels of God. O that I could prevail with you to taste the sweets of redeeming love, to feast and grow up into Christ. Praise him! O praise him forever. Soon I hope to see this loving Savior, "This same Jesus," in glory. O what shouts of joy will then fill heaven and earth "to him who loved us and washed us in his own blood." He has told us the certainty of his coming again a second time, when he will send his angels and gather all his elect, and say, "Come ye blessed of my Father, inherit the kingdom prepared for you." Happy, happy children of the Most High!

O that pleasant word come! How joyous to the desiring one to be invited to exchange misery for happiness, darkness for light, groaning for shouts of praise, sorrow for "joy unspeakable and full of glory." And finally, mortality for immortality, and corruption for incorruption, crowned with eternal life; and then the same kind voice, the same dear and affectionate word first and last come. "Come unto me." "Come, (he that cometh to me I will in no wise cast out") first, and wash away your sins! Come lastly, inherit the promise with me, share in the purchased possessions and live forever with me in glory! How long, O Lord, how long! "Surely I come quickly. Even so, come, Lord Jesus! Amen."

A sincere brother in the Lord,
Brooklyn, N. Y. J. Croffut.

From Bro. W. Kellaway, Weymouth, Eng.

Dearly Beloved Bro.:—Though strangers to each other bodily, yet are we all one in Christ. Nearly two years ago a beloved Bro. in Christ, C. Wegener, a member of the Advent church, came into this port, and my dear father and another dear brother were preaching the gospel of our adorable Lord and Savior on the Quay. When they had finished, this dear brother came up and requested to say a few words to poor sinners, on the death and resurrection of Christ. His words were words of truth and soberness; and every word came with power to the conscience. My father, believing him to be sent by God for some special purpose, brought him to his house in peace. And the Lord did not disappoint us; but, through his own instrument, brought us to see that man out of Christ was destructible, and not immortal.

Having been always taught the opposite, we could not readily bring our minds to it. Our dear Bro., as soon as he arrived in America again, sent us those gems of truth,—"What is Man?" "The Spirit in Man,—what is it?" "The Soul,—what is it?" "The Rich Man and Lazarus," "Pauline Theology," with a few other books, and two of those precious papers known as "The World's Crisis." These fully decided us. We read, prayed, and compared them with the unerring word of truth, and found them according to the Scriptures. As is usual, on speaking of it to our brethren, persecutions began to arise; but the God of our salvation gave his wisdom, so that we were not confounded. Meetings were convened, backbitings were abundant, yet the Lord gave us strength to bear all the reproaches heaped upon us for Christ's sake. At the examination meeting fourteen brethren were present. My father and mother were present. My father laid his Bible on the table, and asked them to prove differently. He also requested they would read the Bible with him, a little, on the subject. But they would not, as they said they had not met together with that intent. When he read a few verses to them, and began explaining them, they made all possible fun, now and then quoting a text, which, at first sight, would seem to favor their view, not waiting or listening for an answer. Part of them wished to excommunicate us all, including myself, because I spoke to a sister of putting on immortality in the morning of the resurrection, and also for saying that the Rich Man and Lazarus was but a parable. The rest wished to wait till the pastor came, whose judgment they said was better than theirs, and worth having. As soon as the pastor came, he gave his advice to the church to have nothing to do with us; not to buy of us, or have any intercourse with us; and to beware of us, as we had imbibed a great error, which denied the power of Christ. God forbid that we should ever do such a thing. Accompanied by two brethren, he visited us and desired us to recant, but by the help of God we did not. Their ceasing communion did not do away with the unceasing fellowship which we have with the Father and with his Son Jesus Christ. I am but a young brother.

The Lord has shown some, yea, most of them, they were wrong; and "Ichabod" seems from that day to have been written on them. A large number have left on our account. About nine or ten of us now meet in a room every Lord's day for breaking of bread and prayers. Pray for us, that the Lord would increase our faith and long-suffering; and that the brethren of Christ might have their understandings opened; that they may see the truth in Christ.

Pray that I, as I grow in nature, may grow in grace and in the knowledge of my blessed Lord. The hope of Christ's coming has always greatly occupied my mind; my exhortation being, "Looking for and hasting unto the coming of the Lord." While dear brother Wegener was here, father baptized him in the open sea, in the name of our blessed Master, and in obedience to his sweet commands. How blessed to be baptized into his death, and to rise and walk in newness of life. Should we not obey Him whose yoke is easy and whose burden is light?

I am yours for Jesus sake,
W. Kellaway.
No. 7 Bond St., Weymouth, Dorset, England.

From Bro. J. T. Ongley.

Bro. Grant:—Frequently we are asked (by brethren and sisters) Why don't you write for the papers, and give a few notes of your travel? etc. Well, to tell the truth, I feel that I am weak and unprofitable, and that my labors are of so little importance they are hardly worth noticing, yet the good Lord at times seems to bless our poor endeavors to preach his word. I stand in fear lest after preaching to others I be cast away, especially in these times of trial and divisions. When I come across those that can stand and thank God that they are christians, because they have believed the gospel and obeyed, I fear that it may be with them as it was with one in the apostle's days, whose heart was not right, notwithstanding he had obeyed, but was in the gall of bitterness and bond of iniquity. By such we are rejected, and also by others that we would be glad to call brethren, but are denied the privilege.

Notwithstanding, we have great reason to thank the good Lord that our eyes have been opened to see the blessed truths of the gospel, and have been obedient as far as outward forms could be attended to. Yet still we are rejected, not because we show any less love for the cause of truth, or the character of Christ than formerly. But we have too much charity, seems to be the great trouble, notwithstanding the apostle says though "we may have all knowledge," etc., and have it not, we are like sounding brass, etc.

I believe there are "little ones" called "lambs" in the word of God, that are to be fed with the sincere milk of the word, and will grow thereby, and in process of time become men and women in Christ Jesus. According to the views of the class mentioned above, our preaching has been in vain, although we have preached Christ in all his offices, and the way of getting into the blessed kingdom, etc. Some have believed and been baptized in order to obtain the promise of being saved, yet by them it is all in vain.

I am often led to cry, "Who shall be able to stand?" for truly "many shall say in that day, Lord, in thy name we have done many mighty works," etc., but will prove of no avail. It is a small matter to be judged by man. The Judge of all the world will do right, and behold, he standeth at the door! Oh, that it may be our lot to hail him with joy, and acknowledge HIM as our salvation when he cometh!

At our visit on Ripley Hill, Chant Co., N. Y., we endeavored to stir up the brethren and sisters to a renewed engagement in the service of the blessed Master, and we trust that it was not in vain. Our humble labors have been blessed of God, as also the labors of Bro. Thorpe in that place.

On Sunday, after commemorating the death of our Lord at the house of Sr. Austin, her youngest daughter, about nineteen years of age, felt it her duty to obey the Lord in baptism. The Lord blessed us in attending to that ordinance. We also, the following Wednesday, repaired to the water again, and a daughter of Bro. John Thorpe was also baptized.

Quite an interest is yet manifest in that place, and also in other places where we have been endeavoring to preach the word of life the past year.

We visited the brethren and sisters that had been baptized by us at Ripley three or four years ago, at Buffalo, N. Y. Was glad to find them still holding on; also Sr. Porter, of North East, Pa., Bro. Roberts, of Erie, Brn. Allen and Leonard, of Girard, and some of the brethren at Edinboro'. May the Lord sustain them in the trials they are passing through at the present time, and save them in the blessed kingdom.

The little church at this place, I trust, are trying to hold on. Bro. J. B. Cook and Sr. N. M. Henry are with us preaching for a few days. Hope their labors may be blessed of God. Yours in hope, John T. Ongley.

Blooming Valley, Crawford Co., Pa., Jan. 5th, 1864.

From S. D. Lewis.

Mr. Grant:—Dear Sir—I first became acquainted with your much valued paper, the Crisis, a little more than a year ago, through the kindness of Oliver D. Woodruff, of this place. Its weekly visits have been as a ray of sunshine to our household ever since; and feeling that we cannot now dispense with it, I enclose $— to have it continued.

Yours with respect,
Southington, Ct. Deidama Lewis.

A Slice that gave an Appetite for the Whole Loaf.—A correspondent writes from Milton, N. H., as follows:—

"A small piece of the paper called The World's Crisis has by accident fallen into my hands. I am so well pleased with it, that I have concluded to subscribe for it for the coming six months, hoping at the end of that time to be able to continue my subscription. You will therefore please send to my address one copy of The World's Crisis."

Obituaries.

John W. Crabtree.

Died at the United States General Hospital at Annapolis, Md., Dec. 17th, 1863, John W. Crabtree, of Seventh Regiment Connecticut Volunteers, aged thirty.

The body was brought to Hartford and interred Dec. 21st. Justice to the deceased seems to require more than a mere notice of his death. He was a man of sound mind, possessing many noble traits of character. With clear perceptions of right and justice, and a fearlessness in adhering to the same and reproving wrong, together with great fixedness of purpose in whatever he undertook, he necessarily made some enemies, and called down upon himself the censure of those who could not understand the principles by which he was actuated. His sympathies were strongly enlisted in behalf of the suffering, the wronged and oppressed, and for their sake and for what he regarded as truth, he was willing to sacrifice his all—and if need be, even life itself.

At an early age, while residing in Boston, and pursuing a profitable pecuniary vocation, he left all, and entered the christian ministry, and for six years previous to his entering the army, he was an efficient minister of the gospel. As a preacher, he was eloquent, sound and logical—prompt, earnest and faithful, and there is evidence that his "labors were not in vain in the Lord."

In the summer of 1861 he entered the service of his country, and from those who best knew him, we have strong evidence that he fought not the service of his "Lord and Master," but that he lived consistent with his high profession, seeking neither office nor the honors of men. As a soldier, he was faithful, cool and brave through all dangers and hardships, acknowledging the hand of the Lord in his preservation. His many letters to his friends ever breathed the spirit of one who lived near his God.... He often expressed the determination, if spared, to return to finish the work he had begun, as a minister of the gospel of the kingdom.

During the attack upon Fort Wagner, July 11th, he was taken prisoner and carried to Richmond, where for four long, weary months he endured with christian fortitude and patience, all the horrors, privations and exposures to which man could be subjected, first in Libbey then in Belle Isle prisons. November 17th he was parolled and taken to Annapolis, a mere wreck, prostrated by disease and starvation!... All efforts to raise him were unavailing, and on Thursday, Dec. 17th, his sufferings were ended by death.

No higher tribute can be paid to his memory than to quote the words of one of his comrades, before his death, and who himself has since died, (Corp. J. Russell), "If there is a christian in our regiment, it is John W. Crabtree."

Respectfully yours, A. D. Crabtree, M. D.

Sr. D. Brown.

Fell asleep in Jesus, Jan. 4th, 1864, Sister Desire Brown, wife of Bro. James Brown of Dansville, N. Y., aged eighty-one years, seven months, twenty-five days.

No sentence can be more expressive of the manner of her death than—"fell asleep." She came to the grave like a shock of corn fully ripe. Some two years ago she was led to see plainly the plan of salvation by a resurrection of the dead, and she used often to say that she thanked God she was led to see the truth in her old age, and to embrace it in the love of it. Previous to that she was a strong opposer, but her example since then might put to shame many young professors. Although they lived half a mile from the hall where meetings were held, yet she was a regular attendant on Sunday worship, going the whole distance on foot, with her aged companion by her side, and then ascending two pair of stairs to the hall. Also I have seen her tottering along the walk evening after evening to attend the preaching of the gospel.

Her last testimony in the church was one long to be remembered for its holy purity and simplicity of expression. It seemed the Spirit gave her special unction for that occasion, for she said afterward she felt it was her last meeting this side the kingdom. Her aged companion, a large circle of relatives, and church mourn her loss. F. Burr.

Mrs. E. Robbins.

Died, on the evening of Oct. 19th, in the town of Waupun, Fond du Lac Co., Wis., of lung fever Mrs. Emeline Robbins, aged fifty-seven years, two months, and thirteen days.

Sister Robbins cherished to the last the cheering expectation of meeting the Lord at his coming. When the hand of death was upon her, and she saw that she must be disappointed, her confidence in God never faltered, but her faith, bridging the yawning chasm at her feet, enabled her to say with Job, "I know that my Redeemer liveth, and that he shall stand at the latter day upon the earth, and after I shall awake, though this body be destroyed, yet out of my flesh shall I see God." She had been enabled, by the grace of God, to embrace the blessed truth of life only in Christ, many years ago, and met the king of terrors with a smile, saying in her heart, "I shall behold the Lord's face in righteousness. I shall be satisfied when I awake with his likeness." She leaves a large circle of relatives and friends to mourn her loss. Her funeral was attended on the 20th inst. Sermon by the writer, at her request, on the resurrection of the dead, from Job 14: 14.

J. F. Wilcox.

Samuel Gerrish.

Died in East Northwood, N. H., Dec. 29th, 1863, of lung fever, Samuel Gerrish, aged fifty-four years and eight months.

Bro. Gerrish was among the first to embrace the truth of the Lord's soon coming. He has sustained an unblemished character for strict morality and holiness of life, and remained firm and unshaken amidst the conflicts which have agitated the little flock. His house was a home for the pilgrim, and his death has made a sad breach in the little company of believers in Northwood. He leaves a wife and three children to mourn. May the Lord give grace and wisdom to the lone widow, and answer the prayers of the father in behalf of the children, and they all meet in the kingdom, where

"Death and the tomb shall divide us no more."

C. S. Emerson.

Summary of News.

FOREIGN.

Liverpool, Dec. 31, '63, Londonderry, Jan. 1st, 1864.

The political news is of no particular importance.

It is confirmed that England has protested against the Federal occupation of Schleswig.

FRANCE.

The Gazette De France asserts that Gen. Forey will proceed shortly to Miramar on a mission to the Archduke Maximilian relative to Mexico.

It is reported that the bullion in the Bank of France is now one hundred and ninety-six million francs.

THE HOLSTIEN QUESTION.

The German troops and Commander-in-Chief arrived at Werstadt on the 30th, and were expected at Rendesburg the following day, whence detachments would be forwarded to Frederickstadt.

The Danish troops had evacuated Tete Du Pont near Frederickstadt, and were also quitting Rendesburg.

Duke Frederick arrived at Kiel on the 30th. He was enthusiastically received.

POLAND.

Gen. Berg has issued an order at Warsaw, that until the complete restoration of tranquility all the police authorities, including the head of police, shall be subordinate to the military authorities.

Liverpool, Jan. 5. The Holstein question shows increasing embitterment. The Times continues to take a gloomy view of it and says: "The Germans are waiting still upon events, while events threaten more and more to be master rather than guide."

An address to Napoleon was introduced in the Corps Legislatif on the 4th. It expresses the hope that beneficial results may speedily be derived by France from the Chinese and Mexican expeditions. It is very pacific in tone toward Russia on the Polish question, and loudly extols the Emperor's scheme for a Congress.

THE MEXICAN QUESTION.

The Memorial Diplomatique confidently asserts that the Archduke will accept and occupy the Mexican throne. The understanding between the Archduke and Maximilian is said to be excellent, and it is represented that capitalists overwhelm the Archduke with offers of money on the simple guaranty of his accession to the throne.

THE HOLSTEIN QUESTION.

The Danes had completely evacuated Holstein, including the six villages north of the Eider, which are geographically part of Schleswig, but had been incorporated with Holstein.

The London Times remarks that scarcely can it be said that peace is yet unbroken. The Federal execution in Holstein is distinguishable only by the utmost discrimination from the reality of war and it is impossible to tell how long even this shadowy distinction may be maintained.

LATEST BY TELEGRAPH TO GALWAY.

It is confirmed that Maximilian will visit Paris, and reach Mexico before the end of March with requisite reinforcements.

DOMESTIC.

New York, Jan. 13th. A Washington letter to the Tribune says, it has been decided to remove the rebel capital to Columbia, South Carolina. The writer is a Union man lately from the South, where he had been a clerk in the rebel war department. He also says that the gunboats and iron-clads at Richmond are, with one exception, ready for service. On the 15th ult., they were ordered to make a demonstration in Hampton Roads, but after proceeding a few miles below Drury's Bluff, the order was countermanded.

New York, Jan. 16th. Among a mass of correspondence from C. A. Lamar, recently intercepted, is the following:

Savannah, Ga., July 31st, 1863.

Messrs. H. J. Harlstein and C. A. Lamar:

Gentlemen:—When you go to Paris call on Mr. Slidell and tell him for me to negotiate for the French protectorate. In case of necessity the people will gladly accept it in the last extremity. With Mexico, France and the Confederacy in alliance, and free trade, we should eclipse the world.

(Signed) C. A. Lamar.

New York, Jan. 17. The steam frigate Vanderbilt arrived this forenoon.

Revolutionary movements had broken out in the States of Antoiqua, Santandet and Bozaca, New Grenada, under the auspices of the conservative party.

The steamer America, from New York Oct. 30, arrived at Panama Jan. 1. She brought news from Valparaiso that the Cathedral in Santiago, Chili, caught fire on the 14th ult., when densely crowded with human beings. The doors were soon closed by the press of people. The interior of the building was decorated with light, inflamable ornaments, which caused the flames to spread rapidly. The roof being of wood, soon fell, burying the mass of human beings under it. Some 1950 dead bodies, mostly women and children, had been recovered from the ruins.

The South American mail steamer reached Panama on the 5th with $918,000 in treasure, and brought confirmation of the above intelligence, setting the number killed at 2000. The church contained 20,000 lights, from some of which fire was communicated to the drapery of the gigantic image of the Virgin and the pasteboard devices. In an instant a sheet of flames rushed along the festoon of lights to the roof, and directly spread to all parts of the building. The people rushed to the principal door, and it was soon blocked. Most of the men escaped by the Sacristy and side door. But a few minutes elapsed ere the lights, suspended so plentifully from the roof, poured a rain of liquid fire on the people below, and in less than fifteen minutes over 2000 persons, mostly females, were blackened corpses.

☞ It is estimated that it costs $20 a ton for transportation of merchandise per one hundred miles on an ordinary road; $2 on a railroad and 20 cents on the ocean, for the same distance.

☞ The bill before the Senate Military committee has the approval of the Secretary of War and Provost Marshall General. It will retain the $300 commutation clause.

Notices.

A Liberal Offer.

Being satisfied that time is short, and that what is done must be done quickly; and feeling anxious to do what we can to arouse a sleeping world and church, we make the following liberal offer:—

Any one who will send three or more new subscribers to the Crisis for six months or one year, with advance pay for the same, shall receive one third the value of the money sent, in any of our books and tracts they may select. For instance, if they send three dollars, they receive one dollar's worth of books or tracts; for six dollars, we send them two dollars' worth; for twelve dollars, four dollars' worth, etc.

Let every reader take hold of the work in earnest, and help scatter tracts, books and papers like autumnal leaves.

Miles Grant, per order of Publishing Committee.

Notice.

There will be a series of meetings at South Butler, Wayne Co., N. Y., commencing Jan. 22nd, and continuing through the following week, and over Sunday, Jan. 31st. Eld. F. Burr, of Honeoye, is expected to help preach the word. Let the brethren and sisters in the surrounding country prepare to attend this meeting. Come with your hearts full of love, that by your earnest prayers and exhortations you may help on the car of truth. Modern infidelity must fall. C. B. Turner.

Notice.

The Lord willing, we will commence a protracted meeting in Amboy, Lee Co., Ill., Wednesday evening, Feb. 3d, where Bro. D. S. Clark may appoint. Let us see a good gathering at this meeting, all full of the love of God, ready to work for the salvation of perishing souls.

D. R. & M. S. Mansfield.

Notice.

Bro. Grant:—I have been instructed by the brethren to inform you that we have organized ourselves into church fellowship here in Montreal; and to request you to make it known through the Crisis, so that if any of the brethren were passing through the city, they might visit us at No. 6 St. Antwaine Street. Geo. Smith, Secretary.

Montreal, Jan. 13th, 1864.

Wanted

One of the old 1843 Geographical Charts of the Four Kingdoms, painted in cloth; such as were used by our lecturers twenty years ago; also a set of the Symbolic Charts, presenting the metalic image, four beasts, etc., all in good repair. If you can spare me one for love or money, do not wait a month before replying, but write at once to, and oblige D. T. Taylor, Castleton, Rutland Co., Vt.

Appointments.

We would say to our preaching Brethren that it is necessary we should receive their appointments as early as Tuesday Morning, as our paper goes to press about noon; otherwise they will not be inserted till the week following.

Lowell Street Chapel, Boston, corner of Causeway and Lowell Streets. Meetings are held regularly three times every Sunday, and Tuesday and Friday evenings. Seats free.

Appointment for Lowell Street Chapel.

H. L. Hastings .... Sunday, Jan. 24th and onward for the present.

Cabot, Vt., Thursday, P. M., Jan. 21st, and continue through the week and over the following Lord's day. On Friday, P. M., Jan. 22nd, Bro. Nathan Wheeler will be set apart for the work of the ministry. Montreal, (Conaventure Hall), Tuesday evening, Jan. 26th, and every evening for two weeks including Lord's days, Jan. 31st and Feb. 7th. Brethren, pray for us.
Miles Grant.

Lawrence, Mass. .... Jan. 24th
Haverhill, Mass .... Jan. 31st
Danielsonville, Ct .... Feb. 7th and 14th
J. W. Brittan.

Worcester, Mass. .... Jan. 24th and 31st
Wm. A. Fenn.

Hoosick, N. Y. .... Friday evening, Feb. 5th and over Sunday, the 7th.
M. Batchelor.

New Haven, Ct .... Sunday, Jan. 24th, and Feb. 7th
New Britain .... Sunday, Jan. 31st
R. Williams.

Springfield, Mass., (Bro. Morgan's). .... Jan. 24th
Albany, N. Y. .... Jan. 31st
Seneca Falls, N. Y. .... Feb. 7th and 14th and through the week.
I hope to see friends from abroad. Come one, come all.
S. S. Brewer.

Alton, N. H., (Stockbridge Corner) .... Jan. 24th
Fisherville, N. H .... Jan. 31st
Z. Ford.

Warehouse Point, Ct. .... Sunday, Jan. 24th
South Windsor, (at Bro. Ellmore's) .... Jan. 27th
B. Wm. Wilkins.

Warehouse Point, Ct. .... Jan. 31st
I. B. Potter.

North Sutton, (Meeting-house) .... Jan. 31st
J. Couch.

Vernon, Vt. .... Feb. 7th
Geo. Champlin.

Westford .... Sunday, Jan. 24th
Carlisle .... Sunday, Jan. 31st
Groton, (where Bro. Putnam may appoint), Sunday, Feb. 7th.
B. Spaulding.

Moultonborough Center .... Jan. 24th
Melvin Village .... Jan. 31st
Meredith Center .... Feb. 7th
T. W. Piper.

Yarmouth, Me. .... Jan. 24th
N. G. Reed.

Falmouth, (Piscatiqua school-house) .... Jan. 24th
Litchfield, (Waterman school-house with Bro. H. D. Reed. .... Jan. 29th to 31st
R. R. York.

Scitico. .... Jan. 24th
H. Munger.

Scitico. .... Feb. 7th
R. E. Ladd.

South Windsor, Ct. .... Jan. 24th
Northfield, Ct .... Jan. 31st
Wrightville, Ct. .... Feb. 7th
C. Goodrich.

Shall commence a meeting at Hope Corner, Me., Thursday evening, Feb. 18th, and continue over the Sabbath, where Bro. Payson appoints.
S. K. Partridge.

Fairhaven, (Head of the River) .... Sunday, Jan. 24th
Fairhaven .... Jan. 31st
W. S. Campbell.

East Stoneham, (where J. Howe may think proper,) Feb. 5th, and over Sunday the 7th. T. Jordan.

Chester Factories .... Sunday, Jan. 24th
Cold Spring. .... Jan. 25th
Pleasant Valley, Ct. .... Jan. 27th
North Canton .... Jan. 29th
Warehouse Point .... Sunday, Jan. 31st
Wm. J. Hale.

Clark's Mills, R. I. .... Jan. 24th
Exeter, R. I. .... Jan. 30th–31st
Lafayette, R. I. .... Feb. 7th
The Plains, Appenaug. .... Feb. 14th
River Point, R. I. .... Feb. 21st–28th
I desire to fill up the week as brethren may arrange.
J. K. Bellows.

Clark's Hall, Richmond, R. I.

J. K. Bellows and A. Durfee .... Sunday, Jan. 24th
Augustus Durfee .... Jan. 31st

☞ King Street, Enfield, Ct., Saturday evening, Jan. 23d. Also the Sabbath following, and every evening, as long as thought best. Will as many of the brethren and sisters in that region as are willing to work in highways and hedges for the salvation of sinners, come to the meeting?
H. K. Flagg.

Vernon, Vt. .... Sunday, Jan. 31st
J. Hemenway.

Agawam .... Sunday, Jan. 24th
P. S. Butler.

Blooming Valley, Crawford Co., Pa., Jan. 23d to the 29th.
Edinboro', Erie Co., Pa., Jan. 30th till Feb. 3d.
Brethren, please arrange for these meetings, and pray about them.
Jos. D. Brown.

Danielsonville .... Jan. 23d and over Lord's day.
J. J. Northup.

South Butler .... Jan. 22d to 24th
Bristol .... Sunday, 10 1-2 o'clock, A. M., Jan. 31st
Honeoye .... Sunday, 3 o'clock, P. M., Jan. 31st
Dansville .... Sunday, Feb. 7th
F. Burr.

Athol, Mass., (as Bro. Sawtell may appoint), evening, Jan. 22nd.
Northfield, Mass. .... Sunday, Jan. 24th
L. Boutell.

Lawrence, Mass. .... Sunday, Jan. 31st
Concord, N. H. .... Sunday, Feb. 7th
Exeter, N. H. .... Feb. 14th, 21st, and 28th
A. Ross.

Exeter, R. I., (in the Garner school-house, as the Brn. may arrange), Jan. 24th.
Charleston, R. I., (in the Stone meeting-house), Feb. 7th
Rufus W. Prince.

South Newbury, N. H. .... Sunday, Jan. 24th
Wm. Sutherland.

Business.

THE NEW TRACT FUND.

Two Thousand Dollars.

We, the undersigned, agree to give the sums affixed to our names, for the purpose of raising two thousand dollars to aid the Christian Publication Society in the gratuitous distribution of tracts; and our subscriptions shall be paid at the call of the Treasurer, as soon as one half of the amount shall be subscribed.

Pledges and payments to Jan. 1st,	$331.30
M. Atkins pd.	1.00
Lucy A. Hyde pd.	1.00
R. W. Hill (pd. $2).	12.00

WHO IS IT?

"Lebanon, Jan. 11th, 1864.

"Enclosed find one dollar for the Crisis. Will you please change my post-office address from Wilmot, N. H. to Lebanon, N. H.?"

Certainly, with great pleasure, if you will only give us your name. We have several subscribers at Wilmot. Which is it?

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

W. Kelleway.—A small amount of money from England may be sent in letter; a larger by draft on a Boston bank or banker, which may be purchased at any exchange office, payable to the order of Miles Grant.

D. C. Tourtellot.—"Home Thrusts," by D. F. Newton, New York, is not yet published. It is to be out in a few weeks. We do not know the price.

Mrs. Wm. Boynton.—Have none left. Send you a tract for the money.

Mrs. Jas. Morrison.—Right; to No. 465.

N. Lasell.—It was credited and acknowledged. Paid to No. 442.

CASH RECEIPTS TO JAN. 18, 1864.

The present No. of the Crisis is 433.

The No. which follows your name, is the No. to which your money pays.

Deduct the one from the other, and you will see how far you have paid in advance, or how much is due the office.

Make a memorandum of the same, and you will be reminded when your subscription expires.

Mrs A Hess 423, C Sawdin 423, C R Rogers 438, L Hill 418, J Hayes 451, J Kelley 458, P Miller 458, J F Mattison 458, G L Makepeace 457, N Parsons 458, P Murphy 459, J F Berry 458, T Williams 454, A W York 458, W J Webster 457, S Brown 458, J M Andrew 484, S B Austin 458, J Douglass 456, J M Andrews 439, Mrs H Mitchell 459, J Hanson 458, C K Boothby 451, L Thomas 451, J King 441, H R King 428, Mrs A Baldwin 435, A Hamilton 444, A D Smith 442, O P Reddington 451, J C Atkins 453, Mrs R Robinson 458, R F Cram 456, Mrs F Alcott 459, Mrs J T Langley 458, M A Kimball 460, B McDonald 451, Jas Colby 459, C Colby 458, L W Dodge 458, E Snow 458, Mrs H Knight 458, G Wallace 457, S Case 468, B Hitchcock 458, J L Leonard 458, S Benton 350, B E Willard 458, F H Bruce 459, A Avery 457, S Jennings 464, M G Pickering 457, H S Moore 458, L D Demerset 453, Thos Lovett 458, Mrs S Emery 457, F Emery 457, J H Bartlett 458, C W Burley 458, Mrs E Hunt 453, J T Rancall 399,—$1.00 each.

M G Day 455, N Turner 450, J E Stoddard 484, J I Johnson 454, H Smith 428, R Tabor 460, J Metzgar 484, P Mitson 450, T G Dewey 484, S Sullivan 482, B F Braley 442, J Glidden 473, E H York 484, J Woodman 484, Wm Barker 484, J Vickery 478, J B Hendley 484, A W Griggs 486, L Reimer 485, J Darley 484, T J Philbrook 470, A Bucklew 487, T M Storer 478, C Hopkins 468, S B Clark 482, N L Rowe 416, O H Churchill 483, L Jackman 484, J C Gordon 484, G W Hunt 484, J S Pauer 416, L A Follansbee 483, B E Thompson 366, Mrs J M Moulton 483, I F Hunt 474, B Beals 401, J Woodard 454, Miss C Buckner (What P. O.?)—$2.00 each.

S F Pike 445, Mrs E Hewitt 441, S D Larkin 445, S Watson 445, A Glover 445, J W Reed 445, E Brundreuge 445, W Thompson 445, J Sheets 445, P Sawyer 445, J Knapp 445, Mrs M Brown 445, Mrs J Joslyn 445, J Totten 445.—50c each.

J W Trumbull $3.00, 438; S Shields 88c, 429; J Fairbanks $2.78, 483; S Macluer $2.78, 484; M J McLellan $1.03, 463; C Prince $1.50, 465; J B Morehead $3.00, 411; W C Ford $3.30, 450; J Blinn $1.05, 400; J Manville Jr $1.01, 485; O H Wyman $1.50, 411; Mrs C A Batou $3.00, 484.

FOR BOOKS AND TRACTS.

J G Smith $2.81, M A Cook $2.00, S E Trott 35c, T B Tambiyn 20c, Z E Harris 25c, J Mackey $3.00, J King $2.00, D C Tourtellot 35c, C D W Scott $1.25, J A Lawton 50c, C H Williams $4.36, J Binn 85c, B F Berry $3.05, M Crabtree $1.00, I Ames 25c, N White 25c.

LETTERS RECEIVED.

J V Himes, S Curry, J Whitman, J F Willcox, I C Wellcome, T L Waugh, P P Caufield, P S W Deyo, B Spaulding, Giles Russell, M Batchelor, R H Bolton, C H Williams, L F, L A Thornton, S V Whitaker, Wm Sweet, B Mathewson, Thos Huntington, J M Moulton, J Croffut, G W Stetson, N L Willard, Mar, G W Lewis.

POST OFFICE ADDRESS.

A. Mussey—George's Mills, N. H.
L. A. Follansbee—Dorchester, N. H.
J. Hemenway—Athol Depot, Mass.
L. Wetherbee—Newburg, Me.
Eld. F. Burr—Dansville, Livingston Co., N. Y.
Eld. N. F. Nason—Newport, Me. Residence, North Palmyra.

☞ My address, until further notice, will be No. 128 High Street, Brooklyn, L. I., N. Y. I may be absent for a few days at some appointments, and will respond immediately on return. Come, dear friends, send in your orders and help scatter the light. S. S. Brewer.

Walter Pratt—New Bedford, Mass.
Rufus Wendell—"Box 4656, New York City.
S. R. Gibson—Wilton Junction, Iowa.
J. G. Smith—New Durham Ridge, N. H.
T. M. Preble—East Weare, N. H.

VALUABLE BOOKS FOR SALE.

Buck: Our Lord's Great Prophecy. An extended Exposition of Matthew xxiv and its parallel passages, and an utter overthrow of the idea that Christ came when Jerusalem was destroyed. By D. D. Buck, a Methodist minister. 8vo. Cloth, $1.50 by mail.

Taylor: The Emphatic New Testament,—the four Gospels,—compared with the various readings of the Vatican manuscript, edited, with an introductory Essay on Greek Emphasis, by John Taylor. 8vo; pp. 240. $ .50 by mail.

Much light is thrown upon many passages by the system of emphasis which the author has introduced, by which all the words regarded as emphatic are distinguished by peculiar type.

Mosheim: Institutes of Ecclesiastical History, Ancient and Modern. By J. L. Mosheim. A new and literal translation from the Latin, with copious additional notes, original and selected, by James Murdock, D.D. 3 vols., 8vo; pp. 1461. $5.00 by express.

This is the best edition of this valuable history, and is far preferable to the other version by Maclaine.

Council of Nice. A Historical View of the Council of Nice, with a translation of documents, by Rev. Isaac Boyle, M. A. 8vo; pp. 62. By mail 50 cts.

Kitto: The Cyclopædia of Biblical Literature. Edited by John Kitto, D. D., F. S. A. Illustrated by numerous maps and engravings. 2 vols., 8vo., 1878 pages, double columns, half calf binding. Price $5.

Hebrew: The Englishman's Hebrew and Chaldee Concordance, by which an English reader can find the original Hebrew for any word in the English Bible, with all the places where it occurs. 2 vols. Cloth, $12, 1 vol. sheep, or half morocco, $23. 1763 pp.

Murdock: The New Testament, translated from the Syriac by James Murdock, D. D. 8vo., 515 pp. Price $2.

Address H. L. Hastings, Boston, Mass.

PRICES REDUCED

ON PART OF THE FOLLOWING

Valuable Books.

Eusebius' Ecclesiastical History, postpaid $2.00.
Butterworth's Concordance, sheep, second hand, postpaid $1.00.
Butterworth's Concordance, sheep, new, postpaid $1.50.
Cole's Pocket Concordance, sheep, $1.00; postage 16c.
Robinson's Greek Harmony of the New Testament, cloth, postpaid $1.00.
Josephus' complete works, translated by Whiston, one vol. $1.25; postpaid $1.50.

Also the following works for the Greek Student, not sold separately:—

No. 1. Bagster's Greek Testament, 8vo., cloth, with various readings of Griesbach.
No. 2. The Polymicrian Greek Lexicon of the New Testament, 12mo., cloth.
No. 3. Bagster's Pocket Greek Concordance of the New Testament, 12mo., cloth.

A valuable set for any one who is travelling, and cannot carry larger works. Price for the three, postpaid, $3.50.

Address E. P. Woodward, (Crisis Box) Boston, Mass.

English Bibles for Sale.

1. Diamond, fine print, full references, morocco bound, $1.50; calf, $1.25; roan, gilt, $1.00; flexible binding, $1.00. Postage 12 cents.
2. Pearl, flat, full references, morocco, $2.25; roan, $1.50. Postage 16 cts.
3. Nonpareil, 16 mo., references between the verses, or references in the margin, morocco, $3.00; calf, $2.50; roan, $2.00; references between verses, with gilt rims and clasps, $3.00. Postage 20 cts.
4. Minion, references between the verses, roan, $2.50. Postage 25 cts.
5. Minion, 8vo.; marginal ref., flat and clear type, roan, $2.00.
6. Testaments, roan, gilt, smallest 25 cts; larger, 33 cts. Postage 6 cts.

Address Miles Grant, Boston, Mass.

Price Reduced.

Resurrection of the Wicked. Discussion between M. Grant and J. T. Curry.

The advertised price of this Discussion is 25 cents, postage 2 cents. We have a quantity of them on hand, and will sell them hereafter for 20 cts., postage 2 cts. Send on your orders.

Photographs of Eld. Edwin Burnham. A few copies of a large, beautiful and life-like Photograph, which the friends of Bro. Burnham will be glad to obtain. Sent by mail for $1.00. Those wishing them should order at once.

BOOKS AND TRACTS.

[illegible]

MILES GRANT'S WORKS.

Resurrection of the Wicked. Discussion with Jos. T. Curry. [illegible] postage 2c.

Eternal Suffering. Discussion with Dr. J. Lich. [illegible]

Spiritualism. Discussion with J. S. Loveland, "On Spiritualism and Immortality." [illegible]

State of the Dead. Discussion with W. W. Clayton, "On the State of the Dead and the Punishment of the Wicked." [illegible]

Miles Grant's Tracts. 32 pages each. Price 5 cents [illegible]

What is Man? A Bible view of his creation; The meaning of Soul, Spirit, Death, and Hell.

The Soul, What is it? Or a careful examination of all the uses of the words nephesh and psuche as employed in the old and new Testaments.

The Spirit, What is it? Or a careful examination of all the uses of the words ruach and pneuma as found in the old and new Testaments.

The Rich Man and Lazarus. Thief on the Cross; Souls under the Altar; an exposition of Matthew 10: 28, Genesis 35: 18, &c.

TRACTS

Issued by the Christian Publication Society.

[illegible]

FREE TO THE POOR.

The Church not in Darkness; or, the duties of the times, [illegible] By H. L. Hastings.

The Three Worlds; or, earth, past, present, and future. [illegible] By H. L. Hastings. 24 pages.

The Last Days. A calm, scriptural, and convincing argument, [illegible]

Plain Truths; or, Scripture and Tradition united. [illegible] By H. L. Hastings. 32 pages.

Will all Men be Saved? A pointed, pithy, earnest and conclusive argument against Universalism, [illegible] By H. L. Hastings. 32 pages.

A Voice of Warning from the Four Winds. A compilation of brief and thrilling testimonies [illegible] By D. T. Taylor. 24 pages.

The New Heavens and New Earth. A collection of testimonies [illegible] By D. T. Taylor. 32 pages.

Ancient Landmarks. Six tracts of four pages each, [illegible] By H. L. Hastings. 24 pages.

The Duty of Christians in the present crisis. A letter to a Christian brother, by H. Grattan Guinness; [illegible] 24 pages.

BOOKS PUBLISHED BY H. L. HASTINGS,

[illegible] Hanover Street, Boston, Mass.

Single copies sent by mail, postpaid, on receipt of the price.

The Signs of the Times; or, A Glance at Christendom as it is. By H. L. Hastings. Third edition. Enlarged. 408 pages. Cloth, extra, $1.50. Paper, 75c.

[illegible]

"I have been much impressed by the free bold truth, the honest boldness, and the forcible eloquence of the whole argument, as well as by the large and valuable collection of statistic information which it contains."—Rt. Rev. J. H. Hopkins, Bishop of Vermont.

The Voice of the Church on the Coming and Kingdom of the Redeemer; or, a History of the Doctrine of the Reign of Christ on Earth. By D. T. Taylor. Revised and produced by H. L. Hastings. 4th Edition. 400 pp. 12mo. Price $1.50.

[illegible]

Spiritualism a Satanic Delusion and a Sign of the Times. By William Ramsey, D. D. Edited by H. L. H. Price, cloth, 40c. Paper, 15c.

[illegible]

Thessalonica; or The Model Church. A sketch of Primitive Christianity. By H. L. H. [illegible]

[illegible]

The Great Controversy between God and Man. Its origin, progress, and end. A sketch of man's "Secession and Rebellion." By H. L. Hastings. [illegible]

[illegible]

Reasons for my Hope, and the Tokens of its Speedy Realization. By H. L. Hastings. [illegible]

[illegible]

Thessalonica and Reasons for my Hope. Bound in one volume. Cloth, 75 cents.

Looking Forward, or the Prospects of the Church; being the concluding chapter of the Signs of the Times. Paper, 10 cents.

Future Punishment, as revealed in the Scriptures, in opposition to the Three Theories of Never-ending Sin and Misery, Universal Restoration, and Universal Salvation. By H. L. Hastings. [illegible]

[illegible]

Pauline Theology; or, The Scripture Doctrine of Future Punishment, as taught in the Epistles of Paul. By H. L. Hastings. [illegible]

[illegible]

The Old Paths; or, the Primitive Doctrine of a Future Life. By H. L. Hastings. [illegible]

[illegible]

Retribution; or, The Doom of the Ungodly, after the Resurrection of the Dead, Just and Unjust. By H. L. H. [illegible]

[illegible]

C. F. HUDSON'S WORKS.

Debt and Grace. Or the Doctrine of a Future Life, by C. F. Hudson. [illegible]

Christ our Life. The Scriptural Argument for Immortality through Christ alone. [illegible]

Human Destiny. A Critique on Universalism. [illegible]

The Doctrine of Endless Misery, an occasion of skepticism. [illegible]

Eternal Death in the literal sense is Eternal Punishment. [illegible]

The Rich Man and Lazarus. With remarks on Josephus. [illegible]

The Rights of Wrong; or, is Evil Eternal? With Reply to Dr. Mansel. [illegible]

Reviewers Reviewed. New edition with replies to articles in the Quarterlies, [illegible]

JACOB BLAIN'S WORKS.

Death not Life; or, The Destruction of the Wicked [illegible]

Glad Tidings; or, Bible Proof that Woe and Sin are to end in the universe [illegible]

The Wicked not Immortal. Two hundred texts [illegible]

Bible Meaning of the Word Hell. 3c.

Endless Misery not a Bible Doctrine. 3c.

Smoke of Torment and Unquenchable Fire Explained. 1c.

[illegible]

Bible Meaning of Forever and Everlasting. 1c.

Letter of Rev. John Foster on Future Punishment. [illegible]

S. S. BREWER'S TRACTS.

The Kingdom of God and the Signs of the Times. [illegible]

The Days we Live in. Price 10c, postage 2c.

The Seven Seals. An Exposition of the Sixth Chapter of Revelation. [illegible]

The Slaying of the Witnesses. Price 7c, postage [illegible]

The Great Image soon to be dashed to pieces. Price [illegible]

The Two-Horned Beast. Price 5c, postage 2c.

The Rich Man and Lazarus. Price 5c, postage 2c.

[illegible] Miles Grant, Boston, Mass.

all his blessings, and instead of offering praise to him, he is absorbed in adorning his gifts; then in mercy God takes something of what he gave, and reminds his child of his departure from him. How few can bear prosperity; blessed be God that he knows how much of it we can bear, and that to those who commit themselves into his hands, he will give or withhold it in just the degree that will result in their best good.

It is by trials that we become purified from earth's dross, and thus fitted to enter the everlasting kingdom; they are a part of the all-wise discipline which every heir of glory must submit to; many and oftimes peculiar they are, but faith must be tried to see if it is insuring; even the Captain of our salvation was made perfect through suffering, and it is not strange that his followers should drink of the same cup. If we suffer with him, we shall also reign with him. The suffering must precede the reigning,—the sorrow, the joy,—the humiliation, the glorification. Of the redeemed ones, it is said, "These came out of great tribulation," etc. Ah! methinks that if when standing on the sea of glass with all the ransomed, we are permitted to look back and review the trial-scenes through which we have passed on our way thither, we shall say we endured none too much,—all was needed to perfect us to dwell where Jesus gives to overcomers a crown immortal, a kingdom eternal and a life-evermore.

O! tried fellow pilgrim, take hold of the strong consolation which is in store for thee. Let adversity's dark waters roll never so deep, let its waves rise never so high, they cannot overwhelm thee while thou makest the eternal God thy refuge; he will and does sustain thee. There is one passage of Holy Writ which I deem exceeding precious: "All things work together for good to them that love God." This has been the Gibraltar of my soul while passing through a series of varied and perplexing trials; on it I have firmly rested; it has buoyed me up in many an hour, when without this precious assurance I should have sunk in the dark gulf of despair. I do believe all things, whether sad or joyous, are for my good if I love God.

Brother, sister, do you believe this? then why so constantly wish that this, that, or the other thing were different? Rise and be of good cheer. This brief trial time will end in everlasting rejoicing; soon and forever thy sadness shall cease, and the sorrowless state be thine—thine eternally.

"Why speak of the trials, the sadness and gloom,
When the ceaseless glory is so soon to come?"

Haverhill. S. A. COBURN.

Correspondence.

From Bro. J. Croffut.

BRO. GRANT:—I have never written ought for the Crisis, but I have long wished to do so, and have often made up my mind that I would do it, and now through the abundant mercy of my Father in heaven, I set myself to the pleasant, and I hope, not unprofitable task of saluting you, and all who love the appearing of the Lord Jesus Christ. I get an occasional number of the Crisis from Sr. Dannet, in which I find the names of many former acquaintances; cheering indeed to me to know they are still living and active laborers in the field. O Father! give them hearts and ability to sow good seed, that they may bring their sheaves with them rejoicing! I joyfully remember you, and all the laborers in the gospel, and mention you in my prayers that God will use you for his glory, and assist you in the good work of saving sinners through preaching the glorious gospel of God.

It is now about five years since I have been much of the time kept in the house, from a badly injured leg and rheumatism, and I am almost entirely dependent, speaking humanly—but God is my portion, I shall not want. O it is a sweet blessedness to have so kind a friend to go to, as is my Heavenly Father and my Savior Jesus. "Praise the Lord, O my soul, and all that is within me bless his holy name." I rejoice in all my afflictions and do ardently praise the Lord. I have hope in Jesus that he will yet heal me and enable me to testify, to his mercy and power to heal. I trust to his promises, "Ask and ye shall receive,"—"Whatsoever ye shall ask in my name that will I do, that the Father may be glorified in the Son. If ye shall ask any thing in my name I will do it."

I believe these promises, and that they are for me, and so I have committed all into the hand of him who gave himself for me, and I am enabled by his grace to rejoice always. O that I could express the unbounded love of God to poor me. Praise him all ye saints of his, and be not silent. "Holy, holy, holy Lord God Almighty, which was, and is, and is to come."

Brethren, sisters, children of God, old and young, great and small, learned and unlearned, listen. The last great work of earth is upon us! The gathering of the nations is begun! The clarion of war is sounding and reverberates through all the earth, and war is preparing! The mighty men are arousing, and nations are hastening the completion of life-destroying materials of the most astounding character. "Watch, therefore." The sixth angel has sounded, and now has elapsed more than twenty years of "Quickly," and who can say how soon the seventh angel will sound! when God "will once more shake the earth," and "not only the earth but heaven also." Sinner—will you heed it? You are now lovingly invited to come to Christ, to make yourself a friend of God, to become reconciled to God, and thus secure happiness. Happiness forever. Eternal life in glory. Will you still refuse the affectionate pressing invitation of the King of kings, "Come unto me—I will give you rest." Who else can do this? Who else has ever offered to do it? The blood of Jesus was shed for you, will you apply it? Will you take it to your salvation? O the precious blood of Christ cleanses from all sin! Nothing else will do it! How shall I value that blood? It is invaluable; and yet it is free! free for sinners, rebels, backsliders, yea, the chief of sinners.

"'Tis the last call of mercy,"

O come, then, you who have till now refused the proffered mercy, friendship and love of the holy Jesus, come and participate in the blessedness that is ready for you, and let there be joy for you in the presence of the angels of God. O that I could prevail with you to taste the sweets of redeeming love, to feast and grow up into Christ. Praise him! O praise him forever. Soon I hope to see this loving Savior, "This same Jesus," in glory. O what shouts of joy will then fill heaven and earth "to him who loved us and washed us in his own blood." He has told us the certainty of his coming again a second time, when he will send his angels and gather all his elect, and say, "Come ye blessed of my Father, inherit the kingdom prepared for you." Happy, happy children of the Most High!

O that pleasant word come! How joyous to the desiring one to be invited to exchange misery for happiness, darkness for light, groaning for shouts of praise, sorrow for "joy unspeakable and full of glory." And finally, mortality for immortality, and corruption for incorruption, crowned with eternal life; and then the same kind voice, the same dear and affectionate word first and last come. "Come unto me." "Come, (he that cometh to me I will in no wise cast out") first, and wash away your sins! Come lastly, inherit the promise with me, share in the purchased possessions and live forever with me in glory! How long, O Lord, how long! "Surely I come quickly. Even so, come, Lord Jesus! Amen."

A sincere brother in the Lord,

Brooklyn, N. Y. J. CROFFUT.

From Bro. W. Kellaway, Weymouth, Eng.

DEARLY BELOVED BRO.:—Though strangers to each other bodily, yet are we all one in Christ. Nearly two years ago a beloved Bro. in Christ, C. Wegener, a member of the Advent church, came into this port, and my dear father and another dear brother were preaching the gospel of our adorable Lord and Savior on the Quay. When they had finished, this dear brother came up and requested to say a few words to poor sinners, on the death and resurrection of Christ. His words were words of truth and soberness; and every word came with power to the conscience. My father, believing him to be sent by God for some special purpose, brought him to his house in peace. And the Lord did not disappoint us; but, through his own instrument, brought us to see that man out of Christ was destructible, and not immortal.

Having been always taught the opposite, we could not readily bring our minds to it. Our dear Bro., as soon as he arrived in America again, sent us those gems of truth,—"What is Man?" "The Spirit in Man,—what is it?" "The Soul,—what is it?" "The Rich Man and Lazarus," "Pauline Theology," with a few other books, and two of those precious papers known as "The World's Crisis." These fully decided us. We read, prayed, and compared them with the unerring word of truth, and found them according to the Scriptures. As is usual, on speaking of it to our brethren, persecutions began to arise; but the God of our salvation gave his wisdom, so that we were not confounded. Meetings were convened, backbitings were abundant, yet the Lord gave us strength to bear all the reproaches heaped upon us for Christ's sake. At the examination meeting fourteen brethren were present. My father and mother were present. My father laid his Bible on the table, and asked them to prove differently. He also requested they would read the Bible with him, a little, on the subject. But they would not, as they said they had not met together with that intent. When he read a few verses to them, and began explaining them, they made all possible fun, now and then quoting a text, which, at first sight, would seem to favor their view, not waiting or listening for an answer. Part of them wished to excommunicate us all, including myself, because I spoke to a sister of putting on immortality in the morning of the resurrection, and also for saying that the Rich Man and Lazarus was but a parable. The rest wished to wait till the pastor came, whose judgment they said was better than theirs, and worth having. As soon as the pastor came, he gave his advice to the church to have nothing to do with us; not to buy of us, or have any intercourse with us; and to beware of us, as we had imbibed a great error, which denied the power of Christ. God forbid that we should ever do such a thing. Accompanied by two brethren, he visited us and desired us to recant, but by the help of God we did not. Their ceasing communion did not do away with the unceasing fellowship which we have with the Father and with his Son Jesus Christ. I am but a young brother.

The Lord has shown some, yea, most of them, they were wrong; and "Ichabod" seems from that day to have been written on them. A large number have left on our account. About nine or ten of us now meet in a room every Lord's day for breaking of bread and prayers. Pray for us, that the Lord would increase our faith and long-suffering; and that the brethren of Christ might have their understandings opened; that they may see the truth in Christ.

Pray that I, as I grow in nature, may grow in grace and in the knowledge of my blessed Lord. The hope of Christ's coming has always greatly occupied my mind; my exhortation being, "Looking for and hasting unto the coming of the Lord." While dear brother Wegener was here, father baptized him in the open sea, in the name of our blessed Master, and in obedience to his sweet commands. How blessed to be baptized into his death, and to rise and walk in newness of life. Should we not obey Him whose yoke is easy and whose burden is light?

I am yours for Jesus sake,

W. KELLAWAY.

No. 7 Bond St., Weymouth, Dorset, England.

From Bro. J. T. Ongley.

BRO. GRANT:—Frequently we are asked (by brethren and sisters) Why don't you write for the papers, and give a few notes of your travel? etc. Well, to tell the truth, I feel that I am weak and unprofitable, and that my labors are of so little importance they are hardly worth noticing, yet the good Lord at times seems to bless our poor endeavors to preach his word. I stand in fear lest after preaching to others I be cast away, especially in these times of trial and divisions. When I come across those that can stand and thank God that they are christians, because they have believed the gospel and obeyed, I fear that it may be with them as it was with one in the apostle's days, whose heart was not right, notwithstanding he had obeyed, but was in the gall of bitterness and bond of iniquity. By such we are rejected, and also by others that we would be glad to call brethren, but are denied the privilege.

Notwithstanding, we have great reason to thank the good Lord that our eyes have been opened to see the blessed truths of the gospel, and have been obedient as far as outward forms could be attended to. Yet still we are rejected, not because we show any less love for the cause of truth, or the character of Christ than formerly. But we have too much charity, seems to be the great trouble, notwithstanding the apostle says though "we may have all knowledge," etc., and have it not, we are like sounding brass, etc.

I believe there are "little ones" called "lambs" in the word of God, that are to be fed with the sincere milk of the word, and will grow thereby, and in process of time become men and women in Christ Jesus. According to the views of the class mentioned above, our preaching has been in vain, although we have preached Christ in all his offices, and the way of getting into the blessed kingdom, etc. Some have believed and been baptized in order to obtain the promise of being saved, yet by them it is all in vain.

I am often led to cry, "Who shall be able to stand?" for truly "many shall say in that day, Lord, in thy name we have done many mighty works," etc., but will prove of no avail. It is a small matter to be judged by man. The Judge of all the world will do right, and behold, he standeth at the door! Oh, that it may be our lot to hail him with joy, and acknowledge HIM as our salvation when he cometh!

At our visit on Ripley Hill, Chant Co., N. Y., we endeavored to stir up the brethren and sisters to a renewed engagement in the service of the blessed Master, and we trust that it was not in vain. Our humble labors have been blessed of God, as also the labors of Bro. Thorpe in that place.

On Sunday, after commemorating the death of our Lord at the house of Sr. Austin, her youngest daughter, about nineteen years of age, felt it her duty to obey the Lord in baptism. The Lord blessed us in attending to that ordinance. We also, the following Wednesday, repaired to the water again, and a daughter of Bro. John Thorpe was also baptized.

Quite an interest is yet manifest in that place, and also in other places where we have been endeavoring to preach the word of life the past year.

We visited the brethren and sisters that had been baptized by us at Ripley three or four years ago, at Buffalo, N. Y. Was glad to find them still holding on; also Sr. Porter, of North East, Pa., Bro. Roberts, of Erie, Brn. Allen and Leonard, of Girard, and some of the brethren at Edinboro'. May the Lord sustain them in the trials they are passing through at the present time, and save them in the blessed kingdom.

The little church at this place, I trust, are trying to hold on. Bro. J. B. Cook and Sr. N. M. Henry are with us preaching for a few days. Hope their labors may be blessed of God. Yours in hope, JOHN T. ONGLEY.

Blooming Valley, Crawford Co., Pa., Jan. 5th, 1864.

From S. D. Lewis.

MR. GRANT:—Dear Sir:—I first became acquainted with your much valued paper, the Crisis, a little more than a year ago, through the kindness of Oliver D. Woodruff, of this place. Its weekly visits have been as a ray of sunshine to our household ever since; and feeling that we cannot now dispense with it, I enclose $— to have it continued.

Yours with respect,

Southington, Ct. DEIDAMA LEWIS.

A SLICE THAT GAVE AN APPETITE FOR THE WHOLE LOAF.—A correspondent writes from Milton, N. H., as follows:—

"A small piece of the paper called The World's Crisis has by accident fallen into my hands. I am so well pleased with it, that I have concluded to subscribe for it for the coming six months, hoping at the end of that time to be able to continue my subscription. You will therefore please send to my address one copy of The World's Crisis."

Obituaries.

JOHN W. CRABTREE.

Died at the United States General Hospital at Annapolis, Md., Dec. 17th, 1863, John W. Crabtree, of Seventh Regiment Connecticut Volunteers, aged thirty.

The body was brought to Hartford and interred Dec. 21st. Justice to the deceased seems to require more than a mere notice of his death. He was a man of sound mind, possessing many noble traits of character. With clear perceptions of right and justice, and a fearlessness in adhering to the same and reproving wrong, together with great fixedness of purpose in whatever he undertook, he necessarily made some enemies, and called down upon himself the censure of those who could not understand the principles by which he was actuated. His sympathies were strongly enlisted in behalf of the suffering, the wronged and oppressed, and for their sake and for what he regarded as truth, he was willing to sacrifice his all—and if need be, even life itself.

At an early age, while residing in Boston, and pursuing a profitable pecuniary vocation, he left all, and entered the christian ministry, and for six years previous to his entering the army, he was an efficient minister of the gospel. As a preacher, he was eloquent, sound and logical—prompt, earnest and faithful, and there is evidence that his "labors were not in vain in the Lord."

In the summer of 1861 he entered the service of his country, and from those who best knew him, we have strong evidence that he fought not the service of his "Lord and Master," but that he lived consistent with his high profession, seeking neither office nor the honors of men. As a soldier, he was faithful, cool and brave through all dangers and hardships, acknowledging the hand of the Lord in his preservation. His many letters to his friends ever breathed the spirit of one who lived near his God.... He often expressed the determination, if spared, to return to finish the work he had begun, as a minister of the gospel of the kingdom.

During the attack upon Fort Wagner, July 11th, he was taken prisoner and carried to Richmond, where for four long, weary months he endured with christian fortitude and patience, all the horrors, privations and exposures to which man could be subjected, first in Libbey then in Belle Isle prisons. November 17th he was parolled and taken to Annapolis, a mere wreck, prostrated by disease and starvation!... All efforts to raise him were unavailing, and on Thursday, Dec. 17th, his sufferings were ended by death.

No higher tribute can be paid to his memory than to quote the words of one of his comrades, before his death, and who himself has since died, (Corp. J. Russell), "If there is a christian in our regiment, it is JOHN W. CRABTREE.

Respectfully yours, A. D. CRABTREE, M. D.

SR. D. BROWN.

Fell asleep in Jesus, Jan. 4th, 1864, Sister Desire Brown, wife of Bro. James Brown of Dansville, N. Y., aged eighty-one years, seven months, twenty-five days.

No sentence can be more expressive of the manner of her death than—"fell asleep." She came to the grave like a shock of corn fully ripe. Some two years ago she was led to see plainly the plan of salvation by a resurrection of the dead, and she used often to say that she thanked God she was led to see the truth in her old age, and to embrace it in the love of it. Previous to that she was a strong opposer, but her example since then might put to shame many young professors. Although they lived half a mile from the hall where meetings were held, yet she was a regular attendant on Sunday worship, going the whole distance on foot, with her aged companion by her side, and then ascending two pair of stairs to the hall. Also I have seen her tottering along the walk evening after evening to attend the preaching of the gospel.

Her last testimony in the church was one long to be remembered for its holy purity and simplicity of expression. It seemed the Spirit gave her special unction for that occasion, for she said afterward she felt it was her last meeting this side the kingdom. Her aged companion, a large circle of relatives, and church mourn her loss. F. BURR.

MRS. E. ROBBINS.

Died, on the evening of Oct. 19th, in the town of Waupun, Fond du Lac Co., Wis., of lung fever Mrs. Emeline Robbins, aged fifty-seven years, two months, and thirteen days.

Sister Robbins cherished to the last the cheering expectation of meeting the Lord at his coming. When the hand of death was upon her, and she saw that she must be disappointed, her confidence in God never faltered, but her faith, bridging the yawning chasm at her feet, enabled her to say with Job, "I know that my Redeemer liveth, and that he shall stand at the latter day upon the earth, and after I shall awake, though this body be destroyed, yet out of my flesh shall I see God." She had been enabled, by the grace of God, to embrace the blessed truth of life only in Christ, many years ago, and met the king of terrors with a smile, saying in her heart, "I shall behold the Lord's face in righteousness. I shall be satisfied when I awake with his likeness." She leaves a large circle of relatives and friends to mourn her loss. Her funeral was attended on the 20th inst. Sermon by the writer, at her request, on the resurrection of the dead, from Job 14: 14.

J. F. WILCOX.

SAMUEL GERRISH.

Died in East Northwood, N. H., Dec. 29th, 1863, of lung fever, Samuel Gerrish, aged fifty-four years and eight months.

Bro. Gerrish was among the first to embrace the truth of the Lord's soon coming. He has sustained an unblemished character for strict morality and holiness of life, and remained firm and unshaken amidst the conflicts which have agitated the little flock. His house was a home for the pilgrim, and his death has made a sad breach in the little company of believers in Northwood. He leaves a wife and three children to mourn. May the Lord give grace and wisdom to the lone widow, and answer the prayers of the father in behalf of the children, and they all meet in the kingdom, where

"Death and the tomb shall divide us no more."

C. S. EMERSON.

Summary of News.

FOREIGN.

Liverpool, Dec. 31. '63, Londonderry, Jan. 1st, 1864.

The political news is of no particular importance.

It is confirmed that England has protested against the Federal occupation of Schleswig.

FRANCE.

The Gazette De France asserts that Gen. Forey will proceed shortly to Miramar on a mission to the Archduke Maximilian relative to Mexico.

It is reported that the bullion in the Bank of France is now one hundred and ninety-six million francs.

THE HOLSTIEN QUESTION.

The German troops and Commander-in-Chief arrived at Werstadt on the 30th, and were expected at Rendesburg the following day, whence detachments would be forwarded to Frederickstadt.

The Danish troops had evacuated Tete Du Pont near Frederickstadt, and were also quitting Rendesburg.

Duke Frederick arrived at Kiel on the 30th. He was enthusiastically received.

POLAND.

Gen. Berg has issued an order at Warsaw, that until the complete restoration of tranquility all the police authorities, including the head of police, shall be subordinate to the military authorities.

Liverpool, Jan. 5. The Holstein question shows increasing embitterment. The Times continues to take a gloomy view of it and says: "The Germans are waiting still upon events, while events threaten more and more to be master rather than guide."

An address to Napoleon was introduced in the Corps Legislatif on the 4th. It expresses the hope that beneficial results may speedily be derived by France from the Chinese and Mexican expeditions. It is very pacific in tone toward Russia on the Polish question, and loudly extols the Emperor's scheme for a Congress.

THE MEXICAN QUESTION.

The Memorial Diplomatique confidently asserts that the Archduke will accept and occupy the Mexican throne. The understanding between the Archduke and Maximilian is said to be excellent, and it is represented that capitalists overwhelm the Archduke with offers of money on the simple guaranty of his accession to the throne.

THE HOLSTEIN QUESTION.

The Danes had completely evacuated Holstein, including the six villages north of the Eider, which are geographically part of Schleswig, but had been incorporated with Holstein.

The London Times remarks that scarcely can it be said that peace is yet unbroken. The Federal execution in Holstein is distinguishable only by the utmost discrimination from the reality of war, and it is impossible to tell how long even this shadowy distinction may be maintained.

LATEST BY TELEGRAPH TO GALWAY.

It is confirmed that Maximilian will visit Paris, and reach Mexico before the end of March with requisite reinforcements.

DOMESTIC.

New York, Jan. 13th. A Washington letter to the Tribune says, it has been decided to remove the rebel capital to Columbia, South Carolina. The writer is a Union man lately from the South, where he had been a clerk in the rebel war department. He also says that the gunboats and iron-clads at Richmond are, with one exception, ready for service. On the 15th ult., they were ordered to make a demonstration in Hampton Roads, but after proceeding a few miles below Drury's Bluff, the order was countermanded.

New York, Jan. 16th. Among a mass of correspondence from C. A. Lamar, recently intercepted, is the following:

Savannah, Ga., July 31st, 1863.

Messrs. H. J. Harlstein and C. A. Lamar:

Gentlemen:—When you go to Paris call on Mr. Slidell and tell him for me to negotiate for the French protectorate. In case of necessity the people will gladly accept it in the last extremity. With Mexico, France and the Confederacy in alliance, and free trade, we should eclipse the world.

(Signed) C. A. LAMAR.

New York, Jan. 17. The steam frigate Vanderbilt arrived this forenoon.

Revolutionary movements had broken out in the States of Antoiqua, Santandet and Bozaca, New Grenada, under the auspices of the conservative party.

The steamer America, from New York Oct. 30, arrived at Panama Jan. 1 She brought news from Valparaiso that the Cathedral in Santiago, Chili, caught fire on the 14th ult., when densely crowded with human beings. The doors were soon closed by the press of people. The interior of the building was decorated with light, inflamable ornaments, which caused the flames to spread rapidly. The roof being of wood, soon fell, burying the mass of human beings under it. Some 1950 dead bodies, mostly women and children, had been recovered from the ruins.

The South American mail steamer reached Panama on the 5th with $918,000 in treasure, and brought confirmation of the above intelligence, setting the number killed at 2000. The church contained 20,000 lights, from some of which fire was communicated to the drapery of the gigantic image of the Virgin and the pasteboard devices. In an instant a sheet of flames rushed along the festoon of lights to the roof, and directly spread to all parts of the building. The people rushed to the principal door, and it was soon blocked. Most of the men escaped by the Sacristy and side door. But a few minutes elapsed ere the lights, suspended so plentifully from the roof, poured a rain of liquid fire on the people below, and in less than fifteen minutes over 2000 persons, mostly females, were blackened corpses.

☞ It is estimated that it costs $20 a ton for transportation of merchandise per one hundred miles on an ordinary road; $2 on a railroad and 20 cents on the ocean, for the same distance.

☞ The bill before the Senate Military committee has the approval of the Secretary of War and Provost Marshall General. It will retain the $300 commutation clause.

Notices.

A Liberal Offer.

Being satisfied that time is short, and that what is done must be done quickly; and feeling anxious to do what we can to arouse a sleeping world and church, we make the following liberal offer:—

Any one who will send three or more new subscribers to the Crisis for six months or one year, with advance pay for the same, shall receive one third the value of the money sent, in any of our books and tracts they may select. For instance, if they send three dollars, they receive one dollar's worth of books or tracts; for six dollars, we send them two dollars' worth; for twelve dollars, four dollars' worth, etc.

Let every reader take hold of the work in earnest, and help scatter tracts, books and papers like autumnal leaves.

MILES GRANT, per order of Publishing Committee.

Notice.

There will be a series of meetings at South Butler, Wayne Co., N. Y., commencing Jan. 22nd, and continuing through the following week, and over Sunday, Jan. 31st. Eld. F. Burr, of Honeoye, is expected to help preach the word. Let the brethren and sisters in the surrounding country prepare to attend this meeting. Come with your hearts full of love, that by your earnest prayers and exhortations you may help on the car of truth. Modern infidelity must fall. C. B. TURNER.

Notice.

The Lord willing, we will commence a protracted meeting in Amboy, Lee Co., Ill., Wednesday evening, Feb. 3d, where Bro. D. S. Clark may appoint. Let us see a good gathering at this meeting, all full of the love of God, ready to work for the salvation of perishing souls.

D. R. & M. S. MANSFIELD.

Notice.

BRO. GRANT:—I have been instructed by the brethren to inform you that we have organized ourselves into church fellowship here in Montreal; and to request you to make it known through the Crisis, so that if any of the brethren were passing through the city, they might visit us at No. 6 St. Antwaine Street. GEO. SMITH, Secretary.

Montreal, Jan. 13th, 1864.

Wanted

One of the old 1843 Geographical Charts of the Four Kingdoms, painted in cloth; such as were used by our lecturers twenty years ago; also a set of the Symbolic Charts, presenting the metalic image, four beasts, etc., all in good repair. If you can spare me one for love or money, do not wait a month before replying, but write at once to, and oblige D. T. TAYLOR, Castleton, Rutland Co., Vt.

Appointments.

We would say to our preaching Brethren that it is necessary we should receive their appointments as early as TUESDAY MORNING, as our paper goes to press about noon; otherwise they will not be inserted till the week following.

LOWELL STREET CHAPEL, BOSTON, CORNER OF CAUSEWAY AND LOWELL STREETS. Meetings are held regularly three times every Sunday, and Tuesday and Friday evenings. Seats free.

APPOINTMENT FOR LOWELL STREET CHAPEL.

H. L. Hastings.......................Sunday, Jan. 24th and onward for the present.

Cabot, Vt., Thursday, P. M., Jan. 21st, and continue through the week and over the following Lord's day.

On Friday, P. M., Jan. 22nd, Bro. Nathan Wheeler will be set apart for the work of the ministry.

Montreal, (Conaventure Hall), Tuesday evening, Jan. 26th, and every evening for two weeks including Lord's days, Jan. 31st and Feb. 7th. Brethren, pray for us.

MILES GRANT.

Lawrence, Mass.......................Jan. 24th
Haverhill, Mass.......................Jan. 31st
Danielsonville, Ct..........Feb. 7th and 14th
J. W. BRITTAN.

Worcester, Mass.............Jan. 24th and 31st
WM. A. FENN.

Hoosick, N. Y........Friday evening. Feb. 5th and over Sunday, the 7th. M. BATCHELOR.

New Haven, Ct.........Sunday, Jan. 24th, and Feb. 7th
New Britain......................Sunday, Jan. 31st
R. WILLIAMS.

Springfield, Mass., (Bro. Morgan's)..........Jan. 24th
Albany, N. Y.......................Jan. 31st
Seneca Falls, N. Y..........Feb. 7th and 14th and through the week.

I hope to see friends from abroad. Come one, come all. S. S. BREWER.

Alton, N. H., (Stockbridge Corner)..........Jan. 24th
Fisherville, N. H.......................Jan. 31st
Z. FORD.

Warehouse Point, Ct..................Sunday, Jan. 24th
South Windsor, (at Bro. Ellmore's)..........Jan. 27th
B. WM. WILKINS.

Warehouse Point, Ct.......................Jan. 31st
I. B. POTTER.

North Sutton, (Meeting-house)..........Jan. 31st
J. COUCH.

Vernon, Vt.......................Feb. 7th
GEO. CHAMPLIN.

Westford.......................Sunday, Jan. 24th
Carlisle.......................Sunday Jan. 31st
Groton, (where Bro. Putnam may appoint), Sunday, Feb. 7th. B. SPAULDING.

Moultonborough Center..........Jan. 24th
Melvin Village.......................Jan. 31st
Meredith Center.......................Feb. 7th
T. W. PIPER.

Yarmouth, Me.......................Jan. 24th
N. G. REED.

Falmouth, (Piscatiqua school-house)..........Jan. 24th
Litchfield, (Waterman school-house..........Jan. 29th to 31st with Bro. H. D. Reed. R. R. YORK.

Scitico.......................Jan. 24th
H. MUNGER.

Scitico.......................Feb. 7th
R. E. LADD.

South Windsor, Ct.......................Jan. 24th
Northfield, Ct.......................Jan. 31st
Wrightville, Ct.......................Feb. 7th
C. GOODRICH.

Shall commence a meeting at Hope Corner, Me., Thursday evening, Feb. 18th, and continue over the Sabbath, where Bro. Payson appoints.

S. K. PARTRIDGE.

Fairhaven, (Head of the River)..........Sunday, Jan. 24th
Fairhaven.......................Jan. 31st
W. S. CAMPBELL.

East Stoneham, (where J. Howe may think proper,) Feb. 5th, and over Sunday the 7th. T. JORDAN.

Chester Factories..........Sunday, Jan. 24th
Cold Spring.......................Jan. 25th
Pleasant Valley, Ct.......................Jan. 27th
North Canton.......................Jan. 29th
Warehouse Point..........Sunday, Jan. 31st
WM. J. HALE.

Clark's Mills, R. I.......................Jan. 24th
Exeter, R. I.......................Jan. 30th–31st
Lafayette, R. I.......................Feb. 7th
The Plains, Appanaug.......................Feb. 14th
River Point, R. I..........Feb. 21st–28th

I desire to fill up the week as brethren may arrange.

J. K. BELLOWS.

CLARK'S HALL, RICHMOND, R. I.

J. K. Bellows and A. Durfee..........Sunday, Jan. 24th
Augustus Durfee.......................Jan. 31st

☞ King Street, Enfield, Ct., Saturday evening, Jan. 23d. Also the sabbath following, and every evening, as long as thought best. Will as many of the brethren and sisters in that region as are willing to work in highways and hedges for the salvation of sinners, come to the meeting? H. K. FLAGG.

Vernon, Vt.......................Sunday, Jan. 31st
J. HEMENWAY.

Agawam.......................Sunday, Jan. 24th
P. S. BUTLER.

Blooming Valley, Crawford Co., Pa., Jan. 23d to the 29th.

Edinboro', Erie Co., Pa., Jan. 30th till Feb. 3d.

Brethren, please arrange for these meetings, and pray about them. JOS. D. BROWN.

Danielsonville.......................Jan. 23d and over Lord's day. J. J. NORTHUP.

South Butler.......................Jan. 22d to 24th
Bristol..........Sunday, 10 1-2 o'clock, A. M., Jan. 31st
Honeoye..........Sunday, 2 o'clock, P. M., Jan. 31st
Dansville.......................Sunday, Feb. 7th
F. BURR.

Athol, Mass., (as Bro. Sawtell may appoint), evening, Jan. 22nd.

Northfield, Mass.......................Sunday, Jan. 24th
L. BOUTELL.

Lawrence, Mass.......................Sunday, Jan. 31st
Concord, N. H.......................Sunday, Feb. 7th
Exeter, N. H..........Feb. 14th, 21st, and 28th
A. ROSS.

Exeter, R. I., (in the Garner school-house, as the Brn. may arrange), Jan. 26th.

Charleston, R. I., (in the Stone meeting-house), Feb. 7th
RUFUS W. PRINCE.

South Newbury, N. H..........Sunday, Jan. 24th
WM. SOTHERLAND.

Business.

THE NEW TRACT FUND.

Two Thousand Dollars.

We, the undersigned, agree to give the sums affixed to our names, for the purpose of raising TWO THOUSAND DOLLARS to aid the Christian Publication Society in the gratuitous distribution of tracts; and our subscriptions shall be paid at the call of the Treasurer, as soon as one half of the amount shall be subscribed.

Pledges and payments to Jan. 1st,	$281.20
M. Atkins pd	1.00
Lucy A. Hyde pd	1.00
R. W. Hill (pd. $2)	12.00

WHO IS IT?

"LEBANON, Jan. 11th, 1864.

"Enclosed find one dollar for the Crisis. Will you please change my post-office address from Wilmot, N. H. to Lebanon, N. H.?"

Certainly, with great pleasure, if you will only give us your name. We have several subscribers at Wilmot. Which is it?

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

W. Kelleway.—A small amount of money from England may be sent in letter; a larger by draft on a Boston bank or banker, which may be purchased at any exchange office, payable to the order of Miles Grant.

D. C. Tourtellot.—"Home Thrusts," by D. F. Newton, New York, is not yet published. It is to be out in a few weeks. We do not know the price.

Mrs. Wm. Boynton.—Have none left. Send you a tract for the money.

Mrs. Jas. Morrison.—Right; to No. 465.

N. Lasell.—It was credited and acknowledged. Paid to No. 442.

CASH RECEIPTS TO JAN. 15, 1864.

The present No. of the Crisis is 433.

The No. which follows your name, is the No. to which your money pays.

Deduct the one from the other, and you will see how far you have paid in advance, or how much is due the office.

Make a memorandum of the same, and you will be reminded when your subscription expires.

Mrs A Hess 423, C Sawdin 423, C R Rogers 438, L Hill 418, J Hayes 451, J Kelley 458, P Miller 438, J F Mattison 458, G L Makepeace 457, N Parsons 458, F Murphy 459, J F Berry 455, T Williams 454, A W York 458, W J Webster 457, S Brown 458, J M Andrew 434, S B Austin 458, J Douglass 458, J M Andrews 439, Mrs H Mitchell 459, A J Hanson 458, C K Boothby 431, L Thomas 461, J King 441, H R King 428, Mrs A Baldwin 435, A Hamilton 444, A D Smith 442, O P Reddington 451, J C Atkins 453, Mrs R Robinson 458, R F Cram 456, Mrs F Alcott 459, Mrs J T Langley 458, M A Kimball 460, B McDonald 458, Jas Colby 459, C Colby 458, L W Dodge 458, E Snow 458, Mrs H Knight 458, G Wallace 457, S Cave 468, B Hitchcock 458, J L Leonard 458, S Benton 360, B E Willard 458, F H Bruce 459, A Avery 457, S Jennings 464, M G Pickering 437, H S Moore 458, L D Demerutt 455, Thos Lovett 458, Mrs S Emery 457, F Emery 457, J H Bartlett 458, C W Burley 458, Mrs E Hunt 455, J T Randall 399,—$1.00 each.

M G Day 455, N Turner 450, J E Stoddard 484, J I Johnson 434, H Smith 428, R Tabor 460, J Metzgar 484, P Mitson 450, T G Dewey 484, S M Sullivan 4[illegible], B F Braley 442, J Glidden 47[illegible], E H York 484, J Woodman 484, Wm Barker 484, J Vickery 4[illegible], J B Hendley 484, A W Giggs 498, L Reimer 465, J Darley 484, T J Philbrook 470, A Buckelew 487, T M Storer 478, C Hopkins 468, S B Clark 482, N L Rowe 416, O H Churchill 483, L Jackman 484, J C Gordon 484, G W Hunt 484, J S Prater 416, L A Follansbee 445, B E Thompson 366, Mrs J M Moulton 453, T F Hunt 4[illegible], B Beals 401, J Woodard 454, Miss C Buckner (What P. O.?)—$2.00 each.

S F Pike 445, Mrs E Hewitt 441, S D Larkin 445, S Watson 445, A Glover 445, J W Reed 445, E Brundreuge 443, W Thompson 446, J Sheets 445, P Sawyer 446, J Knapp 445, Mrs M Brown 445, Mrs J Joslyn 445, J Totten 445.—50c each.

J W Trumbull $1.00, 438; S Shields 88c, 429; J Fairbanks $2.78, 483; S Macluer $2.78, 484; M J McLellan $1.00, 436; C Prince $1.50, 445; J B Morehead $3.00, 411; W C Ford $1.50, 450; J Blinn $1.05, 400; J Manville Jr $1.04, 4[illegible]; O H Wyman $3.35, 417; Mrs C A Barton $3.00, 484.

FOR BOOKS AND TRACTS.

J G Smith $2.81, M A Cook $2.00, S E Trott 35c, T B Tambtyn 20c, Z E Harris 25c, J Mackey $5.00, J King $2.00, D C Tourtellot 35c, C D W Scott $1.25, J A Lawton 50c, C H Williams $4.36, J Blinn 50c, B F Berry $3.46, A Crabtree $1.00, I Ames 25c, N White 25c.

LETTERS RECEIVED.

J V Himes, S Curry, J Whitman, J F Willcox, I C Wellcome, T L Waugh, P P Canfield, P S W Deyo, B Spaulding, Giles Russell, M Batchelor, R H Bolton, C H Williams, L F, L A Thornton, S V Whitaker, Wm Sweet, B Mathewson, Thos Huntington, J M Moulton, J Croffut, G W Stetson, N L Willard, Mac, G W Lewis.

POST OFFICE ADDRESS.

A. Mussey—George's Mills, N. H.
L. A. Follansbee—Dorchester, N. H.
J. Hemenway—Athol Depot, Mass.
L. Wetherbee—Newburg, Me.
Eld. F. Burr—Dansville, Livingston Co., N. Y.
Eld. N. F. Nason—Newport, Me. Residence, North Palmyra.

☞ My address, until further notice, will be No. 128 High Street, Brooklyn, L. I., N. Y. I may be absent for a few days at some appointments, and will respond immediately on return. Come, dear friends, send in your orders and help scatter the light. S. S. BREWER.

Walter Pratt—New Bedford, Mass.
Rufus Wendell—Box 4656, New York City.
S. R. Gibson—Wilton Junction, Iowa.
J. G. Smith—New Durham Ridge, N. H.
T. M. Preble—East Weare, N. H.

VALUABLE BOOKS FOR SALE.

BUCK: OUR LORD'S GREAT PROPHECY. An extended Exposition of Matthew xxiv and its parallel passages, and an utter overthrow of the idea that Christ came when Jerusalem was destroyed. By D. D. Buck, a Methodist minister. 8vo. Cloth, $1.50 by mail.

TAYLOR: THE EMPHATIC NEW TESTAMENT, —the four Gospels,—compared with the various readings of the Vatican manuscript, edited, with an introductory Essay on Greek Emphasis, by John Taylor. 8vo; pp. 2.0. $ .50 by mail.

Much light is thrown upon many passages by the system of emphasis which the author has introduced, by which all the words regarded as emphatic are distinguished by peculiar type.

MOSHEIM: INSTITUTES OF ECCLESIASTICAL History, Ancient and Modern. By J. L. MOSHEIM. A new and literal translation from the Latin, with copious additional notes, original and selected, by James Murdock, D.D. 3 vols., 8vo; pp. 1461. $5.00 by express.

This is the best edition of this valuable history, and is far preferable to the other version by MACLAINE.

COUNCIL OF NICE. A Historical View of the Council of Nice, with a translation of documents, by Rev. Isaac Boyle, M. A. 8vo; pp. 62. By mail 50 cts.

KITTO: The Cyclopædia of Biblical Literature. Edited by John Kitto, D. D., F. S. A. Illustrated by numerous maps and engravings. 2 vols., 8vo., 1878 pages, double columns, half calf binding. Price $8.

HEBREW: The Englishman's Hebrew and Chaldee Concordance, by which an English reader can find the original Hebrew for any word in the English Bible, with all the places where it occurs. 2 vols. Cloth, $22; 1 vol. sheep, or half moroceo, $23. 1763 pp.

MURDOCK: The New Testament, translated from the Syriac by James Murdock, D. D. 8vo., 515 pp. Price $2.

Address H. L. HASTINGS, Boston, Mass.

PRICES REDUCED

ON PART OF THE FOLLOWING

Valuable Books.

Eusebius' Ecclesiastical History, postpaid $2.00.
Butterworth's Concordance, sheep, second hand, postpaid $1.00.
Butterworth's Concordance, sheep, new, postpaid $1.50.
Cole's Pocket Concordance, sheep, $1.00; postage 16c.
Robinson's Greek Harmony of the New Testament, cloth, postpaid $1.00.
Josephus' complete works, translated by Whiston, one vol. $1.25; postpaid $1.50.

Also the following works for the Greek Student, not sold separately:—

No. 1. Bagster's Greek Testament, 8vo., cloth, with various readings of Griesbach.

No. 2. The Polymicrian Greek Lexicon of the New Testament, 12mo., cloth.

No. 3. Bagster's Pocket Greek Concordance of the New Testament, 12mo., cloth.

A valuable set for any one who is travelling, and cannot carry larger works. Price for the three, postpaid, $3.50.

Address E. P. WOODWARD, (Crisis Box) Boston, Mass.

English Bibles for Sale.

1. DIAMOND, fine print, full references, morocco bound, $1.50; calf, $1.25; roan, gilt, $1.00; flexible binding, $1.00. Postage 12 cents.
2. PEARL, flat, full references, morocco, $2.25; roan, $1.50. Postage 16 cts.
3. NONPAREIL, 16 mo., references between the verses, or references in the margin, morocco, $3.00; calf, $2.80; roan, $2.00; references between verses, with gilt rims and clasps, $3.00. Postage 20 cts.
4. MINION, references between the verses, roan, $2.50. Postage 25 cts.
5. MINION, 8vo.; marginal ref., flat and clear type, roan, $2.50.
6. TESTAMENTS, roan, gilt, smallest 25 cts; larger, 33 cts. Postage 6 cts.

Address MILES GRANT, Boston, Mass.

Price Reduced.

RESURRECTION OF THE WICKED. Discussion between M. Grant and J. T. Curry.

The advertised price of this Discussion is 25 cents, postage 2 cents. We have a quantity of them on hand, and will sell them hereafter for 20 cts., postage 2 cts. Send on your orders.

PHOTOGRAPHS OF ELD. EDWIN BURNHAM. A few copies of a large, beautiful and life-like Photograph, which the friends of Bro. Burnham will be glad to obtain. Sent by mail for $1.00. Those wishing them should order at once.

BOOKS AND TRACTS.

[illegible]

MILES GRANT'S WORKS.

Resurrection of the Wicked. Discussion with Jos. T. Curry. [illegible]

Eternal Suffering. Discussion with Dr. J. Lidd. [illegible]

Spiritualism. Discussion with J. S. Loveland, "On Spiritualism and Immortality." [illegible]

State of the Dead. Discussion with W. W. Clayton, "On the State of the Dead and the Punishment of the Wicked." [illegible]

Miles Grant's Tracts, 32 pages each. [illegible]

What is Man? A Bible view of his creation; The meaning of Soul, Spirit, Death, and Hell.

The Soul, What is it? Or a careful examination of all the uses of the words nephesh and psuche as employed in the old and new Testaments.

The Spirit, What is it? Or a careful examination of all the uses of the words ruach and pneuma as found in the old and new Testaments.

The Rich Man and Lazarus. Thief on the Cross; Souls under the Altar; [illegible]

TRACTS

Issued by the Christian Publication Society.

[illegible]

The Church not in Darkness; or, the duties of the [illegible]

The Three Worlds; or, earth, past, present, and future. [illegible]

The Last Days. A calm, scriptural, and convincing [illegible]

Plain Truths; or, Scripture and Tradition united. [illegible]

Will all Men be Saved? A pointed, pithy, earnest and conclusive argument against Universalism [illegible]

A Voice of Warning from the Four Winds. A compilation of brief and thrilling testimonies [illegible] By D. T. Taylor. 24 pages.

The New Heavens and New Earth. A collection of testimonies [illegible] By D. T. Taylor. [illegible]

Ancient Landmarks. Six tracts of four pages each, [illegible]

The Duty of Christians in the present crisis. A letter to a Christian brother, by H. Grattan Guinness; [illegible]

BOOKS PUBLISHED BY H. L. HASTINGS,

67 HANOVER STREET, BOSTON, MASS.,

Single copies sent by mail, postpaid, on receipt of the price.

The Signs of the Times; or, A Glance at Christendom as it is. By H. L. Hastings. Third edition. Enlarged. 400 pages. Cloth, extra, $1.50. Paper, 75c.

[illegible]

"I have been much impressed by the fee bold truths, the honest boldness, and the terrible strength of the whole argument, as well as by the large and valuable collection of statistic information which it contains."—Rt. Rev. J. H. Hopkins, Bishop of Vermont.

The Voice of the Church on the Coming and Kingdom of the Redeemer; or, a History of the Doctrine of the Reign of Christ on Earth. By D. T. Taylor. Revised and edited by H. L. Hastings. 6th Edition. 4[illegible] pp. 12mo. Price $1.50.

[illegible]

Spiritualism a Satanic Delusion and a Sign of the Times. By William Ramsey, D. D. Edited by H. L. H. Price, cloth, 40c. Paper, 15c.

[illegible]

Thessalonica; or The Model Church. A sketch of Primitive Christianity. By H. L. H. 24 1,000. Paper, 20c. Cloth, 30c.

[illegible]

The Great Controversy between God and Man. Its origin, progress, and end. A sketch of man's "Secession and Rebellion." By H. L. Hastings. [illegible]

[illegible]

Reasons for my Hope, and the Tokens of its Speedy Realization. By H. L. Hastings. [illegible]

[illegible]

Thessalonica and Reasons for my Hope. Bound in one volume. Cloth, 75 cents.

Looking Forward, or the Prospects of the Church; being the concluding chapter of the Signs of the Times. Paper, 20 cents.

Future Punishment, as revealed in the Scriptures, in opposition to the Three Theories of Never-ending Sin and Misery, Eternal Sleep without any Resurrection, and Universal Salvation. By H. L. Hastings. Cloth, $1. Paper, 50c.

[illegible]

Pauline Theology; or, The Scripture Doctrine of Future Punishment, as taught in the Epistles of Paul. By H. L. Hastings. [illegible]

[illegible]

The Old Paths; or, the Primitive Doctrine of a Future Life. By H. L. Hastings. [illegible]

[illegible]

Retribution; or, The Doom of the Ungodly, after the Resurrection of the Dead, Just and Unjust. By H. L. H. [illegible]

[illegible]

C. F. HUDSON'S WORKS.

Debt and Grace. Or the Doctrine of a Future Life, by C. F. Hudson. [illegible]

Christ our Life. The Scriptural Argument for Immortality through Christ alone. [illegible]

Human Destiny. A Critique on Universalism. [illegible]

The Doctrine of Endless Misery an occasion of Scepticism. [illegible]

Eternal Death in the literal sense is Eternal Punishment. [illegible]

The Rich Man and Lazarus. With remarks on Josephus. [illegible]

The Rights of Wrong; or, is Evil Eternal? With Reply to Dr. Menard. [illegible]

Reviewers Reviewed. New edition with replies to articles in the Quarterly, [illegible]

JACOB BLAIN'S WORKS.

Death not Life; or, The Destruction of the Wicked. [illegible]

Glad Tidings; or, Bible Proof that Woe and Sin are to end [illegible]

The Wicked not Immortal. Two hundred texts [illegible]

Bible Meaning of the Word Hell. 3c.

Endless Misery not a Bible Doctrine. 3c.

Smoke of Torment and Unquenchable Fire Explained. 1c.

[illegible]

Bible Meaning of Forever and Everlasting. 1c.

Letter of Rev. John Foster on Future Punishment. [illegible]

S. S. BREWER'S TRACTS.

The Kingdom of God and the Signs of the Times. [illegible]

The Days we Live in. Price 10c, postage 2c.

The Seven Seals. An Exposition of the Sixth Chapter of Revelation. [illegible]

The Slaying of the Witnesses. [illegible]

The Great Image soon to be dashed to pieces. [illegible]

The Two-Horned Beast. [illegible]

The Rich Man and Lazarus. [illegible]

[illegible] MILES GRANT. [illegible]

For the World's Crisis.

BIBLE READINGS.

'Tis one thing now to read the Bible through,
And another thing to read, to learn and do;
'Tis one thing now to read it with delight,
And quite another thing to read it right.
Some read it with design to learn to read,
But to the subject pay but little heed.
Some read it as their duty once a week,
But no instruction from the reading seek;
Whilst others read it with but little care,
With no regard to how they read, nor where.
Some read Bible as history, to know
How people lived three thousand years ago:
Some do read because their neighbors do,
To see how long 't will take to read it through;
Whilst others read, or rather in it look,
Because perhaps they have no other book.
Some read it for the wonders that are there,
How David killed a lion and a bear;
Some read the blessed Book they don't know why,
It somehow happens in their way to lie;
Whilst others read it with uncommon care,
But all to find some contradiction there.
Some read it as though it did not speak to them,
But to the people at Jerusalem.
Some read it as a book of mysteries,
And wont believe the very thing he sees;
Whilst others read to be in great repute,
By showing others how they can dispute.
Some read with father's specs upon his nose,
And sees the thing just as his father goes.
Some read through Calvin, Campbell, Coke, or Scott,
And think it means exactly what they thought.
And others read the book through H. Ballou,
And if it cross his track it can't be true;
Some through Swedenborg or A. J. Davis,
And say what they thought will surely save us;
Whilst others read through Synods not a few,
And do whatever they are told to do.
Some read to prove a pre-adopted creed,
Thus understand but little what they read;
For every passage in the book they bend
To make it suit that all important end!
So many people in these latter days
Have read the Bible in so many ways,
Thus few do tell which system is the best,
For every party contradicts the rest.
But after all the jangling now displayed,
It's from the God of love in truth is laid,
And given to man for his eternal good,
When it is read aright and understood.
It proves no heterogeneous mass,
But reaches all of every class;
And shows to all the sects disgust,
That Adam was composed of air and dust.
And from thence onward, to the goal of rest,
The land of promise for the just and blest;
So read the title by the truth conveyed,
Secure the life and country there displayed.
The Bible is a curious book,
If through old Babylonish eyes we look;
And often like a fiddle we hear said,
With varied tunes as Paginini played;
And this indeed no misconstruction brings,
As tunes, so creeds, are made by changing strings.
How readest thou? LUKE 10: 26.

Warsaw, Ind. C. S. W.

For the World's Crisis.

DO GOOD.

"But whoso hath this world's good, and seeth his brother have need, and shutteth up his bowels of compassion from him, how dwelleth the love of God in him?"

I would like to have the brethren and sisters give this more than a passing notice, as it is from a poor worn-out soldier of the cross, whose sands of life are nearly run, and in a few days, unless the Master comes, I must be borne to my long home. And as it will probably be the last I may ever write, I pen it for the good of the church. Please read and profit by it.

In the above heading is a question asked, and can any of us answer it? Do we ever see a Sister, poor in this world, struggling hard for the necessary comforts of this life, and cannot get them; and do we ever extend the friendly hand and open the purse? This question never would have been asked if it had not been for our instruction. Says the blessed Master, "Inasmuch as ye have done it to one of the least of these, ye have done it to me." Now mark, if Jesus were here, and you saw that he needed something for his own good, would you go and get that which would do you no good, something that you would never use? What a sacrifice that would be, would n't it? Or would you give him the very poorest that you have?

Brethren, these are solemn inquiries. What will all your property be worth when the Master appears to judge with an impartial account? What will your answer be when he says, "I was sick, and ye visited me not, naked, and ye clothed me not, hungry, and ye fed me not"? Think for one moment; think ere it is too late.

Do you ever go to the bedside of that poor afflicted Bro. or Sr. who is sick and suffering from long-contined illness, suffering so much that life is a burden? Are you often found by their bedside soothing the aching head, administering to their wants? Do you ever kneel by them and ask the Lord to support and sustain them in their affliction, and to supply all their wants, without even thinking that you must put your hand into your pocket and give a few dollars to the suffering one? O! what a selfish world we live in. Do not you know that God wants us to act as if we believed their wants would be supplied by helping to do so ourselves? O ye who have added dollar to dollar, and land to land, do you ever think of the poor ones in the church that are suffering for a few dollars?

But, says one, the Lord will provide for all his children. Very true, he will, but do we give of our substance as he desires us, to do to others as we would have them do to us? Do not let the love of this world cheat you out of the "better land."

For one, I feel the force of these things. How many poor sick ones in the church are suffering, when there are those abundantly able to provide for their wants. Are you afraid to lend to the Lord? Are you afraid that you shall give more than Bro. A. or B.? What if they are found at the left hand? Do you want to be there too? If not, then be wise and do what you can to relieve the poor in the church. Be often found at their bedside alleviating their wants. Speak to them of the "better land." Give them a little of your substance, and let the drooping heart be cheered by the thought that you have not forgotten them.

There is true happiness in relieving the afflicted, comforting them in their sore distress, bathing the aching head, soothing the sorrows of those who for long years have been deprived of meeting in the house of prayer.

And now one word about the poor ministers of the gospel who have left their dear homes to preach Jesus to a dying world, and who often are found at the throne of grace pleading the blessing of God upon his dear family at home, that they may have the necessary comforts of life in his long absence. Do you ever think of his family when you sit down at your own table loaded with rich dainties, so sweet to your taste? Go with me just across the other street. There is a little cottage. Within is a wife and three or four small children. The husband and father is absent. Where has he gone? To the war? No; the Master has called him into his vineyard, and he has to leave the companion of his bosom and the dear little olive plants that the Lord has given him, and with tearful eyes fondly bid them adieu, to go forth into a cold, unfriendly world, while wife stays at home laboring for the support of herself and little ones; and often does the midnight hour find her with aching brow earnestly engaged in the arduous work of providing for her little family, anxiously and busily engaged in preparing their clothing and their food.

Just look upon that dear mother's face. How plain the marks of toil are seen. Hard indeed it is to be a minister's wife. See the tears fall from her eye as she thinks of their once happy home, when the dear one who now is absent could sit by her side, who made home so happy. But the Master called for more laborers. The woe for a long time was upon him. With sighs and groans he begs of the Lord to excuse him, but no, the Master says Go. Shall he obey? Lord, how can I? was the oft asked question. I am poor, unlearned, and my dear family—what can I do? But the Master calls loudly. He must obey. He goes forth into the vineyard to work. He gets but little, but the Master still says he must not stop. What will become of my family? As the mass of people cry out, The Lord will take care of thee, or, He has missed his calling. Beware how you judge!

Beware of covetousness, which is idolatry. Consider well before you judge so harshly. Says Jesus, "The poor ye have always with you, and when ye will ye may do them good." Dear Brn. and Srs., this is no idle tale. It is a living reality. If I were not a minister I should not know it so well. It is the true case, and how forcibly I feel its weight upon me, for soon I shall sleep in the dust of the earth; and let this be my last warning. Brn. and Srs., do not grasp the god-dollar so closely. Lend it to the Lord. Help the poor suffering one. Visit the sick; help them if possible; cheer the broken heart; search out the poor; do all you can to relieve the afflicted. And oh! may we meet yonder in glory, is the prayer of an AGED PILGRIM.

COMING OF THE SON OF MAN.

"And then shall appear the sign of the Son of man in heaven: and then shall all the tribes of the earth mourn, and they shall see the Son of man coming with power and great glory."

What a shame, that learned men should spend their pains and talents in attempts to tie down this language to the destruction of Jerusalem by the Roman armies!

I take it as an axiom,—a settled verity which demonstrates itself,—that two events which are specifically described as successive,—the one as coming after the other—cannot be the same. But if this axiom had always been observed in the interpretation of this twenty-fourth chapter of Matthew, the students of the Scriptures might have saved themselves much inconsistency and confusion, and many a misapprehension of God's word. If we ask most of our popular commentators what is meant by "the tribulation of those days," described in the twenty-ninth and preceding verses, the answer given is, that it means the calamities and sufferings of the Jews, induced by the siege and overthrow of their city and state. And if we ask them, again, what is meant by the mourning of the tribes of the earth "after the tribulation of those days," the answer is about the same,—the calamities and sufferings of the tribes of Israel in connection with the fall of their city and state! If we inquire of them what is meant by the coming of the Son of man as the lightning in the clouds of heaven, with some twinges of uncertainty they nearly all finally agree upon the reply that it means the flashing judgments which were brought upon the rebellious people of Israel by the coming of the Roman armies against Jerusalem! The coming of which the Savior speaks was to be "out of the east" towards the west, and the coming of the Roman armies was out of the west and north towards the east and south; but the reply is, No matter for that; we are not to expect all the particular circumstances to hold! The coming of which the Savior speaks is specifically said to be "after" the tribulation induced by the invasion of Palestine by the Romans, as well as "after" that great unparalleled tribulation of which the Jewish troubles were the commencement and first-fruits; but no matter for that, we are told; as though effect could go before its cause, and as if priority or succession were nothing in the interpretation of a book such as the word of God! I question, indeed, whether the annals of learning can furnish a parallel to the absurdities which characterize the great mass of our popular disquisitions upon this portion of the inspired record. No wonder that the doctrine of Christ's personal return to our world has lost so much of its weight, certainty, and rightful importance in the minds and hearts of the Church, when its great foundation-text is thus sacrificed to a false and supercilious erudition!

One of the strangest things in the world is the manner in which some people read the Bible. It would almost seem as if they turned it upside-down, and read it backwards. "Eyes have they, but they see not." They praise it, and hold it in holy regard, and insist that every body ought to have it; yet they look into it only as some recondite volume, which is a good text-book for preachers, but which is quite beyond the reach of their understanding. They adore it more for the unknown mysteries which they attribute to it, than from their personal appreciation of what their own eyes have beheld upon its pages. Many seem to view it as a sublime riddle-book, full of mystic poetry and unsearchable wisdom, rather than as a plain piece of information and advice given by a Father to his inexperienced and exposed children. And many who sit down to write commentaries upon it seem to be continually haunted with the idea that there is something recondite in every word, or that the real mind of the Spirit is not to be found in the plain import of the letter, but in some abstruse or mystic analogy which it is their business to dig after. I hold that the Bible is a book for every body, in which God speaks for the purpose of being understood by every body; that its language is conformed to the ordinary uses of speech; and that it is to be interpreted in the same common-sense way in which we would interpret the will of a deceased parent, or ascertain the meaning of a letter of business. It was not written to tax our ingenuity, or to test men's skill at learned exposition. Its design is to instruct, and in the most familiar way to express to men the mind and will of God. When Christ speaks of "the Son of man," he means the Son of man, and not the Roman armies. When he speaks of his "coming in the clouds of heaven," he means his coming in the clouds of heaven, and not the sailing of war-ships on the Mediterranean, or the march of soldiers over the fields of earth. When he says "after" the Jewish tribulations are ended, he means "after" those tribulations, and not before they began, or while they were yet in their incipiency. And when he says that all the tribes of the earth "shall see the Son of man coming in the clouds of heaven with power and great glory," expositors might as well attempt to demonstrate to me that day is night, or that white is black, as to attempt to make me believe that he means the march of an army of boorish heathen soldiers. Christ knew what he wished to say, and how to say what he meant; and I feel bound to understand him to mean just what he says. And what he here predicts respecting his coming in the clouds at the close of the tribulation no more refers to the coming of the Roman armies into Palestine than to the flight of Mahomet, or the next eclipse of the moon. He is describing the scenes of the judgment period, and nothing else.—Last Times.

For the World's Crisis.

PREACHER'S ENSAMPLES.

"Neither as being lords over God's heritage, but being ensamples to the flock."—I PETER 5: 3.

These words were written by Peter to the ministers. The latter part of the passage is what I wish to notice: "but being ensamples to the flock."

It is necessary that a person should practice what he preaches, or he becomes as a sounding brass or a tinkling symbal; his preaching has but little effect. More especially is this true with the ministers of the gospel of Jesus Christ, which is a religion of peace. Jesus was the Prince of Peace, and he practiced what he preached, even when it was in his power to have destroyed his adversaries in a moment; when his Father would have given him legions of angels for his defense.

We need not wrest words to prove this point, all admit it, but all do not admit, in point of fact, that his ministers must follow his example. They seem to think, at least some do, that they are to preach, and they neglect the practice, the most essential part; and while their preaching is well enough, their conduct exerts a more powerful influence to the contrary. While they talk peace they act war, forgetting that "the servant of God must not strive, but be gentle unto all men."

Now we not only act this contrary principle to the doctrine of peace, out of the pulpit, but it even gets into the pulpit, and the speaker shows a zeal that is not according to knowledge.

I need not say that the person that talks the doctrine of peace and does not carry it out in his every-day life, both in the pulpit and out, is an injury to the cause of religion. It is too plain to be argued, no one doubts it. Whether he knows it or not, he is nothing more nor less than a hypocrite. Such men may indeed silence in an argument, but they can never convince.

The question that is to be settled is, can this doctrine be practiced? It is not enough that we answer in the affirmative and proceed to prove it by the Bible and the history of individuals. We must do more than this; we must exemplify the doctrine; show men that the doctrine can be practiced. Jesus says, "Let your light so shine before men that they may see your good works." Logic convinces some, but not all. We must depend upon something more convincing. Let the world see that love is the principle that moves the christian.

We say, then, let him that would be successful in winning men to Christ, be sure that he has the principle in his own heart. He will no longer say, That is the way, go ye into it, but, Come, let us bow to the mild sceptre of the Prince of Peace. J. P. NELSON.

For the World's Crisis.

TRUST.

The Holy Scriptures teach us that trust in the Lord—simple, child-like trust,—is an excellent grace, and we are frequently exhorted, and even commanded, to put our trust in God, to cast all our care upon him, to lay our burdens at his feet and be happy.

Trust is a beautiful thing in theory, and when brought out into practical life, it is even more beautiful.

Mrs. Grace Reliance, an acquaintance of ours, is a marked example of this trust. No one who is intimately acquainted with her, will assert, either that such trust is impossible, or that it is not a most desirable attainment. In her earlier years she was poor, and during the most of her life, her circumstances and her health have not been the most desirable. Naturally, her temper is violent, and her will obdurate, and she is extremely proud.

We state these facts for the purpose of removing the objections so frequently made and put in words like these: "Oh! any one could be good if they were situated as Mrs. So and So is. Place me where they are, give me what they have, and I will be, the wings excepted, an angel." Mistaken soul! With a nature no worse and advantages almost infinitely better than those possessed by Mrs. Reliance, many a woman has been a proud, cross, unhappy wretch—a torment to herself and the weakness, if not the utter ruin of her husband.

But to return. Many years since, with a fretful mind, aching heart and shoulders weighed down with cares, Mrs. R. determined to try the Lord and prove his word respecting trust. Casting herself, with all her sins and sorrows, her cares and burdens, upon the word alone, she experienced immediate and perfect relief. The word was life, and the life was light. Many persons of our acquaintance have gone so far as that, but, they have soon wavered and fallen back; or like Peter, doubted and quickly sunk. But Mrs. R. has pursued the even tenor of the way of trust for years and years. To her Christ is always precious, his cause ever dear, and the means of grace pleasant. She never frets at an accident, never scolds, is never unduly excited, is always pleasant, yes always pleasant to every one. Her life is beautiful; trust does not make her sanctimonious. She has none of the stand-thou-there-for-I-am-holier-than-thou art about her. Trust does not make her negligent of her person or house. Trust does not make her unsociable or unneighborly. Trust does not carry her away off into some sublimated and airy region of bliss, where she imagines the angels sing and the saints shout, but it brings paradise down into her heart and home.

Trust makes her strong and wise and good. She sees God always; feels his presence and his love as an atmosphere; believes that he knows best, governs best and actually causes all things to work together for good. She is happy in her trust, as little Ida, yonder, who is romping with her father, clinging to his neck, and filling with perfect abandon into his outspread arms. She is, indeed, a child, who, after tearful wandering with an orphan's sorrow, found a true father in God.

Oh! how many are weighed down and crushed with cares and sorrows! Would that the Holy One might lead each miserable child of grief into the holy and happy Eden of trust. Rel. Telescope.—Selected by E. B. Lyon.

Newtown, Ct.

For the World's Crisis.

CAN FAITH BE SEEN?

There is an old saying, nevertheless a true one, that actions speak plainer than words. It is no evidence that we have faith to say we have faith. Our works will make it manifest. "What doth it profit, my brethren, though a man say he hath faith and have not works? Can faith save him? If a brother or sister be naked and destitute of daily food, and one of you say unto them, Depart in peace, be ye warmed and filled; notwithstanding ye give them not those things which are needful to the body; what doth it profit? Even so faith, if it hath not works, is dead, being alone."

We, brethren, profess to believe in the soon coming of our Lord. Do our works make manifest such a faith? Are we striving to lay up for ourself a treasure in heaven? or are we heaping up treasures for the last day?

There are a few willing to go out and sound the glad tidings. Some of them cannot do as much as they would, for the lack of the comforts of this life. Shall we who have this world's goods shut up our bowels of compassion from them? How dwelleth the love of God in us? Let us not love then in word nor in tongue, but in deed and in truth. Let us live up to the command of our Savior, and pray to the Lord of the harvest that he would send forth more laborers into his harvest; and when our prayers are answered, do not forget that the laborer is worthy of his hire.

We need to beware lest we through covetousness and the love of the world, make shipwreck of our faith and thereby lose our inheritance. S. BOSFORD.

For the World's Crisis.

BEAUTIFUL ZION.

Beautiful Zion, built above,
Beautiful city that I love;
Beautiful gates of pearly white,
Beautiful temple, God its light.
He who was slain on Calvary
Opens those pearly gates to me.

Beautiful heaven, where all is light,
Beautiful angels, clothed in white;
Beautiful strains that never tire,
Beautiful harps through all the choir,
There shall I join the chorus sweet,
Worshiping at the Savior's feet.

Beautiful crowns on every brow,
Beautiful palms the conquerors show;
Beautiful robes the ransomed wear,
Beautiful all who enter there.
Thither I press my weary feet,
There shall my rest be long and sweet.

Beautiful thrones of Christ our King,
Beautiful songs the angels sing;
Beautiful rest, all wanderings cease,
Beautiful home of perfect peace.
There shall my eyes the Savior see;
Haste to this heavenly home with me!

For the World's Crisis.

RESTITUTION OF BEASTS IN THE KINGDOM.

What is meant by the kingdom of God? In the 25th chapter of Matthew we have, in the Savior's own words, a clear allusion to that state. 34th ver.,—"Come, ye blessed of my Father, inherit the kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world." This kingdom, then, which the saints are to inherit, is one prepared for them at the creation. Now all the dominion which was given in that state was "over the fish of the sea, and over the fowl of the air, and over every living thing that moveth upon the earth." Here is the government delegated to man originally; and that is to be restored, as I understand the word.

Now what was the peculiar condition of things as there arranged? We will read again, Gen. 1: 30,—"And to every beast of the earth, and to every fowl of the air, and to every thing that creepeth upon the earth, wherein there is life, I have given every green herb for meat; and it was so." Now one of two things is here settled: either there were no beasts, which we call carniverous, then existing, or they then fed on vegetable matter. If they existed then, and did thus live, they can do so in the "restitution," if they are there. As to their being needed there, I think that may be left safely to the Lord. He put them in the first paradise, and he may think it best to have them in the paradise restored.

Some have thought that certain kinds of beasts would not be in the kingdom, because their teeth are not now suited to live on vegetables. We think this objection vanishes when we learn, as above, that all beasts thus lived in Adam's time.

Yours in the love of truth,
Brooklyn, Ct. THOS. HUNTINGTON.

A TEMPERANCE FABLE.

The rats once assembled in a large cellar, to devise some method of safety in getting the bait from a small trap which lay near, having seen numbers of their friends and relations snatched from them by its merciless jaws. After many long speeches, and the proposal of many elaborate but fruitless plans, a happy wit, standing erect, said, "It is my opinion that, if with one paw we can keep down the spring, we can safely take the food from the trap with the other." All the rats present loudly squealed assent, and slapped their tails in applause. The meeting adjourned and the rats retired to their homes; but the devastations of the trap being by no means diminished, the rats were forced to call another "convention." The elders, just assembled, had commenced their deliberations, when all were startled by a faint voice, and a poor rat with only three legs, limping into the ring, stood up to speak. All were instantly silent; stretching out the bleeding remains of his leg, he said, "My friends, I have tried the method, and you see the result. Now let me suggest a plan to escape the trap—do not touch it!"

DELICACY IN CONVERSATION.—A maxim of Bruyere's is going the rounds of the English newspapers. It will do for New York:—

"There is speaking well, speaking easily, speaking reasonably. It is offending against the last to speak of entertainments before the indigent; of sound limbs and health before the infirm; of houses and lands before one who has not so much as a dwelling; in a word, to speak of your prosperity before the miserable. This conversation is cruel, and the comparison which naturally arises in them betwixt their condition and yours is excruciating."

AN ECCENTRIC CHARACTER.

The Israelite translates from the Lebanon the following interesting incident: "Rabbi Saphir from Jerusalem writes: Whilst I was in Sana, Yeman, there lived there a maker of earthern tobacco pipes, who presented himself before the ecclesiastical court, saying: 'An angel appeared to me in a vision of the night, ordering me to divorce my wife, and retire to a solitary place, prepare myself, and then travel about in the cities of Israel, calling upon them to repent, and announce to them that the time of their redemption is nigh!' The ecclesiastical court did not discourage him; and the tidings bearer forthwith took his staff and scrip, and dwelt away from the city, in a solitary place. He did not salute any man, nor did he answer when saluted, but proclaimed to all passers by, and wrote to all of little faith in Yemen: 'Be incessant in your prayers, and rouse yourselves to repentance; for Israel's salvation is nigh, and our redemption will not tarry.' He does not lodge in any city over night, does not eat food prepared by any man, and has no intercourse with any human being. His food is dry bread, which he bakes himself, and he drinks water out of a gourd. Many are the feats and wonderful things ascribed to this man, which I, however, will not repeat, as I know the credulity of the people."—Ex.

GOD'S JUDGMENTS IN OUR PRESENT CALAMITIES.—These great and terrible judgments had long been predicted by distinguished citizens and statesmen, who pointed to the coming whirlwind of Divine vengeance, and raised the warning voice as if they had been almost inspired; but our nation rushed madly on in its career of guilt and shame, until God shook down upon it the "bolted fires" of his wrath, as a just penalty for its sins. Long, long ago, Jefferson exclaimed, "I tremble for my country when I reflect that God is just. One day of American slavery is worse than a thousand years of that which we rose in arms to oppose. The Almighty has no attribute which can take sides with us in such a contest. And his justice will not sleep forever." What words could have been more prophetic or appropriate?—Extract.

WHAT IT COSTS TO SMOKE.

Who can afford to smoke cigars? We copy the following from one of our exchanges. It may set some of our readers thinking:—

"We met an intelligent and economical gentleman at the State Fair at Rochester, who had just built a three thousand dollar smoke house. He was induced to do so for the following reasons: Finding, many years ago, that the habit of smoking was injuring his health, he discontinued the practice, although it cost him many a severe effort. He was subsequently encouraged, however, at the pecuniary saving it was constantly effecting.

By an accurate arithmetical calculation, he ascertained that the daily cost of cigars, with annual interest would amount to over three thousand dollars in twenty years. Having already effected that saving, he concluded to build a handsome dwelling. His friends often inquiring, 'How can you afford to build so good a house?' he invariably answered, 'This is my smoke house; the amount I have saved in not puffing $3,000 to the wind."

SECRET OF ELOQUENCE.

I owe my success in life to one single fact, namely: At the age of twenty-seven I commenced, and continued for years, the process of daily reading and speaking upon the contents of a historical or scientific book. These off-hand efforts were made sometimes in a corn-field, at others in the forest, and not unfrequently in some distant barn, with the horse and cow for my auditors. It is to this early practice in the great art of all arts that I am indebted for the primary and leading impulses that stimulated me forward, and shaped and moulded my entire subsequent destiny. Improve, then, young gentlemen, the advantages you enjoy. Let not a day pass without exercising your powers of speech. There is no power like that of oratory. Cæsar controlled men by exciting their fears; Cicero, by captivating their affections, and swaying their passions. The influence of the one perished with its author; that of the other continues to this day.—Henry Clay.

PUNCTUALITY.

Among mechanics, punctuality is a great desideratum. Show us a mechanic who will get our work done by the time specified, and we will cherish him as the apple of our eye. But to the mechanic who makes us call twice (fire and sickness excepted) we bid farewell—"a long farewell"—he is not the man for our money. The mechanic gains nothing by false promises except a bad name. In order to grasp at all the work in the neighborhood, many a mechanic will promise, when he knows it is not in his power to perform. What is such a man but a liar? To say nothing of the vice of lying, than which there is nothing more low and contemptible, the mechanic, in the end, gets far less work by false promises than he would by a strict adherence to the truth. Punctuality in a mechanic is the soul of business, the foundation of prosperity, and the security of a good reputation.—Ex.

ARE YOU HAPPY?—If you are happy, give God the glory. He is the author of all our blessings. From him comes every good and perfect gift. Praise him for all the happiness you have. But if you are not happy, may it not be owing to some one of the following reasons: Have you not put happiness before duty? This is the mistake of many. Happiness, like a good name, follows right living. Duty is the road. Happiness is the pleasant city at the end of that road. Have you not thought too much of your own happiness, and too little of that of others? He that watereth shall be watered. Think of others. Live for others.

LONG AND POWERLESS PRAYERS.—A pastor at our elbow has just stated, in his description of the religious services in a congregation, (the name of which we omit, for it is not a thousand miles distant), that the prayers of the members, in their social meetings, are the ablest, longest, and most powerless of any he has ever known. In answer to our pleasant question whether the lack of power is to be attributed to the "ability," he answers: "The prayers exhaust themselves by their length." Will our excellent and yet "long-praying" friends make a note?—Buffalo Advocate.

CLARIFIED MOLASSES.—Common molasses may be clarified and rendered much more palatable by heating it over the fire and pouring in sweet milk in the proportion of one pint to a gallon of molasses. When the molasses boils up once, the albumen in the milk collects all the impurities in a thick scum upon the top, which must be carefully removed, and the molasses is then fit for use. Bullock's blood is also used for this purpose, but milk is more agreeable in many ways for domestic use.—Scientific American.

KICKING COWS.—For kicking cows, take a short strap and fasten the ends together. Next prepare a pin of some soft wood, about six or eight inches long, one and a half inches in diameter. Take the cow by the off fore leg, and double it at the knee joint, close; pass the strap or loop over the knee, pressing it back until you can insert the pin between that and the knee joint, and she cannot kick.—Ex.

Hygiene.

"This is for your health."—Paul.

TALKS ABOUT HEALTH.

BY DIO LEWIS, M. D.

A WORD TO MY LEAN FRIENDS.

Readers of the The Independent may recollect a brief article from my pen under the heading, "A Word to my Fat Friends." Many persons have written me about it, asking various questions. The point of the letter-writer, however, has generally been this: "You have told us what fat people should do to become thin; can you tell us now what lean people should do to become plump and seemly?"

My purpose at this time is to answer this question.

1st. Be thankful that you are not fat. Man's body is designed for use. Lean, flexible, active folks should be duly grateful that they do not waddle, wheeze, and sweat. Besides, your chance for a long life is, on the whole, better than that of the fat man. So gratitude, that your case is no worse, is your first duty.

2d. You must begin the consideration of your emaciation with the physiological fact that the quantity and quality of your flesh depend upon the character of your digestion.

The dyspeptic and consumptive eat enormous quantities of nutritious food, but grow thinner day by day. Lean people are, not unfrequently, great eaters; but the food is not appropriated. Such bodies are like our great peninsula army, which, receiving constant supplies of men and horses, constantly decreased in size and strength. So my dear shadows, you see we must determine, first, what will give you more thorough digestion and assimilation. You probably eat too much. Remember it is not the quantity eaten, but that digested, which determines your flesh and strength. Eat less! And as the saliva plays a very important part in the function of digestion, masticate thoroughly, drinking little or nothing by way of helping the food into your stomach.

3d. Eat but twice a day, and, unless in the midst of hard labor, let the second meal come as early as two or three o'clock. So important do I regard the two-meal-a day system for certain classes of invalids, that I rarely prescribe for a consumptive or dyspeptic without making the rule imperative. If the patient is to eat twenty or even twenty-five ounces of food per day, it is greatly better to eat it in two meals. And I may add, that for all classes of persons, I believe it would prove a great advantage, in a physiological point of view, to change from the present system to two meals a day. I wish I had space to give my reasons for this at length, as I have in another place.

4th. For breakfast, eat coarse bread, cream, and baked sweet apples; for dinner, beef or mutton (not veal or lamb) with coarse bread, potatoes, and all the vegetables of the season, except tomatoes; for desert, use fruit ad libitum. If possible, sleep a little after dinner.

5th. You must sleep in a pure atmosphere; go to bed as early as nine o'clock, and, rising by six, walk slowly in the open air half an hour or more, drinking two or three tumblers of cold water.

6th. Spend the evening in social enjoyment. Happiness with laughter are the best friends of digestion.

7th. Live as much as possible in the open air, never forgetting that after the food has been well digested in the stomach, it must mingle with a good supply of oxygen in the lungs before it can be transformed into the tissues of the body. Bad food with a pure air will make flesh faster than the best food with an impure atmosphere.

8th. Bathe frequently, that the effete matter in the system may easily escape, and thus afford the best opportunity for the deposition of the new material.

9th. If married, cultivate the quiet sentiments of domestic life. If unmarried, and of proper age and health, seek in this most perfect and satisfactory of all earthly relations that freedom from the fret and discontent of life which only a true life can give.—New York Independent.

NO MEDICINE.

The following is a sketch of the conversation said to have passed between Thomas Jefferson and D. P. Thompson, when about establishing the University of Virginia:

"Do you design a Medical Department in the University?"

"I think not. Anatomy, to be sure, is a science; but I have no confidence in Materia Medica, which I have long since banished from my family, choosing rather to rely on nursing and nature for a cure. My attention was first called to this subject when I was Minister to France. During my residence in Paris, my daughter was seized with a typhus fever, and I sent for a physician, who was called the most eminent and successful one in the city. He came, examined the patient, gave some directions about nursing, and departed, giving no medicine and leaving none to be given. The same course was taken the next day, and the next, when growing uneasy, I said to him:

"Doctor, you don't appear to be doing anything for my daughter. What is the reason?"

"The reason is, I wish her to get well. I had supposed you knew what my system of practice was, or you would not have sent for me."

"No; what is it?"

"To have the most careful nursing, leave the disease to wear itself out, and let nature do the rest, but give no medicine."

"Well, sir, though still uneasy, I acquiesced in the course, and the result was, my daughter recovered with a constitution uninjured by mineral medicine." Since then—a period of nearly thirty years—I have been my own doctor, and scrupulously following the system of this French physician, have practiced not only in my own family, but among the colored people on my plantation, taking them all through the worst of fevers, and never losing a single patient."—Health Journal.

COLD BEDROOMS.

Every idea given forth by writers of deep thought and deep experience, should be duly considered by those of less knowledge. The subject of health is of paramount importance to the welfare of the human race. We are too apt, in the hurry of business pursuits, to overlook the causes which oftentimes produce disease and premature death. Did we pay more attention to what we are too apt to consider little things, we should doubtless be much healthier than we are, and as a consequence, need the physician's advice less.

Much has been written upon the deleterious effects engendered by sleeping in heated rooms; but still we heed not the admonitions of the wise in this respect, and when we awaken with a sick headache, we attribute it to every other cause but the true one, and resort to medical remedies for its removal. Many persons prefer warm sleeping-rooms, because "it is more comfortable," little dreaming that they are to be more uncomfortable in consequence during the day.

Now we believe that a person accustomed to undress in a room without a fire, and seek repose in a cold bed, will not experience the least inconvenience, even in the severest weather. Simply for this reason: The natural heat of the body will speedily render us more comfortably warm than though we slept in a heated apartment, and we shall not be liable to a sensation of chilliness as soon as the artificial heat is dissipated. But this is not all; we shall be more robust and far less susceptible to the sudden changes of the atmosphere so prevalent in this climate. We have practiced sleeping in a cold room for many years, and attribute our uniform good health to this cause alone.—Ex.

TOBACCO SMOKING.

BY A LADY SIXTY-FOUR YEARS OLD.

In my 28th year, I was advised by my husband to acquire the habit of smoking tobacco for the purpose of removing a severe pain in the stomach. I followed his advice and continued the habit until eight years ago. I became convinced that it injured my nerves, and should be abandoned. It had acquired great strength, and I did not like to abandon it.

In a short time after this conviction was received, I saw it to be a sin, and if my expectation of being saved was to be realized, I must abandon the use of tobacco. A severe struggle arose in my mind. I could not readily renounce the practice. I had to resort to the throne of grace, and make it a subject of earnest prayer.

Some days after the conflict the Lord heard and answered my prayer. I obtained by the divine aid the victory. Praise be given to God. From that hour the desire vanished. Although other persons smoke around me, it is no temptation. God has delivered. If I again repeat the indulgence, I am assured that my title to heaven will be lost. . . . I bless God that he has delivered me from the sin of smoking tobacco. I would that others, who are slaves to this habit, would make it a subject of prayer, and I make no doubt they would be delivered. The use of tobacco any way, is dirty, and to me sinful. May all walk in the light, as Christ is in the light.

CHLOE BROOKS.

Huntsville, Ohio, Aug. 3, 1863.

—Herald of Gospel Liberty.

For the World's Crisis.

From Bro. Stephen Shields.

BRO. GRANT:—I am forty-one years old the fourth day of March, 1864. Out of that number of years I have used tobacco over thirty-seven of them, at a cost of about $300. Now I am resolved, by the grace of God, to abandon the use of it entirely. Are there not some of the brethren that will sign their names with mine? Come, I have used it longer than any of you, thirty-seven years and a half out of forty-one. Don't say you can't, for I know better. If I can quit it, you can.

[Let every reader who uses tobacco, follow the noble example of Bro. Shields.—ED.

WOOLEN FLANNEL.

We have heard some persons say that their feet have been kept as warm with cotton as with woolen stockings; and there are some persons who cannot wear woolen flannel next the skin without suffering from cutaneous irritation. There are exceptions to all general rules, but undoubtedly woolen flannel affords the best clothing to be worn next the skin in our variable climate for at least nine months in the year. But white flannel is just as good for shirts as colored flannel. The cause of flannel fulling and becoming thick is owing to the rubbing which it receives in washing, and flannels of all colors full up (felt) under similar treatment. All broadcloth dyed in the wool is fulled after it is colored. Flannels should never be rubbed upon a wash-board. The best way to wash flannels is to steep them in some strong soap-suds for about half an hour, then squeeze them between the hands for a short period, rinse thoroughly in warm water and hang them out to dry without wringing.

THE ART OF WALKING.—In a graceful human step, the heel is always raised before the foot is lifted from the ground, as if the foot were a part of a wheel rolling forward; and the weight of the body, supported by the muscles of the calf of the leg, rests for the time on the fore part of the foot and toes. There is then a bending of the foot to a certain degree. But when strong wooden shoes are used, or any shoes so stiff that it will not yield and allow the bending of the foot, the heel is not raised at all until the whole foot rises with it; so that the muscles of the calf are scarcely used, and in consequence soon dwindle in size, and almost disappear.

CURE FOR HYDROPHOBIA.—The Albany Evening Journal publishes the following alleged infallible cure for hydrophobia. As physicians hold the disease incurable, there can of course be no harm in trying it:

"Dissolve a pint of common table salt in a pint of boiling water, scarify the part affected freely, then apply the salt water with a cloth, as warm as the patient can bear it, repeating the same for at least an hour.

The same recipe has been successfully applied for the bite of a rattlesnake."

☞ Keep the feet dry and warm, and we may snap our fingers in joyous triumph at disease and the doctors.

☞ Water is the best drink. Exercise and pure air the best medicine.

The World's Crisis

AND SECOND ADVENT MESSENGER.

TERMS:

A single copy, one year	$2.00
A single copy, six months	1.00
A single copy, three months	.50
5 copies, six months, when sent to one address	4.50
10 copies, six months, when sent to one address	8.00
20 copies, six months, when sent to one address	15.00
30 copies, six months, when sent to one address	22.00

PAYABLE IN ADVANCE.

These terms, allowing a subscription of 50 cents for three months, place the paper within reach of all who are able to pay any thing. The reduction in price, where five or more papers are sent to one address, enables subscribers, by combining, to receive a large number at reduced rates; thus supplying the poor in their neighborhood.

We propose that those who have ability, when sending their own subscriptions, also send what they are willing to give to aid in circulating the Crisis among the poor who we have always with us.

POSTAGE.—The postage, in the United States, on each single copy of the Crisis, is 20 cents a year, payable quarterly, in advance, at the office of delivery.

RULES FOR CORRESPONDENTS.—Over all matters not intended for publication, write PRIVATE.

Over all business matters, write BUSINESS.

Over all articles for the paper, write FOR THE CRISIS.

All articles should be accompanied by the writer's name, for the Editor's information, even if it is not published.

When the names of new subscribers are sent, please say they are new, and it will save us much labor.

PRIVATE LETTERS.—Those wishing to address the Editor on matters not connected with the office, will please write the word PRIVATE on the outside of the envelope.

Please put the business matters and appointments on a piece of paper separate from other communications.

All persons writing to the office should give DISTINCTLY and PLAINLY the Post Office, County and State at which they wish to be addressed; and all orders, subscriptions, communications and remittances, should be plainly directed to MILES GRANT, BOSTON, MASS.

PUBLISHED ALSO AT THE SAME OFFICE,

THE YOUNG PILGRIM,

A NEW ILLUSTRATED SUNDAY SCHOOL PAPER,

DEVOTED TO

The Interests of our Children and Youth.

TERMS:

For a single copy, 25 cents a year; and at the same rate for any number of copies under ten.

10 copies, when sent to one address	$2.00
20 copies, when sent to one address	3.50
30 copies, when sent to one address	[illegible]
40 copies, when sent to one address	[illegible]
50 copies, when sent to one address	8.00
100 copies, when sent to one address	15.00

PAYABLE ALWAYS IN ADVANCE.

POSTAGE.—(12 cents a year, for every single copy, and the same for every 10 copies or less to one address) must be paid quarterly in advance, at the office where the paper is received.

All communications and remittances should be addressed to THE YOUNG PILGRIM, Crisis Box, Boston, Mass.

For the World's Crisis.

BIBLE READINGS.

'Tis one thing now to read the Bible through,
And another thing to read, to learn and do:
'Tis one thing now to read it with delight,
And quite another thing to read it right.
Some read it with design to learn to read,
But to the subject pay but little heed.
Some read it as their duty once a week,
But no instruction from the reading seek;
Whilst others read it with but little care,
With no regard to how they read, nor where.
Some read Bible as history, to know
How people lived three thousand years ago:
Some do read because their neighbors do,
To see how long 't will take to read it through;
Whilst others read, or rather in it look,
Because perhaps they have no other book.
Some read it for the wonders that are there,
How David killed a lion and a bear;
Some read the blessed Book they don't know why,
It somehow happens in their way to lie;
Whilst others read it with uncommon care,
But all to find some contradiction there.
Some read it as though it did not speak to them,
But to the people at Jerusalem.
Some read it as a book of mysteries,
And wont believe the very thing he sees;
Whilst others read to be in great repute,
By showing others how they can dispute.
Some read with father's specs upon his nose,
And sees the thing just as his father goes.
Some read through Calvin, Campbell, Coke, or Scott,
And think it means exactly what they thought.
And others read the book through H. Ballou,
And if it cross his track it can't be true;
Some through Swedenborg or A. J. Davis,
And say what they thought will surely save us;
Whilst others read through Synods not a few,
And do whatever they are told to do.
Some read to prove a pre-adopted creed,
Thus understand but little what they read;
For every passage in the book they bend
To make it suit that all important end!
So many people in these latter days
Have read the Bible in so many ways,
Thus few do tell which system is the best,
For every party contradicts the rest.
But after all the jangling now displayed,
It's from the God of love in truth is laid,
And given to man for his eternal good,
When it is read aright and understood.
It proves no heterogeneous mass,
But reaches all of every class;
And shows to all the sects disgust,
That Adam was composed of air and dust.
And from thence onward, to the goal of rest,
The land of promise for the just and blest,
So read the title by the truth conveyed,
Secure the life and country there displayed.
The Bible is a curious book,
If through old Babylonish eyes we look;
And often like a fiddle we hear said,
With varied tunes as Paginini played;
And this indeed no misconstruction brings,
As tunes, so creeds, are made by changing strings.
How readest thou? LUKE 10: 26.

Warsaw, Ind. C. R. W.

For the World's Crisis.

DO GOOD.

"But whoso hath this world's good, and seeth his brother have need, and shutteth up his bowels of compassion from him, how dwelleth the love of God in him?"

I would like to have the brethren and sisters give this more than a passing notice, as it is from a poor worn-out soldier of the cross, whose sands of life are nearly run, and in a few days, unless the Master comes, I must be borne to my long home. And as it will probably be the last I may ever write, I pen it for the good of the church. Please read and profit by it.

In the above heading is a question asked, and can any of us answer it? Do we ever see a Sister, poor in this world, struggling hard for the necessary comforts of this life, and cannot get them; and do we ever extend the friendly hand and open the purse? This question never would have been asked if it had not been for our instruction. Says the blessed Master, "Inasmuch as ye have done it to one of the least of these, ye have done it to me." Now mark, if Jesus were here, and you saw that he needed something for his own good, would you go and get that which would do you no good, something that you would never use? What a sacrifice that would be, would n't it? Or would you give him the very poorest that you have?

Brethren, these are solemn inquiries. What will all your property be worth when the Master appears to judge with an impartial account? What will your answer be when he says, "I was sick, and ye visited me not, naked, and ye clothed me not, hungry, and ye fed me not"? Think for one moment; think ere it is too late.

Do you ever go to the bedside of that poor afflicted Bro. or Sr. who is sick and suffering from long-contined illness, suffering so much that life is a burden? Are you often found by their bedside soothing the aching head, administering to their wants? Do you ever kneel by them and ask the Lord to support and sustain them in their affliction, and to supply all their wants, without even thinking that you must put your hand into your pocket and give a few dollars to the suffering one? O! what a selfish world we live in. Do not you know that God wants us to act as if we believed their wants would be supplied by helping to do so ourselves? O ye who have added dollar to dollar, and land to land, do you ever think of the poor ones in the church that are suffering for a few dollars?

But, says one, the Lord will provide for all his children. Very true, he will, but do we give of our substance as he desires us, to do to others as we would have them do to us? Do not let the love of this world cheat you out of the "better land."

For one, I feel the force of these things. How many poor sick ones in the church are suffering, when there are those abundantly able to provide for their wants. Are you afraid to lend to the Lord? Are you afraid that you shall give more than Bro. A. or B.? What if they are found at the left hand? Do you want to be there too? If not, then be wise and do what you can to relieve the poor in the church. Be often found at their bedside alleviating their wants. Speak to them of the "better land." Give them a little of your substance, and let the drooping heart be cheered by the thought that you have not forgotten them.

There is true happiness in relieving the afflicted, comforting them in their sore distress, bathing the aching head, soothing the sorrows of those who for long years have been deprived of meeting in the house of prayer.

And now one word about the poor ministers of the gospel who have left their dear homes to preach Jesus to a dying world, and who often are found at the throne of grace pleading the blessing of God upon his dear family at home, that they may have the necessary comforts of life in his long absence. Do you ever think of his family when you sit down at your own table loaded with rich dainties, so sweet to your taste? Go with me just across the other street. There is a little cottage. Within is a wife and three or four small children. The husband and father is absent. Where has he gone? To the war? No; the Master has called him into his vineyard, and he has to leave the companion of his bosom and the dear little olive plants that the Lord has given him, and with tearful eyes fondly bid them adieu, to go forth into a cold, unfriendly world, while wife stays at home laboring for the support of herself and little ones; and often does the midnight hour find her with aching brow earnestly engaged in the arduous work of providing for her little family, anxiously and busily engaged in preparing their clothing and their food.

Just look upon that dear mother's face. How plain the marks of toil are seen. Hard indeed it is to be a minister's wife. See the tears fall from her eye as she thinks of their once happy home, when the dear one who now is absent could sit by her side, who made home so happy. But the Master called for more laborers. The woe for a long time was upon him. With sighs and groans he begs of the Lord to excuse him, but no, the Master says Go. Shall he obey? Lord, how can I? was the oft asked question. I am poor, unlearned, and my dear family—what can I do? But the Master calls loudly. He must obey. He goes forth into the vineyard to work. He gets but little, but the Master still says he must not stop. What will become of my family? As the mass of people cry out, The Lord will take care of thee, or, He has missed his calling. Beware how you judge!

Beware of covetousness, which is idolatry. Consider well before you judge so harshly. Says Jesus, "The poor ye have always with you, and when ye will ye may do them good." Dear Brn. and Srs., this is no idle tale. It is a living reality. If I were not a minister I should not know it so well. It is the true case, and how forcibly I feel its weight upon me, for soon I shall sleep in the dust of the earth; and let this be my last warning. Brn. and Srs., do not grasp the god-dollar so closely. Lend it to the Lord. Help the poor suffering one. Visit the sick; help them if possible; cheer the broken heart; search out the poor; do all you can to relieve the afflicted. And oh! may we meet yonder in glory, is the prayer of an AGED PILGRIM.

COMING OF THE SON OF MAN.

"And then shall appear the sign of the Son of man in heaven and then shall all the tribes of the earth mourn, and they shall see the Son of man coming with power and great glory."

What a shame, that learned men should spend their pains and talents in attempts to tie down this language to the destruction of Jerusalem by the Roman armies!

I take it as an axiom,—a settled verity which demonstrates itself,—that two events which are specifically described as successive,—the one as coming after the other—cannot be the same. But if this axiom had always been observed in the interpretation of this twenty-fourth chapter of Matthew, the students of the Scriptures might have saved themselves much inconsistency and confusion, and many a misapprehension of God's word. If we ask most of our popular commentators what is meant by "the tribulation of those days," described in the twenty-ninth and preceding verses, the answer given is, that it means the calamities and sufferings of the Jews, induced by the siege and overthrow of their city and state. And if we ask them, again, what is meant by the mourning of the tribes of the earth "after the tribulation of those days," the answer is about the same,—the calamities and sufferings of the tribes of Israel in connection with the fall of their city and state! If we inquire of them what is meant by the coming of the Son of man as the lightning in the clouds of heaven, with some twinges of uncertainty they nearly all finally agree upon the reply that it means the flashing judgments which were brought upon the rebellious people of Israel by the coming of the Roman armies against Jerusalem! The coming of which the Savior speaks was to be "out of the east" towards the west, and the coming of the Roman armies was out of the west and north towards the east and south; but the reply is, No matter for that; we are not to expect all the particular circumstances to hold! The coming of which the Savior speaks is specifically said to be "after" the tribulation induced by the invasion of Palestine by the Romans, as well as "after" that great unparalleled tribulation of which the Jewish troubles were the commencement and first-fruits; but no matter for that, we are told, as though effect could go before its cause, and as if priority or succession were nothing in the interpretation of a book such as the word of God! I question, indeed, whether the annals of learning can furnish a parallel to the absurdities which characterize the great mass of our popular disquisitions upon this portion of the inspired record. No wonder that the doctrine of Christ's personal return to our world has lost so much of its weight, certainty, and rightful importance in the minds and hearts of the Church, when its great foundation-text is thus sacrificed to a false and supercilious erudition!

One of the strangest things in the world is the manner in which some people read the Bible. It would almost seem as if they turned it upside-down, and read it backwards. "Eyes have they, but they see not." They praise it, and hold it in holy regard, and insist that every body ought to have it; yet they look into it only as some recondite volume, which is a good text-book for preachers, but which is quite beyond the reach of their understanding. They adore it more for the unknown mysteries which they attribute to it, than from their personal appreciation of what their own eyes have beheld upon its pages. Many seem to view it as a sublime riddle-book, full of mystic poetry and unsearchable wisdom, rather than as a plain piece of information and advice given by a Father to his inexperienced and exposed children. And many who sit down to write commentaries upon it seem to be continually haunted with the idea that there is something recondite in every word, or that the real mind of the Spirit is not to be found in the plain import of the letter, but in some abstruse or mystic analogy which it is their business to dig after. I hold that the Bible is a book for every body, in which God speaks for the purpose of being understood by every body; that its language is conformed to the ordinary uses of speech; and that it is to be interpreted in the same common-sense way in which we would interpret the will of a deceased parent, or ascertain the meaning of a letter of business. It was not written to tax our ingenuity, or to test men's skill at learned exposition. Its design is to instruct, and in the most familiar way to express to men the mind and will of God. When Christ speaks of "the Son of man," he means the Son of man, and not the Roman armies. When he speaks of his "coming in the clouds of heaven," he means his coming in the clouds of heaven, and not the sailing of war-ships on the Mediterranean, or the march of soldiers over the fields of earth. When he says "after" the Jewish tribulations are ended, he means "after" those tribulations, and not before they began, or while they were yet in their incipiency. And when he says that all the tribes of the earth "shall see the Son of man coming in the clouds of heaven with power and great glory," expositors might as well attempt to demonstrate to me that day is night, or that white is black, as to attempt to make me believe that he means the march of an army of boorish heathen soldiers. Christ knew what he wished to say, and how to say what he meant; and I feel bound to understand him to mean just what he says. And what he here predicts respecting his coming in the clouds at the close of the tribulation no more refers to the coming of the Roman armies into Palestine than to the flight of Mahomet, or the next eclipse of the moon. He is describing the scenes of the judgment period, and nothing else.—Last Times.

For the World's Crisis.

PREACHER'S ENSAMPLES.

"Neither as being lords over God's heritage, but being ensamples to the flock."—1 PETER 5: 3.

These words were written by Peter to the ministers. The latter part of the passage is what I wish to notice: "but being ensamples to the flock."

It is necessary that a person should practice what he preaches, or he becomes as a sounding brass or a tinkling symbal; his preaching has but little effect. More especially is this true with the ministers of the gospel of Jesus Christ, which is a religion of peace. Jesus was the Prince of Peace, and he practiced what he preached, even when it was in his power to have destroyed his adversaries in a moment; when his Father would have given him legions of angels for his defense.

We need not wrest words to prove this point, all admit it, but all do not admit, in point of fact, that his ministers must follow his example. They seem to think, at least some do, that they are to preach, and they neglect the practice, the most essential part; and while their preaching is well enough, their conduct exerts a more powerful influence to the contrary. While they talk peace they act war, forgetting that "the servant of God must not strive, but be gentle unto all men."

Now we not only act this contrary principle to the doctrine of peace, out of the pulpit, but it even gets into the pulpit, and the speaker shows a zeal that is not according to knowledge.

I need not say that the person that talks the doctrine of peace and does not carry it out in his every-day life, both in the pulpit and out, is an injury to the cause of religion. It is too plain to be argued, no one doubts it. Whether he knows it or not, he is nothing more nor less than a hypocrite. Such men may indeed silence in an argument, but they can never convince.

The question that is to be settled is, can this doctrine be practiced? It is not enough that we answer in the affirmative and proceed to prove it by the Bible and the history of individuals. We must do more than this; we must exemplify the doctrine; show men that the doctrine can be practiced. Jesus says, "Let your light so shine before men that they may see your good works." Logic convinces some, but not all. We must depend upon something more convincing. Let the world see that love is the principle that moves the christian.

We say, then, let him that would be successful in winning men to Christ, be sure that he has the principle in his own heart. He will no longer say, That is the way, go ye into it, but, Come, let us bow to the mild sceptre of the Prince of Peace. J. P. NELSON.

For the World's Crisis.

TRUST.

The Holy Scriptures teach us that trust in the Lord—simple, child-like trust,—is an excellent grace, and we are frequently exhorted, and even commanded, to put our trust in God, to cast all our care upon him, to lay our burdens at his feet and be happy.

Trust is a beautiful thing in theory, and when brought out into practical life, it is even more beautiful.

Mrs. Grace Reliance, an acquaintance of ours, is a marked example of this trust. No one who is intimately acquainted with her, will assert, either that such trust is impossible, or that it is not a most desirable attainment. In her earlier years she was poor, and during the most of her life, her circumstances and her health have not been the most desirable. Naturally, her temper is violent, and her will obdurate, and she is extremely proud.

We state these facts for the purpose of removing the objections so frequently made and put in words like these: "Oh! any one could be good if they were situated as Mrs. So and So is. Place me where they are, give me what they have, and I will be, the wings excepted, an angel." Mistaken soul! With a nature no worse and advantages almost infinitely better than those possessed by Mrs. Reliance, many a woman has been a proud, cross, unhappy wretch—a torment to herself and the weakness, if not the utter ruin of her husband.

But to return. Many years since, with a fretful mind, aching heart and shoulders weighed down with cares, Mrs. R. determined to try the Lord and prove his word respecting trust. Casting herself, with all her sins and sorrows, her cares and burdens, upon the word alone, she experienced immediate and perfect relief. The word was life, and the life was light. Many persons of our acquaintance have gone so far as that, but, they have soon wavered and fallen back; or like Peter, doubted and quickly sunk. But Mrs. R. has pursued the even tenor of the way of trust for years and years. To her Christ is always precious, his cause ever dear, and the means of grace pleasant. She never frets at an accident, never scolds, is never unduly excited, is always pleasant, yes always pleasant to every one. Her life is beautiful; trust does not make her sanctimonious. She has none of the-stand-thou-there-for-I-am-holier-than-thou art about her. Trust does not make her negligent of her person or house. Trust does not make her unsociable or unneighborly. Trust does not carry her away off into some sublimated and airy region of bliss, where she imagines the angels sing and the saints shout, but it brings paradise down into her heart and home.

Trust makes her strong and wise and good. She sees God always; feels his presence and his love as an atmosphere; believes that he knows best, governs best and actually causes all things to work together for good. She is happy in her trust, as little Ida, yonder, who is romping with her father, clinging to his neck, and falling with perfect abandon into his outspread arms. She is, indeed, a child, who, after tearful wandering with an orphan's sorrow, found a true father in God.

Oh! how many are weighed down and crushed with cares and sorrows! Would that the Holy One might lead each miserable child of grief into the holy and happy Eden of trust. Rel. Telescope.—Selected by E. B. Lyon.

Newtown, Ct.

For the World's Crisis.

CAN FAITH BE SEEN?

There is an old saying, nevertheless a true one, that actions speak plainer than words. It is no evidence that we have faith to say we have faith. Our works will make it manifest. "What doth it profit, my brethren, though a man say he hath faith and have not works? Can faith save him? If a brother or sister be naked and destitute of daily food, and one of you say unto them, Depart in peace, be ye warmed and filled; notwithstanding ye give them not those things which are needful to the body; what doth it profit? Even so faith, if it hath not works, is dead, being alone."

We, brethren, profess to believe in the soon coming of our Lord. Do our works make manifest such a faith? Are we striving to lay up for ourself a treasure in heaven? or are we heaping up treasures for the last day?

There are a few willing to go out and sound the glad tidings. Some of them cannot do as much as they would, for the lack of the comforts of this life. Shall we who have this world's goods shut up our bowels of compassion from them? How dwelleth the love of God in us? Let us not love then in word nor in tongue, but in deed and in truth. Let us live up to the command of our Savior, and pray to the Lord of the harvest that he would send forth more laborers into his harvest; and when our prayers are answered, do not forget that the laborer is worthy of his hire.

We need to beware lest we through covetousness and the love of the world, make shipwreck of our faith and thereby lose our inheritance. S. BOSFORD.

For the World's Crisis.

BEAUTIFUL ZION.

Beautiful Zion, built above,
Beautiful city that I love;
Beautiful gates of pearly white,
Beautiful temple, God its light.
He who was slain on Calvary
Opens those pearly gates to me.

Beautiful heaven, where all is light,
Beautiful angels, clothed in white;
Beautiful strains that never tire,
Beautiful harps through all the choir,
There shall I join the chorus sweet,
Worshiping at the Savior's feet.

Beautiful crowns on every brow,
Beautiful palms the conquerors show;
Beautiful robes the ransomed wear,
Beautiful all who enter there.
Thither I press my weary feet,
There shall my rest be long and sweet.

Beautiful thrones of Christ our King,
Beautiful songs the angels sing,
Beautiful rest, all wanderings cease,
Beautiful home of perfect peace.
There shall my eyes the Savior see;
Haste to this heavenly home with me!

For the World's Crisis.

RESTITUTION OF BEASTS IN THE KINGDOM.

What is meant by the kingdom of God? In the 25th chapter of Matthew we have, in the Savior's own words, a clear allusion to that state. 34th ver.,—"Come, ye blessed of my Father, inherit the kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world." This kingdom, then, which the saints are to inherit, is one prepared for them at the creation. Now all the dominion which was given in that state was "over the fish of the sea, and over the fowl of the air, and over every living thing that moveth upon the earth." Here is the government delegated to man originally; and that is to be restored, as I understand the word.

Now what was the peculiar condition of things as there arranged? We will read again, Gen. 1: 30,—"And to every beast of the earth, and to every fowl of the air, and to every thing that creepeth upon the earth, wherein there is life, I have given every green herb for meat; and it was so." Now one of two things is here settled: either there were no beasts, which we call carniverous, then existing, or they then fed on vegetable matter. If they existed then, and did thus live, they can do so in the "restitution," if they are there. As to their being needed there, I think that may be left safely to the Lord. He put them in the first paradise, and he may think it best to have them in the paradise restored.

Some have thought that certain kinds of beasts would not be in the kingdom, because their teeth are not now suited to live on vegetables. We think this objection vanishes when we learn, as above, that all beasts thus lived in Adam's time.

Yours in the love of truth,

Brooklyn, Ct. THOS. HUNTINGTON.

A TEMPERANCE FABLE.

The rats once assembled in a large cellar, to devise some method of safety in getting the bait from a small trap which lay near, having seen numbers of their friends and relations snatched from them by its merciless jaws. After many long speeches, and the proposal of many elaborate but fruitless plans, a happy wit, standing erect, said, "It is my opinion that, if with one paw we can keep down the spring, we can safely take the food from the trap with the other." All the rats present loudly squealed assent, and slapped their tails in applause. The meeting adjourned and the rats retired to their homes; but the devastations of the trap being by no means diminished, the rats were forced to call another "convention." The elders, just assembled, had commenced their deliberations, when all were startled by a faint voice, and a poor rat with only three legs, limping into the ring, stood up to speak. All were instantly silent; stretching out the bleeding remains of his leg, he said, "My friends, I have tried the method, and you see the result. Now let me suggest a plan to escape the trap—do not touch it!"

DELICACY IN CONVERSATION.—A maxim of Bruyere's is going the rounds of the English newspapers. It will do for New York:—

"There is speaking well, speaking easily, speaking reasonably. It is offending against the last to speak of entertainments before the indigent; of sound limbs and health before the infirm; of houses and lands before one who has not so much as a dwelling; in a word, to speak of your prosperity before the miserable. This conversation is cruel, and the comparison which naturally arises in them betwixt their condition and yours is excruciating."

AN EXCENTRIC CHARACTER.

The Israelite translates from the Lebanon the following interesting incident: "Rabbi Saphir from Jerusalem writes: Whilst I was in Sana, Yeman, there lived there a maker of earthern tobacco pipes, who presented himself before the ecclesiastical court, saying: 'An angel appeared to me in a vision of the night, ordering me to divorce my wife, and retire to a solitary place, prepare myself, and then travel about in the cities of Israel, calling upon them to repent, and announce to them that the time of their redemption is nigh!' The ecclesiastical court did not discourage him; and the tidings bearer forthwith took his staff and scrip, and dwelt away from the city, in a solitary place. He did not salute any man, nor did he answer when saluted, but proclaimed to all passers by, and wrote to all of little faith in Yemen: 'Be incessant in your prayers, and rouse yourselves to repentance; for Israel's salvation is nigh, and our redemption will not tarry.' He does not lodge in any city over night, does not eat food prepared by any man, and has no intercourse with any human being. His food is dry bread, which he bakes himself, and he drinks water out of a gourd. Many are the feats and wonderful things ascribed to this man, which I, however, will not repeat, as I know the credulity of the people."—Ex.

GOD'S JUDGMENTS IN OUR PRESENT CALAMITIES.—These great and terrible judgments had long been predicted by distinguished citizens and statesmen, who pointed to the coming whirlwind of Divine vengeance, and raised the warning voice as if they had been almost inspired; but our nation rushed madly on in its career of guilt and shame, until God shook down upon it the "bolted fires" of his wrath, as a just penalty for its sins. Long, long ago, Jefferson exclaimed, "I tremble for my country when I reflect that God is just. One day of American slavery is worse than a thousand years of that which we rose in arms to oppose. The Almighty has no attribute which can take sides with us in such a contest. And his justice will not sleep forever." What words could have been more prophetic or appropriate?—Extract.

WHAT IT COSTS TO SMOKE.

Who can afford to smoke cigars? We copy the following from one of our exchanges. It may set some of our readers thinking:—

"We met an intelligent and economical gentleman at the State Fair at Rochester, who had just built a three thousand dollar smoke house. He was induced to do so for the following reasons: Finding, many years ago, that the habit of smoking was injuring his health, he discontinued the practice, although it cost him many a severe effort. He was subsequently encouraged, however, at the pecuniary saving it was constantly effecting.

By an accurate arithmetical calculation, he ascertained that the daily cost of cigars, with annual interest would amount to over three thousand dollars in twenty years. Having already effected that saving, he concluded to build a handsome dwelling. His friends often inquiring, 'How can you afford to build so good a house?' he invariably answered, 'This is my smoke house; the amount I have saved in not puffing $3,000 to the wind."

SECRET OF ELOQUENCE.

I owe my success in life to one single fact, namely: At the age of twenty-seven I commenced, and continued for years, the process of daily reading and speaking upon the contents of a historical or scientific book. These off-hand efforts were made sometimes in a corn-field, at others in the forest, and not unfrequently in some distant barn, with the horse and cow for my auditors. It is to this early practice in the great art of all arts that I am indebted for the primary and leading impulses that stimulated me forward, and shaped and moulded my entire subsequent destiny. Improve, then, young gentlemen, the advantages you enjoy. Let not a day pass without exercising your powers of speech. There is no power like that of oratory. Cæsar controlled men by exciting their fears; Cicero, by captivating their affections, and swaying their passions. The influence of the one perished with its author; that of the other continues to this day.—Henry Clay.

PUNCTUALITY.

Among mechanics, punctuality is a great desideratum. Show us a mechanic who will get our work done by the time specified, and we will cherish him as the apple of our eye. But to the mechanic who makes us call twice (fire and sickness excepted) we bid farewell—"a long farewell"—he is not the man for our money. The mechanic gains nothing by false promises except a bad name. In order to grasp at all the work in the neighborhood, many a mechanic will promise, when he knows it is not in his power to perform. What is such a man but a liar? To say nothing of the vice of lying, than which there is nothing more low and contemptible, the mechanic, in the end, gets far less work by false promises than he would by a strict adherence to the truth. Punctuality in a mechanic is the soul of business, the foundation of prosperity, and the security of a good reputation.—Ex.

ARE YOU HAPPY?—If you are happy, give God the glory. He is the author of all our blessings. From him comes every good and perfect gift. Praise him for all the happiness you have. But if you are not happy, may it not be owing to some one of the following reasons: Have you not put happiness before duty? This is the mistake of many. Happiness, like a good name, follows right living. Duty is the road. Happiness is the pleasant city at the end of that road. Have you not thought too much of your own happiness, and too little of that of others? He that watereth shall be watered. Think of others. Live for others.

LONG AND POWERLESS PRAYERS.—A pastor at our elbow has just stated, in his description of the religious services in a congregation, (the name of which we omit, for it is not a thousand miles distant), that the prayers of the members, in their social meetings, are the ablest, longest, and most powerless of any he has ever known. In answer to our pleasant question whether the lack of power is to be attributed to the "ability," he answers: "The prayers exhaust themselves by their length." Will our excellent and yet "long-praying" friends make a note?—Buffalo Advocate.

CLARIFIED MOLASSES.—Common molasses may be clarified and rendered much more palatable by heating it over the fire and pouring in sweet milk in the proportion of one pint to a gallon of molasses. When the molasses boils up once, the albumen in the milk collects all the impurities in a thick scum upon the top, which must be carefully removed, and the molasses is then fit for use. Bullock's blood is also used for this purpose, but milk is more agreeable in many ways for domestic use.—Scientific American.

KICKING COWS.—For kicking cows, take a short strap and fasten the ends together. Next prepare a pin of some soft wood, about six or eight inches long, one and a half inches in diameter. Take the cow by the off fore leg, and double it at the knee joint, close; pass the strap or loop over the knee, pressing it back until you can insert the pin between that and the knee joint, and she cannot kick.—Ex.

Hygiene.

"This is for your health."—Paul.

TALKS ABOUT HEALTH.

BY DIO LEWIS, M. D.

A WORD TO MY LEAN FRIENDS.

Readers of the The Independent may recollect a brief article from my pen under the heading, "A Word to my Fat Friends." Many persons have written me about it, asking various questions. The point of the letter-writer, however, has generally been this: "You have told us what fat people should do to become thin; can you tell us now what lean people should do to become plump and seemly?"

My purpose at this time is to answer this question.

1st. Be thankful that you are not fat. Man's body is designed for use. Lean, flexible, active folks should be duly grateful that they do not waddle, wheeze, and sweat. Besides, your chance for a long life is, on the whole, better than that of the fat man. So gratitude, that your case is no worse, is your first duty.

2d. You must begin the consideration of your emaciation with the physiological fact that the quantity and quality of your flesh depend upon the character of your digestion.

The dyspeptic and consumptive eat enormous quantities of nutritious food, but grow thinner day by day. Lean people are, not unfrequently, great eaters; but the food is not appropriated. Such bodies are like our great peninsula army, which, receiving constant supplies of men and horses, constantly decreased in size and strength. So my dear shadows, you see we must determine, first, what will give you more thorough digestion and assimilation. You probably eat too much. Remember it is not the quantity eaten, but that digested, which determines your flesh and strength. Eat less! And as the saliva plays a very important part in the function of digestion, masticate thoroughly, drinking little or nothing by way of helping the food into your stomach.

3d. Eat but twice a day, and, unless in the midst of hard labor, let the second meal come as early as two or three o'clock. So important do I regard the two-meal-a day system for certain classes of invalids, that I rarely prescribe for a consumptive or dyspeptic without making the rule imperative. If the patient is to eat twenty or even twenty-five ounces of food per day, it is greatly better to eat it in two meals. And I may add, that for all classes of persons, I believe it would prove a great advantage, in a physiological point of view, to change from the present system to two meals a day. I wish I had space to give my reasons for this at length, as I have in another place.

4th. For breakfast, eat coarse bread, cream, and baked sweet apples; for dinner, beef or mutton (not veal or lamb) with coarse bread, potatoes, and all the vegetables of the season, except tomatoes; for desert, use fruit ad libitum. If possible, sleep a little after dinner.

5th. You must sleep in a pure atmosphere; go to bed as early as nine o'clock, and, rising by six, walk slowly in the open air half an hour or more, drinking two or three tumblers of cold water.

6th. Spend the evening in social enjoyment. Happiness with laughter are the best friends of digestion.

7th. Live as much as possible in the open air, never forgetting that after the food has been well digested in the stomach, it must mingle with a good supply of oxygen in the lungs before it can be transformed into the tissues of the body. Bad food with a pure air will make flesh faster than the best food with an impure atmosphere.

8th. Bathe frequently, that the effete matter in the system may easily escape, and thus afford the best opportunity for the deposition of the new material.

9th. If married, cultivate the quiet sentiments of domestic life. If unmarried, and of proper age and health, seek in this most perfect and satisfactory of all earthly relations that freedom from the fret and discontent of life which only a true life can give.—New York Independent.

NO MEDICINE.

The following is a sketch of the conversation said to have passed between Thomas Jefferson and D. P. Thompson, when about establishing the University of Virginia:

"Do you design a Medical Department in the University?"

"I think not. Anatomy, to be sure, is a science; but I have no confidence in Materia Medica, which I have long since banished from my family, choosing rather to rely on nursing and nature for a cure. My attention was first called to this subject when I was Minister to France. During my residence in Paris, my daughter was seized with a typhus fever, and I sent for a physician, who was called the most eminent and successful one in the city. He came, examined the patient, gave some directions about nursing, and departed, giving no medicine and leaving none to be given. The same course was taken the next day, and the next, when growing uneasy, I said to him:

"Doctor, you don't appear to be doing anything for my daughter. What is the reason?"

"The reason is, I wish her to get well. I had supposed you knew what my system of practice was, or you would not have sent for me."

"No; what is it?"

"To have the most careful nursing, leave the disease to wear itself out, and let nature do the rest, but give no medicine."

"Well, sir, though still uneasy, I acquiesced in the course, and the result was, my daughter recovered with a constitution uninjured by mineral medicine." Since then—a period of nearly thirty years—I have been my own doctor, and scrupulously following the system of this French physician, have practiced not only in my own family, but among the colored people on my plantation, taking them all through the worst of fevers, and never losing a single patient."—Health Journal.

COLD BEDROOMS.

Every idea given forth by writers of deep thought and deep experience, should be duly considered by those of less knowledge. The subject of health is of paramount importance to the welfare of the human race. We are too apt, in the hurry of business pursuits, to overlook the causes which oftentimes produce disease and premature death. Did we pay more attention to what we are too apt to consider little things, we should doubtless be much healthier than we are, and as a consequence, need the physician's advice less.

Much has been written upon the deleterious effects engendered by sleeping in heated rooms; but still we heed not the admonitions of the wise in this respect, and when we awaken with a sick headache, we attribute it to every other cause but the true one, and resort to medical remedies for its removal. Many persons prefer warm sleeping-rooms, because "it is more comfortable," little dreaming that they are to be more uncomfortable in consequence during the day.

Now we believe that a person accustomed to undress in a room without a fire, and seek repose in a cold bed, will not experience the least inconvenience, even in the severest weather. Simply for this reason: The natural heat of the body will speedily render us more comfortably warm than though we slept in a heated apartment, and we shall not be liable to a sensation of chilliness as soon as the artificial heat is dissipated. But this is not all; we shall be more robust and far less susceptible to the sudden changes of the atmosphere so prevalent in this climate. We have practiced sleeping in a cold room for many years, and attribute our uniform good health to this cause alone.—Ex.

TOBACCO SMOKING.

BY A LADY SIXTY-FOUR YEARS OLD.

In my 28th year, I was advised by my husband to acquire the habit of smoking tobacco for the purpose of removing a severe pain in the stomach. I followed his advice and continued the habit until eight years ago. I became convinced that it injured my nerves, and should be abandoned. It had acquired great strength, and I did not like to abandon it.

In a short time after this conviction was received, I saw it to be a sin, and if my expectation of being saved was to be realized, I must abandon the use of tobacco. A severe struggle arose in my mind. I could not readily renounce the practice. I had to resort to the throne of grace, and make it a subject of earnest prayer.

Some days after the conflict the Lord heard and answered my prayer. I obtained by the divine aid the victory. Praise be given to God. From that hour the desire vanished. Although other persons smoke around me, it is no temptation. God has delivered. If I again repeat the indulgence, I am assured that my title to heaven will be lost. . . . I bless God that he has delivered me from the sin of smoking tobacco. I would that others, who are slaves to this habit, would make it a subject of prayer, and I make no doubt they would be delivered. The use of tobacco any way, is dirty, and to me sinful. May all walk in the light, as Christ is in the light.

CHLOE BROOKS.

Huntsville, Ohio, Aug. 3, 1863.

—Herald of Gospel Liberty.

For the World's Crisis.

From Bro. Stephen Shields.

BRO. GRANT:—I am forty-one years old the fourth day of March, 1864. Out of that number of years I have used tobacco over thirty-seven of them, at a cost of about $300. Now I am resolved, by the grace of God, to abandon the use of it entirely. Are there not some of the brethren that will sign their names with mine? Come, I have used it longer than any of you, thirty-seven years and a half out of forty-one. Don't say you can't, for I know better. If I can quit it, you can.

[Let every reader who uses tobacco, follow the noble example of Bro. Shields.—ED.

WOOLEN FLANNEL.

We have heard some persons say that their feet have been kept as warm with cotton as with woolen stockings; and there are some persons who cannot wear woolen flannel next the skin without suffering from cutaneous irritation. There are exceptions to all general rules, but undoubtedly woolen flannel affords the best clothing to be worn next the skin in our variable climate for at least nine months in the year. But white flannel is just as good for shirts as colored flannel. The cause of flannel fulling and becoming thick is owing to the rubbing which it receives in washing, and flannels of all colors full up (felt) under similar treatment. All broadcloth dyed in the wool is fulled after it is colored. Flannels should never be rubbed upon a wash-board. The best way to wash flannels is to steep them in some strong soap-suds for about half an hour, then squeeze them between the hands for a short period, rinse thoroughly in warm water and hang them out to dry without wringing.

THE ART OF WALKING.—In a graceful human step, the heel is always raised before the foot is lifted from the ground, as if the foot were a part of a wheel rolling forward; and the weight of the body, supported by the muscles of the calf of the leg, rests for the time on the fore part of the foot and toes. There is then a bending of the foot to a certain degree. But when strong wooden shoes are used, or any shoes so stiff that it will not yield and allow the bending of the foot, the heel is not raised at all until the whole foot rises with it; so that the muscles of the calf are scarcely used, and in consequence soon dwindle in size, and almost disappear.

CURE FOR HYDROPHOBIA.—The Albany Evening Journal publishes the following alleged infallible cure for hydrophobia. As physicians hold the disease incurable, there can of course be no harm in trying it:

"Dissolve a pint of common table salt in a pint of boiling water, scarify the part affected freely, then apply the salt water with a cloth, as warm as the patient can bear it, repeating the same for at least an hour.

The same recipe has been successfully applied for the bite of a rattlesnake."

☞ Keep the feet dry and warm, and we may snap our fingers in joyous triumph at disease and the doctors.

☞ Water is the best drink. Exercise and pure air the best medicine.

The World's Crisis

AND SECOND ADVENT MESSENGER.

TERMS:

A single copy, one year	$2.00
A single copy, six months	1.00
A single copy, three months	.50
5 copies, six months, when sent to one address	4.50
10 copies, six months, when sent to one address	8.00
20 copies, six months, when sent to one address	15.00
30 copies, six months, when sent to one address	22.00

PAYABLE IN ADVANCE.

These terms, allowing a subscription of 50 cents for three months, place the paper within reach of all who are able to pay any thing. The reduction in price, where five or more papers are sent to one address, enables subscribers, by combining, to receive a large number at reduced rates; thus supplying the poor in their neighborhood.

We propose that those who have ability, when sending their own subscriptions, also send what they are willing to give to aid in circulating the Crisis among the poor who we have always with us.

POSTAGE.—The postage, in the United States, on each single copy of the Crisis, is 20 cents a year, payable quarterly, in advance, at the office of delivery.

RULES FOR CORRESPONDENTS.—Over all matters not intended for publication, write PRIVATE.

Over all business matters, write BUSINESS.

Over all articles for the paper, write FOR THE CRISIS.

All articles should be accompanied by the writer's name, for the Editor's information, even if it is not published.

When the names of new subscribers are sent, please say they are new, and it will save us much labor.

PRIVATE LETTERS.—Those wishing to address the Editor on matters not connected with the office, will please write the word PRIVATE on the outside of the envelope.

Please put the business matters and appointments on a piece of paper separate from other communications.

All persons writing to the office should give DISTINCTLY and PLAINLY the Post Office, County and State at which they wish to be addressed; and all orders, subscriptions, communications and remittances, should be plainly directed to MILES GRANT, BOSTON, MASS.

PUBLISHED ALSO AT THE SAME OFFICE,

THE YOUNG PILGRIM,

A NEW ILLUSTRATED SUNDAY SCHOOL PAPER,

DEVOTED TO

The Interests of our Children and Youth.

TERMS:

For a single copy, 25 cents a year; and at the same rate for any number of copies under ten.

10 copies, when sent to one address	$2.00
20 copies, when sent to one address	3.80
30 copies, when sent to one address	5.40
40 copies, when sent to one address	6.80
50 copies, when sent to one address	8.00
100 copies, when sent to one address	15.00

PAYABLE ALWAYS IN ADVANCE.

POSTAGE.—(12 cents a year, for every single copy, and the same for every 10 copies or less to one address) must be paid quarterly in advance, at the office where the paper is received.

All communications and remittances should be addressed to THE YOUNG PILGRIM, CANAL BOX, BOSTON, MASS.

The World's Crisis

AND SECOND ADVENT MESSENGER.

"BEHOLD, I COME QUICKLY; AND MY REWARD IS WITH ME."

WHOLE NO. 434. BOSTON, TUESDAY, JANUARY 26, 1864. VOL. XVIII.—NO. 19.

The World's Crisis

AND SECOND ADVENT MESSENGER,

Issued every Tuesday Afternoon, at

167 HANOVER STREET, BOSTON.

MILES GRANT, EDITOR.

EDITORIAL COMMITTEE:
H. L. HASTINGS, D. T. TAYLOR, H. F. CARPENTER.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEE:
H. V. DAVIS, S. S. BREWER, A. ROSS, J. G. HAMBLIN, SOLOMON HOVEY.

GEO. T. ADAMS, TREASURER.

☞ THE CRISIS is devoted to the exposition of all Bible truth; especially the doctrine of the immediate, personal coming and reign of Christ on the earth; holiness of heart; the unconscious state of the dead; their literal resurrection, and the final destruction of the wicked.

For the World's Crisis.

"OFFER PRAISE."

Lift your drooping heads, ye mourners,
Hush those minor notes of woe;
Let a nobler song inspire you
While sojourning here below.

Earth has sweet and tender music,
And the spirit, when it grieves,
Loves to tell its earnest longings
In these low and mournful keys.

But upon those heights of Zion
List those songs—that loud acclaim!
"Glory, glory in the highest,
Praise for aye the Savior's name!"

Sorrow's tear is wiped forever,
Joy is sparkling in each eye;
Lift your drooping hearts, ye mourners,
Sing, for your redemption's nigh.

Offer praise to Him who saves you,
Drive the shadows from your brow,
Tune your hearts to Heaven's music,
Learn the joyful accents now.

MAR.

"THE SIGNS OF THE TIMES."

Under the above heading, the editor and publisher of "The Vials," Torquay, England, Dec. 1st, 1863, says.—

Another Sign of the Times is the present condition of the EARTH and the AIR. No one can point out any former time in which such confusion of NATURE has been known. The four seasons of the year are jumbled into one. The state of the atmosphere is without a parallel. Furious gales and dead calms succeed each other day after day. Storm signals are flying every twelve hours out of the twenty-four. The "seas and waves are roaring." Meteors of the most extraordinary kind are constantly seen in the midnight sky. Earthquakes have begun. The SIGNS of the last times are mentioned by our Lord—famines, earthquakes—signs in the heavens—the sea and the waves roaring—men's hearts failing them for fear of those things which are coming on the earth. The Book of Revelation speaks repeatedly of earthquakes; but this is particularly observable in the case of the Seventh and Last Vial. Before the Last Vial has begun the atmosphere is affected—for the Vial is poured out upon the AIR. After that an earthquake takes place, of which it is said, —"And there was a great earthquake, such as never was since men were upon the earth; so mighty an earthquake, and so great." All these signs have appeared, of late, with unusual frequency; the climate and atmosphere are broken up in endless confusion; the sea and the waves perpetually roaring; and that "men's hearts are failing them through fear of what is coming" every one can learn who takes up any public journal. It is indeed a fact well deserving of our attention that prophecy seems to be passing into COMMON LIFE. Those ancient oracles have been for two thousand years the study or the wonder of mankind. Their grandeur and their gloom dwelt upon the mind with the effect of some solemn tale, or some magnificent painting. Men admired and wondered, but they did not TREMBLE. The picture and the story were not for them, but for future generations. But now that time is past. Those ancient oracles are no longer a picture or tale; they have passed into the sphere of our DAILY LIFE; the gloom hangs over OUR OWN heads; the ground quakes beneath OUR OWN feet; "the things that are coming on the earth" are coming upon OURSELVES. We ourselves are the "future generations" to whom we presumptuously consigned over the terrors of God's word. We see in common life the wonders and the signs which in former ages would have been looked upon as supernatural. We see all these things beginning to come to pass, and we may soon expect to see them in their full force. The Signs of the Last Times are before our eyes, and we know not how short a time may bring them to maturity. It is sometimes curious to observe the language of the public journals. They resemble a kind of running commentary upon the prophetic books of Scripture. The Times of last week spoke of the French emperor as if it had been describing the man of "dark sentences," foretold in the 8th of Daniel. The great London "jester" himself has been forced to abandon his frivolity by the ominous lowering of the skies over his head. He has become serious, and even solemn. He tells us that a STORM is coming, we know not whence, or when; and hoists the storm-signal that we may prepare against the storm. When the Book of Daniel glides into the public journals—when the licensed "jester" forgets his jests, and gives a solemn warning, and a bold one, can we doubt any longer that the times have become ominous, and that the "SIGNS" have become too conspicuous to be overlooked by any but the insane?

Another "Sign of the Times" is the political condition of the world at large, and especially of the prophetic earth. Such a position of things was never witnessed before in any age, or under any circumstances. The two greatest convulsions that ever the world has felt were those of the barbaric invasions of the Roman Empire, and of the French revolution. It will be admitted that the world has never been so shaken at any time as by those two convulsions; yet the barbaric invasion of the Roman Empire was nothing more than a coarse outbreak of physical fury; it had no depth of design—no comprehensive scheme—no great leader—no definite object. An invasion of wolves and bears would have as good a claim to be called a moral revolution as the invasion of the Goths and Vandals. It was wide and destructive, but shallow and unintelligent. It was as unintelligent as an earthquake or a flood. Again; the French revolution, though infinitely more intelligent than the barbaric invasions, was limited and undeveloped. It was the fury of a slave broken loose, avenging himself with fire and sword; not without intelligence, it is true, but without a plan, or a specific object, or a confederate. His designs are undeveloped, and, for want of confederates, his sphere of action is confined. It is far different at present. We are now arrived at the full development of the French revolution. A determination to be free has sunk into the hearts of all nations. That determination was borrowed from France, and still survives and deepens while the nation from which it was borrowed submits to despotism. But what a freedom! A freedom from every law, both human and divine. A communism of property; a subversion of government; an overthrow of all the institutions of society; and a levelling of all ranks. Such is the secret wish of millions throughout christendom. You will find it everywhere—the legitimate offspring of the "Reign of Terror." The RED MEN are as red now as in 1793 and 1848, though their faces are covered by a mask. Success in such a scheme is impossible: they know that it is impossible, and therefore they are ready for a COMPROMISE. "Let us come to terms," they say to society; and society is compelled to consent. A powerful mind has appeared amongst them—calm, secret and orderly. They have found a man who is willing to become their "Head," but who exacts as a condition the most rigid submission to ORDER. One mind must deliberate for all—one mind must regulate every movement of the millions—one man must guide the chariot of revolution, or else it shall never move from the barriers. Agree to these conditions, and the map of the world shall be revised, and a Confederate Empire of the sovereign people shall spread over christendom! They agree to the conditions, and the revolution is begun.

The speech of the Emperor Napoleon on the 5th of November is the manifesto of the General Revolution. On the 5th of November we celebrate our deliverance from gunpowder and Popery. By a huge expenditure of gunpowder we revenge ourselves for the fright which gunpowder once caused us. We blow it into the air in place of being blown into the air by it ourselves. We kill two birds with one stone, and blow away Popery at the same time. But we leave this chiefly to the boys; for the boys are wiser than the men, and keep up a wholesome remembrance of the perils which older heads have forgotten. What should we come to if the boys did not keep us awake! But on the 5th of November, Napoleon the Third delivered an address from the throne, which is justly considered as the manifesto of a NEW REVOLUTION. He used those memorable words—"The treaties of 1815 have ceased to exist." This is an embellishment—it is a literal fact—more ominous words could not have been uttered—they efface in one sentence the whole history of the century, and throw us back into the French revolution and the empire of Napoleon the First. The treaties of 1815 were the closing scene of the great revolution. By them the Napoleonic empire was cut into fragments—the revolution extinguished—and the Napoleon family buried alive in the tomb. The kings of Europe stood by, and the British ambassador stood with them—while the grave was dug—the Napoleons hurled into it alive—and the dull earthy weight of the Holy Alliance laid upon the tomb that none should open it. In spite of all the tomb was opened in December, 1848, and Napoleon the First arose in the person of Napoleon the Third. He rose wiser by experience, and began from that moment to prepare for vengeance. First he became President—then Emperor—he then led us on into the foolish and wicked Crimean war, by which he reduced Russia to a state of submission and dependence—not submission to England, but submission to France. Russia is stronger now than she was before the Crimean war, but she has learned that she can do nothing effectual without France. He, next, created an Italian kingdom; but took care to secure Nice and Savoy for himself. From the Savoy Alps he looks down upon Italy; and the whole Italian kingdom has become his vassal and his ally. He also made himself master of Rome, the city of the Cæsars, of prophecy, and of world-wide spiritual power. For just fifteen years he has been carrying on the preliminaries, and now he feels himself strong enough to throw off the mask. His iron fleet is all but completed, and will be thoroughly completed by the spring of 1864. He may safely remove the mask, and set all his opponents at defiance; and so he has done. It has been remarked by an Austrian journal that the imperial manifesto of November the 6th has been in preparation for full ten years—that it has been indicated repeatedly by the French journals themselves—and that whoever shall be overwhelmed by its results will have only himself to blame. "We are on the eve of momentous events." How little can we depend upon the public press which can discover nothing until the discovery is too late, and which has no sagacity beyond the present moment of time!

The emperor has demanded a CONGRESS with the undisguised alternative of WAR. If we refuse a congress it is to be war, and a FATAL war; so says the imperial speech. If we accept the congress it will be revolution. Austria must give up Venetia—Russia must give up the Rhine—and what is England to do? We hold both MALTA and the Mauritius under the treaty of 1815; and we shall be called upon assuredly to surrender both of them to France. They both belonged to France once, and the emperor is determined to claim them back. The iron fleet is ready, and he is beginning even now to prepare for the future quarrel. We may be assured that the imperial manifesto was levelled most especially at ourselves; and we shall have reason to recollect the fifth of November for other reasons more near at hand than the gunpowder plot.

For the present moment, however, nothing is more striking than the resurrection of the NAPOLEONIC NAME. The resurrection of the dead would hardly be more marvellous. How Europe exulted at the fall of Napoleon. How it wreaked its utmost and bitterest malice by passing a decree that Napoleon should never rise again! "No Napoleon shall ever occupy the throne of France." So said the Unholy Alliance. How we ourselves exulted after Waterloo! We had secured everlasting peace, and avenged ourselves with an everlasting revenge. O fools and blind! Did pride and vengeance ever prosper? Did God ever permit dust and ashes to pass an UNCHANGEABLE decree? Or was it ever possible for the cold narrow mind of Wellington to bring about the extinction of the enormous genius of NAPOLEON? You might as well attempt to extinguish ETNA with a drift of snow. The snow melts away into steam, and the volcano bursts out again. He who dwelleth in heaven laughed our devices to scorn—full well he knew our "pride and the naughtiness of our heart." Through his help they had slain Goliath, but we took all the honor to ourselves. We triumphed—we grew rich—we became surfeited with prosperity. In the wontonness of our hearts we went forth and slew and robbed on all sides, until no part of the East was safe from our outrage. We shed more blood and practised more cruelty in the East than ever Napoleon did in the West, and all the while we are pouring out the sickening "cant" of the "propagation of the gospel, and the amelioration of society." Such hypocrisy could not escape unpunished; and the instrument of punishment has been prepared. The treaties of 1815 have been swept away like dust—the tomb has been shattered to pieces, and Napoleon has arisen. He has placed himself at the centre of the world, and we, and all nations, are compelled to move round him like planets round the sun. That he still determines to avenge Waterloo and St. Helena we may feel perfectly assured.

OUR TIMES AND HOPES.

Nearly two thousand years have elapsed since the ascension of our Lord, and we have positively reached the time spoken of by Daniel, the prophet, thus: "Many shall run to and fro, and knowledge shall be increased." Who can doubt? "He that runneth may read" this. Still another fact is not less obvious. It is that so clearly predicted by the Savior thus: "And because iniquity shall abound, the love of many shall wax cold." The bands that bound society together, civil, social, and religious, all seem to be giving way: the time of trouble spoken of by both Daniel and our Savior is actually upon us. "Like the troubled sea, when it cannot rest, whose waters cast up mire and dirt," so is it now with the troubled masses. "There is no peace, saith my God, to the wicked." This is now the moral phase of society, and precisely our prophetic whereabouts of the Church, our nation, and the world at large. "The bride" is in exile, weeping and praying, "Even so, come, Lord Jesus." While the latter day "scoffers" in derision are saying, "Where is the promise of his coming?" Thousands are deceiving and being deceived by the delusive dream that the millennial day is softly stealing upon our world, and there shall be the much talked of golden age. Alas! for such. Between our time and that future glory of Messiah's reign there lies a region as dark as midnight, strewed with such ruined hopes and blasting terrors as this world has never known,—such a time of plagues and tribulation as never was, when all hopes based on finite good shall utterly perish, with all those who have deceived themselves thereby.

There is a most manifest blind, persistent rejection of the glorious truth, that the next great event which will mark the history of our world, make an end of Satan's usurpation, and bring in everlasting righteousness, is the appearing of our Lord Jesus Christ to establish his kingdom, in answer to that prayer he himself indited: "Thy kingdom come," the very kingdom ascribed to him, "for thine is the kingdom, the power, and the glory, forever. Amen."

No person who may be favored with grace enough to disarm himself of prejudice, and sit down as an humble learner at the feet of Christ and his Apostles, and receive their exposition of the Prophets, can resist the fact that the primitive Church was, and the true hope of the Church now is, "the glorious appearing of the great God and our Savior Jesus Christ." (Titus 2: 13.) Not until then will the Church be disenthralled and saved from all her enemies, coming out of the wilderness, "fair as the moon, clear as the sun, and terrible as an army with banners." Not until then will God's incorrigible enemies bow and confess, under the heavy pressure of his righteous judgments, and be removed as tares and cumberers of the ground. Verily, there is no other legitimate Bible hope for the people of God in its trying hour. If other hopes are entertained, they are of human origin, and never to be realized. They are but "the light of the fire, and the sparks of their own kindling." With all deference to the opinions of others, such is the modern theory of this world's conversion, and the building of Christ's everlasting kingdom in his personal absence by human instrumentality. In the light of God's immutable truth, it may safely be affirmed that God has nowhere commissioned men either to convert the world or build his kingdom proper in this world. If any doubt, let such disprove by plain, obvious scriptural testimony. Christ has commissioned and sent forth men to preach the Gospel of the kingdom, and deigned to tell us what the sure result would be, namely, "He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved, and he that believeth not shall be damned." The labors of more than eighteen hundred years, the world over, have invariably confirmed this certain result. We are forced to the conclusion that, during the present dispensation, fallen humanity will remain the same, and that the Gospel, like its author, will continue the same; nor will God, the Holy Ghost, change. Hence the results of Gospel preaching, and all other means of grace, will not be more efficient in their results than they have been in the primitive Church, and through the ages past. To what other conclusion does revelation, reason, and common sense lead? The apostle Paul certainly understood the nature of his calling, and may safely be regarded as a model minister and missionary of the Gospel. In all his writings, there is nothing to indicate that he thought his commission was to convert the world or build the kingdom of Christ Jesus. His words may be forced into such a construction, as they frequently have been. We will hear him speak for himself, thus: "I am made all things to all men, that I might by all means save some." He meddled not with things beyond his calling and measure. Would to God it were so with all who claim to be sent of Christ to teach and preach in our day.

The lameness of the various efforts to prove the world's conversion from the Sacred Oracles, prove the fallacy of that theory. Mere assumption and inference can, in no case, be admitted as evidence. Take the following specimens, which are, in substance, what lately appeared in print, to prove the world's future conversion in the present dispensation. First, to prove the world's conversion the following language is quoted: "Where sin abounded, grace did much more abound." (Rom. 5: 20.) The most that this scripture proves, is, that Divine grace so abounds, that whosoever will may be saved, and nothing more. Grace provides and reveals the means of salvation, but is not salvation itself, nor does its freeness prove that one sinner will accept of it, much less the whole world. Again, "All things are put under his feet." Very true: and therefore we must submit to be saved by His grace, or fall and perish by His righteous judgments. How does this prove the conversion of the world? Once more: "Ask of me, and I shall give thee the heathen for thine inheritance, and the uttermost parts of the earth for thy possession." (Ps. 2: 8.) Why omit the ninth verse, which explains the meaning of the eighth, and is a part of the same paragraph, and which tells what Christ will do with the unbelieving part of that world given unto him? Certainly not save them, for they will not believe, more than would the antediluvians or Sodomites. The ninth verse, so carefully avoided, clearly states what shall be the final doom of such heathens, thus: "Thou shalt break them with a rod of iron, thou shalt dash them in pieces like a potter's vessel." Does this prove, or look like the world's conversion, when the two verses are read together, as common honesty would dictate? This garbling and perverting the Sacred Scriptures to sustain a favorite but false theory, is one of the most alarming signs of our times, for which there can be no excuse or apology.

This is not the age or dispensation of the kingdom and reign of Christ, but a preparatory dispensation of the Holy Ghost to illuminate, purify, strengthen and comfort those who receive him by faith in Christ. Thus is the Lord preparing a people for himself "meet to be partakers of the inheritance of the saints in light." (Cor. 1: 12.) The fact that God is now raising up witnesses in all parts of the world to this precious truth, is certainly worthy the consideration of all.—Northern Christian Advocate.

For the World's Crisis.

A SHORT REVIEW OF THE PAST,

AND THE PROSPECTS OF THE FUTURE.

Thousands of years ago God gave the history of this world by the prophets. The question arises, Has God's word of prophecy been fulfilled? We read the history of the world in connection with prophecy, and we see it corresponds. There is harmony between prophecy and history. We have passed three of the great monarchies of earth, and the great changes in the fourth have taken place as foretold by prophets, and the signs in connection with the end have taken place; and the world is in the position morally, politically, and ecclesiastically, as foretold in prophecy, in which it is to be at the end.

What next? With diffidence I would say, I think the treaties and alliances formed and entered into at Vienna in 1815 must be broken up; then the winds, as brought to view in Rev. 7: 2, 3, will be let loose. This the Emperor of France is endeavoring to do. England says, no; but if we have arrived at the time for it, it will be done. Rome will then be a bone of contention, and in that contention it will fall and rise no more. About that time earth's rightful Lord will come and gather his saints.—Matt. 24: 30, 31. The great battle will be fought after Rome has fallen, and the Lord has gathered his saints. See Rev. 19. Read the whole chapter, but especially verses 11 to 21. After the kings of the earth have suppered upon the earnings of the poor, then the fowls of heaven will be called upon to feed upon the flesh of kings, captains, and mighty men. Then the song will be sung by the redeemed of all ages.—Rev. 11: 17.

I expect the great telegraph will be laid across the ocean soon, so that when Rome falls, all the saints will hear of it in a few seconds, and sing Alleluia, as recorded in Rev. 19: 1.

I must close here, lest I should do what I condemn in others; that is, write long articles. Dear brethren, we are down close to the opening of the seventh seal. Are we ready to give up our account, as stewards, to the Master? The Lord is calling us to action. No man will abandon the field now that has faith in the sure word of prophecy. In view of the evidence of the soon coming of Jesus, let us gird on the armor afresh. With this view of things, how precious is Jesus! In him we are safe. In him there is no condemnation. Out of him is all condemnation. Christ is all.

M. BATCHELOR.

Rutland, Vt.

THY WILL BE DONE.

'Tis hard when we are sick and poor,
And those who loved us love no more;
When riches, friends, and health are gone,
To say, "O Lord, thy will be done."

'Tis hard when those in death are laid,
O'er whom we've watched, and wept, and prayed,
The wife, the parent, sister, son,
To say, "O Lord, thy will be done."

And yet how light those sorrows be,
To His in dark Gethsemane,
Who drank the cup with stifled groan,
And said, "O Lord, thy will be done."

Help me, O Lord, like him to pray,
And from my inmost heart to say,
Though left by all I loved, alone,
Thy will, not mine, O Lord, be done.

What though my path be dark and drear?
With thou, my Savior, always near,
I will not fear, though all alone,
But say—"O Lord, thy will be done"!

Selected by R. C. R.

For the World's Crisis.

THE WOUNDED HEAD.

In Rev. 13: 3, we read as follows:—"And I saw one of his heads as it were wounded to death; and his deadly wound was healed: and all the world wondered after the beast."

An expression like one in the above text may be found in the 8th chapter of this book, at the 10th verse. It reads as follows: "And the third angel sounded, and there fell a great star from heaven, burning AS IT WERE a lamp." Now, it is evident that the Revelator did not actually see a lamp burning, but rather he saw something which had that appearance: so, in the text under consideration, the expression, "wounded as it were to death," does not indicate that the nation, government or dynasty, symbolized by this head, was completely overthrown; but that its power and resources had become nearly exhausted by the sword of some foreign or opposing power.

I wish now to show that the terms beast and head are used interchangeably; that is, both terms referring to the same government several times in this book. The reason of this, I think, is obvious. It is this: we learn from the first verse of this 13th chapter that there were seven heads seen upon the beast, one of which, as we have seen, received as it were the deadly wound. Now, I think we shall all agree that these seven heads were not all upon the stage of action at one time, but they had their rise and fall, each in succession; and also that the successive rule of the seven continued for the term of 1260 years. For proof of this position, I will refer the reader to the 17th chapter of this book and 10th verse, where the Revelator, in referring to the same governments or kingdoms as those symbolized by the seven heads, says: "And these are seven kings: five are fallen, and one is, and the other is not yet come: and when he cometh, he must continue a short space." Now, I think it will appear plain that there was but one of the seven heads upon the stage of action at the same time, and that each one of those heads, as it in its turn becomes the dominant power, must represent the beast (for the beast could not be complete without a head), and therefore when spoken of in the prophecy as upon the stage of action, would be termed the beast.

In harmony with the above position, I understand that the terms head and beast, as used in the verse under consideration, both symbolize one and the same government. To make my view plain, I will quote the verse again:—"And I saw one of his heads as it were wounded to death; and his deadly wound was healed; and all the world wondered after the beast." What beast did all the world wonder after? Evidently the wounded head, after it was healed. Two or three texts will, I think, prove the position I have taken on this point.

Rev. 13: 12, reads as follows: "And causeth the earth and them that dwell therein to worship the first beast, whose deadly wound was healed." Notice that, in the above quotation, we are assured it was the beast whose deadly wound was healed; while, in the third verse, we are told that it was one of his heads whose deadly wound was healed. Again, in the 14th verse, we read as follows: "Saying to them that dwell on the earth, that they should make an image to the beast which had the wound by a sword, and did live." In this verse we are assured again that it was the beast that received the deadly wound, and was healed; while the 3d verse of the same chapter as plainly assures us that it was one of his heads.

Now, it appears to me very plain, from the above texts, that the position I have argued regarding the use of the terms under consideration must be in harmony with the prophecy. If so, then the object I have in view can be very easily attained; and that is, to show which of the seven received, "as it were," the deadly wound. One quotation will make it plain. We find it in this same (13th) chapter of Revelation, at the 12th verse. It reads as follows: "And he exerciseth all the power of the FIRST beast in his sight,* (Whiting's trans.), and causeth the earth and them which dwell therein to worship the FIRST BEAST, whose deadly wound was healed." In this quotation we are assured it was the FIRST beast whose deadly wound was healed; hence, if the premises I have laid down are correct, it must have been the first head of the seven that received the deadly wound. Now, as there is almost universal agreement that the eastern Roman, or Greek nation, constituted what is symbolized by the first head, it is evident that we must look to the history of that nation to find the fulfillment of the prophecy under consideration.

It is well known by every reader of the history of the Greek nation during the seventh century, that it was almost overthrown by the sword of the Saracens, and that, after several years of suffering and distress, it finally rose again to its former grandeur and power, and so continued for above sixty years. A very few brief extracts from history upon this point must suffice.

"The Saracens, having overrun Africa, Sicily, and Cilicia, committing everywhere dreadful ravages, and carrying off with them incredible numbers of captives, at last entered Thrase and laid siege to Constantinople itself. The siege is said to have lasted seven years, the enemy withdrawing to Cygicus in the winter, and renewing their attacks early in the spring."—Bower, Vol. 1, p. 489.

Again, "The first measures of Leo, after his elevation to the throne, were to secure the tottering empire against the most formidable enemies, the Mohammedans, who were encompassing Constantinople by Moslemah. Nothing but the indefatigable courage, military skill, and restless activity of Leo, aided by the new invention of the Greek fire, saved the Eastern Capital from falling, five centuries before its time, into the hands of the Mohammedans."—Millman's Late Christianity, Vol. II., p. 305.

Again, "The Eastern Empire was shaken to its centre by the sword of the Koran."—History of the Middle Ages, Vol. III.

"The Greeks were exhausted by the calamities of war, and the loss of their fairest provinces."—Gibbon, Vol. V., pp. 273–282.

"The Saracens, having become masters of Syria, Persia, Egypt, and parts of the further Africa, landed for the first time on the shores of Europe, to undertake the siege of Constantinople. The preparations of the Saracens, by sea and land, were commensurate with the grandeur of the enterprise to which the warlike votaries of the Koran were inflamed, by the strongest excitement of avarice and fanaticism. * * * For six years they continued to besiege the city, at the end of which time they withdrew in discouragement from the long and desultory siege. During this time the people of Constantinople were roused to desperation; and some sparks of the Roman spirit were rekindled in the degenerate race who still arrogated the Roman name; and their defence of the capital was not unworthy of the best days of the empire. The pale star of the Cæsars rose dimly for an instant in the ascendant, and for once, in the meridian grandeur of the Saracen power, we are presented with the strange spectacle of its submission to the dismembered empire of the East. * * * After the failure of the Saracens at the seige of Constantinople, the Eastern Empire enjoyed a cessation from their assaults for about sixty years."—Enc. Metropolitana, Vol. III., p. 373.

From the above quotations, I think it will appear plain that the Eastern Empire came near being overthrown in the seventh century; and that, after its power had been reduced to the walls of Constantinople for about seven years, it revived again from its exhausted condition to its former grandeur and power, and so continued for above sixty years. Thus the prophecy had a complete fulfillment which says this government was "wounded AS IT WERE to death"; that is, it had the appearance of being dead, having lost all its power, except what was confined within the walls of one city. This was all accomplished during the time we all agree that the Greek Empire occupied the position symbolized by the first head.

Having now written, as I think, sufficient to prove the point under consideration, that is, that it was the first head that received the deadly wound; allow me to present a few reasons why I now believe that the French nation, or the Bonaparte dynasty, during the reign of Napoleon I., could not have constituted what is symbolized by the seventh head, nor the nation that received the deadly wound brought to view in this prophecy.

My first reason is obvious; for if, in m showing, in this article, that it was the first head which received the deadly wound, then of course it could not have been the seventh.

Another reason is, as we are clearly shown in the thirteenth and seventeenth chapters of this book, that the seven heads, as brought to view in the prophecy, were to be on the stage of action coexistent with the supremacy of the apostate church, which was to be for the period of "1260 days," or years, (for on those heads was seen the name, or names, of blasphemy); hence, if the Bonaparte dynasty, under the reign of Napoleon I., was the government symbolized by the seventh head, and if it was the one to receive the deadly wound, and further, if it received the deadly wound at the overthrow of Napoleon I., in A. D. 1815, then the 1260 years of papal supremacy could not have ended until A. D. 1815. And, again, if the 1260 years did not end until that date, then the 75 years added, to make up the 1335, will not end until A. D. 1890, neither of which points do I think can be sustained.

Another reason why I do not think the overthrow of the Bonaparte dynasty can be what is symbolized by the wounding of the head, is because I do not think the simple overthrow of a dynasty can be what is meant in the prophecy by the wounding of the head; for, if so, then we shall find several wounded heads among those nations which were symbolized by the seven heads. For instance, during the time we all agree that the Greek nation occupied the position symbolized by the first head, there were, according to history, five or six different dynasties, which occupied the imperial throne, and were overthrown, each in its turn, to give place to its successor. In short, I understand that each one of those nations became what was symbolized by one of those heads, by virtue of its becoming vested with the imperial title of the Cæsars; so, then, although there were five or six different dynasties which usurped the imperial throne of the Greek Empire, by the overthrow of its predecessor; yet the head could not be said to have been "wounded as it were to death," so long as the Greek nation maintained the imperial title of the Cæsars. But when that title has grown dim on account of the sword of some foreign power, then I understand the head has been wounded.

Again, if we take the position that the Bonaparte dynasty, under the reign of Napoleon I., constituted what is symbolized by the seventh head; then we are necessitated to take the position, that the revival of that dynasty, under the reign of Napoleon III., is what is symbolized by the eighth beast spoken of in the seventeenth of Revelations, at the eleventh verse. Now, I cannot conceive how one and the same dynasty can be made two, simply by wounding, and then healing it again. It appears to me that if it was the seventh head that received the deadly wound, it would still be the seventh head when it is healed again. Let me suppose a case: If a man is wounded near to death, and after a time is wholly restored to his former health, could he then be said to be another man? I think not.

Again, it is almost universally admitted by Advent believers, that the slaying of the "two witnesses" brought to view in Rev. 11th, was accomplished soon after the commencement of the French revolution; now putting it later than A. D. 1793. Now we are told, in Revelation 11: 7, that it was "THE BEAST that ascendeth out of the bottomless pit" that should kill them; and in the seventeenth chapter and eighth verse, we read again of "THE BEAST that . . . . was, and is not; and shall ascend out of the bottomless pit, and go into perdition." Then again, in the eleventh verse, that this same beast, "that was, and is not, EVEN HE IS THE EIGHTH, and is of the seven, and goeth into perdition."

Thus, if we are right, in showing that the two witnesses were slain by that beast as early as A. D. 1793, we have positive proof, by taking the three verses together, i. e., the seventh of the eleventh chapter, and the eighth and eleventh of the seventeenth chapter, that the eighth beast must have come on to the stage of action as early at least as A. D. 1793; and it is evident, that the eighth beast could not have come on to the stage of action until the seventh had fulfilled its mission as brought to view in the prophecy. Hence the seventh head must have had its existence, and accomplished its work, several years prior to the time of the Bonaparte dynasty; and the French nation, from about the time of the breaking out of the French Revolution down to the end of time, during all its changes of government, must have been the nation symbolized by the eighth beast.

Again, another reason why I do not think the Bonaparte dynasty, under the reign of Napoleon I., can constitute what is symbolized by the seventh head, is because there were just seven nations, or governments, plainly marked in history, (commencing with the Greek) who bore the imperial title of the Cæsars; and, consequently, with the ecclesiastical power at Rome, governed Europe for the period of 1260 years. The nation or government symbolized by the last of the seven heads, was the Austrian, whose emperor at that time, Joseph II., of the Hapsburg Loraine dynasty, was proclaimed head of the holy Roman, German Empire, in A. D. 1765; by virtue of which act, the historian says, that each of those nations, (commencing with the Franks, under the reign of the Carlovingian dynasty), who were elected to that position, were recognized as having become united with the ecclesiastical power at Rome. And, as I have shown above that the eighth beast must have come on to the stage of action as early at least as A. D. 1793, it is evident that this nation, which is symbolized by the seventh head, must have fulfilled its mission as connected with the apostate church as early and perhaps earlier than the above date. And further, if the above mentioned nation is the one symbolized by the seventh head (and I have no doubt that it is), then it will appear, from the above dates, that it "continued but a short space," when compared with the continuance of the six heads, who had their existence before it.

In short, I understand that those nations symbolized by the seven heads, had fulfilled their existence, as brought to view in the prophecy, as early as at, or prior to, the breaking out of the French Revolution in A. D. 1789; and that, at that time, the eighth beast commenced to "ascend out of the bottomless pit" (a system of religion without foundation in truth), and had completely extricated itself at the coronation of Napoleon I. as Emperor of the French, in A. D. 1804.

Worcester, Mass. [illegible]

* In our version of the Scriptures this text reads as follows: "And he exerciseth all the power of the first beast before him." Now the expression, "before him," as used in this text, cannot, I think, mean that the two-horned beast exercised all the power of a beast that had an existence prior to the time he was upon the stage of action, for the following reasons: first, if we read the first clause of the 14th verse, which is a continued explanation of the power and works of the beast, we learn that he wrought those miracles, (whereby he accomplished his purposes), in the sight or presence of the beast. The text reads as follows: "And deceiveth them that dwell on the earth by the means of those miracles which he had power to do in the sight of the beast." Again, in the 19th chap., 20th verse, we read as follows: "And the beast was taken, and with him the false prophet that wrought miracles before him." Now I think it will appear plain, from the above quotations, that the two beasts under consideration must have had their existence upon the stage of action at the same time, and that the two-horned beast usurped all the power of the first beast (in his presence) over that portion of the territory belonging to the first beast, out of which the two-horned beast had its rise, viz.: the symbolic earth, or Italy. This view is also clearly sustained in history.

The World's Crisis

AND SECOND ADVENT MESSENGER.

"BEHOLD, I COME QUICKLY; AND MY REWARD IS WITH ME."

WHOLE NO. 434. | BOSTON, TUESDAY, JANUARY 26, 1864. | VOL. XVIII.—NO. 19.

The World's Crisis

AND SECOND ADVENT MESSENGER,

Issued every Tuesday Afternoon, at

167 HANOVER STREET, BOSTON.

MILES GRANT, EDITOR.

EDITORIAL COMMITTEE:
H. L. HASTINGS, D. T. TAYLOR,
H. F. CARPENTER.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEE:
H. V. DAVIS, S. S. BREWER,
A. ROSS, J. G. HAMBLIN,
SOLOMON HOVEY.

GEO. T. ADAMS, TREASURER.

☞ THE CRISIS is devoted to the exposition of all Bible truth; especially the doctrine of the immediate, personal coming and reign of Christ on the earth; holiness of heart; the unconscious state of the dead; their literal resurrection, and the final destruction of the wicked.

For the World's Crisis.

"OFFER PRAISE."

Lift your drooping heads, ye mourners,
Hush those minor notes of woe;
Let a nobler song inspire you
While sojourning here below.

Earth has sweet and tender music,
And the spirit, when it grieves,
Loves to tell its earnest longings
In these low and mournful keys.

But upon those heights of Zion
List those songs—that loud acclaim!
"Glory, glory in the highest,
Praise for aye the Savior's name!"

Sorrow's tear is wiped forever,
Joy is sparkling in each eye;
Lift your drooping hearts, ye mourners,
Sing, for your redemption's nigh.

Offer praise to Him who saves you,
Drive the shadows from your brow,
Tune your hearts to Heaven's music,
Learn the joyful accents now.

MAR.

"THE SIGNS OF THE TIMES."

Under the above heading, the editor and publisher of "The Vials," Torquay, England, Dec. 1st, 1863, says:—

Another Sign of the Times is the present condition of the EARTH and the AIR. No one can point out any former time in which such confusion of NATURE has been known. The four seasons of the year are jumbled into one. The state of the atmosphere is without a parallel. Furious gales and dead calms succeed each other day after day. Storm signals are flying every twelve hours out of the twenty-four. The "seas and waves are roaring." Meteors of the most extraordinary kind are constantly seen in the midnight sky. Earthquakes have begun. The SIGNS of the last times are mentioned by our Lord—famines, earthquakes—signs in the heavens—the sea and the waves roaring—men's hearts failing them for fear of those things which are coming on the earth. The Book of Revelation speaks repeatedly of earthquakes; but this is particularly observable in the case of the Seventh and Last Vial. Before the Last Vial has begun the atmosphere is affected—for the Vial is poured out upon the AIR. After that an earthquake takes place, of which it is said,—"And there was a great earthquake, such as never was since men were upon the earth; so mighty an earthquake, and so great." All these signs have appeared, of late, with unusual frequency; the climate and atmosphere are broken up in endless confusion; the sea and the waves perpetually roaring; and that "men's hearts are failing them through fear of what is coming" every one can learn who takes up any public journal. It is indeed a fact well deserving of our attention that prophecy seems to be passing into COMMON LIFE. Those ancient oracles have been for two thousand years the study or the wonder of mankind. Their grandeur and their gloom dwelt upon the mind with the effect of some solemn tale, or some magnificent painting. Men admired and wondered, but they did not TREMBLE. The picture and the story were not for them, but for future generations. But now that time is past. Those ancient oracles are no longer a picture or tale; they have passed into the sphere of our DAILY LIFE; the gloom hangs over OUR OWN heads; the ground quakes beneath OUR OWN feet; "the things that are coming on the earth" are coming upon OURSELVES. We ourselves are the "future generations" to whom we presumptuously consigned over the terrors of God's word. We see in common life the wonders and the signs which in former ages would have been looked upon as supernatural. We see all these things beginning to come to pass, and we may soon expect to see them in their full force. The Signs of the Last Times are before our eyes, and we know not how short a time may bring them to maturity. It is sometimes curious to observe the language of the public journals. They resemble a kind of running commentary upon the prophetic books of Scripture. The Times of last week spoke of the French emperor as if it had been describing the man of "dark sentences," foretold in the 8th of Daniel. The great London "jester" himself has been forced to abandon his frivolity by the ominous lowering of the skies over his head. He has become serious, and even solemn. He tells us that a STORM is coming, we know not whence, or when; and hoists the storm-signal that we may prepare against the storm. When the Book of Daniel glides into the public journals—when the licensed "jester" forgets his jests, and gives a solemn warning, and a bold one, can we doubt any longer that the times have become ominous, and that the "SIGNS" have become too conspicuous to be overlooked by any but the insane?

Another "Sign of the Times" is the political condition of the world at large, and especially of the prophetic earth. Such a position of things was never witnessed before in any age, or under any circumstances. The two greatest convulsions that ever the world has felt were those of the barbaric invasions of the Roman Empire, and of the French revolution. It will be admitted that the world has never been so shaken at any time as by those two convulsions; yet the barbaric invasion of the Roman Empire was nothing more than a coarse outbreak of physical fury; it had no depth of design—no comprehensive scheme—no great leader—no definite object. An invasion of wolves and bears would have as good a claim to be called a moral revolution as the invasion of the Goths and Vandals. It was wide and destructive, but shallow and unintelligent. It was as unintelligent as an earthquake or a flood. Again; the French revolution, though infinitely more intelligent than the barbaric invasions, was limited and undeveloped. It was the fury of a slave broken loose, avenging himself with fire and sword; not without intelligence, it is true, but without a plan, or a specific object, or a confederate. His designs are undeveloped, and, for want of confederates, his sphere of action is confined. It is far different at present. We are now arrived at the full development of the French revolution. A determination to be free has sunk into the hearts of all nations. That determination was borrowed from France, and still survives and deepens while the nation from which it was borrowed submits to despotism. But what a freedom! A freedom from every law, both human and divine. A communism of property; a subversion of government; an overthrow of all the institutions of society; and a levelling of all ranks. Such is the secret wish of millions throughout christendom. You will find it everywhere—the legitimate offspring of the "Reign of Terror." The RED MEN are as red now as in 1793 and 1848, though their faces are covered by a mask. Success in such a scheme is impossible: they know that it is impossible, and therefore they are ready for a COMPROMISE. "Let us come to terms," they say to society; and society is compelled to consent. A powerful mind has appeared amongst them—calm, secret and orderly. They have found a man who is willing to become their "Head," but who exacts as a condition the most rigid submission to ORDER. One mind must deliberate for all—one mind must regulate every movement of the millions—one man must guide the chariot of revolution, or else it shall never move from the barriers. Agree to these conditions, and the map of the world shall be revised, and a Confederate Empire of the sovereign people shall spread over christendom! They agree to the conditions, and the revolution is begun.

The speech of the Emperor Napoleon on the 5th of November is the manifesto of the General Revolution. On the 5th of November we celebrate our deliverance from gunpowder and Popery. By a huge expenditure of gunpowder we revenge ourselves for the fright which gunpowder once caused us. We blow it into the air in place of being blown into the air by it ourselves. We kill two birds with one stone, and blow away Popery at the same time. But we leave this chiefly to the boys; for the boys are wiser than the men, and keep up a wholesome remembrance of the perils which older heads have forgotten. What should we come to if the boys did not keep us awake! But on the 5th of November, Napoleon the Third delivered an address from the throne, which is justly considered as the manifesto of a NEW REVOLUTION. He used those memorable words—"The treaties of 1815 have ceased to exist." This is an embellishment—it is a literal fact—more ominous words could not have been uttered—they efface in one sentence the whole history of the century, and throw us back into the French revolution and the empire of Napoleon the First. The treaties of 1815 were the closing scene of the great revolution. By them the Napoleonic empire was cut into fragments—the revolution extinguished—and the Napoleon family buried alive in the tomb. The kings of Europe stood by, and the British ambassador stood with them—while the grave was dug—the Napoleons hurled into it alive—and the dull earthy weight of the Holy Alliance laid upon the tomb that none should open it. In spite of all the tomb was opened in December, 1848, and Napoleon the First arose in the person of Napoleon the Third. He rose wiser by experience, and began from that moment to prepare for vengeance. First he became President—then Emperor—he then led us on into the foolish and wicked Crimean war, by which he reduced Russia to a state of submission and dependence—not submission to England, but submission to France. Russia is stronger now than she was before the Crimean war, but she has learned that she can do nothing effectual without France. He, next, created an Italian kingdom; but took care to secure Nice and Savoy for himself. From the Savoy Alps he looks down upon Italy; and the whole Italian kingdom has become his vassal and his ally. He also made himself master of Rome, the city of the Cæsars, of prophecy, and of world-wide spiritual power. For just fifteen years he has been carrying on the preliminaries, and now he feels himself strong enough to throw off the mask. His iron fleet is all but completed, and will be thoroughly completed by the spring of 1864. He may safely remove the mask, and set all his opponents at defiance; and so he has done. It has been remarked by an Austrian journal that the imperial manifesto of November the 6th has been in preparation for full ten years—that it has been indicated repeatedly by the French journals themselves—and that whoever shall be overwhelmed by its results will have only himself to blame. "We are on the eve of momentous events." How little can we depend upon the public press which can discover nothing until the discovery is too late, and which has no sagacity beyond the present moment of time!

The emperor has demanded a CONGRESS with the undisguised alternative of WAR. If we refuse a congress it is to be war, and a FATAL war; so says the imperial speech. If we accept the congress it will be revolution. Austria must give up Venetia—Russia must give up the Rhine—and what is England to do? We hold both MALTA and the Mauritius under the treaty of 1815; and we shall be called upon assuredly to surrender both of them to France. They both belonged to France once, and the emperor is determined to claim them back. The iron fleet is ready, and he is beginning even now to prepare for the future quarrel. We may be assured that the imperial manifesto was levelled most especially at ourselves; and we shall have reason to recollect the fifth of November for other reasons more near at hand than the gunpowder plot.

For the present moment, however, nothing is more striking than the resurrection of the NAPOLEONIC NAME. The resurrection of the dead would hardly be more marvellous. How Europe exulted at the fall of Napoleon. How it wreaked its utmost and bitterest malice by passing a decree that Napoleon should never rise again! "No Napoleon shall ever occupy the throne of France." So said the Unholy Alliance. How we ourselves exulted after Waterloo! We had secured everlasting peace, and avenged ourselves with an everlasting revenge. O fools and blind! Did pride and vengeance ever prosper? Did God ever permit dust and ashes to pass an UNCHANGEABLE decree? Or was it ever possible for the cold narrow mind of Wellington to bring about the extinction of the enormous genius of NAPOLEON? You might as well attempt to extinguish ETNA with a drift of snow. The snow melts away into steam, and the volcano bursts out again. He who dwelleth in heaven laughed our devices to scorn—full well he knew our "pride and the naughtiness of our heart." Through his help they had slain Goliath, but we took all the honor to ourselves. We triumphed—we grew rich—we became surfeited with prosperity. In the wontonness of our hearts we went forth and slew and robbed on all sides, until no part of the East was safe from our outrage. We shed more blood and practised more cruelty in the East than ever Napoleon did in the West, and all the while we are pouring out the sickening "cant" of the "propagation of the gospel, and the amelioration of society." Such hypocrisy could not escape unpunished; and the instrument of punishment has been prepared. The treaties of 1815 have been swept away like dust—the tomb has been shattered to pieces, and Napoleon has arisen. He has placed himself at the centre of the world, and we, and all nations, are compelled to move round him like planets round the sun. That he still determines to avenge Waterloo and St. Helena we may feel perfectly assured.

OUR TIMES AND HOPES.

Nearly two thousand years have elapsed since the ascension of our Lord, and we have positively reached the time spoken of by Daniel, the prophet, thus: "Many shall run to and fro, and knowledge shall be increased." Who can doubt? "He that runneth may read" this. Still another fact is not less obvious. It is that so clearly predicted by the Savior thus: "And because iniquity shall abound, the love of many shall wax cold." The bands that bound society together, civil, social, and religious, all seem to be giving way: the time of trouble spoken of by both Daniel and our Savior is actually upon us. "Like the troubled sea, when it cannot rest, whose waters cast up mire and dirt," so is it now with the troubled masses. "There is no peace, saith my God, to the wicked." This is now the moral phase of society, and precisely our prophetic whereabouts of the Church, our nation, and the world at large. "The bride" is in exile, weeping and praying, "Even so, come, Lord Jesus." While the latter day "scoffers" in derision are saying, "Where is the promise of his coming?" Thousands are deceiving and being deceived by the delusive dream that the millennial day is softly stealing upon our world, and there shall be the much talked of golden age. Alas! for such. Between our time and that future glory of Messiah's reign there lies a region as dark as midnight, strewed with such ruined hopes and blasting terrors as this world has never known,—such a time of plagues and tribulation as never was, when all hopes based on finite good shall utterly perish, with all those who have deceived themselves thereby.

There is a most manifest blind, persistent rejection of the glorious truth, that the next great event which will mark the history of our world, make an end of Satan's usurpation, and bring in everlasting righteousness, is the appearing of our Lord Jesus Christ to establish his kingdom, in answer to that prayer he himself indited: "Thy kingdom come," the very kingdom ascribed to him, "for thine is the kingdom, the power, and the glory, forever. Amen."

No person who may be favored with grace enough to disarm himself of prejudice, and sit down as an humble learner at the feet of Christ and his Apostles, and receive their exposition of the Prophets, can resist the fact that the primitive Church was, and the true hope of the Church now is, "the glorious appearing of the great God and our Savior Jesus Christ." (Titus 2:13.) Not until then will the Church be disenthralled and saved from all her enemies, coming out of the wilderness, "fair as the moon, clear as the sun, and terrible as an army with banners." Not until then will God's incorrigible enemies bow and confess, under the heavy pressure of his righteous judgments, and be removed as tares and cumberers of the ground. Verily, there is no other legitimate Bible hope for the people of God in its trying hour. If other hopes are entertained, they are of human origin, and never to be realized. They are but "the light of the fire, and the sparks of their own kindling." With all deference to the opinions of others, such is the modern theory of this world's conversion, and the building of Christ's everlasting kingdom in his personal absence by human instrumentality. In the light of God's immutable truth, it may safely be affirmed that God has nowhere commissioned men either to convert the world or build his kingdom proper in this world. If any doubt, let such disprove by plain, obvious scriptural testimony. Christ has commissioned and sent forth men to preach the Gospel of the kingdom, and deigned to tell us what the sure result would be, namely, "He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved, and he that believeth not shall be damned." The labors of more than eighteen hundred years, the world over, have invariably confirmed this certain result. We are forced to the conclusion that, during the present dispensation, fallen humanity will remain the same, and that the Gospel, like its author, will continue the same; nor will God, the Holy Ghost, change. Hence the results of Gospel preaching, and all other means of grace, will not be more efficient in their results than they have been in the primitive Church, and through the ages past. To what other conclusion does revelation, reason, and common sense lead? The apostle Paul certainly understood the nature of his calling, and may safely be regarded as a model minister and missionary of the Gospel. In all his writings, there is nothing to indicate that he thought his commission was to convert the world or build the kingdom of Christ Jesus. His words may be forced into such a construction, as they frequently have been. We will hear him speak for himself, thus: "I am made all things to all men, that I might by all means save some." He meddled not with things beyond his calling and measure. Would to God it were so with all who claim to be sent of Christ to teach and preach in our day.

The lameness of the various efforts to prove the world's conversion from the Sacred Oracles, prove the fallacy of that theory. Mere assumption and inference can, in no case, be admitted as evidence. Take the following specimens, which are, in substance, what lately appeared in print, to prove the world's future conversion in the present dispensation. First, to prove the world's conversion the following language is quoted: "Where sin abounded, grace did much more abound." (Rom. 5:20.) The most that this scripture proves, is, that Divine grace so abounds, that whosoever will may be saved, and nothing more. Grace provides and reveals the means of salvation, but is not salvation itself, nor does its freeness prove that one sinner will accept of it, much less the whole world. Again, "All things are put under his feet." Very true: and therefore we must submit to be saved by His grace, or fall and perish by His righteous judgments. How does this prove the conversion of the world? Once more: "Ask of me, and I shall give thee the heathen for thine inheritance, and the uttermost parts of the earth for thy possession." (Ps. 2:8.) Why omit the ninth verse, which explains the meaning of the eighth, and is a part of the same paragraph, and which tells what Christ will do with the unbelieving part of that world given unto him? Certainly not save them, for they will not believe, more than would the antediluvians or Sodomites. The ninth verse, so carefully avoided, clearly states what shall be the final doom of such heathens, thus: "Thou shalt break them with a rod of iron, thou shalt dash them in pieces like a potter's vessel." Does this prove, or look like the world's conversion, when the two verses are read together, as common honesty would dictate? This garbling and perverting the Sacred Scriptures to sustain a favorite but false theory, is one of the most alarming signs of our times, for which there can be no excuse or apology.

This is not the age or dispensation of the kingdom and reign of Christ, but a preparatory dispensation of the Holy Ghost to illuminate, purify, strengthen and comfort those who receive him by faith in Christ. Thus is the Lord preparing a people for himself "meet to be partakers of the inheritance of the saints in light." (Cor. 1:12.) The fact that God is now raising up witnesses in all parts of the world to this precious truth, is certainly worthy the consideration of all.—Northern Christian Advocate.

For the World's Crisis.

A SHORT REVIEW OF THE PAST, AND THE PROSPECTS OF THE FUTURE.

Thousands of years ago God gave the history of this world by the prophets. The question arises, Has God's word of prophecy been fulfilled? We read the history of the world in connection with prophecy, and we see it corresponds. There is harmony between prophecy and history. We have passed three of the great monarchies of earth, and the great changes in the fourth have taken place as foretold by prophets, and the signs in connection with the end have taken place; and the world is in the position morally, politically, and ecclesiastically, as foretold in prophecy, in which it is to be at the end.

What next? With diffidence I would say, I think the treaties and alliances formed and entered into at Vienna in 1815 must be broken up; then the winds, as brought to view in Rev. 7:2, 3, will be let loose. This the Emperor of France is endeavoring to do. England says, no; but if we have arrived at the time for it, it will be done. Rome will then be a bone of contention, and in that contention it will fall and rise no more. About that time earth's rightful Lord will come and gather his saints.—Matt. 24:30, 31. The great battle will be fought after Rome has fallen, and the Lord has gathered his saints. See Rev. 19. Read the whole chapter, but especially verses 11 to 21. After the kings of the earth have suppered upon the earnings of the poor, then the fowls of heaven will be called upon to feed upon the flesh of kings, captains, and mighty men. Then the song will be sung by the redeemed of all ages.—Rev. 11:17.

I expect the great telegraph will be laid across the ocean soon, so that when Rome falls, all the saints will hear of it in a few seconds, and sing Alleluia, as recorded in Rev. 19:1.

I must close here, lest I should do what I condemn in others; that is, write long articles. Dear brethren, we are down close to the opening of the seventh seal. Are we ready to give up our account, as stewards, to the Master? The Lord is calling us to action. No man will abandon the field now that has faith in the sure word of prophecy. In view of the evidence of the soon coming of Jesus, let us gird on the armor afresh. With this view of things, how precious is Jesus! In him we are safe. In him there is no condemnation. Out of him is all condemnation. Christ is all.

M. BATCHELOR.

Rutland, Vt.

THY WILL BE DONE.

'Tis hard when we are sick and poor,
And those who loved us love no more;
When riches, friends, and health are gone,
To say, "O Lord, thy will be done."

'Tis hard when those in death are laid,
O'er whom we've watched, and wept, and prayed,
The wife, the parent, sister, son,
To say, "O Lord, thy will be done."

And yet how light those sorrows be,
To His in dark Gethsemane,
Who drank the cup with stifled groan,
And said, "O Lord, thy will be done."

Help me, O Lord, like him to pray,
And from my inmost heart to say,
Though left by all I loved, alone,
Thy will, not mine, O Lord, be done.

What though my path be dark and drear?
With thou, my Savior, always near,
I will not fear, though all alone,
But say—"O Lord, thy will be done"!

Selected by R. C. R.

For the World's Crisis.

THE WOUNDED HEAD.

In Rev. 13:3, we read as follows:—"And I saw one of his heads as it were wounded to death; and his deadly wound was healed: and all the world wondered after the beast."

An expression like one in the above text may be found in the 8th chapter of this book, at the 10th verse. It reads as follows: "And the third angel sounded, and there fell a great star from heaven, burning AS IT WERE a lamp." Now, it is evident that the Revelator did not actually see a lamp burning, but rather he saw something which had that appearance: so, in the text under consideration, the expression, "wounded as it were to death," does not indicate that the nation, government or dynasty, symbolized by this head, was completely overthrown; but that its power and resources had become nearly exhausted by the sword of some foreign or opposing power.

I wish now to show that the terms beast and head are used interchangeably; that is, both terms referring to the same government several times in this book. The reason of this, I think, is obvious. It is this: we learn from the first verse of this 13th chapter that there were seven heads seen upon the beast, one of which, as we have seen, received as it were the deadly wound. Now, I think we shall all agree that these seven heads were not all upon the stage of action at one time, but they had their rise and fall, each in succession; and also that the successive rule of the seven continued for the term of 1260 years. For proof of this position, I will refer the reader to the 17th chapter of this book and 10th verse, where the Revelator, in referring to the same governments or kingdoms as those symbolized by the seven heads, says: "And these are seven kings: five are fallen, and one is, and the other is not yet come: and when he cometh, he must continue a short space." Now, I think it will appear plain that there was but one of the seven heads upon the stage of action at the same time, and that each one of those heads, as it in its turn becomes the dominant power, must represent the beast (for the beast could not be complete without a head), and therefore when spoken of in the prophecy as upon the stage of action, would be termed the beast.

In harmony with the above position, I understand that the terms head and beast, as used in the verse under consideration, both symbolize one and the same government. To make my view plain, I will quote the verse again:—"And I saw one of his heads as it were wounded to death; and his deadly wound was healed; and all the world wondered after the beast." What beast did all the world wonder after? Evidently the wounded head, after it was healed. Two or three texts will, I think, prove the position I have taken on this point.

Rev. 13:12, reads as follows: "And causeth the earth and them that dwell therein to worship the first beast, whose deadly wound was healed." Notice that, in the above quotation, we are assured it was the beast whose deadly wound was healed; while, in the third verse, we are told that it was one of his heads whose deadly wound was healed. Again, in the 14th verse, we read as follows: "Saying to them that dwell on the earth, that they should make an image to the beast which had the wound by a sword, and did live." In this verse we are assured again that it was the beast that received the deadly wound, and was healed; while the 3d verse of the same chapter as plainly assures us that it was one of his heads.

Now, it appears to me very plain, from the above texts, that the position I have argued regarding the use of the terms under consideration must be in harmony with the prophecy. If so, then the object I have in view can be very easily attained; and that is, to show which of the seven received, "as it were," the deadly wound. One quotation will make it plain. We find it in this same (13th) chapter of Revelation, at the 12th verse. It reads as follows: "And he exerciseth all the power of the FIRST beast in his sight,* (Whiting's trans.), and causeth the earth and them which dwell therein to worship the FIRST BEAST, whose deadly wound was healed." In this quotation we are assured it was the FIRST beast whose deadly wound was healed; hence, if the premises I have laid down are correct, it must have been the first head of the seven that received the deadly wound. Now, as there is almost universal agreement that the eastern Roman, or Greek nation, constituted what is symbolized by the first head, it is evident that we must look to the history of that nation to find the fulfillment of the prophecy under consideration.

It is well known by every reader of the history of the Greek nation during the seventh century, that it was almost overthrown by the sword of the Saracens, and that, after several years of suffering and distress, it finally rose again to its former grandeur and power, and so continued for above sixty years. A very few brief extracts from history upon this point must suffice.

"The Saracens, having overrun Africa, Sicily, and Cilicia, committing everywhere dreadful ravages, and carrying off with them incredible numbers of captives, at last entered Thrase and laid siege to Constantinople itself. The siege is said to have lasted seven years, the enemy withdrawing to Cygicus in the winter, and renewing their attacks early in the spring."—Bower, Vol. 1, p. 489.

Again, "The first measures of Leo, after his elevation to the throne, were to secure the tottering empire against the most formidable enemies, the Mohammedans, who were encompassing Constantinople by Moslemah. Nothing but the indefatigable courage, military skill, and restless activity of Leo, aided by the new invention of the Greek fire, saved the Eastern Capital from falling, five centuries before its time, into the hands of the Mohammedans."—Millman's Late Christianity, Vol. II., p. 305.

Again, "The Eastern Empire was shaken to its centre by the sword of the Koran."—History of the Middle Ages, Vol. III.

"The Greeks were exhausted by the calamities of war, and the loss of their fairest provinces."—Gibbon, Vol. V., pp. 273–282.

"The Saracens, having become masters of Syria, Persia, Egypt, and parts of the further Africa, landed for the first time on the shores of Europe, to undertake the siege of Constantinople. The preparations of the Saracens, by sea and land, were commensurate with the grandeur of the enterprise to which the warlike votaries of the Koran were inflamed, by the strongest excitement of avarice and fanaticism. * * * For six years they continued to besiege the city, at the end of which time they withdrew in discouragement from the long and desultory siege. During this time the people of Constantinople were roused to desperation; and some sparks of the Roman spirit were rekindled in the degenerate race who still arrogated the Roman name; and their defence of the capital was not unworthy of the best days of the empire. The pale star of the Cæsars rose dimly for an instant in the ascendant, and for once, in the meridian grandeur of the Saracen power, we are presented with the strange spectacle of its submission to the dismembered empire of the East. * * * After the failure of the Saracens at the seige of Constantinople, the Eastern Empire enjoyed a cessation from their assaults for about sixty years."—Enc. Metropolitana, Vol. III., p. 373.

From the above quotations, I think it will appear plain that the Eastern Empire came near being overthrown in the seventh century; and that, after its power had been reduced to the walls of Constantinople for about seven years, it revived again from its exhausted condition to its former grandeur and power, and so continued for above sixty years. Thus the prophecy had a complete fulfillment which says this government was "wounded AS IT WERE to death"; that is, it had the appearance of being dead, having lost all its power, except what was confined within the walls of one city. This was all accomplished during the time we all agree that the Greek Empire occupied the position symbolized by the first head.

Having now written, as I think, sufficient to prove the point under consideration, that is, that it was the first head that received the deadly wound; allow me to present a few reasons why I now believe that the French nation, or the Bonaparte dynasty, during the reign of Napoleon I., could not have constituted what is symbolized by the seventh head, nor the nation that received the deadly wound brought to view in this prophecy.

My first reason is obvious; for if, in m showing, in this article, that it was the first head which received the deadly wound, then of course it could not have been the seventh.

Another reason is, as we are clearly shown in the thirteenth and seventeenth chapters of this book, that the seven heads, as brought to view in the prophecy, were to be on the stage of action coexistent with the supremacy of the apostate church, which was to be for the period of "1260 days," or years, (for on those heads was seen the name, or names, of blasphemy); hence, if the Bonaparte dynasty, under the reign of Napoleon I., was the government symbolized by the seventh head, and if it was the one to receive the deadly wound, and further, if it received the deadly wound at the overthrow of Napoleon I., in A. D. 1815, then the 1260 years of papal supremacy could not have ended until A. D. 1815. And, again, if the 1260 years did not end until that date, then the 75 years added, to make up the 1335, will not end until A. D. 1890, neither of which points do I think can be sustained.

Another reason why I do not think the overthrow of the Bonaparte dynasty can be what is symbolized by the wounding of the head, is because I do not think the simple overthrow of a dynasty can be what is meant in the prophecy by the wounding of the head; for, if so, then we shall find several wounded heads among those nations which were symbolized by the seven heads. For instance, during the time we all agree that the Greek nation occupied the position symbolized by the first head, there were, according to history, five or six different dynasties, which occupied the imperial throne, and were overthrown, each in its turn, to give place to its successor. In short, I understand that each one of those nations became what was symbolized by one of those heads, by virtue of its becoming vested with the imperial title of the Cæsars; so, then, although there were five or six different dynasties which usurped the imperial throne of the Greek Empire, by the overthrow of its predecessor; yet the head could not be said to have been "wounded as it were to death," so long as the Greek nation maintained the imperial title of the Cæsars. But when that title has grown dim on account of the sword of some foreign power, then I understand the head has been wounded.

Again, if we take the position that the Bonaparte dynasty, under the reign of Napoleon I., constituted what is symbolized by the seventh head; then we are necessitated to take the position, that the revival of that dynasty, under the reign of Napoleon III., is what is symbolized by the eighth beast spoken of in the seventeenth of Revelations, at the eleventh verse. Now, I cannot conceive how one and the same dynasty can be made two, simply by wounding, and then healing it again. It appears to me that if it was the seventh head that received the deadly wound, it would still be the seventh head when it is healed again. Let me suppose a case: If a man is wounded near to death, and after a time is wholly restored to his former health, could he then be said to be another man? I think not.

Again, it is almost universally admitted by Advent believers, that the slaying of the "two witnesses" brought to view in Rev. 11th, was accomplished soon after the commencement of the French revolution; now putting it later than A. D. 1793. Now we are told, in Revelation 11:7, that it was "THE BEAST that ascendeth out of the bottomless pit" that should kill them; and in the seventeenth chapter and eighth verse, we read again of "THE BEAST that . . . . was, and is not; and shall ascend out of the bottomless pit, and go into perdition." Then again, in the eleventh verse, that this same beast, "that was, and is not, EVEN HE IS THE EIGHTH, and is of the seven, and goeth into perdition."

Thus, if we are right, in showing that the two witnesses were slain by that beast as early as A. D. 1793, we have positive proof, by taking the three verses together, i. e., the seventh of the eleventh chapter, and the eighth and eleventh of the seventeenth chapter, that the eighth beast must have come on to the stage of action as early at least as A. D. 1793; and it is evident, that the eighth beast could not have come on to the stage of action until the seventh had fulfilled its mission as brought to view in the prophecy. Hence the seventh head must have had its existence, and accomplished its work, several years prior to the time of the Bonaparte dynasty; and the French nation, from about the time of the breaking out of the French Revolution down to the end of time, during all its changes of government, must have been the nation symbolized by the eighth beast.

Again, another reason why I do not think the Bonaparte dynasty, under the reign of Napoleon I., can constitute what is symbolized by the seventh head, is because there were just seven nations, or governments, plainly marked in history, (commencing with the Greek) who bore the imperial title of the Cæsars; and, consequently, with the ecclesiastical power at Rome, governed Europe for the period of 1260 years. The nation or government symbolized by the last of the seven heads, was the Austrian, whose emperor at that time, Joseph II., of the Hapsburg Loraine dynasty, was proclaimed head of the holy Roman, German Empire, in A. D. 1765; by virtue of which act, the historian says, that each of those nations, (commencing with the Franks, under the reign of the Carlovingian dynasty), who were elected to that position, were recognized as having become united with the ecclesiastical power at Rome. And, as I have shown above that the eighth beast must have come on to the stage of action as early at least as A. D. 1793, it is evident that this nation, which is symbolized by the seventh head, must have fulfilled its mission as connected with the apostate church as early and perhaps earlier than the above date. And further, if the above mentioned nation is the one symbolized by the seventh head (and I have no doubt that it is), then it will appear, from the above dates, that it "continued but a short space," when compared with the continuance of the six heads, who had their existence before it.

In short, I understand that those nations symbolized by the seven heads, had fulfilled their existence, as brought to view in the prophecy, as early as at, or prior to, the breaking out of the French Revolution in A. D. 1789; and that, at that time, the eighth beast commenced to "ascend out of the bottomless pit" (a system of religion without foundation in truth), and had completely extricated itself at the coronation of Napoleon I. as Emperor of the French, in A. D. 1804.

Worcester, Mass. [illegible]

* In our version of the Scriptures this text reads as follows: "And he exerciseth all the power of the first beast before him." Now the expression, "before him," as used in this text, cannot, I think, mean that the two-horned beast exercised all the power of a beast that had an existence prior to the time he was upon the stage of action, for the following reasons: first, if we read the first clause of the 14th verse, which is a continued explanation of the power and works of the beast, we learn that he wrought those miracles, (whereby he accomplished his purposes), in the sight or presence of the beast. The text reads as follows: "And deceiveth them that dwell on the earth by the means of those miracles which he had power to do in the sight of the beast." Again, in the 19th chap., 20th verse, we read as follows: "And the beast was taken, and with him the false prophet that wrought miracles before him." Now I think it will appear plain, from the above quotations, that the two beasts under consideration must have had their existence upon the stage of action at the same time, and that the two-horned beast usurped all the power of the first beast (in his presence) over that portion of the territory belonging to the first beast, out of which the two-horned beast had its rise, viz.: the symbolic earth, or Italy. This view is also clearly sustained in history.

WARS AND RUMORS OF WARS.

As the prospects of a great European war increase, thoughtful persons will ask themselves to what point in its great drama is our world approaching? Are the prophecies of great wars and commotions, preceding the end of the world, about to be fulfilled? Is our great national struggle but the prelude to the terrific conflicts which are to involve all nations?

That a great war across the Atlantic is possible, and to some degree probable, none can question. Since what we have now witnessed in our own country, we can no longer be deluded with the idea that peace principles have taken any controlling hold of the nations. Men by thousands seem as ready to rush to arms as in any age of the world. Almost the whole world is in an agitated condition. Mexico, Spain, Poland, Japan, and China, are, like ourselves, all engaged in war. Russia, France, England, Denmark, Sweden, and the German states, are sending forth rumors of war, providing war materials, and making preparations for battles. Many English journals interpret Napoleon's late address to his Senate as a declaration that war with Russia is almost inevitable; while the latest foreign news represents Russia as preparing for hostilities on a gigantic scale. She is said to be rapidly constructing iron-mailed ships of war, covering her forts with twelve inches thickness of iron, and levying recruits for her armies by hundreds of thousands. Some suppose that an alliance between Russia and the United States has been secretly entered into.

If war breaks out in earnest in Europe, it is easy to believe that it will be the greatest war ever known. Hence it is natural to inquire whether the Scripture predictions of the last great battles which are to overthrow Antichrist, put down sin and error, and fully establish the kingdom of Christ, are not drawing nigh. Christ is universal regent in this world; and it is plainly declared that the world is to be overturned and overturned until he come whose right it is to reign. The apostle Peter testifies that, though men grow sceptical because of long delay, the Lord is not slack concerning his promise, and that the day of the Lord will come (suddenly, unexpectedly) as a thief in the night.

The prophecies which point to great wars and national commotions preceding the millennium are numerous and striking; and although they are in figurative and enigmatical language, not intended to be fully understood until the time of their fulfillment, yet they point to a distinct and prominent period, and evidently are intended to forewarn the church and awaken a watchful and expectant attitude. In the twenty-fourth of Matthew, our Savior has primary reference to the destruction of Jerusalem. But part of the description seems to reach beyond that period to events in which not the Jews merely, but the whole world would be interested. The reference to the coming of the Son of man; the universal agitations of nations; and the coming of false Christs, seem to look to a day still future, and more important than the breaking up of the Jewish nation. That was a great event, well calculated to suggest others still greater; and the bold imagery necessary to its foreshadowing, seems to have a deeper significancy and a more complete and general filling out than they could receive at the fall of the doomed city. Moreover, one of the questions which called forth the great utterance of Jesus on this occasion may most naturally be taken as looking beyond Jerusalem. "What shall be the sign of thy coming, and of the end of the world?" The sentences are the most momentous that could be uttered. They are surcharged with meaning, dark, and distinctly reverberating like the clouds which betoken a great and wide-extended storm. "Nation shall rise against nation, and kingdom against kingdom; and there shall be famines, and pestilences, and earthquakes in divers places." And before that day, "this gospel of the kingdom shall be preached in all the world, for a witness unto all nations; and then shall the end come." Tribulations such as never were, "nor ever shall be," are spoken of.

Various other prophecies confirm this interpretation of the Savior's language. Daniel seems to connect this time of unexampled tribulation with the closing period of the world.

In Revelation the great gatherings for the final battle of Armageddon appear to precede the binding of Satan for a thousand years, during which the glorious millennium transpires.

But though we cannot certainly know that we are drawing near to the great final battles, the "wars and rumors of wars" which now fill almost the whole atmosphere of the world are certainly significant enough of that approaching period to make every mind thoughtful and solemn. A warning against levity, worldliness, and extravagant and luxurious living, rides on every breeze. This is no time for the people of God to grovel; let them look up and see if their redemption draweth nigh. Let them watch and be sober. Let every house be put in order, and every lamp be trimmed and burning. Let all low and selfish aims, and all narrow partizan and sectarian plans be quickly forsaken. Preparation should be made by every soul for the coming of its Lord. The great day and the momentous events may be nearer than we think. We may have little time left for all we have planned to do for ourselves, for our friends, for the church and the world.—Boston Recorder.

ECONOMY IN A FAMILY.

There is nothing which goes so far toward placing young people beyond the reach of poverty, as economy in the management of their affairs. It matters not whether a man furnish little or much for his family, if there is a continual leakage in his kitchen or in his parlor; it runs away he knows not how, and the demon waste cries "More!" like the horseleech's daughter, until he that provided has no more to give. It is the husband's duty to bring into the house, and it is the duty of the wife to see that none goes wrongfully out of it—not the least article, however unimportant in itself, for it establishes a precedent—nor under any pretence, for it opens the door for ruin to stalk in, and he seldom leaves an opportunity unimproved. A man gets a wife to look after his affairs, and to assist him through life—to educate and prepare his children for a proper station in life, and not to dissipate his property. The husband's interest should be the wife's care, and her greatest ambition carry her no further than his welfare or happiness, together with that of her children. This should be her sole aim, and the theatre of her exploits in the bosom of her family.

A new painting for the dome of the Capitol at Washington is to cost $40,000.

The World's Crisis AND SECOND ADVENT MESSENGER.

Boston, Tuesday, January 26, 1864.

TAKE NOTICE.—In remitting monies to this office, do not send us any more little bank bills for fractional parts of a dollar. They are not passable here, and we are only subjected to the trouble and expense of sending them back. We have several now on hand,—worthless to us,—on the Veazie Bank, Brandon Bank, etc., etc. Send us only current bills, postal currency, or stamps.

POSTAGE ON CANADA PAPERS.—We have concluded to let our brethren in the British Provinces have the Crisis at the same price as those in the States. In other words, we will pay the postage to the line; hence those taking the paper will pay only $2.00 a year, instead of $2.20, as formerly.

THE TRACT FUND.

Dear Brn. and Srs. in Christ, shall we not push the tract-fund enterprise with more vigor? This is one of the most effectual means of doing much good with a small amount of money. One dollar's worth of tracts may be the means of saving many souls. Come, let us make a SACRIFICE for the good of those who are perishing for the lack of knowledge that we might easily put within their reach. The Lord has entrusted to us great truths and light, and shall we be like the man who hid his talent? Come, let us swell the tract fund up to $2000, at once. "Many hands make light work." Who will give a helping hand? Some have done nobly. Shall they stand alone? Let us all take stock in this noble enterprise. We shall never be sorry.

The tracts already scattered have done great good and gladdened many hearts. Do not let the work stop now, when the people are calling more earnestly than ever for light. Our preachers should all be supplied with packages of tracts as they go forth to sound the alarm. Shall they have them? Now is the time for action. The hearts and ears of the people are open to receive the light as they have not been for years. They are trembling at the signs of the times. We can now work to better advantage, we think, than ever before. Shall the tracts lie on our shelves, or shall they be sent forth to bless our fellow men? Come, let us do something worthy of the cause we love so well, which is worth more than all the world to us. "Freely ye have received, freely give." "God loveth a cheerful giver." "The liberal soul shall be made fat."

There are many poor ones who cannot purchase the tracts, and if the preachers and others could be supplied so that they could give them away where they are really needed, we think many would rise up to bless us in the day of the Lord. Let us not forget that, "He that hath pity upon the poor, lendeth unto the Lord; and that which he hath given will he pay him again." Shall we be afraid to trust the promise of the Lord? "He which soweth sparingly shall reap also sparingly; and he which soweth bountifully shall reap also bountifully." Which shall be our harvest? Remember the Lord means just what he says.

We think there is no object for which our money can be used to better advantage than in the scattering of tracts. As we have no salaried men to pay for managing the tract fund enterprise, all the money you send goes into tracts for the poor. You need not fear that the money will be squandered or misapplied.

Now let us enter this work with a new zeal, and do the best we can to awaken an interest in every body to "search the Scriptures and prepare for the coming of the Son of man. This is a safe investment. The dividend will be great when the King comes to welcome us to his marriage feast. Shall we be among those to whom he will say "well done?" While others are spending millions upon millions to preach war, ruin and death over the world, let us be sowing the truth with a liberal hand, that we may be able to save some from eternal destruction. The cause is worthy of our best energies. Are we not all ready for ACTION? While the people of the world are giving thousands at the "Sanitary Fairs, for those who are wounded physically, shall we not make a corresponding effort for those who are wounded morally? Come, send in your contributions from one cent to hundreds of dollars. Let the rich give of their abundance, and the poor their mites. Let us do more this year than ever. Shall it not be one of work,—most earnest work? May the Lord direct us all in the path of duty.

SIGNS IN THE SEA.

Just before the coming of the Son of man, he informs us that among other signs upon earth, the waters of the great deep will be unusually agitated. He expresses the fact by saying, "there shall be signs in the sun, and in the moon, and in the stars; and upon the earth distress of nations, with perplexity; the sea and the waves roaring." Sea travelers tell us this is now true. Fourteen hundred shipwrecks are said to have taken place in the Mediterranean sea during the first week of December, 1863.

We are fully satisfied that all the signs which the Savior and apostles gave as tokens of his second coming will be literally fulfilled, as was the darkening of the sun and moon in 1780, and the falling of the stars in 1833. The distress of nations is being felt, and their death pains are rapidly increasing. Yet they understand it not, because led by blind leaders, who promise them days of peace. But "when they shall say peace and safety, then sudden destruction cometh upon them. But ye, brethren, are not in darkness, that that day should overtake you as a thief." If we do not wish to be in darkness, we must take heed to the "sure word of prophecy," from which cometh our light. One chief reason why so many are groping in darkness is because they neglect the prophecies. He is not wise who does. Others see light but will not walk in it, lest they receive reproach from the enemies of truth; they put their light under a bushel, and thus show they are ashamed of the "words" of Jesus. Such can have no ground to hope for acceptance at the coming of Christ. It will not do to make the least compromise with error or the workers of iniquity. Now is the time to be firm and bold, consecrating all to the Lord. We are rapidly nearing the heavenly harbor, where stormy seas and angry waves foam no more,—where all will be peace, love and joy for ever and ever. Shall we meet on that happy shore?

MEETINGS AT ALTON, N. H.

Our late meetings at Alton were deeply interesting. The Town Hall was crowded to its utmost capacity, and the people listened with the best attention. The truth found a hearty welcome. Many are under conviction. Three were baptized on Lord's day. Some six or seven have found peace in believing, and we trust others will soon yield to Jesus. There is a general seriousness in community. We were sorry to leave them, but duty called away. We hear good tidings from their prayer meetings since we left. We closed with an interesting communion season, and parted in bright hopes of soon meeting in the kingdom with all the dear saints. Praise the Lord for our blessed hope to cheer us in these last hours of the present dispensation. Let us all keep ready to meet Jesus.

"THE KINGDOM OF HEAVEN."

The above is the heading of a new paper edited by Thomas Cook, who styles himself Jesus Christ II. He introduces himself as follows:—

"The Son of man is but a Son of man, as it has been foretold he would be; with loves, hopes, and desires, like unto other men; and the difference, if any, is that he is a more powerful instrument of inspiration than some others (for all mankind are inspired,) and 'to whom much is given much is required.' He is rather under than over the medium size—and has not yet seen his fortieth year. . . . He is living the life of a hermit, subsisting mainly upon bread and honey, which he procures by his daily toil—having forsaken the comforts of home, a beloved family, brothers, sisters, lands, goods, and chattels—all that he might serve Christ, his guardian and 'FATHER IN HEAVEN,' . . . . He appreciates the saying of his predecessor, 'that the greatest in the kingdom of heaven will be most like a little child.'"

Satan is making great efforts to deceive the people, and divert their attention from the real, personal coming of Christ, as foretold in the Scriptures. Every possible artifice is employed to blind the minds of the careless, and to quiet those who see the light. Let every child of God arouse, and sound the alarm. Do not stop because some sensitive ones think you are too earnest, but stir up every body to get ready for the day of the Lord. Jesus is coming,—coming SOON!

THE COST OF WAR.

There is no way, probably, in which a nation exhausts itself so quickly as by war. The exhaustion is as complete morally as financially. It works only ruin. It is Satan's harvest time; and when professors of religion and ministers join in and urge on the bloody strife, he is sure of a great ingathering to his ranks. This truth, perhaps, was never more applicable than in the present war.

In a lecture given by H. W. Beecher at Music Hall, Jan. 14th, he remarked as follows:—

"There has been $1,200,000,000 [one billion, two hundred million] of property sunk, wasted, worn out, annihilated. To be sure, a little of it remains in forts, and ships, and other forms of property; but mainly it has been lost beyond recovery. This is a gigantic sum, truly."

"I AM NOW READY."

When Paul came to the close of life, he used the language at the head of this article. If he could say I am now ready for a martyr's death, should not we be able to say, with great joy and a full assurance, I am now ready to welcome Jesus, and long for the day to arrive. After Paul had said, "I am now ready," he goes on to say, "There is laid up for me a crown of righteousness, which the Lord, the righteous judge, shall give me at that day; and not to me only, but unto all them also that love his appearing." Here we see the state of mind necessary to receive the crown,—we must LOVE the appearing of Christ. Having no special objections to a visit from an individual, and really loving his coming, are quite different states of mind. But what shall we think of those who are utterly opposed to his coming, and do not wish to hear a word about it? Is there any promise for such? Do they constitute a part of the bride? Will they be glad to see the Bridegroom? Can they say, as did Paul, "I am now ready?"

Dear reader, are you ready? Have you not had timely warning? Do you believe Jesus is soon coming, and are not ready? Why not? Are you living as well now as you were five or ten years since? If not, is it any wonder you do not feel ready? If, after several years' warning, you are less prepared now than years ago, will it be best for Jesus to delay his coming any longer on your account, in order for you to make any further preparation? Judging from the past, the presumption is you will be further from him than at the present time. It is to be feared that but few, even of those who profess to be looking for the coming of the Son of man, are ready to meet him; or as well prepared now, as in times past. Is this a safe way of living? We are assured that Christ is coming suddenly. The event will burst upon us like an earthquake shock, or lightning flash in a clear sky. No chance to prepare then. Hence we must be all ready when the event comes, or be left to perish with the wicked!

We understand the subject of the signs of his coming is on purpose to give the bride time to get ready if she was not so before. And it is to be expected that she will continually be in a better state of preparation as the day approaches. Is this the case with you, my brother? Do not turn this subject aside as one of no consequence. Our ALL is at stake. Eternal life is soon to be gained or lost. Let us run no risks of losing it. We shall be without excuse, if we are not ready when Jesus appears. We had warning in season, and it has been oft repeated. Shall we heed the warning voice, and at once prepare to meet the coming King?

We are well convinced that but few are awake to the perils of the times in which we are living, and the importance of entire consecration to the Lord. It is too late to seek a good name in this wicked world;—too late to make any compromise with carnal things. It is high time for us to be wholehearted christians, and cease all contentions, disputings, and wranglings; and to put away for ever all grudges, hatred, variance, evil speaking, if we expect a home in the kingdom.

We know not how to express our feelings better than by giving the following extract from a private correspondent:—

The Day of the Lord.

"DEAR BRO. GRANT:—Many new ideas, to me, have been impressed upon my mind while meditating upon the word of the Lord, in connection with impressions made by a dream I had some months past. At the time I had the dream, I was not living as I should have lived. I had got to sleep, or was most dead to the most momentous concerns of this life. I wish to make this confession, and acknowledge the Lord, as I believe, in taking this method to arouse me from the condition I had fallen into. Though the dream was short and simple, the subject of it is of vast importance to me, and others; and it was impressed upon my mind with great clearness and distinctness; and could I portray it in thunder tones, and with the startling vividness of the lightning, I should give but a faint idea of it. I thought I saw the day of the Lord coming; also the time it would be upon us. All was clear and distinct. Yet the coming of the great day of the Lord was far more prominent, or of more importance, than the time. I do not know as I can better describe the impression in my dream than to say, they are not aware of it; they do not see it; they misapprehend it. I refer to those that are looking for the Lord's soon coming. What I mean by misapprehension is this; many of those that are looking for the Lord's soon coming do not seem to be aware that they must be living in momentary readiness, lest the day overtake them as a snare. Their minds are diverted by other things, they are asleep, or are in a drowsy state; that is, in regard to their real condition, and the events that are transpiring around them. They are not aware that the day of the Lord is close upon them; perhaps are expecting some great event, or a sign, to admonish them of its approach.

I thought in my dream that this misapprehension was almost universal,—not entirely so. Though children of the light, professing to be looking for the coming of the Lord; yet there is danger of our not watching to keep our garments, lest we walk naked, and the wicked see our shame. 1 Thess. 5: 4. 'Ye, brethren, are not in darkness, that that day should overtake you as a thief.' It will overtake us as a thief if we are not careful. Luke 21: 34. 'And take heed to yourselves, lest at any time your hearts be overcharged with surfeiting, and drunkenness, and cares of this life, and so that day come upon you unawares.' Was there ever such a time of care of every description, except to serve God? We are living in a time when the Lord's injunction is peculiarly applicable; never was it more so. I understand, when that day comes, the end of time has come; that is, reckoned or revealed time. Probation ends, the day of grace is past. The gospel dispensation is closed, the fullness of the Gentiles will have come, the doom of the world will be sealed. No chance for the poor sinner after that. It will be said, Rev. 22: 11, 'He that is unjust, let him be unjust still; he which is filthy, let him be filthy still; he that is righteous, let him be righteous still; he that is holy, let him be holy still.' Luke 13: 24.—'Strive to enter in at the straight gate; for many, I say unto you, will seek to enter in, and shall not be able.' Why not be able? 25th verse. Because, 'the Master of the house' has 'risen up, and hath shut to the door.' The end of the world, or age, will come in a moment. The day of wrath will then commence.

Many passages of Scripture might be quoted in relation to the day of the Lord, and the events of that day. It is not my purpose to give my views of the order of the events that precede and follow the ushering in of that day. There are so many views in regard to it, it might not be profitable to give mine.

I want you to write something upon this subject to arouse the church to get ready for that day; to induce them to relinquish all undue anxious thoughts and cares about other subjects, which are comparatively nonessential. Try to persuade them to make a personal effort to be living in momentary readiness themselves, and try to have others do likewise. If I could give my view of the coming of the great day of the Lord, as presented to me in my dream, they would start as if aroused by a terrific peal of thunder in a clear day. They would not 'sleep as do others.' No! they would drop all care for any thing else, and make a personal preparation. Oh! I wish I could give the view I had of that day, and the condition I thought we were in that are looking for the Lord's coming. They are not aware of it, don't see it, don't believe it, though professing to. Have a kind of belief, but not a real one. There is great danger of only a part of the virgins having oil in their lamps. The rest will be too late. Perhaps I shall be one of them. The Lord helping me, I will try to live ready, that the day may not overtake me as a thief. If it does it will be my fault, for I believe the Lord has given me a warning by dream, and I expect its fulfillment. . . . .

At the time I had this dream, this was not a subject of my thoughts. A faint illustration has rested upon my mind since I had the dream: that is a terrific thunder storm arising from the horizon. We see the dense, black clouds roll up, ominous of the war of the elements; we hear the terrific peals of thunder, that make the earth tremble; we see the vivid lightning darting from it every moment; on it comes with seeming accelerated speed; and though we have a kind of present safety, yet our hearts throb with quickened force, and with breathless, anxious haste, we look for a covert, well knowing that devastation follows in its wake. So the coming of that day. The events that precede that day will be as the fitful gusts before the terrific hurricane.

I have felt so about this subject, that I thought I would write something for the Crisis, but I cannot write to do justice to the subject, nor my own feelings upon it. I write to ask you to write something upon this subject,—the day of the Lord. . . . I am afraid the day of the Lord will overtake many, that hope to be ready, unawares. I would like to say many things, tell many of my thoughts, and ask many questions in relation to this subject. As I understand the Bible, without any reference to my dream, the great day is close upon us. I spoke to a brother, who preaches and travels much, about my dream; he said the church was in the state I dreamed they were in."

THE ADVENT HERALD appears in a new dress, enlarged, in folio form, and looking nicely,—like a new year's gift. The Association has also commenced the publication of a Sunday School paper, called "The Youth's Visitor," edited by Dr. Hutchinson, which has a neat appearance.

Bro. Thos. G. Newman, editor and publisher of the Millennial Harbinger, has also commenced a Sunday School paper, edited by Bro. Judson Austin, which is well executed, and called "The Youth's Millennial Banner and Juvenile Instructor."

There appears to be an increasing interest in the minds of the people to spread the great truths of the Bible applicable to this age. We are glad to see people waking up and manifesting more interest in the salvation of perishing men.

THE CONSCRIPTION BILL.

There is quite a bright prospect that those who have conscientious scruples against fighting, and ministers, may be exempted. Congress is now at work on the Conscription Bill. The following is from the Boston Journal:—

"Senator Anthony has succeeded in having bona fide quakers virtually exempted, which will please the Friends who have been so exercised on this subject; and ordained clergymen will probably be favored in the same way."

A NEW WORK.

"NON-RESISTANCE, OR THE SPIRIT OF CHRISTIANITY RESTORED," by Wm. C. Thurman, author of "Sealed Book of Daniel Opened." 18mo., 72 pp. Price per one hundred, $10, postage 78 cents; per dozen, $1.60, postage 10 cts.; single copy 15 cts., postage 2 cts.

The above is the title of an interesting work, which we think every christian will love. It should have a wide circulation. We think it the best thing we have seen on the subject. We expect to have some in a few days.

For the World's Crisis.

BOOK NOTICE.

Let God be thanked that all men's minds are not given up to the great war, even in old Kentucky. Light has sprung up in a dark place. Bro. J. C. Waller, of Louisville, has issued a 12mo. work of 297 pages, at that place, on "The Second Coming of Christ; the Restitution of All Things, and our Lord's Personal Reign in his Millennial Kingdom on the Earth." Such is its title, and the book is written plainly, but with much beauty and vigor, and would interest all our brethren in the free States who are looking for Jesus. A thorough pre-millennial work, of the English Literalist stamp. The author is looking for the blessed consummation about the year 1868. He in a letter expresses the interest with which he has read our own volume, and a desire to read our Crisis and Advent Herald. His book has had a rapid sale in Louisville city, the first edition going off in a month. This is good news from what seems to us to be a dark, hard, far country. Send for the volume. Price $1.25, postage about 15 cents.

D. T. T.

Castleton, Vt.

For the World's Crisis.

BORROWED BOOKS!

My last article brought some home,—so I will try again.

Who has got my "Life of Martin Luther"?

Who has got my copy of "Bonar's Hymns"?

Who has got any other books belonging to me, or to any one else?

Send them home forthwith. "The wicked borroweth, and payeth not."

H. L. HASTINGS.

TOO PRECIOUS TO BE DESTROYED.

A poor family in Illinois, much afflicted with sickness, whose house was somewhat open to the wind and cold, sent to one of their neighbors for papers to paste over the cracks. Papers were given, and, among them, four copies of The World's Crisis. Looking at them first, their attention was fixed by what they read; and, thinking them too good to use for that purpose, they preserved them, as choice reading. In this way they have become interested in the great truths which the paper teaches, and are anxious to know more fully concerning the coming of Christ to reign on the earth; and now, through Bro. Bunnell, they ask to have the paper sent to them, if it can come free.

They shall have it. And somebody who has the Lord's money will send it along to pay for it. Let the poverty and affliction of the Lord's poor be lightened and cheered with the good news of the coming kingdom.

W. B. H.

A RESPONSE.

Convinced that time is short, and that what we do must be done at once, I feel like doing what little I can to spread the light of God's truth before a perishing world.

You ask, in last week's paper, "Who will be one?" to help extend its circulation this year, and get, if possible, four thousand new subscribers. I feel to say, by the help of the Lord, I will be one.

You will therefore please send "The World's Crisis and Second Advent Messenger to the following five new subscribers.

Yours in Christ, S. W. WORTHINGTON.

North Bennington, Vt.

A good beginning, Bro. W. Try again. Who shall we hear from next? Come, brethren, wake up! A great work is before us. Who will have a hand in it? Remember the words of the Lord Jesus, how he said,—"Behold, I come quickly! and MY REWARD is with me, to give to every man according as HIS WORK shall be."

W. B. H.

ANOTHER SLICE THAT GAVE A TASTE FOR THE WHOLE LOAF.—A correspondent writes from Albany, N. Y., Jan. 19th:—

"Mr. Miles Grant;—Dear Sir:—I found a part of a paper left in my store, called 'The World's Crisis,' published by you, and was so well pleased with it that, if you are still publishing it, you may send me a copy, and I will forward you one year's subscription price. Yours truly, [illegible]"

Our Tract Column.

THE NEW TRACT FUND.

Two Thousand Dollars.

We, the undersigned, agree to give the sums affixed to our names, for the purpose of raising TWO THOUSAND DOLLARS to aid the Christian Publication Society in the gratuitous distribution of tracts; and our subscriptions shall be paid at the call of the Treasurer, as soon as one half of the amount shall be subscribed.

Pledges and payments to Jan. 1st,	$395.20
M. ATKINS, pd.	1.00
LUCY A. HYDE, pd.	1.00
R. W. HILL, (pd. $2)	12.00
J. D. BROWN, (tracts sold)	2.00
MILES GRANT	60.00
PLEDGES PAID—S. Gilbert.

TRACTS.

Bro. Grant, and all concerned:—We here in Castleton,—Sherman, Smith, myself, etc.,—all think that the Tract Fund call should not be put far away in a corner, among the advertisements, appointments, etc., but kept on the second page, in a conspicuous place, with a list of donations, sums, etc., put in every week, and a brief call,—long or short,—be made under it for funds. Some one, in my judgment, is at fault in not making it more public every week. Do think of this, will you? The sum is too small for our fourth month of the fiscal year. D. T. TAYLOR.

So thinks Bro. Daniel T. Taylor. So I think, too. Some one is at fault, and till we find out who is to blame, I propose that Daniel T. Taylor give us a series of good, powerful calls on this subject, so that our Tract Fund shall not be set "in a corner" any more.

The fact is, I have tapped my brains so often for the Tract Column, that I think it high time for some one else to begin, and give me a chance to replenish. Besides, I am working night and day to get tracts and other publications made, and to prepare them for the press; and I am unable to attend to my own business, much less to write for the Tract Column. So Bro. Taylor will please report himself for duty at "the head of his column" weekly.

As to the two thousand dollars, the subscriptions, I confess, do look rather thin; perhaps owing to the fact that men are getting rich faster than usual this year, and that always makes them covetous and careless.

Do not, however, imagine that my work as Tract Agent for the C. P. S. cause stops because the funds hang back. By no means. I have this day received from the printers NINETY-THREE THOUSAND TRACTS, making a total of more than NINE HUNDRED THOUSAND PAGES for the Christian Publication Society; and I think of printing about as many more in a few days. As soon as the binder can finish up this lot of tracts, we shall set them flying, and we shall not wait for covetous people to pull out their purses to help, for if we did we should never do anything.

And now if any body wants to help pay for these tracts for the poor, or if any body wishes to buy tracts—1800 pages for $1—send on your donations or orders to MILES GRANT, Boston, Mass., forthwith. But let no man suppose that his refusing to pay for scattering tracts will stop their circulation. These that are printed will be finished up and paid for, if the Lord will, and more like them when needed. And if the brethren at large will not foot the bills, and the Publication Society cannot, then I know the man who will do it, and who will see that tracts are provided, with or without price, for a while at least. So send in your orders to MILES GRANT; and if you have got any money that the Lord wants you to give to scatter tracts, why,—you just keep it in your pockets IF YOU DARE!

H. L. HASTINGS.

Boston, Mass., Jan. 21st, 1864.

For the World's Crisis.

BOOKS—COLPORTERS.

There is reason to believe that the subject of circulating good books is not rightly estimated by us as a people, although a few see the great importance of this work, and follow it. Much could be said, but I will offer only a little now.

Preaching the word, is a great and good work; visiting the people, and talking to them of Christ, is very useful; scattering tracts is truly an important work in the gospel; and the influence of a family paper can scarcely be overvalued; but the circulating of good healthful books, on the various subjects of the plan of God, work of Christ, and duty of man, will accomplish a work which none of the others can.

Get a book into a family library, and there it remains in its proper place a quiet, silent instructor; is not thrown aside, nor torn up. It becomes household property, a family associate, and will be read and consulted. It speaks readily, silently, and impresses the mind. Its voice may be hushed, its instruction unheeded, for a time; yet it leaves on the mind the conviction that it has spoken truth, and truth worth noticing. Thus, little by little, society is shaped, minds are moulded, prejudice removed. When an opportunity is offered to hear a living preacher on the same subject, the heart is prepared to listen, as it would not be before reading. I have seen this demonstrated; many of my readers have also. Let me give a little experience here. Others have had the same.

Since I became a christian, I have circulated from five thousand to ten thousand copies of good books on various topics touching the "blessed hope," and tracts unnumbered, in Maine. "The Saints' Inheritance," by H. F. Hill, of which I have purchased over eleven hundred copies, has, to my knowledge, converted some five hundred persons to the truth on the restitution, and the kingdom of God; and many of them are now among our faithful waiters for the Lord. In several villages and towns where the ministry had entirely misled the community about us and our faith, I circulated ten, twenty, and thirty copies, with some tracts, and left them. This was six and seven years ago. The books were read, and lent, and re-read. Those who read were fed, and could not feed on their preacher's gospel afterwards. They have thirsted for the word of life. And now, as the result, they are loudly calling for our ministers to come and hold meetings; whereas, had they gone before they had read, they would not have heard them.

"The Voice of the Church," by D. T. Taylor, has produced the same effects. Dr. John Cummings' works, also. "Messiah's Throne," by J. Litch, and many other works of that class, have led the way. "The Reasons of my Hope," "Thessalonica," "Pauline Theology," "Great Controversy," and "Signs of the Times," by H. L. Hastings, and many other valuable works, which are now in market, are being circulated to great effect in our cause.

Neither nations nor religious societies are formed at once; nor are opinions or faith changed in a day, or a year. It takes much time to do it, and many efforts.

I allude to the above works because they are among the best and most useful that have been long at work; but there are many others. "Debt and Grace," and "Christ our Life," should have been mentioned.

WHO WILL SELL THEM?

But few ministers like to do it. I did not like to; yet I bore this cross, and went at it, because I knew it was a good work, and somebody should do it. When I got a good book into a family or a public library, I felt as I do when I have preached a sermon, because I knew the book would preach.

I will now tell why some of us do not like to sell books.

1st. It don't pay well to our pockets, because we often find poor ones who cannot buy, and we feel that we must give.

2d. We often trust them out, and before we go that way again, it is an old and poor debt.

3d. When we preach in a place and sell two or three books to the people at cost, or perhaps at a profit of enough to pay for the tracts we give away, the people think they have done us a great favor to buy our books, without giving us anything for preaching. Perhaps they pay us for books just what they would have given us without books.

4th. Some have laid out a few dollars to buy books to sell, and used it all up in this speculation, and got discouraged.

5th. Many will believe our object is to speculate on books, and this leads them to charge us with this evil among their neighbors, and it gives a bad influence.

These are grave difficulties indeed, but some surmount them all, and keep at it as best they can, while those disposed to act a wrong part must answer for it when Jesus comes.

WHO WILL ENLIST?

There are many young men, and some not young, who are not called to preach, who yet have hearts to do what they can. Some of you can do this work without the risk of such grave charges as the above. All other classes are expected to earn their living, except ministers,—"they must live by faith." You can become colporters, and sell good books—Bibles and gospel works—and earn your living by it. You cannot get rich, nor make wages as in other things; but if your circumstances will allow you to give your time (as many ministers do) for the good you can do, much can be done by you in Christ's cause, and in a little while you may rest in the coming kingdom of God. I. C. WELLCOME.

For the World's Crisis.

JOTTINGS IN A STORM.

I find myself at this time in the town of Lorraine, Jefferson Co., N. Y., at the pilgrim home of Bro. Benoni Stephens. I am detained here by one of the most severe storms ever witnessed in this country. It commenced last Thursday P. M., and is still raging with unabated fury. It has snowed since last evening about two feet, and the wind is fast filling it into heaps. In the vicinity of Mannsville, ten buildings have been unroofed by this furious storm, but no loss of life as far as heard from.

While the winds are howling, death is doing its work. There have fallen in this vicinity twenty-six victims to that direful scourge, diphtheria, mostly youth and middle-aged. The family of our beloved Bro. Miles has not escaped. They are left to mourn the loss of two beloved children, a son of fourteen, and a daughter of nineteen years. She was truly an example. She died, as she lived, strong in the Lord. Her dying words bespoke her faith. She did not expect to go to heaven, but to sleep in Jesus a short time. She chose the following text: "I shall be satisfied when I awake with thy likeness." What consolation to surviving friends to know that those they love are sleeping in Jesus; and that soon they will come forth to everlasting life!

Not only is death doing its work, but wasting and destruction are within our borders. War and bloodshed have come among us. The nations are angry. The storm is gathering. The world is preparing for the shock. Modern theologians, and the mass generally, are bewailing their forlorn condition. Nations are mourning over their blighted plans and blasted hopes. Men's hearts are failing them for fear, and for looking after those things that are coming upon the earth."

But how different with us. They shall not wonder, whose names are written in the Lamb's book of life. Prophecy is a light that shines in a dark place until the day dawns. We believe it. Therefore these things have not taken us unawares; neither will the day of the Lord, if we walk in the light. Then let the clouds gather; let the storm come. A calm must follow. Though the storm rend the walls that have been built with untempered mortar, and the builders of them fall with them, yet to the saints of God there will be a calm after the storm,—an eternal calm.

Then, dear brethren and sisters, let us gird up the loins of our minds and be sober, and hope to the end. Let every one that can sound the alarm; for, truly, the harvest is great, but the laborers are few. O, how much we need more laborers in this State! The fields are already white. The calls are many. Shall we leave them unheeded? or will others volunteer to help sound the alarm?

One or two men could be well sustained in Northern N. Y., if God sent men. Living as I do in Syracuse, it is a long ride for me. My monthly tour has been rising of three hundred miles; and, for the year past, over five thousand miles,—preaching constantly, not having been with my family to average four days in a month. Can mortal man stand this? He may for a time, but not long. He will certainly wear out.

There is nothing in the world that would cause me to absent myself from those I love above all upon earth, but the gospel of the kingdom. I see the sword coming, and am not willing to have the blood of others found in my skirts. Therefore I go forth, willing to make every necessary sacrifice to warn the world; not feeling by any means that I make all the sacrifice; for that beloved wife, and those children, they are bearing their share in the same. While I am absent, and going from place to place, and from house to house, I can hardly find time to be lonely; but how different at home! Many a lonely hour is experienced by her who has joyfully consented to bear her share in the sacrifices of the gospel, by taking the responsibility that must necessarily fall upon her, in the absence of a husband and father. Her sacrifice is greater than my own. And those children,—how heavily time moves along! Days seem like weeks, weeks like months, and months like years; and I hear them wish the Lord would come, so that "pa" would not be away all the time.

Shall all these sacrifices go unrewarded? No, thank the Lord! He says, "Behold, I come quickly; and my reward is with me, to give to every man according as his work shall be." Then, beloved brethren in the ministry, gird up the loins of your mind; be strong; strengthen the weak hands; confirm the feeble knees. Behold, your God will come with a recompense, and he will save you. And you, dear sisters, on whose shoulders falls a heavy burden, while yours is absent sounding the alarm, be of good cheer; and may God bless you in your lonely hours. May you be like one of old, ready to wash the Savior's feet with your tears, and wipe them with the hairs of your head, if necessary. Little does the world or the church know the sacrifice you are making. They can enjoy the society of those they love, by their own fireside, having all that heart can wish; and are satisfied with giving a few shillings or a few dollars a year; while the servant of God, care-worn, fatigued by over work, and sometimes suffering want, must face the storm, and sacrifice everything in this life, to bear the last and most solemn message to the world,—until, worn out by labor, borne down by great mental effort, he bids adieu to all he loves on earth, and finds rest at last in an early grave, leaving his wife a widow, and his children orphans.

Thus we might number a Fitch, a Pinney, a Howell, a Turner, a Grew, and others, who have fought the good fight, have kept the faith, and with Paul are awaiting the crown. Our victory is yet to be won. Then let one and all put on the whole armor of God, that we may be able to stand; praying always with all prayer and supplication in the Spirit. And may we all be gathered at last, is my prayer. C. B. TURNER.

Mannsville, N. Y.

For the World's Crisis.

CORRECTION.

BRO. GRANT:—Will you please correct two mistakes which occurred in the Crisis in my article, "What is a Jew?" In the second column, one-third from the top, I am made to say that the thirty-ninth verse of the 31st of Jeremiah, is fulfilled under this covenant, when it should read the thirty-fourth verse. Again, near the close of the article, I show that the Prince spoken of in Ezk. cannot be the Lord Jesus Christ in the age to come, as some teach, from the fact that this Prince offers a sin-offering for HIMSELF as well as for all the people. I then state such an application would be worse than to apply the 72d Psalm to Christ in the age to come (as believers in that theory do) where it says, "Prayer also shall be offered for him continually," etc. Instead of this quotation, the eighth verse of the 2nd Psalm is quoted, which makes quite a mistake. B. MATHEWSON.

For the World's Crisis.

PIONEERING.

BRO. GRANT:—On learning that the President of our conference and family were sick, we started the 10th of December to visit them and the brethren at Floyed. The weather and going were bad, so that we only reached there in time for Sunday service. The week was spent in visiting, and preaching part of the time. At this place I have preached more than in any other in the State; and yet, the Lord favored me with a fair hearing, and a good congregation. Some good, I think, was done, as some came to hear that once would not. I kept up the meetings until the 25th, when Eld. Hough came to help me, which added to the interest of the meeting.

On the 30th of December we started to fill an appointment at Earlville, about one hundred miles from Floyed, and on my way to quarterly meeting. We stopped at one of Bro. Hough's homes, supposing that there would be free air; but we found that they had learned that Bro. Hough held to the unconscious state of the dead, which had created some prejudice; so I hitched up my horse and we started and faced a terrible storm, some two miles. Our child cried, my wife got chilled and frosted, and we were compelled to stop. The family were not professors. Here we were detained by the storm three days. It snowed and blowed, and the thermometer was thirty-six degrees below zero. The people were very kind, and I was on much less expense than I could have expected. May the Lord reward them. This was two miles south of Bradford, Chickasaw Co. I was compelled to disappoint my audience once in my life.

We started on Sunday morning, which I should not have done but for the meeting at Wilton Junction. I was caught up there with my buggy, so I loaded it on a jumper made for that purpose, and now for the trial. The snow drifts on the big prairies were like the waves of the sea. It was very cold, and when we had ridden but three miles we all tipped over into the top of the buggy. The team was kind and stood still till we could get out. Before us was six miles without a tree, or but one house, and I had to walk all of the way, wading through the snow, hanging on one side, then the other, to keep from the like treatment we had had. Some of the time the team was down in the snow, and thus we broke roads for three days, and the fourth brought us home, which in good going could have been done in two days.

I then unloaded, and on Thursday, Jan. 7th, started for quarterly meeting, in hope that we could find a way through, but here was the trial. It was difficult and attended with some expense, as it was about one hundred miles, and this place was a missionary field, and my circumstances were such that I needed the help of churches solicited by the annual conference for that purpose; and as not one had communicated with me, after I had traveled one day, I turned back, which I should not have done, if I could have reached the meeting before it was over. So the brethren will see that I had a will to do. I had just frosted my fingers and toes for the want of necessary comforts for traveling.

The brethren at Floyed did well, as they gave me a new coat, which I much needed. Now I am at home, and have not done much in the cause, as I have been obliged to work, while sinners are perishing all around me. May the Lord stir up the people to see their situation. Brother, pray for us while pioneering in the far West. May we be kept by his power unto salvation.

Yours, looking for redemption soon,
PETER. S. W. DEYO.

Strawberry Point, Iowa.

Correspondence.

From Bro. L. Boutell.

BRO. GRANT:—Saturday and Sunday, the 9th and 10th. I visited and preached at South Ashburnham. I found a pleasant, peaceable and thriving state of things there. It was cold weather, but the little flock with others came together, Saturday evening, and we had a free time in speaking to them the words of life.

Sunday forenoon was devoted to the Sunday School concert. It was interesting and profitable. I was delighted to hear the scholars repeat their well-selected lessons. This, with the reading and singing, made a variety; and all was adapted to benefit the old and the young. The sentiments advanced were christian, and the influence was good,—leading to the practice of the golden rule, and inspiring all to render good for evil, blessing for cursing. Bro. Merriam takes the oversight of the school, and seems well adapted to his place. I shall wish them prosperity and abundant success.

What is more interesting than to see the young interested in the study of that word, and of principles calculated to make wise unto salvation? I hope to see more interest manifested in our Advent congregations in this department of christian instruction. Here the old, middle-aged and young, can all, with heart and hand, unite in a work that will make all better.

In the afternoon and evening, I spoke to interesting congregations, and all seemed desirous to hear the word of God which is a Savior of life to all who believe and obey it. The church are well united, and love seems to abound, with a desire to bear more fruit, and so be Christ's disciples. L. BOUTELL.

From Bro. C. N. Buzzell.

BRN. AND SRS. SCATTERED ABROAD:—I am located ten miles up the Androscoggin River from the settlement, camping out; have the privilege, by the providence of God, of laboring six days in the week, and telling the story of the cross. I often think of the dear saints, and long to see them, but cannot at present; but expect we shall soon be gathered into the kingdom of God. I feel that it is near, and the prayer of my poor heart is, Come, Lord Jesus, and come quickly! My heart is sick of this dark and dreary earth.

Our life here is fraught with trials and sorrows. I realize that my most severe trial is just ahead. I expect Cæsar will soon lay claim to me, and I want the brethren to pray for me, that I may stand firm, though I lose my life. I do want eternal life, and an abundant entrance into the kingdom. Your Bro. in Christ, C. N. BUZZELL.

From Bro. S. W. Worthington.

BRO. GRANT:—The Lord is doing a good work in this place. Bro. Wm. I. Blanchard, of Savoy, Me., is laboring here, and the Lord has been working in mighty power. A number have come out from the Baptist church, and taken a decided stand for the truth. Backsliders are being reclaimed, and others are still coming. Four rose for prayers last night. We have meetings every night, and the Lord is reviving his work. Of a truth, he is on our side. The evil one is also at work. The churches are in trouble. Praise the Lord, the sheep will hear his voice. We bless God forever. Pray for us, that we may be guided in the right, and be saved in his kingdom at last. S. W. WORTHINGTON.

North Bennington, Vt.

SISTER E. A. BARTLETT writes from West Stafford, Ct.:—"The Lord is graciously pouring out his Spirit in this place, and both the aged and the young are being brought to a saving knowledge of the truth. Others, in the meridian of life, who have long entrenched themselves in Universalism, have embraced the truth in the love of it, and are rejoicing in the love of God. To God be all the glory."

Obituaries.

PRESCOTT DICKINSON.

Died of catarrhal consumption, Dec. 27th, 1863, at Somerville, Mass., Bro. Prescott Dickinson, aged sixty-five.

Among those who for the past twenty years have been looking for the coming of the Lord, few laymen have been better or more widely known than was the subject of this notice. Converted under the labors of the late Rev. Wm. Miller, of Low Hampton, N. Y., he became a member of the Baptist church. But being an earnest student of the Bible, he became thoroughly convinced of the practical and blessed character of our Lord's second advent, and that the event is at hand. Being so persuaded, and notwithstanding the bitter opposition of the sectarian world, he conferred not with flesh and blood, but, like an honest man,—as he was,—he freely sacrificed influence and abundant worldly wealth, to help in publishing to the world a faith which to his own soul he found unspeakably precious. And in this "confidence of a certain faith in the comfort of a reasonable, religious, and holy hope," he continued to the last.

A man of extensive information, blessed with a worldly competency and a hospitable heart; of eminently social, frank, and genial manners, it was impossible that he should be without numerous and warmly attached friends. A large attendance of such were present at the funeral of our brother, and we doubt not a many times larger number will feel the throbbing of an afflicted heart when they read this. Our brother had buried a former companion,—a faithful, godly woman—and yet leaves a christian widow and five children to lament his death.

The funeral was at the Baptist church, North Cambridge, where, in a discourse on the resurrection of the dead, the writer endeavored to point out the manner and time when, according to the Holy Scriptures, and the teaching of an Apostolic Church, we shall "have our perfect consummation and bliss, both in body and soul."

"Blessed are the dead who die in the Lord." May our last end be like that of those who sleep in Jesus. P. B. MORGAN.

BENJAMIN H. STEVENS.

Died in Orange, N. H., Jan. 14th, 1864, of diptheria, Benjamin H., oldest son of Samuel H. and Belinda W. Stevens, aged sixteen years, eight months and twenty-eight days.

Again has death entered this once lovely and happy family, and taken a loved son and brother from them. Vain was the aid of medical skill; in vain did his friends watch over him and administer to all his wants. Death, the enemy of man, triumphed. Heavy truly is the blow that has again for the fourth time fallen upon the almost heart-broken parents, brother and sister. But they are not called to mourn as those that have no hope.

After an illness of four days, Benjamin calmly bade adieu to the weeping circle of friends, taking them one by one by the hand, exhorting them to get religion, and obtaining promises that they would be good christians and meet him in the kingdom. Not only did he warn those present, but, to his absent associates and friends, messages were sent to be good christians, and be ready to meet him in the kingdom. O may that death-bed scene leave a lasting impression, and those promises then made never be forgotten. At half-past seven in the morning of the 14th, he calmly fell asleep in Jesus, to await the voice that shall call him from the tomb. S. K. FORD.

EMMA ANNETTE TRECARTIN.

Died in Boston, Jan. 16th, 1864, of scarlet fever, Emma Annette, daughter of David and Hannah Trecartin, aged three months and fourteen days.

An only child, taken from parents whose hearts bleed at the stroke. May divine grace prepare them for salvation in that blessed day, when the children "shall come again from the land of the enemy," and shall enter the presence of the Lord, where there shall be no more death.

"Yet these, new rising from the tomb,
With lustre brighter far shall shine,
Revive with ever during bloom,
Safe from diseases and decline." N. L. H.

ANN HEMENWAY.

Died in Camden, Me., Sister Ann, wife of Harrison Hemenway, of typhoid fever, Dec. 16th, aged forty-five years.

Our sister leaves a husband and nine children to mourn her loss. Truly it was a house of mourning. For more than two months the fever has been raging in our brother's family. Two have fallen by the same disease before his wife. Jane S. died Oct. 8th, aged twenty-two years. Mary Etta, Nov. 22nd, aged eight years and eight months. Our dear brother and two of his children were confined to the house, but Bro. Hemenway's hope is firm that he shall soon meet them where the last tear will be wiped away. Her funeral was attended by the writer. S. K. PARTRIDGE.

SAMUEL P. ROGERS.

Died, of consumption, in Stowe, Mass., Dec. 26th, 1863, Samuel P. Rogers, son of Bro. Samuel Rogers, aged eighteen years, six months and six days.

In his last sickness, being convinced of the shortness of his life and the necessity of preparation for life eternal, he gave his heart to the Lord, and found joy and peace in believing. Leaving evidence to his father and family of sins forgiven, acceptance in Jesus Christ as his Savior, he shouted praises to God, and fell asleep, to wait the call to judgment. God bless the bereaved, sorrow-stricken ones, and grant them that gospel consolation derived from the hope of a resurrection to life.

MYRON SMITH.

Died at Little Rock, Ark., Nov. 20th, 1863, Bro. Myron Smith, aged nineteen years, six months, and nineteen days.

He enlisted in the 27th Iowa Co. G., and was sick some six months. He was much beloved by those who knew him. Sermon by the writer, from Job. 19: 25, 26. PETER S. W. DEYO.

LEVI BAILEY.

Died in South East, N. Y., Jan. 16th, 1864, Levi Bailey, aged seventeen years, one month, and ten days.

Eld. John Dixon delivered a discourse, founded on 1 Peter, 1: 24, 25, to an attentive audience. HACHALIAH BAILEY.

Summary of News.

DOMESTIC.

Newbern, N. C., Jan. 18th. The wholesale conscription law is creating great consternation and excitement in the western portion of North Carolina, where preparations are being made to resist it. Public meetings are being held, some of which openly repudiate the Southern Confederacy and favor a return to the Union.

The Raleigh Standard says:—

"If the civil law is to be trampled under foot by a suspension of the writ of habeas corpus, and every able-bodied man from sixteen to sixty-five placed in the army, and the rights of States to be swept away, the people of North Carolina will take their own affairs into their own hands, and proceed in convention assembled to vindicate their liberties and their privileges. They will not submit to a military despotism. They will not submit to the destruction of their personal and civil rights in this or any other war. What we say we know to be so.

A vast majority of our people are already excited and restless on account of the threatened encroachments on their liberties by the Congress at Richmond, and we most respectfully warn the members of that body not to kindle a flame which no effort can extinguish. Pass those measures and the people of North Carolina will rise in their majesty and assert their sovereignty. There is no power to prevent them from doing this, and woe to the official character who shall attempt to turn the arms of the Confederate soldiers against the people of this State. North Carolina will not be the slave of either the Congress at Richmond or Washington. She is this day as she has been from the first, the Keystone of the Confederate arch. If that stone should fall the arch will tumble."

San Francisco, Jan. 19th. News from the City of Mexico to Dec. 24th, Orizaba Dec. 22d, and Guadalajara to Jan. 5th, are received here. On the 18th of December, Gen. Dios attacked Orizaba, occupied by the French and Mexican traitors, and captured the city and garrison by assault. The traitors taken prisoners were all shot. This is considered an important achievement as Orizaba commands the French communications with Vera Cruz.

The Franco-Mexican papers published in the city of Mexico abuse Minister Corwin on account of his suppressed sympathy for the Juarez government. Some Frenchmen and their Mexican sympathizers had "charivaried" him. Guardalajara was occupied by the French on the 5th of January, without opposition. The Mexicans were making all possible efforts to resist the French at Cobina, Gen. Uragua having 12,000 men assembled in the road, which the French must pass.

New York, Jan. 20th. The Times' Washington dispatch says an intelligent printer from Richmond states that the rebels are pushing into the field every male from sixteen to sixty-five. Lee's army has not received many reinforcements, but Johnston's army has been heavily augmented.

He has no doubt that the rebels will soon consent to an exchange of prisoners, as they want their men back in the field, and our prisoners are a hindrance to them. The construction of iron-clads at Richmond had been abandoned, and the iron sent to Charleston and Savannah to complete several vessels being built there. A universal feeling of terror and despondency prevails at the South, and it is with difficulty that the government is able to stem the current of popular feeling setting against it.

San Francisco, Jan. 21st. A letter from Guadalajara of the 6th inst. contradicts the Mexican news received from Havanna. It states that the French, numbering five thousand, under Gen. Bazaine, occupied La Potolin on the 4th inst. without opposition. The people kept quiet. Many of the wealthy Mexicans had previously left. Uraga, with eight thousand Mexicans, was prepared to make a stand in the mountain defiles, leading to Bolivia. It was reported that Gen. Bazaine would not advance toward Colina, but would open a way to some Pacific port; the latter being the most important undertaking, considering his distance from Vera Cruz, and the impracticability of getting supplies thence. Should the reports be confirmed that Miramon had been defeated at Callaja, and that Dias had driven the French from Orizaba, the result of Gen. Bazaine's campaign would amount to nothing.

President Juarez was at Zacatecas, where Doblado had assembled a large army, and there the French are destined to meet a more resolute defense than elsewhere west of the city of Mexico.

The traitor Gen. Mejia had occupied San Luis Potosi, and Gen. Negrete in endeavoring to capture the place was desperately defeated.

New York, Jan. 22nd. The World has a letter from Chattanooga, 9th, which contains an extract of a letter to a deserter from the 10th South Carolina Regiment from his sister, stating that large amounts of machinery and other heavy material are being removed from Richmond to Columbia. She believes it looks like the evacuation of the Confederate capital.

Under the head of "A Few Facts," the Richmond Whig presents the following statement of the rebel condition:—

"Three thousand men in Longstreet's corps are barefoot; Johnston's army is suffering terribly for want of blankets and clothing; Lee's soldiers are destitute of socks and other necessary clothing; and the whole energies of the Confederacy are summoned to supply the demand; the prospect for clothing next year is dark and gloomy; it cannot be got through the blockade, and there are no materials in the home market. The sources both of leather and wool are diminishing every month; the supply of food is equally scant; very little bacon is left; beef is going, and mutton would not feed great armies, even could it be had; the crops are failing, and prices constantly going up; besides, there is no labor, without which there can be no production; the conscription is taking to the ranks all the whites, and the negro will not work. Even if he would, he could not prevent famine, which would bring insurrection with it. Then, without crops, horses cannot be fed, and an army without horses is a man without limbs. Even now, horses sufficient to serve the purposes of the existing army are obtained with the greatest difficulty, so that it is utterly impossible to double the army and increase the trains, as some extravagantly talk of doing; still further, besides wagons and trains, muskets, cannon and ammunition must be had, and these it is not possible to procure. There is now only a bare sufficiency of muskets and cannon to supply present needs, and as to ammunition, since Charleston and Wilmington have been closed, and the nitre beds of Tennessee torn from our grasp, the supply can never be more than equal to the demands of the present army."

GIFT OF THE PRINCE OF WALES TO HARVARD COLLEGE LIBRARY.—The Prince of Wales has made a valuable present to Harvard College, accompanied by the following letter:—

Sandringham, Nov. 5th, 1863.

Sir:—I am desired by the Prince of Wales to say, in answer to your letter of the 22d ult., that it will give him very great pleasure to present to the Library of Cambridge University a copy of the photographs of the Samaritan Pentateuch taken during the visit of his Royal Highness to Nabloos.

The Prince of Wales desires me to add that he will always be glad of any opportunity which may enable him to evince, in however slight a manner, the lively sense which he entertains of the kindness and hospitality which he received during his visit to the United States; and that with these recollections he cannot fail cordially to reciprocate the wish to which you have given expression, that nothing may occur to interrupt the friendship which ought ever to subsist between the old country and the new.

I have the honor to be, sir,
Your most obedient servant,
HERBERT FISHER, Private Secretary.

The above note is an answer to the request of a clergyman in Cambridge for a photograph of what claims to be the oldest MS. in the world for Harvard College Library. The Samaritans profess that it is more than three thousand years old, and by the grandson of Aaron.

THE AMERICAN DEBT.—We see a curious calculation in an American paper, to the effect that the estimated value of all the property of the United States, real and personal, is about thirty thousand millions of dollars, and that the war debt will, at the end of 1864, amount to four thousand millions, about one seventh of the whole. This will not, of course, represent the entire expenditure, there being much destruction of private property besides, but it is a fearful proportion. The seventh acre, seventh cow, seventh dollar, &c., of every man's property will thus be clean gone. But the remarkable portion of the calculation is that the whole debt of the United States will, in the event anticipated, just amount to the valuation of the slaves some three or four years ago. The slave-holders asked their Northern opponents:—"Are you prepared to pay us four thousand millions, which is the market value of our slaves?" Well, the North will soon have paid the price, and a great deal of her best blood besides. Will she obtain the equivalent?—Quebec Mercury.

☞ Fears are entertained that the Atlantic cable will not be laid next year, as it had been intended it should be. The many experiments on the plans in the construction of the cable have consumed much time, and are likely to consume a great deal more before they are done with. It will therefore be impossible for the contractors to complete the construction of the whole cable in season to lay it in the summer of next year, as it can only be laid in the summer, a portion of the work will probably have to be delayed until the summer of 1865.

☞ There are many signs of change in France. A Government orator recently admitted, in the Chamber, that political parties were not defunct; that "they were only hidden, and, like white ants, under ground, but their workings were not less dangerous." A Professor, lecturing in the School of Legislation, said: "A corrupt man cannot possibly found a durable dynasty." The allusion was received with profound applause.

Items.

☞ A company of cavalry, called the Union Light Guard Ohio Volunteers, have arrived at Washington, to form a body-guard for the President.

☞ Hilo, one of the Sandwich Island group, produced ten million pounds of sugar last year, one plantation alone netting 800,000 pounds.

☞ Fuel is very scarce now in Nashville. A cord of wood brings thirty dolllars in greenbacks.

☞ Letter postage for any distance in the Confederate States is ten cents for each half ounce.

☞ Magruder is concentrating his forces on the Brazos river, thirty miles from the coast, and is intrenching.

☞ The Mormons are operating largely in some portions of Canada. Forty-seven converts were recently baptized at Chatham.

☞ The Newbern correspondent of the Traveler says he has authentic intelligence that the men who compose the present State government of North Carolina, including Gov. Vance, are doing all they can to get their State back into the Union.

☞ A gentleman from Mississippi says the rebel conscription is being enforced, but the conscripts desert about as fast as they are collected.

☞ Five or six hundred rebel soldiers made a raid upon rebel sutlers at Orange Court House Dec. 24th, and robbed one of them of $40,000, another of $10,000, and a third of $1000.

☞ Gen. Banks has issued a proclamation for a State election for Governor, &c., of Louisiana on the 22d of February.

☞ The Richmond Whig thinks the future of the South is involved in the next spring campaign in Northern Georgia.

☞ The Mississippi at St. Louis is frozen over, and teams are crossing on the ice.

Notices.

A Liberal Offer.

Being satisfied that time is short, and that what is done must be done quickly; and feeling anxious to do what we can to arouse a sleeping world and church, we make the following liberal offer:—

Any one who will send three or more new subscribers to the Crisis for six months or one year, with advance pay for the same, shall receive one third the value of the money sent, in any of our books and tracts they may select. For instance, if they send three dollars, they receive one dollar's worth of books or tracts; for six dollars, we send them two dollars' worth; for twelve dollars, four dollars' worth, etc.

Let every reader take hold of the work in earnest, and help scatter tracts, books and papers like autumnal leaves.

MILES GRANT, per order of
Publishing Committee.

Notice.

To the brethren in Northern New York, in Harrisburgh, Martinsburgh, and Copenhagen. The furious storm and the great depth of snow has prevented me from meeting you according to appointment in the Crisis; and am obliged to return home to fill other engagements, after being weather-bound for nearly two weeks. As soon as my present appointments are fulfilled, I shall try again. Be of good cheer, dear brethren; these storms will soon be over. Gird up the loins of your mind and be strong. I expect that Bro. Miles and Bro. Stephens will be with you soon.

Mannsville, N. Y. C. B. TURNER.

Meeting in Erie County, N. Y.

C. F. Sweet and C. B. Turner will commence a meeting in Newstead, Erie Co., N. Y., on Tuesday evening, Feb. 9th, at 7 o'clock P. M., and continue over the following Sunday, or longer, the Lord will. All the brethren in the surrounding country are invited to attend. Yes, come with your hearts full of faith and the Holy Spirit, consecrating yourselves and your substance to the service of God, and praying for his blessing upon the meeting, and also upon the community. O Lord, let us have thy help. C. F. SWEET.

Meeting in Starks, Me.

There will be a protracted meeting at Starks, Me., commencing Friday evening, Jan. 29th. A general invitation is given to all our brethren and sisters to come and lay hold of the work of God in earnest.

L. L. HOWARD.
D. M. HANSCOM.

Maine Central Quar. Conference.

This conference is expected to be holden at the Town House in Rome, commencing Thursday, March 3d, at 6 o'clock, P. M. Come, brethren, let us come up to the help of the Lord, and encourage and strengthen each other. Watchmen and brethren of other conferences are invited. Provision will be made for all. Call on Eld. L. L. Howard, Bros. Martin, Watson, Fletcher, Bleasdell, and others. Let us meet in the spirit of the truth, prepared to do the commandments of our Master with humility. D. W. GRIFFIN, Clerk.

[Advent Herald, please copy.]

Notice.

The Lord willing, we will commence a protracted meeting in Amboy, Lee Co., Ill., Wednesday evening, Feb. 3d, where Bro. D. S. Clark may appoint. Let us see a good gathering at this meeting, all full of the love of God, ready to work for the salvation of perishing souls.

D. R. & M. S. MANSFIELD.

Conference.

The church worshiping at Lowell Street Chapel, Boston, contemplate inviting a Conference of brethren and preachers within a few weeks. Particulars hereafter. H. L. H.

Appointments.

We would say to our preaching Brethren that it is necessary we should receive their appointments as early as TUESDAY MORNING, as our paper goes to press about noon; otherwise they will not be inserted till the week following.

LOWELL STREET CHAPEL, BOSTON, CORNER OF CAUSEWAY AND LOWELL STREETS. Meetings are held regularly three times every Sunday, and Tuesday and Friday evenings. Seats free.

APPOINTMENT FOR LOWELL STREET CHAPEL.

H. L. Hastings .... Sunday, Jan. 31st and onward for the present.

APPOINTMENTS FOR BRISTOL, CT.

S. B. Munn .... Sunday, Feb. 14th
Bro. St. John .... Sunday, Feb. 28th

Concord, N. H. .... Jan. 31st
Portsmouth, N. H. .... Feb. 7th
Haverhill, Mass. .... Feb. 14th
A. SIMPSON.

New Durham Ridge .... Jan. 31st
Moultonborough Centre .... Feb. 7th
Ossipee, Leighton Corner .... Feb. 14th
N. HARTSHORN.

God willing, I purpose to be with the friends in Whitakerville, Vt., Jan. 30th and 31st, and longer if profitable. Friends may address me there till otherwise notified. M. MATHEWS.

Windham Centre, M. E. .... Jan. 31st
B. S. EMERY.

Pittsfield, N. H. .... Sunday, Jan. 31st
Lawrence, Mass. .... Feb. 7th
J. G. SMITH.

Biddeford, Me. .... evenings, Feb. 4th, 5th, and 6th, and over the following Sunday.
N. D. REED.

Lawrence, Mass .... Sunday, Feb. 7th
JOSEPH W. WHITE.

Agawam, Mass .... Sunday, Feb. 7th
P. S. BUTLER.

Montreal, (Bonaventure Hall), Tuesday evening, Jan. 26th, and every evening for two weeks, including Lord's days, Jan. 31st and Feb. 7th. Brethren, pray for us.
MILES GRANT.

Haverhill, Mass .... Jan. 31st
Danielsonville, Ct .... Feb. 7th and 14th
J. W. BRITTAN.

Hoosick, N. Y. .... Friday evening, Feb. 5th and over Sunday, the 7th.
M. BATCHELLOR.

New Haven, Ct. .... Sunday, Feb. 7th
New Britain .... Sunday, Jan. 31st
R. WILLIAMS.

Albany, N. Y. .... Jan. 31st
Seneca Falls, N. Y. .... Feb. 7th and 14th and through the week.
I hope to see friends from abroad. Come one, come all.
S. S. BREWER.

Fisherville, N. H. .... Jan. 31st
Z. FORD.

South Windsor, (at Bro. Ellmore's) .... Jan. 27th
B. WM. WILKINS.

Warehouse Point, Ct. .... Jan. 31st
I. B. POTTER.

North Sutton, N. H., (Meeting-house) .... Jan. 31st
J. COUCH.

Vernon, Vt. .... Feb. 7th
GEO. CHAMPLIN.

Carlisle .... Sunday, Jan. 31st
Groton, (where Bro. Putnam may appoint), Sunday, Feb. 7th.
B. SPAULDING.

Melvin Village .... Jan. 31st
Meredith Center .... Feb. 7th
T. W. PIPER.

Litchfield, (Waterman school-house, with Bro. H. D. Reed. .... Jan. 29th to 31st
R. R. YORK.

Scitico .... Feb. 7th
R. E. LADD.

Northfield, Ct. .... Jan. 31st
Wrightville, Ct. .... Feb. 7th
C. GOODRICH.

Shall commence a meeting at Hope Corner, Me., Thursday evening, Feb. 18th, and continue over the Sabbath, where Bro. Payson appoints.
S. K. PARTRIDGE.

Fairhaven .... Jan. 31st
W. S. CAMPBELL.

East Stoneham, (where J. Howe may think proper.) Feb. 5th, and over Sunday the 7th.
T. JORDAN.

Warehouse Point .... Sunday, Jan. 31st
WM. J. HALE.

Exeter, R. I. .... Jan. 30th–31st
Lafayette, R. I. .... Feb. 7th
The Plains, Appanaug .... Feb. 14th
River Point, R. I. .... Feb. 21st–28th
I desire to fill up the week as brethren may arrange.
J. K. BALLOWS.

CLARK'S HALL, RICHMOND, R. I.

Augustus Durfee .... Jan. 31st

Vernon, Vt. .... Sunday, Jan. 31st
J. HEMENWAY.

Edinboro', Erie Co., Pa., Jan. 30th till Feb. 3d.
Brethren, please arrange for these meetings, and pray about them.
JOS. D. BROWN.

Bristol .... Sunday, 10 1-2 o'clock, A. M., Jan. 31st
Honeoye .... Sunday, 2 o'clock, P. M., Jan. 31st
Dansville .... Sunday, Feb. 7th
F. BURR.

Lawrence, Mass. .... Sunday, Jan. 31st
Concord, N. H. .... Sunday, Feb. 7th
Exeter, N. H. .... Feb. 14th, 21st, and 28th
A. ROSS.

Charleston, R. I., (in the stone meeting-house), Feb. 7th
RUFUS W. PEIRCE.

Business.

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

Mrs. M. E. GOODWIN—Rectified. $2.00; pays to No. 472.

SAMUEL J. BASSFORD—Came to hand; all right.

ELLA S. BENTON—Sr. M. K. Prescott resides in St. Louis; Sr. N. M. Henry in Bunker Hill, Ill.

L. WOOD—The $2.00 was received.

Mrs. D. LEWIS—Right; 447.

JESSE GAY—Right; G. W. to 424. Is it to be continued? Have none on hand of the Bible you call for. What shall we do with the money?

CASH RECEIPTS TO JAN. 20, 1864.

The present No. of the Crisis is 434.

The No. which follows your name, is the No. to which your money pays.

Deduct the one from the other, and you will see how far you have paid in advance, or how much is due the office.

Make a memorandum of the same, and you will be reminded when your subscription expires.

N. W. Jones 442, H. B Flanders 449, E. Flanders 431, Wm Blaisdill 458, T Frantman 458, Wm H Caswell 458, B Moody 455, A Lord 457, O Nichols 458, D Newton 432, J M Corliss 443, Mrs M Bucklin 402, S Morse 443, S S Hammon 458, J A Reynolds 410, A Cook 458, Mrs L Kennedy 458, S Hussey 458, J G Fry 456, W H Peyton 418, H D Law 457, B Waterworth 458, J Douglass 432, J Bigwood 483, L Simons 458, S Thurlow 458, Wm Wallace 445, A Williams 455, P Williams 458, H Eaton 445,—$1.00 each.

J A Trowbridge 458, G W White 462, A Parry 476, Wm Wellman 484, S H Perry 484, A C Hawkins 484, T S Baley 484, H C McCune 484, S French 468, L Burgess 507, I Bonney 484, Dr O Odell 491, S Dumbleton 423, J Wheaton 483, H Hartman 484, B Luther 482, S W Worthington 476, W F Collier 476, I Davis 486, J Waterworth 484, E Bryss 483, W F Leathe 468, S A Alley 418,—$2.00 each.

D Trecartan 442, S Bassett 435, D Gates 443, H Persons 442, Mrs M S Hall 445, J Morse 445, A Rockwood 445, F Rockwood 445, J N Snyder 457, O George 443, C H Miles 445, M J Pease 443, A Barnes 443, Van-landingham 443,—50c each.

G C Smith $2.50, 460; E Williams $5.58, 483; R. Valentine $3.00, 510; E Groves $3.00, 468; M L Nichols 80c, 472; D W Griffin $3.00, 460; N H Betry $6.00, 438; C Avery $4.00, 468; T. H. Girard $1.58, 434; L M Coburn $3.00, 468.

FOR BOOKS AND TRACTS.

J N Snyder $2.00, L French $2.00, L Burgess $1.50, M L Nichols 20c, S W Worthington $2.00, G Dodge 50c, J Taylor $1.00, G F Chapman 20c, J H Lum 50c, T H Girard $1.42.

TO SEND CRISIS TO THE POOR.—E. Williams, $4.42.

BOOKS AND TRACTS SENT.

BY MAIL.

M. A. Cook, Vernon, Wis.; S. E. Trott, Middleport, Ill.; T Ames, Canaan, Me; T B Tamblyn, Concord, N. H.; L E Harris, Somerville, Ct.; C H Boothby, North Turner, Bridge, Me.; J Mackey, Seal, Ohio; C. D. W. Scott, Ottawa, Ill.; D C Tourtelott, North Scituate, R. I.; E A Prescott, North Vassalboro, Me.; I A Lawton, So. Troy, N. Y.; L Jackman, Lincoln, N. H.; J Bliss, Sparta, O.; M Crabtree, Camden, Me.; L L Howard, Rome, Me.; N White, Edinboro, Pa.; G W Stetson, Olena, O.; L Burgess, So. Royalton, Vt.; P Pfeil, Shelby, N. Y.; D G Putnam, Mitchell Sta., Va.; M L Nichols, Haverhill, Ma.; A. R. Stokes, Washington, D. C.; D. L. Davenport, Aurorsville, Wis.; John H Lum, So. Barre, N. Y.; G F Chapman, Westford, Ct.; J Taylor, New Sharon, Me.; J. A. Libby, W. Poland, Me.; D. O. Hopkins, No. Foster, R. I.; R Whitcomb, Keene, N. H.; T W Piper, Melvin Village, N. H.; H Beach, Pleasant Valley, Ct.; S Gilbert, Hartford, Ct.; S E Mabey, Amboy, Ill.; G. W. Gish, Kendallville, Ind.; S. S. Folsom, Fisherville, N. H.; J Small, Wilton, Me.; E C Andrus, Logansport, Ind.; C H Shepherd, Melvin Village, N. H.; L. P. Cilley, E. Canaan, N. H.; R. Braley, Earlinville, Ill.; N. R. Gould, Peacedale, R. I.; A C Greene, River Point, R. I.; R W Pierce, Westerly, R. I.; M F Dibble, China, N. Y.; R. Pike, Pomfret, Ct.; W. P. Perkins, Weeks Mills, Me.; J Wilkinson, Dansville, N. Y.; E B McIntire, Wolfboro, N. H.; S W Bartlett, W. Stafford, Conn.; H A King, Milroy, Ill.

BY EXPRESS.

C H Williams, North Bay, N. Y.; R F Berry, Portsmouth, N. H.; L French, Dexter, Me.; S W Worthington, North Bennington, Vt.; R. R. York, Yarmouth, Me.; L C. Wellcome, Yarmouth, Me.; J. S. Richards, Augusta, Me.; W. Miller, New Britain, Ct.; H. A. Arnold, N. E. Dixmount, Me.; I. M. Aldrich, Whitefield, N. H.

LETTERS RECEIVED.

D. T. Taylor, C. B. Turner, E. S. Willard, J B Clark, C F Sweet, Wm Morphy, J. Weston, L Boutell, W. H. Wild 2, C. Case, S S. Brewer, S Woodruff, C. G. Carre, L. A. Gilbert, D. W. Griffin, H McClary, M. Mathews, H G Whitman 2, D Kinney, A Mussey, I C Wellcome, W A Manning, F S Bradford.

POST OFFICE ADDRESS.

P. W. Hough—Fairbank, Buchanan Co., Iowa.
S. S. Brewer—South Glastenbury, Ct.

☞ Received of R. T. Cole, Oxford, Ill., $1; C. Staples, Monroe, Mass., $1. W. PRATT.

VALUABLE BOOKS FOR SALE.

BUCK: OUR LORD'S GREAT PROPHECY. An extended Exposition of Matthew xxiv. and its parallel passages, and an utter overthrow of the idea that Christ came when Jerusalem was destroyed. By D. D. Buck, a Methodist minister. 8vo. Cloth, $1.50 by mail.

TAYLOR: THE EMPHATIC NEW TESTAMENT,—the four Gospels,—compared with the various readings of the Vatican manuscript, edited, with an introductory Essay on Greek Emphasis, by John Taylor. 8vo; pp. 260. $1.50 by mail.

Much light is thrown upon many passages by the system of emphasis which the author has introduced, by which all the words regarded as emphatic are distinguished by peculiar type.

MOSHEIM: INSTITUTES OF ECCLESIASTICAL History, Ancient and Modern. By J. L. MOSHEIM. A new and literal translation from the Latin, with copious additional notes, original and selected, by James Murdock, D.D. 3 vols, 8vo, pp. 1461. $3.00 by express.

This is the best edition of this valuable history, and is far preferable to the other version by MACLAINE.

COUNCIL OF NICE. A Historical View of the Council of Nice, with a translation of documents, by Rev. Isaac Boyle, M. A. 8vo; pp. 82. By mail 50 cts.

KITTO: The Cyclopædia of Biblical Literature. Edited by John Kitto, D. D., F. S. A. Illustrated by numerous maps and engravings. 2 vols., 8vo., 1858 pages, double columns, half calf binding Price $8.

HEBREW: The Englishman's Hebrew and Chaldee Concordance, by which an English reader can find the original Hebrew for any word in the English Bible, with all the places where it occurs. 2 vols. Cloth, $12, 1 vol. sheep, or half morocco, $23. 1763 pp.

MURDOCK: The New Testament, translated from the Syriac by James Murdock, D. D. 8vo., 515 pp. Price $2.

Address H. L. HASTINGS, Boston, Mass.

PRICES REDUCED

ON PART OF THE FOLLOWING

Valuable Books.

Eusebius' Ecclesiastical History, postpaid $2.00.

Butterworth's Concordance, sheep, second hand, postpaid $1.00.

Butterworth's Concordance, sheep, new, postpaid $1.50.

Cole's Pocket Concordance, sheep, $1.00; postage 10c.

Robinson's Greek Harmony of the New Testament, cloth, postpaid $1.00.

Josephus' complete works, translated by Whiston, one vol. $1.25; postpaid $1.50.

Also the following works for the Greek Student, not sold separately:—

No. 1. Bagster's Greek Testament, 8vo., cloth, with various readings of Griesbach.

No. 2. The Polymicrian Greek Lexicon of the New Testament, 12mo., cloth.

No. 3. Bagster's Pocket Greek Concordance of the New Testament, 12mo., cloth.

A valuable set for any one who is travelling, and cannot carry larger works. Price for the three, postpaid, $3.50.

Address E. P. WOODWARD, (Crisis Box) Boston, Mass.

English Bibles for Sale.

1. DIAMOND, fine print, full references, morocco bound, $1.50; calf, $1.25, roan, gilt, $1.00, flexible binding, $1.00. Postage 12 cents.

2. PEARL, flat, full references, morocco, $2.25, roan, $1.50. Postage 16 cts.

3. NONPAREIL, 16 mo., references between the verses, or references in the margin, morocco, $3.00, calf, $2.50; roan, $2.00; references between verses, with gilt rims and clasps, $4.00. Postage 20 cts.

4. MINION, references between the verses, roan, $2.50. Postage 25 cts.

5. MINION, 8vo.; marginal ref. flat and clear type, roan, $2.50.

6. TESTAMENTS, roan, gilt, smallest 25 cts.; larger, 33 cts. Postage 6 cts.

Address MILES GRANT, Boston, Mass.

Price Reduced.

RESURRECTION OF THE WICKED. Discussion between M. Grant and J. T. Curry.

The advertised price of this Discussion is 25 cents, postage 2 cents. We have a quantity of them on hand, and will sell them hereafter for 20 cts., postage 2 cts. Send on your orders.

PHOTOGRAPHS OF ELD. EDWIN BURNHAM. A few copies of a large, beautiful and life-like Photograph, which the friends of Bro. Burnham will be glad to obtain. Sent by mail for $1.00. Those wishing them should order at once.

BOOKS AND TRACTS.

All publications sent by mail must be prepaid. The postage on Tracts is 2 cents for each FOUR OUNCES, or fractional part of four ounces; on Books, 4 cents for each FOUR OUNCES or fractional part of the same. For example, the postage on any one tract on this list is TWO CENTS, but three or four tracts may be sent in the same parcel at the same price. A Book weighing 4 ounces costs 4 cents postage, one weighing 5 ounces would cost 8 cents, or just as much as if it weighed 8 ounces.

MILES GRANT'S WORKS.

Resurrection of the Wicked. Discussion with Jos. T. Curry. "Do the Scriptures teach the Resurrection of the Wicked?" Phonographically reported by E. P. Woodward. 25c, postage 2c.

Eternal Suffering. Discussion with Dr. J. Litch. "Do the Scriptures teach the eternal conscious suffering of the Wicked?" 25c, postage 4c.

Spiritualism. Discussion with J. S. Loveland, "On Spiritualism and Immortality." 10c, postage 2c.

State of the Dead. Discussion with W. W. Clayton. "On the State of the Dead and the Punishment of the Wicked." 20c, postage 2c. Bound 30c, postage 4c.

Miles Grant's Tracts. 32 pages each. Price 5 cents single, 50 cents per dozen, $3.00 per hundred. Postage 2 cents for each package of four tracts or less.

What is Man? A Bible view of his creation; The meaning of Soul, Spirit, Death, and Hell.

The Soul, What is it? Or a careful examination of all the uses of the words nephesh and psuche as employed in the old and new Testaments.

The Spirit, What is it? Or a careful examination of the uses of the words ruach and pneuma as found in the old and new Testaments.

The Rich Man and Lazarus. Thief on the Cross; Souls under the Altar: an exposition of Matthew 10: 28, Genesis 3: 17, &c.

C. F. HUDSON'S WORKS.

Debt and Grace. Or the Doctrine of a Future Life, by C. F. Hudson. [illegible] 1 vol. 12 mo., pp. 480, price $1.25—post paid.

Christ our Life. The Scriptural Argument for Immortality through Christ alone. 160 pp. In cloth, 60c. Paper, 35c.

Human Destiny. A Critique on Universalism. Cloth, 35c. Paper, 25c. With the following and Mr. H.'s other Tracts, 25 pages, 40c.

The Doctrine of Endless Misery an occasion of Scepticism. From Sir James Stephen, with notes. 5c, postage 2c. $3.00 per 100.

Eternal Death in the literal sense is Eternal Punishment. 5c, postage 2c. $3.00 per 100.

The Rich Man and Lazarus. With remarks on Josephus. 5c, postage 2c. $3.00 per 100.

The Rights of Wrong; or, is Evil Eternal? With Reply to Dr. Mansel. 5c, postage 2c. $3.00 per 100.

Reviewers Reviewed. New edition with replies to articles in the Quarterlies, January, April, and September, 1862, and April and October, 1863. 10c, postage 2c.

JACOB BLAIN'S WORKS.

Death not Life; or, The Destruction of the Wicked Scripturally established. Price 25c, postage 2c. Bound 40c, postage 6c.

Glad Tidings; or, Bible Proof that Woe and Sin are to end in the universe by a literal destruction of wicked men and devils after the day of judgment. 5c, postage 2c.

The Wicked not Immortal. Two hundred texts quoted to prove that doctrine. 2c.

Bible Meaning of the Word Hell. 2c.

Endless Misery not a Bible Doctrine. 2c.

Smoke of Torment and Unquenchable Fire Explained. 2c.

The above five Tracts are parts of Death not Life.

Bible Meaning of Forever and Everlasting. 2c.

Letter of Rev. John Foster on Future Punishment. 2c.

TRACTS

Issued by the Christian Publication Society. [illegible]

FREE TO THE POOR.

The Church not in Darkness; or, the duty of [illegible]

The Three Worlds; or, [illegible]

The Last Days. A calm, scriptural, and convincing [illegible]

Plain Truths; or, Scripture and Tradition [illegible]

Will all Men be Saved? A pointed, pithy, [illegible]

A Voice of Warning from the Four Winds. [illegible]

The New Heavens and New Earth. A collection [illegible]

Ancient Landmarks. Six tracts of four pages [illegible]

The Duty of Christians in the present crisis. [illegible]

State of the Dead. By John Milton, author [illegible]

Silence of the Scriptures respecting the immortal [illegible]

Immortality Through Christ Alone. The doctrine [illegible]

The Destiny of the Wicked. A solid mass of Scripture [illegible]

The Advent at Hand. A summary of reasons [illegible]

MISCELLANEOUS.

Cruden's Condensed Concordance, by which [illegible]

The Life of Trust. An account of the Lord's dealings with George Müller. [illegible]

Two Hundred Stories for Children. An excellent [illegible]

A Treatise on the 24th and 25th chapters of Matthew. [illegible]

Should Christians Fight? A pamphlet on War. [illegible]

The Bible from Heaven, or a dissertation on the Evidences of Christianity. By M. Hull. [illegible]

America in Prophecy. Exposition of the 13th chapter [illegible]

The Celestial Railroad, or Modern Pilgrim's Progress. [illegible]

The Three Kingdoms, or the Kingdom of God [illegible]

The Ten Virgins, or Wisdom and Folly contrasted. By T. M. Preble. [illegible]

The Two Adams. By T. M. Preble. An interesting tract. [illegible]

Messiah's Mission, or an exposition of the Gospel [illegible]

The Excellency of the Lord's Anointed, or Christ [illegible]

Everybody's Book. The Bible View of the person [illegible]

Cook Book. By Dr. F. W. Hurd. This book gives [illegible]

Premature Decay of American Youth. By Dr. [illegible]

The Saint's Harvest, or an exposition of Matt. 24 [illegible]

The Old and New Covenant. Superiority of the New. [illegible]

The Christian Lyre. A collection of Hymns and Tunes for Worship. [illegible]

A Disquisition on the Prophecies. By F. H. Berick. [illegible]

An Appeal to Pious Trinitarians. By H. Grew. [illegible]

BOOKS PUBLISHED BY H. L. HASTINGS,

167 HANOVER STREET, BOSTON, MASS.

The Signs of the Times; or, A Glance at Christendom [illegible]

The Voice of the Church on the Coming and Kingdom of the Redeemer. [illegible]

Spiritualism a Satanic Delusion and a Sign of the Times. [illegible]

Thessalonica; or, The Model Church. A sketch of Primitive Christianity. [illegible]

The Great Controversy between God and Man. [illegible]

Reasons for my Hope, and the Tokens of its Speedy Realization. [illegible]

Thessalonica and Reasons for my Hope. Bound in one volume. [illegible]

Looking Forward, or the Prospects of the Church; [illegible]

Future Punishment, as revealed in the Scriptures, in opposition to the Three Theories of Reconciliation, Restoration, and Misery. [illegible]

Pauline Theology; or, The Scripture Doctrine of [illegible]

The Old Paths; or, the Primitive Doctrine of a Future Life. [illegible]

Retribution; or, The Doom of the Ungodly. [illegible]

S. S. BREWER'S TRACTS.

The Kingdom of God and the Signs of the Times. [illegible]

The Days we Live in. Price 10c, postage 2c.

The Seven Seals. An Exposition of the Sixth Chapter of Revelation. [illegible]

The Slaying of the Witnesses. Price 7c, postage 2c.

The Great Image seen in Nebuchadnezzar's dream. [illegible]

The Two-Horned Beast. Price 5c, postage 2c.

The Rich Man and Lazarus. Price 5c, postage 2c.

[illegible] Boston, Mass.

For the World's Crisis.

THE BIBLE—THE BOOK.

"Within this awful volume lies
The mystery of mysteries;
Happiest they of human race,
To whom their God has given grace
To read, to heed, to hope, to pray,
To lift the latch, to force the way;
And better had they not been born,
Who read to doubt, or read to scorn."
Sir W. Scott.

"A critic on the sacred book should be
Candid and learned, dispassionate and free;
Free from the wayward bias bigots feel,
From fancy's influence and temperate zeal."
Cowper.

Whence, but from heaven, could men unskilled in arts,
In several ages born, in several parts,
Weave such agreeing truths? or how, or why,
Should all conspire to cheat us with a lie?
Unasked their plains, ungrateful their advice,
Starving their gains, and martyrdom their price."
Dryden.

How important its teachings, and yet how little regarded by the great mass of professors of this unbelieving age! Profit, pleasure, politics, novel reading and war, are the gods which demand and obtain the devotion of the masses; and thus we go to the world's solemn judgment! C. P. Dow.

Correspondence.

From Br. M. H. Morrison.

Bro. Grant:—I left you in Montreal on Wednesday night, Dec. 2nd. Was sorry to leave until your discussion closed; but an aged father and sickly husband demanded my return home. I arrived on Thursday evening, once more to the embrace of my household, and could but thank my Lord and Savior for that blessing. The dampness of the weather and roughness of the roads was too severe for my frail system. The first week I was mostly confined to bed, was bled and blistered for soreness in my side; and was still confined to the house. But thank God, I am recovering.

How often some of the members of my family have said, "What a pity she went to Montreal." But I cannot think or feel so; for a sight of your face, and others I saw did me good. Yes, Bro. Grant, I often think of your mild appearance, while your opponent, at times, accused you with what you had not said. Truly, it was not of yourself, but of that heavenly Spirit that enables one to bear all things.

On my journey home, it repented me that I did not embrace the opportunity of saying a word for my Master, in behalf of the truth, at the close of the discussion, Wednesday evening, by asking of the Chairman the privilege of addressing the assembly two minutes; and, if my request had been granted, to have informed them of my interview with your opponent in a book store; then called to remembrance your remarks on Monday night in relation to the words Soul and Spirit, as not being once used in the Scriptures as interchangeable terms; then given them to know that he gave you credit to me for its being so; then called their particular attention to that point, and asked the assembly why was it, he knowing it to be so, that he would quote a passage referring to the Spirit, to prove that an immortal soul goes to heaven at death?

I often think, when we are so willing to bear so much for a short enjoyment of the society of a few who love Jesus, what must it be to be numbered with that great, gathered company from all climes, with faces shining as the sun; with all the prophets, apostles, martyrs and King Jesus, to whom all faces shall be turned. Oh! what must it be to be there?

How much we did enjoy the exhortations of brethren and sisters in our two o'clock meetings. And how much value we set upon your forenoon's discourse the first day of the week, on "Sanctification;" also, the other two the same day, viz., "Destruction of the Wicked," and "The Signs of the Times;" but it did seem to me as if all required to consider well the former. How plain it was proved from the unerring rule, that the work rested upon us; and not wholly left on God to do. Yes, the work of sanctification is in our own power; by accepting and complying with the requirements of the gospel. Such, then, are not their own, but are "chosen . . . to salvation through sanctification of the Spirit and belief of the truth."

Now, dear reader, we would entreat you to consider this great work, and see how it is with you. If you are one that has professed Christ as your Master, then you are not your own; neither what you possess. The altar is sanctified for us, and the work is ours to lay all we are and have thereon. Therefore, let us prove ourselves faithful to our stewardship. The time is at hand, when the caviler will cease to cavil, and the backslider will cease to invent means to hide his guilt. We must "be filled with the Spirit," laying all on the sanctified altar, or be unfitted for the coming of the Son of man. Pray for me.

New Glasgow, C. E. M. H. Morrison.

From Bro. Wm. Sweet.

After our quarterly meeting in Utica, Winona Co., Minn., Dec. 5th and 6th, all things considered, left a good impression on the minds of many of the outsiders, and doubtless will result in good to the church and visiting brethren present. For a long time I have been anxious to visit and see the scattered saints in Lasuer county, about one hundred and twenty miles from my place. By the kind providence of God, the prayers of my brethren and sisters, and their donation to bear my expenses, I left home the 8th of December; and after a hard and tiresome journey with my horse and buggy, I reached Bro. Meeker's on Sunday morning, the 13th ult. The evening previous being very foggy and dark, I came very near being lost in the woods, without means to strike a fire. After feeling for a long time for the trees, stumps and down timber, I left my wagon and led my horse by the bit back to a German shanty. The man and his wife could not speak a word of plain English. They made me welcome by signs. I thought it was better than my Lord and Master sometimes found.

Sunday, Dec. 13th, I spent at the log meeting-house, some four miles south-east of Cleveland village. I preached my first sermon on the duty of confessing our faults one to another, and praying one for another, that we may be forgiven and healed of sin. Some owned it was the truth.

Monday evening I preached in Bro. Meeker's house, from these words: "Blessed are your eyes for they see, and your ears for they hear." It was sent home to many hearts, like good seed sown in a deep soil. Some good will be the result.

Tuesday, 15th, left for Ottowa, nineteen miles distant. Here preached in the evening to a small assembly. Some, I afterwards learned, thought I was rather too plain and pointed against sin. As there is more here of that than there is of a godly life, I hope it will do some good in leading. Some to reform. So I continued to preach here sermons mostly practical, with an increase of hearers in number and religious interest. I preached two doctrinal sermons; one on he that liveth (or is found alive at Jesus' second coming) will never die, believest thou this? Another on being changed from mortal to immortality at the last trump. See John 11: 26; 1 Cor. 15: 51.

Sunday evening, 20th. Preached on the penitent thief's prayer, Luke 23: 42,—"Lord, remember me (not my disembodied spirit) when thou comest into thy kingdom;" future second coming, when the third heaven or paradise will be restored. See parellel texts in 2 Cor. 12: 1–4; Rev. 2: 7. Jesus answered not to lead the thief to believe he should be with him that literal day, place the comma where you please. Jesus died about three o'clock, our time, and the thieves did not die that day of Jewish time. The soldiers came to break their legs in the evening, long after Jesus died, to hasten on their death before the Sabbath. As that day ended at the going down of the sun, the penitent thief was not in paradise that day.

Monday and Tuesday continued evening meetings with an increasing interest.

Wednesday 23d, in the evening went back to Mr. Halleck's house, near Bro. Meeker's, where I preached four sermons to attentive congregations. The word took root in some honest hearts.

Eld. Small, formerly from Maine, is not able to work nor preach. He has really lost the use of his limbs, his legs in particular. He met me here with his kind companion. They both tried to back me up, by their exhortations and prayers. The Lord bless them is my prayer, and save them at his coming.

Sunday, 27th, preached the funeral sermon of Bro. and Sr. Meeker's little son, who died of the inflammation of the brain. He was three years of age the 12th of last March. I did not attempt to comfort them, in view of their loss, with the idea that the little son would never rise, or come again from the enemy's land.

I had a good time in the evening at Bro. Halleck's. He seems to be greatly strengthened and revived; also his dear companion, who was baptized. She was raised in the Episcopal faith, and christened in infancy. Her friends feared she might take cold. It was not so. She went into the lake firm and strong. I planted her by baptism in the likeness of the Savior's death and resurrection to life, by raising her up from the watery grave to walk in newness of life to the glory of God.

Monday 28th, preached in the village of Cleveland, on the authenticity of the holy Scriptures, as our only sure guide in true faith and doctrines. Had a good time. Many wish me to return soon. I intend to do so, the Lord willing, in a few days. The evening of the 29th I preached in Ottawa. The weather was so cold the 30th we had no meeting.

There is one for this New Year's evening. I have thought of the text,—"Behold I make all things new."—Rev. 21: 5.

I have been much pleased with a short acquaintance with Eld. Scott, formerly from Indiana. He has been some embarrassed with debts, and the loss of all his household furniture and goods last spring. He has many warm friends here. He loves the Crisis and Young Pilgrim. May God bless him.

Wm. Sweet.

Ottawa, Lesuer Co., Minn., Jan. 1st, 1864.

From Carrie.

Bro. Grant:—I would like to say a few words through the Crisis. As the time draws near for the weekly visitor to arrive, I am uneasy till I get it, for I love it, and I love to hear from my brethren and sisters. Their letters cheer my heart, and encourage me on to be more diligent in my Master's cause.

Some I have seen in the flesh; others I never expect to see till we all meet around the throne of God; but I love to hear from them, to know how they are getting along in this good old way, for it is a good way. O thank the Lord for it! Brethren, does it not cheer us to know that we are almost home? that Jesus is so near?

Yes, thank God for his near coming. It is high time, children, that we awake out of sleep. It is time to arise and shake ourselves, and to work for the Lord. "Soon the night cometh when no man can work." And it stands us in hand to see where we are. If we are a little cold, God help us, and stir us up to our first love. I for one feel more like serving God than I ever did before. I have been half backslidden, but God saw fit to call after me, that I might return to Father's house again, where there is bread enough and to spare. O praise the Lord for his wonderful goodness unto the children of men!

Dear sisters, how is it with you? Have any of you lost your first love? Are you still wandering from Father's house? O I pray you return now, soon this world's career will be closed up; you and I will want a sure retreat and hiding-place in that storm that will burst upon this ungodly world.

O my sisters, if we have followed the fashions of this earth, let us remember that the things of this earth will soon pass away, then we shall want that robe of righteousness on. God grant that each one of us may have it on, so that when Christ comes, we may be all ready, and go with him into the marriage supper of the Lamb.

"Hark! the onset! will ye fold your Faith-clad arms in lazy lock?
Up, O up, thou drowsy soldier!
Worlds are charging to the shock,

On! let all the soul within you
For the truth's sake go abroad;
Strike! let every nerve and sinew
Tell on ages—tell for God!"

I desire an interest in your prayers, that I may be more faithful, and that at last I, with you, may have an abundant entrance into his everlasting kingdom, which is near, even at the door.

"O! glorious day, with haste draw nigh,
For we would share thy rest;
We long, from every evil freed,
To be supremely blest.

Oh! shed thy beams of glory forth,
Dispel this gloomy night,
And let the earth, renewed, rejoice
To see thy welcome light."

Your sister in Christ, Carrie.

Lynn, Mass.

☞ "Which," asks Zimmermann, "is the hereditary sin of humanity?" Do you imagine that I shall say pride, or luxury, or ambition? No! I shall say indolence. He who conquers that, conquers all.

For the World's Crisis.

SALVATION.

To what extent are christians saved in this life? Not in the sense of completion, nor are we redeemed fully; yet the terms "full salvation," and "full redemption," are commonly used by many who profess to be sanctified, etc.

Paul in the 8th of Romans declares there is no condemnation to them who are in Christ Jesus; but in the same chapter speaks of such as are groaning for the redemption of the body. Mighty as was the work of the Spirit in him (Col. 1: 29), he still declared (1 Cor. 9: 27), "I keep under my body, and bring it into subjection; lest that by any means, when I have preached to others, I myself should be a castaway." And in Gal. 2: 20, he says, "I am crucified with Christ; nevertheless, I live; yet not I, but Christ liveth in me; and the life which I now live in the flesh, I live by the faith of the Son of God." Groaning, striving, crucifying the flesh with the affections and lusts, living by the faith of Jesus, are not quite in harmony with "full salvation," "full redemption," and enjoying the power of an endless life. This last is spoken of Jesus (Heb. 7: 17) in connection with his Melchisedistic priesthood, and does not refer to christian experience.

Those who make the word of God their study, can discern between a present, and a complete and eternal salvation in the kingdom of God. In the 91st Psalm, the godly man is beautifully described; and in the 14th and 16th verses his present state and future glory are made to harmonize. He is said to set his love on God; know his name; call upon him and be answered; and is promised long l e (eternal life) as a satisfaction, and to be shown God's salvation. Also Ps. 68: 20. He that is our God is the God of salvation; and unto God the Lord belong the issues from death. No man can call Jesus Lord but by the Holy Spirit. (1 Cor. 12: 3.) So to claim the Lord for our God implies the indwelling of the Spirit; and to be a child of God, crying Abba, Father. Rom. 8: 15.

To all such he is the God of salvation, by a resurrection from the grave; or if alive at the coming of Jesus, by being changed in a moment, in the twinkling of an eye, at the last trump. 1 Cor. 15: 52.

New York. Samuel Curry.

For the World's Crisis.

WILL YOU STOP?

Brother, sister, in the name of the religion you profess, I make one request of you; that is, will you stop speaking evil of others?

In writing to a preacher the other day, I said, "Advent people have got so they can slander and abuse one another as heartily as others do. Evil reports are believed, circulated, magnified by them through the week; and Sundays the abused and abusing meet to make long prayers, talk of righteousness and a judgment to come, and to sing,—

"We'll all go home together!"

This is plain talk, I know; but so was that "plain talk" you had over about your neighbor the other day. Do you remember? God does, and will bring you into judgment for every idle word.

Do you want to make men believe the Lord is coming? Then stop abusing them. Do you want to make people believe there is any thing in the religion of Jesus Christ? Then live so they can bear to come within speaking distance of you without fearing you as they do common tattlers and busy-bodies.

Come now, sister, the next time you have company at your house, see how little you can say about yourself, how much good you can say of every one you know; and, if company don't "leave" by the time you get through, finish by telling how good the Lord is. I'll warrant you, you won't be troubled with "long calls," if you make Jesus your theme and glory your song. Try it. The best medicine I know of for looseness of the tongue, is tightness of the lips. Keep them shut. If the "unruly member" wants to wiggle, just keep your mouth shut, and nothing will be said to repent of.

Some one says, "The tongue can no man tame," but we can keep our mouths shut. It don't look pretty to see a person's mouth agape all the time, beside all, air does better to go to the lungs through the nostrils. Then phrenologists say no one but dough-heads and tell-tales sit with open mouths. "A wise head keeps a close mouth." That's true.

Another safe way is to go according to the Bible, i. e., if you have ought against another go and tell it to him first. But the order is reversed, and professed christians now-a-days go and tell it first to every one they meet, rowdies and all. My God! my God! have mercy! O, world, how wilt thou appear at the judgment? 'Tis coming! Get ready!

Church of Christ, awake! Stop talking and go to praying. Ye who see the evil, cry aloud, spare not; lift up your voices like a trumpet and tell transgressors their sins. God keep all who want to be kept, and save all who want to be saved. Amen.

Maria Mathews.

East Hatley, C. E., 1863.

For the World's Crisis.

EXPERIENCE OF A CONSCRIPT.

To the readers of the Crisis, and the faithful in Christ Jesus:—I feel impressed to give you a brief statement of my case, especially for the comfort of those of you who are liable to the coming draft. First, let me say to you, that great is my peace in the Lord, and has been especially so for three months past. The first of October, the Provost Marshal notified me that I was legally drafted, and must appear before him for examination on the 3d day of November, or be treated as a deserter according to the rules of war. My mind was already made up what I would do in case I was drafted; and I acted accordingly. I had very good reasons to expect exemption, on the ground of physical disability, and could have raised the money to pay my exemption fee, had I chose to; but my declared faith prevented my going to the examination. Had there been a chance to plead conscientious scruples, I would have gone; but as the case was, I had no other alternative but to stand firm in the faith, in the name and strength of the Eternal Jehovah, let the consequences be as they may. Over two months have passed away since I have occupied my position of a deserter in the eye of the law, and I have not been arrested yet, and have no fears of being; for I have committed my case into the hands of Him who has said that they that trust in him shall never be confounded.

Of late, the way for my deliverance has become manifest. Bro. A., with whom I reside, felt impressed to write to the President about my case; however, it was against my wishes at first, and so I told him, and he said that he would not send it then. I afterwards told him to send it,—it would do no harm. We have now received a very satisfactory reply, and feel satisfied that, after certain preliminaries are attended to, we shall be in this place entirely freed from the war service, on the conditions specified in Bro. A.'s letter to the President. When we hear again from the War Department, and a full exemption is granted us, the whole correspondence will be offered to the Crisis for publication; it will also explain the ground of my faith hinted at in the foregoing, as the reason why I could not attend the examining committee.

In conclusion, beloved brethren, let me in the spirit of Jesus exhort you to lift up your heads, for we are fast approaching the way of Zion's full and glorious deliverance from Gentile servitude and oppression, when the redeemed of the Lord will return and come to Zion with songs and everlasting joy upon their heads, and when sorrow and sighing shall flee away.

Giles Russell.

Eaglesmere, Sullivan Co., Pa.

For the World's Crisis.

SHOW YOUR COLORS.

Come, do not be trying to skulk and hide for fear you will be exposed to "ther fiery darts of the wicked." Put on the "whole armor of God," and stand up boldly. The time has come when we have got to have some hand-to-hand combats, and bold soldiers are needed now if ever. Cowards are to be dreaded, to say the least.

Why, says one, if I should come out boldly and show to the world that I was fighting under the banner of Christ, I should have the whole town come down on me like vultures on a dead carcass, and I should have a thrust here, and a thrust there, and a whole volley from the enemy would be poured upon me. Well, what of it? Do not you think the "armor of God" is sufficient? Look here. I guess you have not got on the "whole armor," or you would not be trying to hide. You would not be afraid to go forth to battle, for the "armor of God" makes soldiers feel bold. Let's examine a little and see about the "armor." Are your loins girded with "truth?" Is it truth, God's TRUTH? or is it the "traditions" of "men," "fables," "vain poilosophy," "commandments of men," or something you cannot bring a "thus saith the Lord" for, that you are girding youself with? Come, do not be afraid to examine your "armor," to see if it is "the whole armor of God," if you are going to be a soldier of the cross. Have you got on the "breast-plate of righteousness?" Are "your feet shod with the preparation of the gospel of peace?" Above all, have you taken "the shield of faith, wherewith ye shall be able to quench all the fiery darts of the wicked?" Have you this shield on! Dare you, do you believe God, in the revelation he has given to men? Dare you step out on the plain promises of God and believe he says what he means, and means what he says? or must you turn and twist it before you can believe it? Have you faith in God? If so, you have a shield that is "able to quench all the fiery darts of the wicked," and you have no reason to fear.

Have you got the "helmet of salvation, and the sword of the Spirit, which is the word of God?" Are you "praying always with all prayer and supplication in the Spirit, and watching thereunto with all perseverance and supplication for all saints?" or do you only pray occasionally, or when you are afraid the judgments of God will overtake you?

There is no part of God's armor that can be left off without your being exposed, even if you hide, more than will be to put the "whole armor" on, and go out and fight. The whole thing is so closely connected, that we cannot spare any part of it. We must be girded with the truth, must be righteous, must have the preparation of the gospel of peace, and above all the rest must take the "shield of faith," and then let the fiery darts come; we can quench them all. Keep the sword of the Spirit ready, and when we have a chance, use it, but remember it is the word of God. You wont have to spiritualize for fear it will cut too closely. It is like a sharp sword with two edges, and it will cut its way through. Come now, be honest with yourself. Have you not left off part of this "armor?" If so, gird it all on for the fight. Though our weapons are not carnal, they are mighty through God to the pulling down of strongholds. Though the warfare be severe, our Captain will surely give us the victory, and in a little while will bring us in safety into the promised land. God help us to be valiant soldiers. A. P. Moore.

Dansville, N. Y.

WHAT DO YOUR CHILDREN READ?

A lad of sixteen lay upon his death-bed. A wasting consumption was slowly, but surely doing its fatal work. He was a former pupil of mine. I approached his bedside, took him by the hand, and gazed a moment on his thin, emaciated form, pale, hollow cheeks, and sunken eyes, all telling me that his sojourn on earth must be brief.

"How are you to-day, Arthur?" I asked.

"About as usual," he replied.

"Do you suffer much lying here?"

"Sometimes I suffer a good deal, especially from difficulty in breathing."

"Do you think you will get well?"

"No, sir."

"Would you like to get well?"

"It makes but little difference with me whether I do, or not."

"Does the thought of approaching death give you any anxiety or alarm?"

"I have no fears nor care about it."

"Do you feel willing to die?"

"I have wished I were dead a hundred times since I have been sick, to get rid of my sufferings."

"What is your hope for the future?"

"I do not concern myself at all about the future?"

He answered all these inquiries in a strong, clear voice, but with the most stoical indifference. He seemed not to manifest, by look or tone, the least solicitude, feeling, or care, in view of his speedy entrance upon the untried realities of eternity. I spoke to him of the Savior, as the only hope of the sinner; the only one who can give sweet visions of glory, and peace, and rest, in the hour of death, and save forever in heaven. Afterwards I asked him if I should pray with him.

"I do not care, if you want to," he replied, with a listlessness and coolness which deeply impressed me. I knelt by his bedside, and commended him to the Savior of sinners.

In two or three days he died, apparently without any change in his feelings. A short time after his father made this remark in my hearing: "My son lies in yonder cemetery—an INFIDEL—from the effects of novel reading!"

Parents, what do your children read? Are they allowed to select for themselves, and suffered unconsciously to imbibe the moral poison subtlety permeating too many books of the present day?—Congregationalist.

RESPONSIBILITY OF PREACHERS.

The responsibility resting on ministers, called of God, is fearful. Eternal destinies are hanging on their words and actions. They are chosen of God to lead sinners to Christ, and the righteous in the paths of peace. Their words, examples and counsels, are grasped by many, and become their law, whether they are right or wrong. If wrong, they are dooming precious souls to endless destruction. Every word, every example, every advice, let out to the world, is irreclaimably gone upon its mission of mercy or misery.

The minister attending one vain amusement, where frivolity has its place, has not only drunk the glass of spirits which calls for another, but given a sanction, which is followed with greediness and handed down to other generations, and ends in eternal ruin. His idle words prevent him from accomplishing that for which he was called, and prove fire-brands that burn to the lowest hell. The cold, luke-warm professor, the hypocrite, the man of the world, are seeking to silence their consciences by the conversation and action of the minister; and woe to him that gives the opportunity! Unless the minister is holy, his garments will be stained with the blood of others.

The responsibility of the minister is fearful because it is big with his own everlasting fate. Every neglect and willing mis-step, is tempting the devil to advance his stronger temptations. And every idle word, and the attending of every party where the cause of Christ is not advanced, is a loud call for the wrath of God to be displayed against him. Sporting with these dreadful realities, and persisting in them and seeking an excuse, is but kissing the dagger that is piercing his very vitals. The minister that argues that there is no harm in idle conversation or amusements, that do not tend, directly or indirectly, to the glory of God, is demanding his vengeance to fall upon him in eternal storms. He that shuns to declare the whole counsel of God, and follows preaching merely as a profession, is preparing himself as fuel for the last day. Where is a minister that is not commanded as was Isaiah to "Cry aloud, spare not, lift up thy voice like a trumpet, and show my people their transgressions, and the house of Jacob their sins." O, how fearful are the issues of life! Eterity alone can unfold the responsibility of the minister.—Rev. C. S. Gitchell.—Earnest Christian.

SPEAK KINDLY.

How softly on the bruised heart
A word of kindness falls,
And to the dry and parched soul,
The moistening tear drop falls.

O if they knew, who walk the earth,
'Mid sorrow, grief and pain,
The power a word of kindness hath,
'T were paradise again.

The weakest and the poorest may
This simple pittance give,
And bid delight to withered hearts,
Return again to live.

Oh! what is life if love be lost?
If man's unkind to man—
Or what to heaven that waits beyond
This brief and mortal span?

As stars upon the tranquil sea
In mimic glory shine,
So words of kindness in the heart
Reflect the soul divine.

O! then be kind, who'er thou art
That breathest mortal breath,
And it shall brighten all thy life,
And sweeten even death.

AN EXTRAVAGANT WOMAN.

The Empress of France is probably the most extravagant woman living. Nor is this all; she has been the cause of ruinous extravagance in the families of her husband's subjects, and in all countries where the costly fashions she has set have found favor. M. Fould, the Emperor's Minister of Finance, threatens to resign his office unless her enormous drafts upon the treasury are curtailed. So costly has she made the toilette in Paris, that fashionable ladies are utterly unable to settle their bills for dress, and it is stated by the English press that it is as much as many of them can do to pay the interest on the large debts which following the imperial modes has caused them to incur. The world owes crinoline to the fair Eugenie; and the rougher half of its civilized population does not feel by any manner of means grateful to her for the introduction of the articles. She has made her apartments in the Tuileries as magnificent as the palaces one reads about in oriental fables. The doors of her boudoir are of ivory, inlaid with gold. The furniture is of rosewood, inlaid with mirrors, gold, ivory, and is upholstered with pale red silk. Smyrnian carpeting of the heaviest texture covers the floor, and the ceiling is splendidly frescoed. The desks and portfolios are of tortoise shell, arabesqued with gold, and the most valuable paintings of the old masters ornament the walls. The beautiful woman who has surrounded herself with these luxuries spends an almost fabulous amount annually in rare laces and all the most expensive articles of female costume, besides subscribing unheard-of sums in aid of certain vast political schemes, for she is withal an intriguing politician.

The Empress is thirty-six years of age, and therefore old enough to have learned prudence; yet she is more prodigal now than in the heyday of her youth and beauty. The Queen of Louis XVI. was as extravagant, and as fond of meddling in state affairs as Eugenie, and her fool of a husband suffered her to lead him by the nose. One day they lost their heads poor things. Would it not be well for Louis Napoleon to take the warning to heart?

THE WOMAN IN THE CARS.

I recently met with an adventure on one of the Sixth-avenue cars, of which I think your readers ought to be informed, for I wish very much to know whether their verdict is "Served her right," or "Served her wrong." The car was quite filled, most of the passengers being gentlemen who were returning to their homes fatigued with the toils of the day. When part of the way up town a young lady (?) bounded with elastic step into the car, and looked around as much as to say, "Is nobody going to rise and give me a seat?" A young gentleman who had been reading his evening paper rose and offered her his seat. She took it without even a nod of acknowledgment, and with an air that said distinctly as words could have expressed it, "Why didn't you get up and give it to me sooner?" The young gentleman stood for a few moments, and at length said very politely to her, "Madam, would you have the goodness to rise?" Supposing he had left something on the cushion, she rose, and he very deliberately took possession, saying, "Madam, if the seat is not worth a thank you, it is not worth having," and resumed the reading of his newspaper.

YOUNG LADIES OF TO-DAY.

Did you ever think what a contrast there is between the young lady of to-day and the one of fifty, or even a score of years ago? Then, a lady was one who could take care of herself, could sing in plain musical English, wash, bake, and make herself generally useful. If she didn't she was called lazy. But now we have no lazy women, they are delicate. The modern young lady is a strange compound of dress and nerves—by which we mean those "exquisite susceptibilities" which causes her to shudder when she sees a wash-tub, and scream at the sight of a cow. She is a living image made to be waited upon. She sings "divinely" and plays the piano "exquisitely," but neither one of these affects you as much as the jabbering of a North American Indian, for it is not half as intellibible. She lounges about in the morning, crotchets or embroiders a little, then dresses herself, and promenades for the benefit of some "genteel exquisite." Thus passes her days.

Now you needn't tell me that old bachelors are continually harping on women's faults—that we do not find any such ladies—that they are the same they always were. It is no such thing. It is an uncommon thing, indeed, to find a young lady now a days that half pays for the food she eats. She is nothing but a bill of expense to her father, and a larger one to her husband, for he had not only her to support, but one or two hired girls to wait upon her also. My advice to every young man is to beware of a fashionable young lady. Never marry the girl who sits in the parlor while her mother stands in the kitchen. It won't pay.

The Children's Corner.

PLEDGE OF THE TRY COMPANY.

We, the Undersigned, hereby pledge ourselves to abstain from Tea, Coffee, Tobacco, and all Intoxicating Drinks as a Beverage.

For the World's Crisis.

LITTLE ROBERT AND HIS GUN.

"Oh, mother! I am going to kill a rebel with my gun that you brought me home last night," said little Robert H—— to his mother a few mornings since. So he ran and set up a little block of wood, and took his gun in hand and started for the door. "Mother, do come and see me shoot at a rebel. I am going to shoot him right through the head, you see if I don't."

Mrs. H. and her little son, four years of age, went to the door yard, where the block of wood was set up. Robert's face was all aglow with excitement. Just at that moment their minister drove up to the door, the Rev. Mr. T——, accompanied by Robert's father.

"Good morning, good morning, little Robie," said the Rev. Mr. T——, touching his hat and bowing politely to the little boy. "What are you going to do with that pretty gun that you have in your hand?"

"O I am going to shoot and kill that rebel over there," and he ran to the piece of wood that had been set up for a mark. "Just see this old rebel! I mean to shoot an arrow right into his heart."

"So I would," said the Rev. Mr. T——; "you may spill his wicked blood, and I will show you how. Let me take the gun, Robert; you must watch me and see how I shall do it." And Mr. T. took the gun from Robert's hand, kneeled down on the ground on one knee, and said, "Ready—aim—fire!"

Robert was so animated that he fairly danced from joy to think that his minister had deigned to become his military teacher.

"There, Robert, you take the gun, and try and see if you can't hit him in the head, for I did not," handing him the gun.

Robert quickly took the gun, and knelt down upon one knee and said, Amen, (meaning ready, aim, fire); and off went his gun, the arrow sticking in the block of wood, in the point that Robert called the rebel's head.

"That is a smart boy," said the Rev. Mr. T——; "who knows but some day you may become a Major General."

"Yes, yes," chimed in both father and mother, laughingly; "we hope he will."

"I don't think that was a good minister," said John Mills, a big boy, who stood looking on, after Mr. T. had gone away. "I don't believe that he is good to show little boys how to shoot rebels with a toy gun, when they are not any thing but blocks of wood; and I shall not go to his meeting again."

A true story. Mary Lamprey.

Mastyard, N. H.

For the World's Crisis.

TO THE YOUNG.

Dear Young Friends:—I will set before you here a passage of Scripture, which I fear has been too much overlooked, or too little considered; namely:

"Honor thy father and mother, which is the first commandment of promise, that it may be well with thee, and thou mayest live long on the earth."—Eph. 6: 2–3.

There is nothing that makes the young and rising generation appear more amiable, and which promises more for their respectability and usefulness in life, than to see them manifest a suitable respect for their parents; and we would add likewise, the aged and infirm. No matter how brilliant may be the talents of the young, or how humble the faculties, or limited the abilities of the parent, or aged, the former should always honor, venerate and respect the latter, and treat them with kindness and affection.

As we advance in years, there is something more required for us to do. "Behold, we count them happy which endure," saith the apostle.—James 5: 11. If we wish to be happy, we should endure to keep every command that is laid for us in the Scriptures of divine truth. We must refrain from every sinful and useless indulgence. We should be chaste in our conversation; temperate in our pleasures; exemplary in our conduct; kind and affectionate to all our acquaintance; just and honest in our dealings; charitable and benevolent to the poor; and, above all, resigned to every dispensation of providence.

Dear youth, if we will only take the above precepts under consideration, and practice thereby, we shall not only have that happiness which thousands and thousands are seeking for by their sensual pleasures in vain; but we shall have that happiness which flows from the fountain of love,

"Whose streams make glad the city of our God."

Fisherville, N. H. J. Elkins.

THE WAY TO SPEAK TO BOYS.

Many years ago, a certain minister was going one Sunday morning from his house to his school-room. He walked through a number of streets, and as he turned a corner, he saw assembled around a pump a party of little boys, who were playing at marbles. On seeing him approach, they began to pick up their marbles and run away as fast as they could. One little fellow, not having seen him as soon as the rest, could not accomplish this so soon; and before he had succeeded in gathering up his marbles, the minister had closed upon him, and placed his hand upon his shoulder. They were face to face, the minister of God and the poor little ragged boy, who had been caught in the act of playing marbles on Sunday morning. And how did the minister deal with the boy? for that is what I want you to observe.

He might have said to the boy, "What are you doing here? You are breaking the Sabbath; don't you deserve to be punished for breaking the command of God?"

But he did nothing of the kind. He simply said, "Have you found all your marbles?"

"No," said the little boy, "I have not."

"Then," said the minister, "I will help you to find them." Whereupon he knelt down and helped look for the marbles, and as he did so he remarked, "I liked to play at marbles when a little boy very much, and I think I can beat you; but," added he, "I never played marbles on Sunday."

The little boy's attention was arrested. He liked his friend's face, and began to wonder who he was. Then the minister said—

"I am going to a place where I think you would like to be—will you come with me?"

Said the boy—"Where do you live?"

"Why, in such and such a place," was the reply.

"Why, that is the minister's house!" exclaimed the boy, as if he did not suppose that a kind man and the minister of the gospel could be the same person.

"Why," said the man, "I am the minister myself, and if you will come with me, I think I can do you some good."

Said the boy—"My hands are dirty; I cannot go."

Said the minister—"Here is a pump—why not wash?"

Said the boy—"I am so little that I can't wash and pump at the same time."

Said the minister—"If you'll wash, I'll pump."

He at once set to work, and pumped, and pumped and pumped; and as he pumped, the little boy washed his hands and his face till they were quite clean.

Said the boy—"My hands are wringing wet, and I don't know how to dry them."

The minister pulled out of his pocket a clean pocket-handkerchief, and offered it to the boy.

Said the little boy—"But it is clean."

"Yes," was the reply, "but it was made to be dirtied."

The little boy dried his hands and face with the handkerchief, and then accompanied the minister to the door of the Sunday School.

Twenty years after, the minister was walking in the street of a large city, when a tall gentleman tapped him on the shoulder, and looking into his face said, "You don't remember me?"

"No," said the minister, "I don't."

"Do you remember, twenty years ago, finding a little boy playing marbles round a pump? Do you remember that boy's being too dirty to go to school, and your pumping for him, and your speaking kindly to him, and taking him to school?"

"O," said the minister, "I do remember."

"Sir," said the gentleman, "I was that boy. I rose in business, and became a leading man. I have attained a pood position in society; and on seeing you to-day in the street, I felt bound to come to you, and say that it is to your kindness, and wisdom, and christian discretion—to your having dealt with me lovingly, gently, and kindly, at the same time that you dealt with me aggressively, that I owe, under God, all that I have attained, and all that I am at the present day."—J. C. Ryle.

DARE AND DO.

Dare forsake what you deem wrong;
Dare to walk in wisdom's way;
Dare to give where gifts belong;
Dare God's precepts to obey.

Do what conscience says is right;
Do what reason says is best;
Do with all your mind and might;
Do your duty, and be blest.

"BITE BIGGER, BILLY."

One day a gentleman saw two boys going along one of the streets in New York. They were barefooted. Their clothes were ragged and dirty, and tied together by pieces of string. One of the boys was perfectly happy over a half withered bunch of flowers which he had just picked up in the street.

"I say, Billy," said he to his companion, "wasn't somebody real good to drop these 'ere posies just where I could find them—they're so pooty and nice? Look sharp, Billy; mebby you'll find something bimeby."

Presently the gentleman heard his merry voice again saying, "O, jolly! Billy, if here ain't most half a peach, and it ain't much dirty, neither. Cause you hain't found nothing, you may bite first."

Billy was just going to take a very little taste of it, when his companion said, "Bite bigger, Billy, mebby we'll find another 'fore long."

What a noble heart that boy had, in spite of his rags and dirt! He was "doing good" in the way we are speaking of. There was nobody for him to be kind to but his companion in poverty—the poor ragged boy by his side. But he was showing him all the kindness in his power when he said, "Bite bigger, Billy." There was nothing greedy, nothing selfish about the boy. His conduct shows how even a poor ragged boy can do good by showing kindness.

"Bite bigger, Billy—mebby we'll find another 'fore long." Who can help admiring the noble heart of that poor boy? I would rather have that boy's kind and generous spirit than have a monarch's crown upon my head without it. "Bite bigger, Billy!" think of these words if you are ever tempted to be unkind or selfish to your companions.

☞ "The way of the wicked is an abomination unto the Lord; but he loveth him that followeth after righteousness." Prov. 15: 9.

The World's Crisis

AND SECOND ADVENT MESSENGER.

TERMS:

A single copy, one year	$2.00
A single copy, six months	1.00
A single copy, three months	.50
5 copies, six months, when sent to one address	4.50
10 copies, six months, when sent to one address	8.00
20 copies, six months, when sent to one address	15.00
30 copies, six months, when sent to one address	22.00

PAYABLE IN ADVANCE.

These terms, allowing a subscription of 50 cents for three months, place the paper within reach of all who are able to pay any thing. The reduction in price, where five or more papers are sent to one address, enables subscribers, by combining, to receive a large number at reduced rates; thus supplying the poor in their neighborhood.

We propose that those who have ability, when sending their own subscriptions, also send what they are willing to give to aid in circulating the Crisis among the poor who we have always with us.

Postage.—The postage, in the United States, on each single copy of the Crisis, is 20 cents a year, payable quarterly, in advance, at the office of delivery.

Rules for Correspondents.—Over all matters not intended for publication, write Private.

Over all business matters, write Business.

Over all articles for the paper, write For the Crisis.

All articles should be accompanied by the writer's name, for the Editor's information, even if it is not published.

When the names of new subscribers are sent, please say they are new, and it will save us much labor.

Private Letters.—Those wishing to address the Editor on matters not connected with the office, will please write the word Private on the outside of the envelope.

Please put the business matters and appointments on a piece of paper separate from other communications.

All persons writing to the office should give distinctly and plainly the Post Office, County and State, to which they wish to be addressed; and all orders, subscriptions, communications and remittances, should be plainly directed to MILES GRANT, Boston, Mass.

PUBLISHED ALSO AT THE SAME OFFICE,

THE YOUNG PILGRIM,

A NEW ILLUSTRATED SUNDAY SCHOOL PAPER, DEVOTED TO

The Interest of our Children and Youth.

TERMS:

For a single copy, 25 cents a year; and at the same rate for any number of copies under ten.

10 copies, when sent to one address	$1.00
20 copies, when sent to one address	1.80
30 copies, when sent to one address	1.00
copies, when sent to one address	4.00
copies, when sent to one address	8.00
00 copies, when sent to one address	15.00

PAYABLE ALWAYS IN ADVANCE.

Postage—(12 cents a year, for every single copy, and the same for every 10 copies or less sent to one address) must be paid quarterly in advance, at the office where the paper is received.

All communications and remittances, should be addressed to THE YOUNG PILGRIM, Crisis Box, Boston, Mass.

The World's Crisis

AND SECOND ADVENT MESSENGER.

"BEHOLD, I COME QUICKLY; AND MY REWARD IS WITH ME."

WHOLE NO. 435. BOSTON, TUESDAY, FEBRUARY 2, 1864. VOL. XVIII.—NO. 20.

The World's Crisis

AND SECOND ADVENT MESSENGER,

Issued every Tuesday Afternoon, at

167 HANOVER STREET, BOSTON.

MILES GRANT, EDITOR.

EDITORIAL COMMITTEE:
H. L. HASTINGS, D. T. TAYLOR,
H. F. CARPENTER.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEE:
H. V. DAVIS, S. S. BREWER,
A. ROSS, J. G. HAMBLIN,
SOLOMON HOVEY.

GEO. T. ADAMS, TREASURER.

☞ THE CRISIS is devoted to the exposition of all Bible truth; especially the doctrine of the immediate, personal coming and reign of Christ on the earth; holiness of heart; the unconscious state of the dead; their literal resurrection, and the final destruction of the wicked.

THE NEW HEAVENS AND THE NEW EARTH.

BY B. HAWLEY, D. D., PASTOR OF THE METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH IN CASTLETON, VT.

Is this sentence in the Scriptures to be understood literally, or figuratively? If literally, is the new earth to be the final abode of the righteous?

We find this sentence four times in the Bible, namely, Isaiah 65: 17, 19; 66: 22; 2 Peter 3: 13; Revelation 21: 1.

Of the meaning of the sentence there are two prominent opinions in the Church. One is, that the words heavens and earth are to be understood figuratively, and that the clause teaches that there will yet be such a thorough and wide-spread reform in the world—the Gospel will be so widely preached, its truths so generally known, and its power so widely felt—that in a moral and religious aspect the heavens and earth will be new, of another character. In this sense the Scriptures speak of a new heart; not literally another heart, nor physically new, but spiritually and religiously renewed. This state of things in the world is called the Millennium, or the latter-day glory.

The other opinion is that the earth and the heavens are to undergo a literal destruction by fire—if not annihilation, at least a thorough burning up of all the combustible materials of earth and the atmosphere, and a reconstruction of them for the final residence of the righteous.

Which of these opinions is the more probable is the subject of our present inquiry.

1. In favor of the literal view we may cite the opinions of many early Christians. But the early Church was, on this subject, greatly divided. While the tendency of some divines was to a gross and materialistic interpretation of the Scriptures, that of others was to a conjectural and fanciful interpretation. On points liable to speculation they often and greatly erred.

Geologists, who wish to make the Scriptures conform to what they conceive to be the teachings of geological science, give to this sentence in 2 Peter 3: 13, a strictly literal interpretation. So also do those Bible interpreters known as literalists.

That the Apostle Peter does not teach that the earth and heavens are to be annihilated is evident, because matter is never annihilated by burning. It produces only a change in the mode of being. The most that can be legitimately drawn from the very strong and minute words of St. Peter is, that all the combustible parts of the earth will be changed by fire, as "the world," (ho kosmos,) or the surface things and creatures of the earth, were previously destroyed by the Noachian flood; and the only tenable or plausible opinion of the literalists can be no more than this.

To this view, however, not as a geological probability, but as a Scripture doctrine, we have several objections: 1. The analogy of biblical interpretation is opposed to a literal construction of 2 Peter 3: 13. In verse 5 we have "the earth," (ge) or land, "standing out of the water and in the water;" but in verse 6 it is defined to be "the world (kosmos) that, being overflowed with water, perished." That is, the organized things and creatures of the earth were destroyed by water, and only so widely as was necessary to destroy sinful men. The deluge not being universal, the future destruction by fire may not be, at least will be only superficial.

Verse 7 is very strong, but on comparing it with other portions of the Bible, we shall find very similar and equally strong expressions to describe only a civil and moral revolution of society, and in some cases within very limited districts. Take Psalm 50: 3, 4, where only a moral and spiritual renovation is described—"a fire shall devour before him, and it shall be tempestuous round about him. He shall call to the heavens from above, and to the earth that he may judge his people."

Isaiah 34: 4; "All the host of heaven shall be dissolved, and the heavens shall be rolled together as a scroll; and all their host shall fall down as a leaf falleth off from the vine." This is as strong as anything in Peter's epistles; but the next verse shows that only a great civil change and punitive revolution are threatened to Idumea, because of the wickedness of the people.

The prophecy of Zephaniah 3: 8; "My determination is to gather the nations, that I may assemble the kingdoms to pour upon them mine indignation, even all my fierce anger: for all the earth shall be devoured with the fire of my jealousy." Here all the earth means the land (ge) of Judah. And the fire is the jealousy of God toward the sins of the people.

Nothing can be stronger than the prophecy of Micah 1: 4; "And the mountains shall be molten under him, and the valleys shall be cleft as wax before the fire." But this has reference to and is because of "the transgression of Jacob, and further sins of the house of Israel." Its accomplishment was neither literal nor universal, as the words seem to indicate.

The bold and nervous statement of St. Paul in 2 Thess. 1: 8; and of St. John in Rev. 21: 5, are most certainly to be understood figuratively. The "flaming fire" in which the Lord Jesus shall be revealed will not be literal fire, nor flames about his person; but either the glory with which he will be clothed at the last day, or it is emblematical of the severe retribution of the wicked, according as we construe the phrase with the preceding words, as recent commentators do; or with the following, as by some ancients and moderns. The making of "all things new" is certainly the moral renovation of the world, the millennial state, or it may describe the heavenly state.

The analogy of Scripture is further seen in comparing 2 Peter 3: 10 with prophecy; "The day of the Lord will come as a thief in the night, in the which the heavens shall pass away with a great noise, and the elements shall melt with fervent heat, and the earth also, and the works that are therein shall be burned up." This is the strongest text in the Bible for the literalists. And geologists eagerly quote it in support of a future renovation of the earth by fire. The probability of the geological hypothesis we do not deny, for that there are internal fires of earth sufficient to produce such a conflagration no student of geology can doubt. But whether St. Peter teaches the doctrine is another thing, about which we may inquire. By comparing Scripture with Scripture we find language equally strong and specific used to describe national calamities, national punishments, and the moral renovation of the people. Thus Psalm 102: 26; "They (the heavens and earth) shall perish: yea, all of them shall wax old like a garment; as a vesture shalt thou change them, and they shall be changed." The most that can be legitimately deduced from this text is the changeableness of all material things, and the passing away of all the superficial things—the garments and vesture—of the earth and atmosphere. Isaiah (51: 6) uses equally plain terms: "The heavens shall vanish away like smoke, and the earth shall wax old like a garment, and they that dwell therein shall die in like manner." The most that any fair interpretation can make of this is just what we, in this age of the world, see constantly transpiring, the land becoming old and desolate as in the East, and the people dying in every possible form.

No one supposes that our Lord (Matt. 24: 35) teaches that the heaven and earth shall so pass away as that there shall be no more heaven and earth; but he rather contrasts the mutability of all earthly things with the unchangeableness of his words. The same fact is expressed by Isaiah 40: 6–8; "All flesh is grass, and all the goodliness thereof is as the flower of the field. The grass withereth, the flower fadeth; because the spirit of the Lord bloweth upon it: surely the people is grass. The grass withereth, the flower fadeth; but the word of our God shall stand for ever."

So also 2 Peter 3: 12; "The day of God wherein the heavens, being on fire, shall be dissolved, and the elements shall melt with fervent heat," may incidentally and without design describe what, in the geological changes of the earth, shall take place. But whether St. Peter so designed it is another thing. That he may not have so designed it is strongly inferable from the fact that Isaiah (34: 4) and Micah (1: 4) use very similar language to describe the desolations that were threatened upon Idumea and Jacob. St. Peter was not a geologist, and could not have written with reference to geological changes to transpire in the great future. Of such like changes he may have written, but not as a geologist.

2. Another objection to the notion that St. Peter teaches any such renovation of this earth in order that it may be the final abode of the righteous, is that the new heavens and the new earth of the Old Testament prophecies are understood by most reliable commentators, and even by such literalists and geologists as Drs. Hitchcock and J. P. Smith, who strongly advocate the future renovation of this earth by fire, to denote only the millennial state of the Church before the final judgment. The word "new" means another and quite different abode of the righteous, or it describes the morally reformed world, a world "wherein dwelleth righteousness." And as the Millennium is to be, as the Sabbath now is, a type and harbinger of heaven, the phrase "new heaven and new earth" may also mean the place where righteousness now dwells, that is, "where Christ sitteth on the right hand of God," where are the angels of God, where Enoch and Elijah and "the spirits of just men made perfect" now are. This derives corroboration from the words of Peter himself in verse 13: "Nevertheless we, according to his promise, look for new heavens and a new earth wherein dwelleth righteousness." The promise here referred to is none other than that given by Isaiah, and which is generally conceded to designate the latter-day glory.

3. Another objection to this being the best interpretation of St. Peter is fairly stated by Dr. Hitchcock: "After its (the earth's) organic and combustible matter shall have been destroyed, and its whole mass reduced to a liquid state, and then a new economy reared up on its surface, not adapted to sinful beings, it must require thousands of years before another solid crust shall be formed upon its surface, capable of sustaining organic natures which are material. The Bible represents the righteous at the day of judgment as reunited to their bodies, which they left in the grave, entering at once into their final abode."

Neither Dr. H. nor any other literalist can obviate this objection if they take a geological view of the matter. The only show of attempts to remove the difficulty is either by allowing the day of judgment to last thousands of years, during which time the earth will be recovered to a state suited to the improved condition of man, or by affirming that the resurrection body may somehow and yet blissfully inhabit this earth while in a molten condition, at least when divested of all organized and living things. Dr. H. cannot, however, quite stretch himself to that pitch of credulity, and he therefore conjectures that the resurrection body will consist of a "strange fluid" not wholly unlike light, heat, electricity, and may therefore live on this earth as its heaven in a molten and desolate condition! What will modern Adventists, who are expecting a literal resurrection of the same body laid in the grave, the same atoms, "flesh and bones," and who talk of farming it on the Agrarian plan of perfect equality in a new earth, say to this objection unavoidably pressed on them if they interpret St. Peter literally, and then plead the deductions of geology to support their views?

4. To the idea that this earth, renovated by fire, as indeed it may be, will be the final abode of the righteous, we object. The Scriptures teach that "there shall be no night there." Rev. 21: 25; 32: 5. But if this earth turn on its axis then as it now does, and be a part of the solar system, though the light of the sun be not then needed, there must be then as now both day and night. So, too, there shall be "no more sea" in the heaven of the righteous. But if this earth shall be occupied by corporeal man in the reconstruction, as modern literalists claim, will there be dew and rain, springs and streams? So there will be also a sea on this earth.

Now we may admit, agreeably to the strong probabilities of geological science, that the earth will be desolated by fire, and yet, without doing any violence to a fair and scholarly interpretation of the Bible, we may apply its strongest prophecies in reference to a new earth and new heavens to the new and glorious state of things in the Millennium, and particularly, as typified thereby, to the heavenly state where Christ, his angels, Enoch and Elijah, and the [illegible] dead now are. Even that eminent geologist and divine, Dr. J. Pye Smith, who believes in the renovation of this earth by fire, says: "The declaration that the heavens and the earth shall flee away, and no more place be found for them, is undoubtedly figurative, and denotes the momentous changes in the scenes of the divine moral government." And, so far as we know, the earth may never again, after its conflagration, be inhabited, except by a new order of beings in an endless gradation of God's works. The present condition of the moon is a sample of what the earth may then be.

II. A few words in reference to the figurative interpretation of the clause, "the new heavens and new earth," are in place here.

1. It is generally conceded, and by the most judicious of literalists, that this phrase in prophecy sets forth the great political and moral changes to transpire through the agency of the church on this earth. The famous prophecy of Isaiah (65: 17, 19; 66: 22) "represents," says Dr. Hitchcock, "a state of things on the present earth before the judgment, and not a heavenly and immortal state; for sin and death are spoken of as existing in it; both which we are assured will be excluded from heaven." So also he admits that Rev. 21: 1, is figurative, because the New Jerusalem coming down from God out of heaven cannot be understood as a literal event, but rather denotes the intercommunication of heaven and earth during the latter-day glory.

"If we carefully examine this and other collateral passages, we shall find good reason to believe this description of the New Jerusalem is a highly wrought figurative description of the christian church in its highest state of prosperity. St. John says, 'It was prepared as a bride adorned for her husband,' and that 'they shall bring the glory and honor of the nations into it.' This description is suited to the church, but not to heaven."—Dr. Spicer.

"This," the New Jerusalem, "doubtless means the christian church in a state of great prosperity."—Dr. A. Clarke.

2. In further confirmation of the figurative interpretation, we refer to the statement of St. Paul in Romans 8: 22, which many think to be a passage difficult of interpretation: "We know that the whole creation groaneth and travaileth in pain together until now." Adventists and some christian geologists refer this passage to a change by fire and to a renovation that await this earth, and possibly "the whole creation." Both Dr. H. and the learned authorities he cites utterly mistake, as I conceive, the meaning of the apostle. They are led into error because of their proclivities to literalism, and possibly from a want of attention to the original text. If in verses, 19, 20, 21 the word "creature" (ktisis) refers to the creature man, who "waiteth for the manifestation of the sons of God," to the same creature "made subject to vanity" without his own consent, to the creature who, in the resurrection, "shall be delivered from the bondage of corruption into the glorious liberty of the children of God;" why does not pasa ktisis ("the whole creation") in verse 22 refer to the same creatures severally; to every creature "waiting for the redemption of the body"? If this is correct, then pasa ktisis should not be translated "the whole creation," but every creature, as in the preceding verses. The phrase pasa ktisis may mean all intelligent creatures.

If, however, it is better to understand by pasa ktisis "the whole creation," then, in the context, we should understand by ktisis the creation. But this involves the absurdity of the material creation waiting for the manifestation of the sons of God, made subject to vanity not willingly, and having the promise of deliverance from the bondage of corruption into the glorious liberty of the children of God, which things are simply absurd.

But if, again, we should understand by the words pasa ktisis the whole world of intelligences, then in the foregoing verses we must understand by ktisis the world of intelligences separately—individual man, that is, "the creature." The simple truth is, as I conceive it, the apostle teaches that every christian earnestly and anxiously waits for the redemption of his body. By a figure of speech this earnest waiting and looking for is affirmed of all men, or, if it please, of "the whole creation."

The conclusions which we reach are, first, that though this earth may be subject to a renovation by fire, and St. Peter may indeed teach the same, yet the phrase "new heavens and new earth" more generally designates the latter-day glory, and by it the true and final heaven of the blessed; and, secondly, that this earth will not be the final abode of the righteous.—Christian Advocate and Journal, Dec. 10th, 1863.

REVIEW OF THE ABOVE.

BY D. T. TAYLOR.
Pastor of the A. C. Church in Castleton, Vt.

The foregoing article, furnished by a clergyman whom I esteem, and whose scholarly abilities are unquestioned, presents some arguments against a literal new earth, created from the present one, becoming the endless dwelling place of the redeemed. The doctrine which is tried to be refuted is a very dear one to all Adventists, and the article being public property, and hence subject to criticism, I propose a reply and review, with the intention of being thorough and critical while courteous and fair.

It is seen that some very important points are allowed by Dr. H. These amount to concessions, and are worth our notice. And First, the subject is abundantly stated in the Scriptures. Four times we find the sentence "new heavens and a new earth." Hence the thing is not obscurely nor scantily spoken of. The view is not hid away in a corner. It stands out bold and conspicuous. It is found in three different books and four different chapters. One inspired prophet and two apostles have set their hands and seals to the doctrine. But these texts do not by any means exhaust the scriptural proof. This vein of a newly created world inherited by the righteous crops out in numerous places through the whole Bible. Ps. 37: 9, 22, 29; Isa. 60: 17–22; Dan. 2: 44 and 7: 27; Matt. 5: 5; 25: 34; Acts 3: 21, and a multitude of other passages all bear in the same direction. The Mille-annum or thousand years [strictly speaking the word denotes a period of time and not a state] is mentioned by but one writer, in one book, and one chapter in the Bible; and although the Apocalypse which alone teaches it is highly symbolic, our writer appears to accept it as denoting a literal Millennium. Why then may not the new earth be understood literally? And why not as divinely taught?

Secondly, It is admitted that this earth may be subject to a renovation by fire, and St. Peter may indeed teach the same, this view being a geological probability, not denied; matter by burning is only changed, and never annihilated,—hence the earth after its conflagration may possibly be inhabited by a new order of beings in an endless gradation of God's works. With the eminent christian geologists, Fairbairn, Smith and Hitchcock, such an opinion is admitted to be agreeable to the strong probabilities of geological science. This concession is a fair one, and it is a step in advance of the old view of the earth's utter annihilation as taught by Howe, Dwight, and the doctors of the middle ages. But, alas! St. Peter, who was not a geologist, does not teach any such doctrine! His words are "very strong and minute" in describing the conflagration and renovation, but they must not be literally construed! Peter could not have designed to teach any such thing! If he describes such an epoch it was only "incidentally"! And so the inspired apostle is made to possibly teach something about which he really knew nothing! Are we to understand Peter as being equally unreliable on other matters? The entering wedge is seen here,—where will it stop?

Thirdly, It is allowed that if we interpret the Bible literally then the Scriptures and geology agree, and there is to be a purging of the surface-world by fire and a reconstruction of the earth and heavens, garnished in beauty, for the final residence of the righteous. This literal view is admitted to be a prominent opinion in the church. It is the view of the Adventists, and is sustained by many early christians and modern geologists. This literal sense is defined by Dr. J. P. Smith as being "the common rule of all rational interpretation," or, as observes Prof. J. A. Ernesti, "The literal sense, or that which is derived from the knowledge of words, is the only true one." "I hold it," says Thomas Hooker, "for a most infallible rule, in expositions of sacred Scripture, that when a literal construction will stand, the furthest from the letter is commonly the worst." (Voice of the Church, pp. 17, 18.) But Dr. H— objects. He stands opposed to a literally renewed earth inhabited by the just. The phrase means "a moral renovation of the world in the millennial state, or it may describe the heavenly state." And so say modern Methodists generally, but so said not the founders of Methodism. How often are we reminded of the prediction of Sir Isaac Newton, who in 1733 sagaciously observed, says William Thorp, that "about the time of the end a body of men will be raised up, who will turn their attention to the prophecies, and insist upon their literal interpretation in the midst of much clamor and opposition." This "body of men" have arisen, and after twenty years' study of the prophecies I have seen nothing to justify me in abandoning their company.

The primitive and literal meaning of the word "earth" is given in Gen. 1: 9, 10. I apply all the laws of language to the interpretation of the sacred volume, but never forget that where Bible words can be taken according to their primitive and historical meaning, and no contradiction, violation of common sense, or absurdity is therein involved, it is always and only safe thus to take them. It is truly lamentable to see christians needlessly abandon the letter for the figure, the certain for the uncertain,—and thus, like Dr. H—, launch their boat upon the fluctuating sea of "may be's."

Continuing our review, it is fully admitted by us that the first christians were in many things fanciful, speculative, and erroneous in their views of the Scriptures. But I deny that they were greatly divided on the subject in question. As to the charge of a gross materialism in their opinions concerning the new earth, it lies at the door of Mosheim, backed by Popish doctors like Jerome, and is yet to be proved. Even Gibbon accuses Mosheim of a want of candor on the subject. "All primitive orthodox christians," writes the learned Grabe, "expected, according to the words of the apostles and the promises of the prophets, a new heaven and a new earth, at the second coming of the Messiah to restore the happiness which flourished before the fall of Adam."—Grabe's Spicilegium Patrum, lib. 2, p. 230. Such is the testimony of one who carefully examined and collated, not a few prejudiced and doubtful writers, but the fathers generally. The doctrine is found in the writings of Hermas, Barnabas, Papias, Irenæus, Justin the martyr, Hippolytus, Melito, Tertullian, Clement of Alexandria, Methodius, Nepos, Coracion, Origen, Victorinus, Lactantius, The Council of Nice, Eusebius, The two Cyrils of Alexandria and Jerusalem, Epiphanious, Ambrose, Basil, Chrysostom, Hilary, The two Gregorys of Nazianzen and Nyssen, Jerome and Augustine. (See Voice of the Church.)

From A. D. 100 to A. D 400 there is one unbroken testimony against the opinion of Dr. H. and in favor of our own. All were not agreed as to when the earth will be renovated,—the millenarians put it at the beginning of the millennium, while their opposers placed its commencement at the end. But all held it would be truly and literally a renewed, renovated, and re-generated globe, and that the meek would possess it. Not a single writer in the christian church for the first four centuries ever dreamed of or advanced the figurative view presented above by Dr. Hawley. Having thoroughly examined the history of this doctrine as held by the early church, I know whereof I affirm, and challenge successful contradiction. In the light of this evidence, our writer's first point, viz: his historical argument, utterly falls to the ground.

The denial of the universality of the floods, a view which most christians and geologists are now agreed upon, I pass by. It is claimed to be universal in respect to man, but local in respect to the earth. The opinion is but speculative. For who can tell how widely the migratory, nomadic, antediluvian races of men, whose lives were cotemporary variously from six to nine centuries, spread themselves over the globe during that long period of 1656 years? But the argument deduced therefrom is unsound. For if the overflowing waters of the Noachian deluge were limited in their spread by the dwelling places of sinful men, the application of the argument as determining the spread of the last fires should make those fires universal, because at the present time sinful men are found in every part of the habitable globe. As the curse is universal, so the final fires, kindled but for its removal, will also be. Let but Peter be understood literally, and there is no avoiding such conclusion. It is pleasant to reflect that He who said to man "Cursed is the ground for thy sake" (Gen. 3: 13), and who declares that for the sins of men "the curse shall devour the earth" (Isa. 24: 6), will, when redemption's work is done, joyfully announce to the universe that "there shall be no more curse."—Rev. 22: 3.

I come now to the argument from the analogy of Scripture. This, it is claimed, is against a literal construction of Pet. 3: 7, 10, 12. But the writer is unfortunate in his selection of supposed analogical texts by which he would destroy the literal import of Peter's forcible and vigorous language. Ps. 50: 3, 4 is quoted as denoting only a moral and spiritual renovation. No better proof can be furnished from the Old Testament to support the generally received doctrine of the advent and the last day. If this can be turned into a shadow or figure, why may not Dan. 7: 9, 10, and even Rev. 20: 11–13, as well? By what sound law of Biblical exegesis are David's obviously adventual words made to mean a mere civil or moral revolution in perhaps a limited society? I always grieve to see such license taken with the sacred word. Then Isa. 34: 4 is made to mean only a civil change and punitive revolution, simply because Idumea is mentioned as partaking of the threatened judgment. The eminent Lowth upon the passage is much sounder when he says "Edom and Bozrah are mentioned, a part for the whole." "But this event—the subduing of Edom by Nebuchadnezzar, Jer. 25: 15, 16—does not by any means seem to come up to the terms of this prophecy, to which all nations are called upon to attend; or to an event the description of which is so terrible that many have understood it of the last judgment, to which, in its ultimate sense, it may indeed be referred."—Trans. and Notes on chap. 34. Albany, N. Y., Ed. 1794.

The prediction cannot be limited to one nation, for it is addressed to "all" that is in the earth, and "all" that comes forth of the world, and concerns "all nations" and "all armies"; it agrees exactly with 2 Pet. 3: 12 and Rev. 6: 14, and most obviously refers to "the day of the Lord's vengeance, and the year of recompenses for the controversy of Zion" (verse 8), of which day the destruction of Idumea is a type. So too with Zeph. 3: 8, next quoted, and which unquestionably tallies with Rev. 16: 14 and Rev. 19: 19–21, and is to be literal as the sense of language demands, with the exception of the figure, "fire of my jealousy," which refers not to the quality of the fire, but rather to the righteous and indignant motives of Deity. By what subtile law of exegesis "all the earth"—Sept., Coverdale, etc., "the whole earth"—is mad to mean the land of Judah, a spot about as large as Vermont, it is hard to imagine. However, we must not forget the Doctor is not a literalist. I beg leave to remind him that Zephaniah did not write in the Greek. The word is not gee, the Greek word for land and earth, but it is arets, a Hebrew word which, according to Gesenius, means "the earth." And if Micah 1: 4 can be proved to be of a local and figurative character, which after all is doubtful, it by no means follows that Peter's splendid prediction should be thus interpreted. I agree with our writer in supposing the "flaming fire" of 2 Thess. 1: 8 to denote the clouds of glory surrounding the person of our descending King; but fail to perceive any other figures in the entire adventual passage. Ex. 24: 15–17 assists to explain the figure in question. This appears to be all of the passage that our writer understands "figuratively." It does not aid him any in demolishing the literality of Peter.

But Rev. 21: 5 must certainly be understood figuratively! And why? Ah! the follower of Wesley is far from being in the succession here. Now if the "things" made new mean mankind (an awkward way of speaking of men, surely!) then all mankind are to be morally renovated, ergo all may be saved. And the exposition is more faulty if the "all things" be referred to heaven. For the making of all things new implies, first, need by reason of age or decay, and second, wisdom in the act. But is the heavenly state, where God and Christ are, grown old, that it should need renewing? And if God's celestial residence be eternally new—as is God himself—where is the wisdom of making a new thing new? Furthermore, it is evident the "things" made new previously existed. For it is not "I make all new things," but it is "all things new." Hence it is not a new world made out of new material, but a new world made out of old material. Such is the fair, plain, common sense meaning of the passage. Taken figuratively, as Dr. H. would have it, how lame and awkward the exposition! taken literally, as Wesley and the Adventists, how plain, how glorious its meaning! the old and accursed earth and atmospheric heaven re-cast, re-generated, re-newed by the hand of God.

And still another passage is adduced to analogically demolish 2 Pet. 3: 10. It is Ps. 102: 25, 26. Dr. H., it would seem, will not suffer David anywhere to teach the coming of the Lord or the renovation of our fallen planet. The text only denotes a national calamity or punishment, etc. Isa. 51: 6 is whittled down in like manner. And our Lord, in Matt. 24: 35, does not so much as hint that these old heavens and this old earth shall truly pass away to make way for the new. Our writer evidently follows no law in interpreting Scripture. Literalisms are turned to shadow or figure by the stroke of his mystical pen. But he is a little ambiguous on these passages, and we leave them and pass on, only remarking that, in our humble judgment, his analogical reasoning from passages brought forward to prove a figurative sense attached to Peter's third chapter has signally failed. And should he even succeed in establishing these O. T. passages as tropical, it will not alter the literal sense of Peter. The later revelations are not to be explained by the earlier, but vice versa.

I am not a little surprised at the remarks made in Peter's ignorance of geology; his undesigned prediction of the earth's renewal, etc. Undue liberty is taken with inspiration; little credit is given to the Spirit of God, and the idea set forth that the holy apostle, who it should be remembered was but an amenuensis for the Almighty, failed to perceive his own meaning, or to really know what he was writing about! He wrote of geological changes, it is claimed, but without such intention. He describes the melting and renewing of the earth, but, not being a geologist, it was done incidentally and undesignedly. Does Dr. H. mean to say it was impossible for Him who instantly gave the church at Pentecost without previous study a full and perfect knowledge of foreign tongues and the power to interpret them, to bestow upon our apostle such an insight into the elements of nature as to render him by the self-same Holy Spirit capable of writing as correctly and designedly concerning the great physical and geological changes which are to affect our globe at the last day as the most thoroughly educated geologist now living? And will he explain the numberless scientific allusions contained in the Bible on his principle? The very idea that Peter does not teach the dissolution and renovation of our world is preposterous. His immortal third chapter and verses 10 and 12 still abide as "the strongest texts in the Bible for the literalists." Dr. H. might as well try to annihilate the Green Mountains by covering them up with fog, as to confine the magnificent prediction to a moral renovation during a temporal millennium. He appears hesitating and unsettled in his views. I cordially invite him to moor his wave-tossed vessel to the Rock of Literalism. I think his erroneous system of exposition does lead him to do "violence to a fair and scholarly interpretation of the Bible." There is a better way.

It is doubted if Isaiah, Peter and John refer to the same new heaven and new earth. I think they do, Drs. Barnes, Hitchcock, and the commentators to the contrary. The usus loquendi of the phrase demands it. The only objection, on the literal ground, is the mention of death in Isa. 65: 20. Now by every sound rule of exegesis Peter and John should qualify and explain Isaiah, and not the reverse. John says there is no death in his new earth. Hence there is none in Isaiah's. And Dr. N. Holmes' translation, fairly made, and challenging criticism, sweeps it away. I submit it, with my own words in parentheses, to help elucidate the meaning:—"There shall be no more thence (from the beginning of this new earth) an infant of days (or births), or an old man that hath not filled his days (no decrepit old age); that the child (or young man) should die (there) an hundred years, or the sinner (though he be here) an hundred years old should (be there, and) be accursed." —Resurrection Revealed, 1653, lib. 6, chap. 4, sec. 3, pp. 519–22. That Peter had Isa. 65 in his mind when he penned his 13th verse is almost positive. Isaiah says nothing of the conflagration: Peter does, and places the new earth beyond it. Peter's new earth is that "promised" in Isaiah, consequently the new earth of the prophet, like that of the apostle, is subsequent to the burning day, both being one and the same. Thus the Bible is made to harmonize.

Hr. Hitchcock's objection is then brought up and made the most of. It is not our objection, neither is it a valid one. All true science is in harmony with the Bible; but the Scriptures first, geology afterwards. The Dr.'s objection, which our writer attacks so vigorously, is a man of straw. For God who said "Let light be, and light was"; God who by a meteorological operation (Gen. 8: 1) dried up the entire waters of the great flood in less than a year, can, by his own power assisting geological action, cool the burning world in comparatively a short time, and again clothe it in beauty for his saved ones. The strange notion of its requiring thousands of years, and the saints meanwhile existing in the flames with bodies of heat, light, or electricity, is altogether too Origenistic and astonishingly absurd. It furnishes another instance of the tendency of the age to bend all Scripture to the conclusions of science. A proper reply to such puerilities is, "Ye do err, not knowing the Scriptures nor the power of God."

But what does our writer mean by the apparent fling at the doctrine of a "literal resurrection of the same body" as being peculiarly an expectation of modern Adventists? Another recession from the "old paths"! I commend to him a careful perusal of an old "Sermon 134,—On the Resurrection of the Dead; written in the year 1732 by one John Wesley," who shows that "the resurrection of the self-same body that died and is buried contains nothing in it incredible or impossible." Having read this excellent discourse, he is referred to "The Resurrection of the same body, asserted, etc." by Dr. H. Hody, 1694; also to a similar volume, by a certain Landis, published at 200 Mulberry St., N. Y. Should these fail to convince him our faith is no novelty, he is invited to read the 15th chapter of an Epistle older and more authoritative than all these, written to the church at Corinth A. D. 59 by one Paul, and reading to BELIEVE. Our brethren who heartily believe they will inherit the "land," "earth," or kingdom (Ps. 37: 29), Matt. 5: 5; 25: 34, will be not a little amused as well as astonished upon being told their views respecting the modus, viz: "farming it on the Agrarian plan." Some of them will need to look at the Dictionary to ascertain the meaning of the word. The Dr. should not have taken a second-hand street remark (misunderstood at that) as presenting our general faith, falsely construed to teach that the sixty thousand American Adventists believe the soil of the new earth will be surveyed, and lotted out to the immortal conquerors, to one a hundred, to another five hundred acres, etc., to be tilled and plowed like a prairie farm. He should correct this statement in the paper where he published it, and in future seek proper information from our more standard authors, lest he be found misrepresenting his brethren. I said the remark was misunderstood. Our believers often refer to the "land" or "world" promised to Abraham (Gen. 17: 8; Rom. 4: 13); and quaintly in agricultural style denominate it "Abraham's farm"; but we do not as yet know just how we shall with Abraham and his seed inherit the sacred soil. Acts 7: 5; Gal. 3: 16, 29. The point is not even mooted among us. I acquit Dr. H. of all evil intention; nevertheless his statement attaches the stigma of a gross materialism to our faith in the eyes of the thousands of readers of the Journal. Is it fair?

I firmly believe the new earth will turn upon its axis and form a part of the solar system, and that a brighter sun and moon will illumine those

"Sweet fields beyond the swelling flood"

than has ever shone on our poor world since Eden. The phrase, "no night there," twice used in Rev. 21: 25 and 22: 5, is not spoken of the new earth generally, as the most careless reader cannot fail to observe; but is wholly referred to the city, New Jerusalem. In this glorious metropolis (which is typified by the Jewish Holy of Holies, which was perpetually illuminated by the Shekinah, and hence needed no candle, Ex. 25: 22 and Heb. 9: 2–5), the glory of God and the Lamb (Rev. 21: 23) supersedes the necessity of sunlight, moonlight, or candle-light, as before indicated in Isa. 24: 23. Concerning the other or remaining portions of the new earth not occupied by the new city, it can be truly said there will be day and night in respect to their recurring period, but not in respect to their darkness. Says Dr. Bonar, the Curse "threw a dimness over the sun,—for if in a happier era our sunshine, as we learn from Isa. 30: 26, shall be seven-fold its present intensity, then must the curse have turned the zenith-brightness of Eden into a feeble shade of twilight, and our meridian day is little better than the modification of darkness." Give Isa. 30: 26 a literal interpretation, and it will explain all difficulty in the mind of Dr. H.; for if the moonlight of the new era be equal to our present sunlight, and its sunlight increased seven-fold, we may truly conclude with Dr. Watts that

"All o'er those wide, extended plains,
Shines one eternal day."

Prophecy nowhere blots out the sun and moon, but rather perpetuates them eternally. See and compare Ps. 72: 17 and Rev. 22: 2, where the solar and lunar periods still exist as long as Christ reigns,—i. e., "forever"—verse 5.

The phrase, "no more sea," simply states what was, and not what shall be; the sense of Rev. 21: 1 being that the first earth, first heaven, and sea, were passed away, or were no more. Still there will doubtless be no immense oceans covering three-fourths of the newly made globe, as they do ours at the present time. With Drs. Burnet, Bonar, Thomas Taylor—an early Methodist writer—Wesley, and numerous others, it is supposed the ocean will mostly retire within its old caverns, from whence it burst forth at the great deluge (Gen. 7: 11), and only appear here and there, to use the language of the celebrated John Wesley, "in crystal fountains, to refresh and adorn the earth with liquid lapse of murmuring stream: for undoubtedly, as there were in Paradise, there will be various rivers gently gliding along, for the use and pleasure of both man and beast."—Sermon on Rev. 21: 5. So there will be "dew, and (not "rain," Gen. 2: 5, 6, but) mist, springs and streams." Dr. H., "believest thou the prophets?" Isa. 35th chapter.

I shall not here follow our writer into a discussion of the nature and descent of the New Jerusalem, but only observe in passing that Adventists are exceedingly literal in their views of that immortal "palace of angels and God," as were the first Christians and first Methodists. And I would also respectfully inquire, if the new earth is to be like our moon, viz., uninhabited, as Dr. H. imagines it will be, how can righteousness (dikaiosune) dwell there? 2 Pet. 3: 13. Prof. Whiting in a note renders it "the righteous." The word is about fifteen times in the New Testament described as a divine or godly quality, which in nearly seventy other places is by faith declared to be put on by, or attributable to, men, or human beings. It is never applied to the angels. Take all righteous beings out of the new earth, and would there then be any righteousness there? I think we may rest assured that our painstaking heavenly Architect and Creator will not construct the palatial residence in question and suffer it to remain tenantless. No; thank God, one who cannot lie hath said, "Blessed are the meek, for they shall inherit the earth." Matt. 5: 5. [illegible] and some other things, are reserved for a final article next week.

The World's Crisis

AND SECOND ADVENT MESSENGER.

"BEHOLD, I COME QUICKLY; AND MY REWARD IS WITH ME."

WHOLE NO. 435. BOSTON, TUESDAY, FEBRUARY 2, 1864. VOL. XVIII.—NO. 20.

The World's Crisis
AND SECOND ADVENT MESSENGER,
Issued every Tuesday Afternoon, at
167 HANOVER STREET, BOSTON.

MILES GRANT, EDITOR.

EDITORIAL COMMITTEE:
H. L. HASTINGS, D. T. TAYLOR,
H. F. CARPENTER.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEE:
H. V. DAVIS, S. S. BREWER,
A. ROSS, J. G. HAMBLIN,
SOLOMON HOVEY.

GEO. T. ADAMS, TREASURER.

☞ THE CRISIS is devoted to the exposition of all Bible truth; especially the doctrine of the immediate, personal coming and reign of Christ on the earth; holiness of heart; the unconscious state of the dead; their literal resurrection, and the final destruction of the wicked.

THE NEW HEAVENS AND THE NEW EARTH.

BY B. HAWLEY, D. D., PASTOR OF THE METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH IN CASTLETON, VT.

Is this sentence in the Scriptures to be understood literally, or figuratively? If literally, is the new earth to be the final abode of the righteous?

We find this sentence four times in the Bible, namely, Isaiah 65: 17, 19; 66: 22; 2 Peter 3: 13; Revelation 21: 1.

Of the meaning of the sentence there are two prominent opinions in the Church. One is, that the words heavens and earth are to be understood figuratively, and that the clause teaches that there will yet be such a thorough and wide-spread reform in the world—the Gospel will be so widely preached, its truths so generally known, and its power so widely felt—that in a moral and religious aspect the heavens and earth will be new, of another character. In this sense the Scriptures speak of a new heart, not literally another heart, nor physically new, but spiritually and religiously renewed. This state of things in the world is called the Millennium, or the latter-day glory.

The other opinion is that the earth and the heavens are to undergo a literal destruction by fire—if not annihilation, at least a thorough burning up of all the combustible materials of earth and the atmosphere, and a reconstruction of them for the final residence of the righteous.

Which of these opinions is the more probable is the subject of our present inquiry.

1. In favor of the literal view we may cite the opinions of many early Christians. But the early Church was, on this subject, greatly divided. While the tendency of some divines was to a gross and materialistic interpretation of the Scriptures, that of others was to a conjectural and fanciful interpretation. On points liable to speculation they often and greatly erred.

Geologists, who wish to make the Scriptures conform to what they conceive to be the teachings of geological science, give to this sentence in 2 Peter 3: 13, a strictly literal interpretation. So also do those Bible interpreters known as literalists.

That the Apostle Peter does not teach that the earth and heavens are to be annihilated is evident, because matter is never annihilated by burning. It produces only a change in the mode of being. The most that can be legitimately drawn from the very strong and minute words of St. Peter is, that all the combustible parts of the earth will be changed by fire, as "the world," (ho kosmos,) or the surface things and creatures of the earth, were previously destroyed by the Noachian flood; and the only tenable or plausible opinion of the literalists can be no more than this.

To this view, however, not as a geological probability, but as a Scripture doctrine, we have several objections: 1. The analogy of biblical interpretation is opposed to a literal construction of 2 Peter 3: 13. In verse 5 we have "the earth," (ge) or land, "standing out of the water and in the water;" but in verse 6 it is defined to be "the world (kosmos) that, being overflowed with water, perished." That is, the organized things and creatures of the earth were destroyed by water, and only so widely as was necessary to destroy sinful men. The deluge not being universal, the future destruction by fire may not be, at least will be only superficial.

Verse 7 is very strong, but on comparing it with other portions of the Bible, we shall find very similar and equally strong expressions to describe only a civil and moral revolution of society, and in some cases within very limited districts. Take Psalm 50: 3, 4, where only a moral and spiritual renovation is described—"a fire shall devour before him, and it shall be tempestuous round about him. He shall call to the heavens from above, and to the earth that he may judge his people."

Isaiah 34: 4; "All the host of heaven shall be dissolved, and the heavens shall be rolled together as a scroll; and all their host shall fall down as a leaf falleth off from the vine." This is as strong as anything in Peter's epistles; but the next verse shows that only a great civil change and punitive revolution are threatened to Idumea, because of the wickedness of the people.

The prophecy of Zephaniah 3: 8; "My determination is to gather the nations, that I may assemble the kingdoms to pour upon them mine indignation, even all my fierce anger: for all the earth shall be devoured with the fire of my jealousy." Here all the earth means the land (ge) of Judah. And the fire is the jealousy of God toward the sins of the people.

Nothing can be stronger than the prophecy of Micah 1: 4; "And the mountains shall be molten under him, and the valleys shall be cleft as wax before the fire." But this has reference to and is because of "the transgression of Jacob, and further sins of the house of Israel." Its accomplishment was neither literal nor universal, as the words seem to indicate.

The bold and nervous statement of St. Paul in 2 Thess. 1: 8; and of St. John in Rev. 21: 5, are most certainly to be understood figuratively. The "flaming fire" in which the Lord Jesus shall be revealed will not be literal fire, nor flames about his person; but either the glory with which he will be clothed at the last day, or it is emblematical of the severe retribution of the wicked, according as we construe the phrase with the preceding words, as recent commentators do; or with the following, as by some ancients and moderns. The making of "all things new" is certainly the moral renovation of the world, the millennial state, or it may describe the heavenly state.

The analogy of Scripture is further seen in comparing 2 Peter 3: 10 with prophecy: "The day of the Lord will come as a thief in the night, in the which the heavens shall pass away with a great noise, and the elements shall melt with fervent heat, and the earth also, and the works that are therein shall be burned up." This is the strongest text in the Bible for the literalists. And geologists eagerly quote it in support of a future renovation of the earth by fire. The probability of the geological hypothesis we do not deny, for that there are internal fires of earth sufficient to produce such a confragation no student of geology can doubt. But whether St. Peter teaches the doctrine is another thing, about which we may inquire. By comparing Scripture with Scripture we find language equally strong and specific used to describe national calamities, national punishments, and the moral renovation of the people. Thus Psalm 102: 26; "They (the heavens and earth) shall perish: yea, all of them shall wax old like a garment; as a vesture shalt thou change them, and they shall be changed." The most that can be legitimately deduced from this text is the changeableness of all material things, and the passing away of all the superficial things—the garments and vesture—of the earth and atmosphere. Isaiah (51: 6) uses equally plain terms: "The heavens shall vanish away like smoke, and the earth shall wax old like a garment, and they that dwell therein shall die in like manner." The most that any fair interpretation can make of this is just what we, in this age of the world, see constantly transpiring, the land becoming old and desolate as in the East, and the people dying in every possible form.

No one supposes that our Lord (Matt. 24: 35) teaches that the heaven and earth shall so pass away as that there shall be no more heaven and earth; but he rather contrasts the mutability of all earthly things with the unchangeableness of his words. The same fact is expressed by Isaiah 40: 6–8; "All flesh is grass, and all the goodliness thereof is as the flower of the field. The grass withereth, the flower fadeth; because the spirit of the Lord bloweth upon it: surely the people is grass. The grass withereth, the flower fadeth; but the word of our God shall stand for ever."

So also 2 Peter 3: 12; "The day of God wherein the heavens, being on fire, shall be dissolved, and the elements shall melt with fervent heat," may incidentally and without design describe what, in the geological changes of the earth, shall take place. But whether St. Peter so designed it is another thing. That he may not have so designed it is strongly inferable from the fact that Isaiah (34: 4) and Micah (1: 4) use very similar language to describe the desolations that were threatened upon Idumea and Jacob. St. Peter was not a geologist, and could not have written with reference to geological changes to transpire in the great future. Of such like changes he may have written, but not as a geologist.

2. Another objection to the notion that St. Peter teaches any such renovation of this earth in order that it may be the final abode of the righteous, is that the new heavens and the new earth of the Old Testament prophecies are understood by most reliable commentators, and even by such literalists and geologists as Drs. Hitchcock and J. P. Smith, who strongly advocate the future renovation of this earth by fire, to denote only the millennial state of the Church before the final judgment. The word "new" means another and quite different abode of the righteous, or it describes the morally reformed world, a world "wherein dwelleth righteousness." And as the Millennium is to be, as the Sabbath now is, a type and harbinger of heaven, the phrase "new heaven and new earth" may also mean the place where righteousness now dwells, that is, "where Christ sitteth on the right hand of God," where are the angels of God, where Enoch and Elijah and "the spirits of just men made perfect" now are. This derives corroboration from the words of Peter himself in verse 13: "Nevertheless we, according to his promise, look for new heavens and a new earth wherein dwelleth righteousness." The promise here referred to is none other than that given by Isaiah, and which is generally conceded to designate the latter-day glory.

3. Another objection to this being the best interpretation of St. Peter is fairly stated by Dr. Hitchcock: "After its (the earth's) organic and combustible matter shall have been destroyed, and its whole mass reduced to a liquid state, and then a new economy reared up on its surface, not adapted to sinful beings, it must require thousands of years before another solid crust shall be formed upon its surface, capable of sustaining organic natures which are material. The Bible represents the righteous at the day of judgment as reunited to their bodies, which they left in the grave, entering at once into their final abode."

Neither Dr. H. nor any other literalist can obviate this objection if they take a geological view of the matter. The only show of attempts to remove the difficulty is either by allowing the day of judgment to last thousands of years, during which time the earth will be recovered to a state suited to the improved condition of man, or by affirming that the resurrection body may somehow and yet blissfully inhabit this earth while in a molten condition, at least when divested of all organized and living things. Dr. H. cannot, however, quite stretch himself to that pitch of credulity, and he therefore conjectures that the resurrection body will consist of a "strange fluid" not wholly unlike light, heat, electricity, and may therefore live on this earth as its heaven in a molten and desolate condition! What will modern Adventists, who are expecting a literal resurrection of the same body laid in the grave, the same atoms, "flesh and bones," and who talk of farming it on the Agrarian plan of perfect equality in a new earth, say to this objection unavoidably pressed on them if they interpret St. Peter literally, and then plead the deductions of geology to support their views?

4. To the idea that this earth, renovated by fire, as indeed it may be, will be the final abode of the righteous, we object. The Scriptures teach that "there shall be no night there." Rev. 21: 25; 22: 5. But if this earth turn on its axis then as it now does, and be a part of the solar system, though the light of the sun be not then needed, there must be then as now both day and night. So, too, there shall be "no more sea" in the heaven of the righteous. But if this earth shall be occupied by corporeal man in the reconstruction, as modern literalists claim, will there be dew and rain, springs and streams? So there will be also a sea on this earth.

Now we may admit, agreeably to the strong probabilities of geological science, that the earth will be desolated by fire, and yet, without doing any violence to a fair and scholarly interpretation of the Bible, we may apply its strongest prophecies in reference to a new earth and new heavens to the new and glorious state of things in the Millennium, and particularly, as typified thereby, to the heavenly state where Christ, his angels, Enoch and Elijah, and the [illegible] dead now are. Even that eminent geologist and divine, Dr. J. Pye Smith, who believes in the renovation of this earth by fire, says: "The declaration that the heavens and the earth shall flee away, and no more place be found for them, is undoubtedly figurative, and denotes the momentous changes in the scenes of the divine moral government." And, so far as we know, the earth may never again, after its conflagration, be inhabited, except by a new order of beings in an endless gradation of God's works. The present condition of the moon is a sample of what the earth may then be.

II. A few words in reference to the figurative interpretation of the clause, "the new heavens and new earth," are in place here.

1. It is generally conceded, and by the most judicious of literalists, that this phrase in prophecy sets forth the great political and moral changes to transpire through the agency of the church on this earth. The famous prophecy of Isaiah (65: 17, 19; 66: 22) "represents," says Dr. Hitchcock, "a state of things on the present earth before the judgment, and not a heavenly and immortal state; for sin and death are spoken of as existing in it; both which we are assured will be excluded from heaven." So also he admits that Rev. 21: 1, is figurative, because the New Jerusalem coming down from God out of heaven cannot be understood as a literal event, but rather denotes the intercommunication of heaven and earth during the latter-day glory.

"If we carefully examine this and other collateral passages, we shall find good reason to believe this description of the New Jerusalem is a highly wrought figurative description of the christian church in its highest state of prosperity. St. John says, 'It was prepared as a bride adorned for her husband,' and that 'they shall bring the glory and honor of the nations into it.' This description is suited to the church, but not to heaven."—Dr. Spicer.

"This," the New Jerusalem, "doubtless means the christian church in a state of great prosperity."—Dr. A. Clarke.

2. In further confirmation of the figurative interpretation, we refer to the statement of St. Paul in Romans 8: 22, which many think to be a passage difficult of interpretation: "We know that the whole creation groaneth and travaileth in pain together until now." Adventists and some christian geologists refer this passage to a change by fire and to a renovation that await this earth, and possibly "the whole creation." Both Dr. H. and the learned authorities he cites utterly mistake, as I conceive, the meaning of the apostle. They are led into error because of their proclivities to literalism, and possibly from a want of attention to the original text. If in verses, 19, 20, 21 the word "creature" (ktisis) refers to the creature man, who "waiteth for the manifestation of the sons of God," to the same creature "made subject to vanity" without his own consent, to the creature who, in the resurrection, "shall be delivered from the bondage of corruption into the glorious liberty of the children of God;" why does not pasa ktisis ("the whole creation") in verse 22 refer to the same creatures severally; to every creature "waiting for the redemption of the body"? If this is correct, then pasa ktisis should not be translated "the whole creation," but every creature, as in the preceding verses. The phrase pasa ktisis may mean all intelligent creatures.

If, however, it is better to understand by pasa ktisis "the whole creation," then, in the context, we should understand by ktisis the creation. But this involves the absurdity of the material creation waiting for the manifestation of the sons of God, made subject to vanity not willingly, and having the promise of deliverance from the bondage of corruption into the glorious liberty of the children of God, which things are simply absurd.

But if, again, we should understand by the words pasa ktisis the whole world of intelligences, then in the foregoing verses we must understand by ktisis the world of intelligences separately—individual man, that is, "the creature." The simple truth is, as I conceive it, the apostle teaches that every christian earnestly and anxiously waits for the redemption of his body. By a figure of speech this earnest waiting and looking for is affirmed of all men, or, if it please, of "the whole creation."

The conclusions which we reach are, first, that though this earth may be subject to a renovation by fire, and St. Peter may indeed teach the same, yet the phrase "new heavens and new earth" more generally designates the latter-day glory, and by it the true and final heaven of the blessed; and, secondly, that this earth will not be the final abode of the righteous.—Christian Advocate and Journal, Dec. 10th, 1863.

REVIEW OF THE ABOVE.

BY D. T. TAYLOR.
Pastor of the A. C. Church in Castleton, Vt.

The foregoing article, furnished by a clergyman whom I esteem, and whose scholarly abilities are unquestioned, presents some arguments against a literal new earth, created from the present one, becoming the endless dwelling place of the redeemed. The doctrine which is tried to be refuted is a very dear one to all Adventists, and the article being public property, and hence subject to criticism, I propose a reply and review, with the intention of being thorough and critical while courteous and fair.

It is seen that some very important points are allowed by Dr. H. These amount to concessions, and are worth our notice. And First, the subject is abundantly stated in the Scriptures. Four times we find the sentence "new heavens and a new earth." Hence the thing is not obscurely nor scantily spoken of. The view is not hid away in a corner. It stands out bold and conspicuous. It is found in three different books and four different chapters. One inspired prophet and two apostles have set their hands and seals to the doctrine. But these texts do not by any means exhaust the scriptural proof. This vein of a newly created world inherited by the righteous crops out in numerous places through the whole Bible. Ps. 37: 9, 22, 29; Isa. 60: 17–22; Dan. 2: 44 and 7: 27; Matt. 5: 5; 25: 34; Acts 3: 21, and a multitude of other passages all bear in the same direction. The Millennium or thousand years [strictly speaking the word denotes a period of time and not a state] is mentioned by but one writer, in one book, and one chapter in the Bible; and although the Apocalypse which alone teaches it is highly symbolic, our writer appears to accept it as denoting a literal Millennium. Why then may not the new earth be understood literally? And why not as divinely taught?

Secondly, It is admitted that this earth may be subject to a renovation by fire, and St. Peter may indeed teach the same, this view being a geological probability, not denied; matter by burning is only changed, and never annihilated,—hence the earth after its conflagration may possibly be inhabited by a new order of beings in an endless gradation of God's works. With the eminent christian geologists, Fairbairn, Smith and Hitchcock, such an opinion is admitted to be agreeable to the strong probabilities of geological science. This concession is a fair one, and it is a step in advance of the old view of the earth's utter annihilation as taught by Howe, Dwight, and the doctors of the middle ages. But, alas! St. Peter, who was not a geologist, does not teach any such doctrine! His words are "very strong and minute" in describing the conflagration and renovation, but they must not be literally construed! Peter could not have designed to teach any such thing! If he describes such an epoch it was only "incidentally"! And so the inspired apostle is made to possibly teach something about which he really knew nothing! Are we to understand Peter as being equally unreliable on other matters? The entering wedge is seen here,—where will it stop?

Thirdly, It is allowed that if we interpret the Bible literally then the Scriptures and geology agree, and there is to be a purging of the surface-world by fire and a reconstruction of the earth and heavens, garnished in beauty, for the final residence of the righteous. This literal view is admitted to be a prominent opinion in the church. It is the view of the Adventists, and is sustained by many early christians and modern geologists. This literal sense is defined by Dr. J. P. Smith as being "the common rule of all rational interpretation," or, as observes Prof. J. A. Ernesti, "The literal sense, or that which is derived from the knowledge of words, is the only true one." "I hold it," says Thomas Hooker, "for a most infallible rule, in expositions of sacred Scripture, that when a literal construction will stand, the furthest from the letter is commonly the worst." (Voice of the Church, pp 17, 18.) But Dr. H— objects. He stands opposed to a literally renewed earth inhabited by the just. The phrase means "a moral renovation of the world in the millennial state, or it may describe the heavenly state." And so say modern Methodists generally, but so said not the founders of Methodism. How often are we reminded of the prediction of Sir Isaac Newton, who in 1733 sagaciously observed, says William Thorp, that "about the time of the end a body of men will be raised up, who will turn their attention to the prophecies, and insist upon their literal interpretation in the midst of much clamor and opposition." This "body of men" have arisen, and after twenty years' study of the prophecies I have seen nothing to justify me in abandoning their company.

The primitive and literal meaning of the word "earth" is given in Gen. 1: 9, 10. I apply all the laws of language to the interpretation of the sacred volume, but never forget that where Bible words can be taken according to their primitive and historical meaning, and no contradiction, violation of common sense, or absurdity is therein involved, it is always and only safe thus to take them. It is truly lamentable to see christians needlessly abandon the letter for the figure, the certain for the uncertain,—and thus, like Dr. H—, launch their boat upon the fluctuating sea of "may be's."

Continuing our review, it is fully admitted by us that the first christians were in many things fanciful, speculative, and erroneous in their views of the Scriptures. But I deny that they were greatly divided on the subject in question. As to the charge of a gross materialism in their opinions concerning the new earth, it lies at the door of Mosheim, backed by Popish doctors like Jerome, and is yet to be proved. Even Gibbon accuses Mosheim of a want of candor on the subject. "All primitive orthodox christians," writes the learned Grabe, "expected, according to the words of the apostles and the promises of the prophets, a new heaven and a new earth, at the second coming of the Messiah to restore the happiness which flourished before the fall of Adam."—Grabe's Spicilegium Patrum, lib. 2, p. 230. Such is the testimony of one who carefully examined and collated, not a few prejudiced and doubtful writers, but the fathers generally. The doctrine is found in the writings of Hermas, Barnabas, Papias, Irenæus, Justin the martyr, Hippolytus, Melito, Tertullian, Clement of Alexandria, Methodius, Nepos, Coracion, Origen, Victorinus, Lactantius, The Council of Nice, Eusebius, The two Cyrils of Alexandria and Jerusalem, Epiphanious, Ambrose, Basil, Chrysostom, Hilary, The two Gregorys of Nazianzen and Nyssen, Jerome and Augustine. (See Voice of the Church.)

From A. D. 100 to A. D 400 there is one unbroken testimony against the opinion of Dr. H. and in favor of our own. All were not agreed as to when the earth will be renovated,—the millenarians put it at the beginning of the millennium, while their opposers placed its commencement at the end. But all held it would be truly and literally a renewed, renovated, and re-generated globe, and that the meek would possess it. Not a single writer in the christian church for the first four centuries ever dreamed of or advanced the figurative view presented above by Dr. Hawley. Having thoroughly examined the history of this doctrine as held by the early church, I know whereof I affirm, and challenge successful contradiction. In the light of this evidence, our writer's first point, viz: his historical argument, utterly falls to the ground.

The denial of the universality of the flood, a view which most christians and geologists are now agreed upon, I pass by. It is claimed to be universal in respect to man, but local in respect to the earth. The opinion is but speculative. For who can tell how widely the migratory, nomadic, antediluvian races of men, whose lives were cotemporary variously from six to nine centuries, spread themselves over the globe during that long period of 1656 years? But the argument deduced therefrom is unsound. For if the overflowing waters of the Noachian deluge were limited in their spread by the dwelling places of sinful men, the application of the argument as determining the spread of the last fires should make those fires universal, because at the present time sinful men are found in every part of the habitable globe. As the curse is universal, so the final fires, kindled but for its removal, will also be. Let but Peter be understood literally, and there is no avoiding such conclusion. It is pleasant to reflect that He who said to man "Cursed is the ground for thy sake" (Gen. 3: 13), and who declares that for the sins of men "the curse shall devour the earth" (Isa. 24: 6), will, when redemption's work is done, joyfully announce to the universe that "there shall be no more curse."—Rev. 22: 3.

I come now to the argument from the analogy of Scripture. This, it is claimed, is against a literal construction of Pet. 3: 7, 10, 12. But the writer is unfortunate in his selection of supposed analogical texts by which he would destroy the literal import of Peter's forcible and vigorous language. Ps. 50: 3, 4 is quoted as denoting only a moral and spiritual renovation. No better proof can be furnished from the Old Testament to support the generally received doctrine of the advent and the last day. If this can be turned into a shadow or figure, why may not Dan. 7: 9, 10, and even Rev. 20: 11–13, as well? By what sound law of Biblical exegesis are David's obviously adventual words made to mean a mere civil or moral revolution in perhaps a limited society? I always grieve to see such license taken with the sacred word. Then Isa. 34: 4 is made to mean only a civil change and punitive revolution, simply because Idumea is mentioned as partaking of the threatened judgment. The eminent Lowth upon the passage is much sounder when he says "Edom and Bozrah are mentioned, a part for the whole." "But this event—the subduing of Edom by Nebuchadnezzar, Jer. 25: 15, 16—does not by any means seem to come up to the terms of this prophecy, to which all nations are called upon to attend; or to an event the description of which is so terrible that many have understood it of the last judgment, to which, in its ultimate sense, it may indeed be referred."—Trans. and Notes on chap. 34. Albany, N. Y., Ed. 1794.

The prediction cannot be limited to one nation, for it is addressed to "all" that is in the earth, and "all" that comes forth of the world, and concerns "all nations" and "all armies"; it agrees exactly with 2 Pet. 3: 12 and Rev. 6: 14, and most obviously refers to "the day of the Lord's vengeance, and the year of recompenses for the controversy of Zion" (verse 8), of which day the destruction of Idumea is a type. So too with Zeph. 3: 8, next quoted, and which unquestionably tallies with Rev. 16: 14 and Rev. 19: 19–21, and is to be literal as the sense of language demands, with the exception of the figure, "fire of my jealousy," which refers not to the quality of the fire, but rather to the righteous and indignant motives of Deity. By what subtile law of exegesis "all the earth"—Sept., Coverdale, etc., "the whole earth"—is mad to mean the land of Judah, a spot about as large as Vermont, it is hard to imagine. However, we must not forget the Doctor is not a literalist. I beg leave to remind him that Zephaniah did not write in the Greek. The word is not gee, the Greek word for land and earth, but it is arets, a Hebrew word which, according to Gesenius, means "the earth." And if Micah 1: 4 can be proved to be of a local and figurative character, which after all is doubtful, it by no means follows that Peter's splendid prediction should be thus interpreted. I agree with our writer in supposing the "flaming fire" of 2 Thess. 1: 8 to denote the clouds of glory surrounding the person of our descending King; but fail to perceive any other figures in the entire adventual passage. Ex. 24: 15–17 assists to explain the figure in question. This appears to be all of the passage that our writer understands "figuratively." It does not aid him any in demolishing the literality of Peter.

But Rev. 21: 5 must certainly be understood figuratively! And why? Ah! the follower of Wesley is far from being in the succession here. Now if the "things" made new mean mankind (an awkward way of speaking of men, surely!) then all mankind are to be morally renovated, ergo all may be saved. And the exposition is more faulty if the "all things" be referred to heaven. For the making of all things new implies, first, need by reason of age or decay, and second, wisdom in the act. But is the heavenly state, where God and Christ are, grown old, that it should need renewing? And if God's celestial residence be eternally new—as is God himself—where is the wisdom of making a new thing new? Furthermore, it is evident the "things" made new previously existed. For it is not "I make all new things," but it is "all things new." Hence it is not a new world made out of new material, but a new world made out of old material. Such is the fair, plain, common sense meaning of the passage. Taken figuratively, as Dr. H. would have it, how lame and awkward the exposition! taken literally, as Wesley and the Adventists, how plain, how glorious its meaning! the old and accursed earth and atmospheric heaven recast, re-generated, re-newed by the hand of God.

And still another passage is adduced to analogically demolish 2 Pet. 3: 10. It is Ps. 102: 25, 26. Dr. H., it would seem, will not suffer David anywhere to teach the coming of the Lord or the renovation of our fallen planet. The text only denotes a national calamity or punishment, etc. Isa. 51: 6 is whittled down in like manner. And our Lord, in Matt. 24: 35, does not so much as hint that these old heavens and this old earth shall truly pass away to make way for the new. Our writer evidently follows no law in interpreting Scripture. Literalisms are turned to shadow or figure by the stroke of his mystical pen. But he is a little ambiguous on these passages, and we leave them and pass on, only remarking that, in our humble judgment, his analogical reasoning from passages brought forward to prove a figurative sense attached to Peter's third chapter has signally failed. And should he even succeed in establishing these O. T. passages as tropical, it will not alter the literal sense of Peter. The later revelations are not to be explained by the earlier, but vice versa.

I am not a little surprised at the remarks made in Peter's ignorance of geology; his undesigned prediction of the earth's renewal, etc. Undue liberty is taken with inspiration; little credit is given to the Spirit of God, and the idea set forth that the holy apostle, who it should be remembered was but an amenuensis for the Almighty, failed to perceive his own meaning, or to really know what he was writing about! He wrote of geological changes, it is claimed, but without such intention. He describes the melting and renewing of the earth, but, not being a geologist, it was done incidentally and undesignedly. Does Dr. H. mean to say it was impossible for Him who instantly gave the church at Pentecost without previous study a full and perfect knowledge of foreign tongues and the power to interpret them, to bestow upon our apostle such an insight into the elements of nature as to render him by the self-same Holy Spirit capable of writing as correctly and designedly concerning the great physical and geological changes which are to affect our globe at the last day as the most thoroughly educated geologist now living? And will he explain the numberless scientific allusions contained in the Bible on his principle? The very idea that Peter does not teach the dissolution and renovation of our world is preposterous. His immortal third chapter and verses 10 and 12 still abide as "the strongest texts in the Bible for the literalists." Dr. H. might as well try to annihilate the Green Mountains by covering them up with fog, as to confine the magnificent prediction to a moral renovation during a temporal millennium. He appears hesitating and unsettled in his views. I cordially invite him to moor his wave-tossed vessel to the Rock of Literalism. I think his erroneous system of exposition does lead him to do "violence to a fair and scholarly interpretation of the Bible." There is a better way.

It is doubted if Isaiah, Peter and John refer to the same new heaven and new earth. I think they do, Drs. Barnes, Hitchcock, and the commentators to the contrary. The usus loquendi of the phrase demands it. The only objection, on the literal ground, is the mention of death in Isa. 65: 20. Now by every sound rule of exegesis Peter and John should qualify and explain Isaiah, and not the reverse. John says there is no death in his new earth. Hence there is none in Isaiah's. And Dr. N. Holmes' translation, fairly made, and challenging criticism, sweeps it away. I submit it, with my own words in parentheses, to help elucidate the meaning:—"There shall be no more thence (from the beginning of this new earth) an infant of days (or births), or an old man that hath not filled his days (no decrepit old age); that the child (or young man) should die (there) an hundred years, or the sinner (though he be here) an hundred years old should (be there, and) be accursed."—Resurrection Revealed, 1653, lib. 6, chap. 4, sec. 3, pp. 519–22. That Peter had Isa. 65 in his mind when he penned his 13th verse is almost positive. Isaiah says nothing of the conflagration: Peter does, and places the new earth beyond it. Peter's new earth is that "promised" in Isaiah, consequently the new earth of the prophet, like that of the apostle, is subsequent to the burning day, both being one and the same. Thus the Bible is made to harmonize.

Hr. Hitchcock's objection is then brought up and made the most of. It is not our objection, neither is it a valid one. All true science is in harmony with the Bible; but the Scriptures first, geology afterwards. The Dr.'s objection, which our writer attacks so vigorously, is a man of straw. For God who said "Let light be, and light was"; God who by a meteorological operation (Gen. 8: 1) dried up the entire waters of the great flood in less than a year, can, by his own power assisting geological action, cool the burning world in comparatively a short time, and again clothe it in beauty for his saved ones. The strange notion of its requiring thousands of years, and the saints meanwhile existing in the flames with bodies of heat, light, or electricity, is altogether too Origenistic and astonishingly absurd. It furnishes another instance of the tendency of the age to bend all Scripture to the conclusions of science. A proper reply to such puerilities is, "Ye do err, not knowing the Scriptures nor the power of God."

But what does our writer mean by the apparent fling at the doctrine of a "literal resurrection of the same body" as being peculiarly an expectation of modern Adventists? Another recession from the "old paths"! I commend to him a careful perusal of an old "Sermon 134.—On the Resurrection of the Dead; written in the year 1732 by one John Wesley," who shows that "the resurrection of the self-same body that died and is buried contains nothing in it incredible or impossible." Having read this excellent discourse, he is referred to "The Resurrection of the same body asserted, etc.," by Dr. H. Hody, 1694; also to a similar volume by a certain Landis, published at 200 Mulberry St., N. Y. Should these fail to convince him our faith is no novelty, he is invited to read the 15th chapter of an Epistle older and more authoritative than all these, written to the church at Corinth A. D. 59 by one Paul, and reading to BELIEVE. Our brethren who heartily believe they will inherit the "land," "earth," or kingdom (Ps. 37: 29), Matt. 5: 5; 25: 34, will be not a little amused as well as astonished upon being told their views respecting the modus, viz: "farming it on the Agrarian plan." Some of them will need to look at the Dictionary to ascertain the meaning of the word. The Dr. should not have taken a second-hand street remark (misunderstood at that) as presenting our general faith, falsely construed to teach that the sixty thousand American Adventists believe the soil of the new earth will be surveyed, and lotted out to the immortal conquerors, to one a hundred, to another five hundred acres, etc., to be tilled and plowed like a prairie farm. He should correct this statement in the paper where he published it, and in future seek proper information from our more standard authors, lest he be found misrepresenting his brethren. I said the remark was misunderstood. Our believers often refer to the "land" or "world" promised to Abraham (Gen. 17: 8; Rom. 4: 13); and quaintly in agricultural style denominate it "Abraham's farm"; but we do not as yet know just how we shall with Abraham and his seed inherit the sacred soil. Acts 7: 5; Gal. 3: 16, 29. The point is not [illegible] mooted among us. I acquit Dr. H. of all evil intention; nevertheless his statement attaches the stigma of a gross materialism to our faith in the eyes of the thousands of readers of the Journal. Is it fair?

I firmly believe the new earth will turn upon its axis and form a part of the solar system, and that a brighter sun and moon will illumine those

"Sweet fields beyond the swelling flood"

than has ever shone on our poor world since Eden. The phrase, "no night there," twice used in Rev. 21: 25 and 22: 5, is not spoken of the new earth generally, as the most careless reader cannot fail to observe; but is wholly referred to the city, New Jerusalem. In this glorious metropolis (which is typified by the Jewish Holy of Holies, which was perpetually illuminated by the Shekinah, and hence needed no candle, Ex. 25: 22 and Heb. 9: 2–5), the glory of God and the Lamb (Rev. 21: 23) supersedes the necessity of sunlight, moonlight, or candle-light, as before indicated in Isa. 24: 23. Concerning the other or remaining portions of the new earth not occupied by the new city, it can be truly said there will be day and night in respect to their recurring period, but not in respect to their darkness. Says Dr. Bonar, the Curse "threw a dimness over the sun,—for if in a happier era our sunshine, as we learn from Isa. 30: 26, shall be seven-fold its present intensity, then must the curse have turned the zenith-brightness of Eden into a feeble shade of twilight, and our meridian day is little better than the modification of darkness." Give Isa. 30: 26 a literal interpretation, and it will explain all difficulty in the mind of Dr. H.; for if the moonlight of the new era be equal to our present sunlight, and its sunlight increased seven-fold, we may truly conclude with Dr. Watts that

"All o'er those wide, extended plains,
Shines one eternal day."

Prophecy nowhere blots out the sun and moon, but rather perpetuates them eternally. See and compare Ps. 72: 17 and Rev. 22: 2, where the solar and lunar periods still exist as long as Christ reigns,—i. e., "forever"—verse 5.

The phrase, "no more sea," simply states what was, and not what shall be; the sense of Rev. 21: 1 being that the first earth, first heaven, and sea, were passed away, or were no more. Still there will doubtless be no immense oceans covering three-fourths of the newly made globe, as they do ours at the present time. With Drs. Burnet, Bonar, Thomas Taylor—an early Methodist writer—Wesley, and numerous others, it is supposed the ocean will mostly retire within its old caverns, from whence it burst forth at the great deluge (Gen. 7: 11), and only appear here and there, to use the language of the celebrated John Wesley, "in crystal fountains, to refresh and adorn the earth with liquid lapse of murmuring stream: for undoubtedly, as there were in Paradise, there will be various rivers gently gliding along, for the use and pleasure of both man and beast."—Sermon on Rev. 21: 5. So there will be "dew, and (not "rain," Gen. 2: 5, 6, but) mist, springs and streams." Dr. H., "believest thou the prophets?" Isa. 35th chapter.

I shall not here follow our writer into a discussion of the nature and descent of the New Jerusalem, but only observe in passing that Adventists are exceedingly literal in their views of that immortal "palace of angels and God," as were the first Christians and first Methodists. And I would also respectfully inquire, if the new earth is to be like our moon, viz., uninhabited, as Dr. H. imagines it will be, how can righteousness (dikaiosune) dwell there? 2 Pet. 3: 13. Prof. Whiting in a note renders it "the righteous." The word is about fifteen times in the New Testament described as a divine or godly quality, which in nearly seventy other places is by faith declared to be put on by, or attributable to, men or human beings. It is never applied to the angels. Take all righteous beings out of the new earth, and would there then be any righteousness there? I think we may rest assured that our painstaking heavenly Architect and Creator will not construct the palatial residence in question and suffer it to remain tenantless. No; thank God, one who cannot lie hath said, "Blessed are the meek, for they shall inherit the earth." Matt. 5: 5.

Pasa ktisis, and some other things, are reserved for a final article next week.

For the World's Crisis.

THE SPIRIT.

Bro. Grant:—I have been an earnest seeker after the truth these twenty years, and am still searching to know the truth and to be sanctified by it. Now is it true that there is no Spirit except the written word (the Bible)? If there is no Spirit of God aside from the word, or beside the word, why should we ask God for his Holy Spirit, if there is none? It would be nonsense to keep asking for a Bible when we have one. The apostle says God is more willing to give his Spirit to those that ask him, than parents are to give good gifts unto their children? Then let us be obedient children and ask that God who giveth liberally and upbraideth not. "For every one that asketh receiveth, and he that seeketh findeth; and to him that knocketh it shall be opened to him." So the promise is sure.

Now "God is a spirit, and they that worship him must worship him in spirit and in truth." How are we to get the Spirit? His word teaches us to ask him for it in the name of his Son, and he will give it to us. For Jesus says, "Whatsoever ye ask the Father in my name, he will give it you." Then, brethren and sisters, let us seek to have the Spirit, for "to be carnally minded is death; but to be spiritually minded is life and peace." "But ye are not in the flesh, but in the Spirit, if so be the Spirit of God dwelleth in you." "Now if any man have not the Spirit of Christ, he is none of his." "But if the spirit of him that raised up Jesus from the dead dwell in you, he that raised up Christ from the dead shall also quicken your mortal bodies, by his Spirit that dwelleth in you." "For as many as are led by the Spirit of God, they are the sons of God." Now if there is no Spirit to be led by, there will be no sons of God, and we shall all perish as the beasts.

But we have a better hope than this. We believe what the Savior said, "I will not leave you comfortless; for if I go away I will send the Comforter, and he will guide you into all truth, and will reprove the world of sin and righteousness. And lo, I am with you alway, even unto the end of the world." Not personally, for I am going away now; but when you meet together in my name, there I will be in the midst to comfort and strengthen you, that you may live and walk in the Spirit, that you may bring forth the fruits of the Spirit; for whatsoever "ye sow that shall ye also reap. If ye sow to the flesh, ye shall of the flesh reap corruption; but he that soweth to the Spirit shall of the Spirit reap life everlasting."

If we do not believe in the Spirit, what then shall we reap? We shall most certainly reap the fruit of unbelief, and that is the sin that will condemn the world. If we reject the Spirit, do we not reject Christ? for he says whosoever speaketh a word against the Son of man, it shall be forgiven him; but whosoever speaketh against the Holy Spirit shall not be forgiven, neither in this world, neither in the world to come. And why? Because he has told us to "Grieve not the Holy Spirit of God, whereby ye are sealed unto the day of redemption. In whom also, after ye believed, ye were sealed with the Holy Spirit of promise, which is the earnest of our inheritance until the redemption of the purchased possession, unto the praise of his glory." Then the Spirit is promised us until our Savior comes and quickens us into immortality by his Spirit that dwells in us.

Then, brethren and sisters, let us be more spiritual, that we may have the Spirit of Christ to witness with our spirit that we are his children and heirs to the promised inheritance. Let no one beguile you of your reward, and you fall from your own steadfastness; for there are many spirits gone out into the world, and we must try them by the word, and see whether they are of God; but we should be careful that we do not impute the Spirit of God to mesmerism, or as the work of Satan, as they did in the Savior's day. I think we are very poorly prepared to wage war with the host of spirits that rule the darkness of this world, if we are left amid the perils of the last days without the aid of the Holy Spirit to help our infirmities and enlighten and influence our minds aright. All concede there are wicked spirits in the world to aid Satan's allies in their work of destruction; and would a merciful God be less mindful of his children than Satan of his? I think not.

A lover of the whole truth,

Sepha Whitaker.

Edinboro, Erie Co., Pa.

For the World's Crisis.

A REQUEST.

Bro. Grant:—Permit me through the Crisis to make known to the church that our Bro. Eld. B. P. Manning, has been very sick about four weeks and is now confined at home, and most of the time to his bed; yet he is strong in faith, giving glory to God. Never have I seen my dear brother more consecrated to God than now, though I have been personally acquainted with him for almost twenty-two years, during which time he has been serving the living God and looking for his Son Jesus, and proclaiming the coming of the Messiah. Our dear brother, though happy in God's love, feels very much for the scattered pilgrims, and is exceeding anxious to be again in the field feeding the flock of God; therefore he requests the church of God to make his case a special subject of prayer, that he may be restored to health. Should any of God's servants feel moved to come and administer according to the instructions given in the fifth chapter of James, he believes that he will be made whole.

John G. Hook.

Goffstown, N. H., Jan 23d, 1864.

For the World's Crisis.

TO LIVE.

Keep your heart tender. Freshen it every morning with the buds of hope which blend with your aspirations to God. Renew it every evening through the opening flowers of spontaneous praise. For the sufferance of protracted life, let your dignity of humanity, that mantles through the image of Deity, curtain your pathway with a majestic faith that struggles with the tempest, defies its threatening, and which amid the echoes of peace, enshrouds you with immortality.

Explain the mystery of life by the footprints of your passage heavenward, and answer the end of your existence by a fearless march through the vestibule of death to the life beyond; where, over the wrecks and ruins of past greatness, buried hopes, and dark traces of memory and change, the unsetting light which gilds life's river and its radiant temple, will blot from the Eden of God's paradise forever, one long, dark, dreary night of woe. Praise the Lord.

C. G. Carr.

Wheel-Pit of Blackstone.

The World's Crisis
AND SECOND ADVENT MESSENGER.

Boston, Tuesday, February 2, 1864.

Take Notice.—In remitting monies to this office, do not send us any more little bank bills for fractional parts of a dollar. They are not passable here, and we are only subjected to the trouble and expense of sending them back. We have several now on hand,—worthless to us,—on the Veazie Bank, Brandon Bank, etc., etc. Send us only current bills, postal currency, or stamps.

Postage on Canada Papers.—We have concluded to let our brethren in the British Provinces have the Crisis at the same price as those in the States. In other words, we will pay the postage to the line; hence those taking the paper will pay only $2.00 a year, instead of $2.20, as formerly.

SIN AGAINST THE HOLY GHOST.

It is often asked, "What is the sin against the Holy Ghost?" The following answer, given by a spirit, and published in the Banner of Light, is rather different from any other we have seen. It was given through Mrs. Cora L. V. Hatch, a noted trance-speaking medium, in Clinton Hall, New York, Nov. 8, 1863. The Spirit says, when answering the question:—"As viewed by theology, our opinion is, that the sin in question consists in nothing; it is purely imaginary."

According to the teaching of this spirit, the Lord has given alarm where there is no danger. This being true, he has deceived us, and would be unworthy of our confidence. This is just what Satan has been trying to accomplish ever since he contradicted the word of the Lord to Adam and Eve in paradise, when he told them they should not die if they disobeyed the Lord and ate of the forbidden fruit. Let all remember, he was a liar from the beginning. His first lesson which he taught man has done more, no doubt, to lead mankind from the right way than any other error; namely. that man is immortal. We can find no testimony in the Bible in favor of this doctrine but Satan's. He stands opposed to the Lord and all inspired men; hence, must be wrong. Shall we uphold him by defending this great error? The time is evidently at hand when, if we do it, it will be done at the peril of our inheritance in the kingdom. This is a matter of great importance,—increasingly so; and we shall do well to be watchful, lest Satan, in some way, get the advantage, and persuade us, as he has some lately, that man never dies.

It is but a few days since we saw an account of a prominent and able preacher, who had been for years preaching the coming of Christ, the sleep of the dead, and the destruction of the wicked, who had been led by Satan's devices to renounce his faith in these great truths and join the Spiritualists, to preach for them, and endeavor to prove that man is immortal. The Lord foresaw that such things would take place, and moved the apostle to write,—"Now the Spirit speaketh expressly, that in the latter times some shall depart from the faith, giving heed to seducing spirits and doctrines of devils."

CABOT.

Our meetings at Cabot, Vt., were of considerable interest and profit. We commenced on Thursday afternoon, and held three meetings on each succeeding day. We were assisted by Brn. Hector Canfield, Silas Wheelock, Leonard Wheeler, Daniel Braley, Nahum Orcutt and Nathan Wheeler. They have a very convenient meeting house, and every thing wears an encouraging and promising aspect. We enjoyed our visit very much with this people. We found a free air in speaking the word, and the Lord sent rich blessings upon us, causing saints to rejoice and sinners to tremble. Backsliders were reclaimed, and the children of the Lord received new strength to go on in the service of our heavenly Master. Our meetings were large, and it was evident that the people came to hear. They are hungering after the pure word of the Lord. They are getting tired of fables. This is an encouraging feature in many places where we are called to labor. The eyes of many are being opened to see the perils of these times, and the necessity of consecrating all to the Lord, if they would be ready for coming events.

On Friday afternoon, Bro. Nathan Wheeler was set apart to the work of the ministry. It was a very impressive and solemn season. We felt assured that he was truly called by the Lord. We shall expect to hear good tidings from the fields where this dear Bro. may labor. We found an excellent resting place at his pleasant pilgrim home. We shall ever remember with pleasure our visit in his happy family.

Brn., stand by the young preachers, stay up their hands, see that they are well cared for, and you will please Him who has sent them forth as lambs among wolves. It is a great cross to go out in these last days to preach the unpopular truths committed to our trust, be called "infidels," "heretics," and many other hard names; but if they can have the prayers and sympathies of the saints, it removes much of the burden, and cheers them onward in the good work of the Lord. There is a great want of faithful laborers in these last times, and we should be thankful when we see young men leaving friends and pleasant homes to sound the last note of warning to this wicked generation. We should all esteem it a privilege, and not a burden, to aid such men. If we love the Lord, we think it reasonable that we should help those who come laden with the precious truths of the Bible. Jesus says, "Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these my brethren, ye have done it unto me." Let us treat him well in all his servants, lest we be condemned at last. Do not compel him to say, "I was an hungered, and ye gave me no meat; I was thirsty, and ye gave me no drink; I was a stranger, and ye took me not in; naked, and ye clothed me not." There is no promise for the covetous.

Saturday and Lord's day were seasons of much profit. Our meetings continued to increase in interest from the commencement to their close. We had three meetings a day, which were well attended. Our conference meetings following the sermons, were seasons of refreshing. Lord's day morning, we met at 9 1-2 o'clock for a love-feast, and had a blessed good one. The Spirit of the Lord was truly in our midst, affording great comfort, joy and peace. There were fifty-six testimonies in less than forty-five minutes, and they were real, heart-cheering ones. It was remarked that it was the best meeting they had ever enjoyed in that house. It was truly a heavenly place, and will be long remembered by those who enjoyed its blessings. All seemed to feel at home, and to partake of the same blessed Spirit. Most spoke of being much strengthened and quickened during the meetings already enjoyed, and on this happy morning they received a double blessing. We all felt that christianity is a reality, and that the half of its virtues could not be told; we also felt assured that the "blessed hope" is about to be consummated by the coming of Jesus.

During the day and evening our house was crowded with attentive listeners. We saw many eyes moistened with tears, while contemplating the goodness of the Lord, and the glorious truths of his word. In the evening we enjoyed a pleasant communion season, when some seventy-five gathered around the table of the Lord.

We parted in strong hopes of meeting soon where partings and sorrows are forever unknown. The meeting at Cabot was another oasis in our pilgrim journey to the heavenly land.

"THE MEETING OF THE WATERS."

In the Last Vials, published in Torquay, Eng., Nov. 1st, 1863, under the above heading, the editor says:—"To what point is the world drifting in reality? To the judgment of the great day! No one who estimates its condition rightly; no one who cares one straw for the word of God can doubt the truth of this assertion. Our knowledge, our science, our corrupt morals, our still more corrupt Protestantism; above all our MAN-WORSHIP, are leading on to the last apostasy,—and the last apostasy ends at once in the judgment of the great day. But who cares now for the word of God? Who cares for its awful warnings? Not one in a hundred even of the evangelical world. Man is the oracle; HIS word alone is cared for. If he cry 'Peace, peace,' his dupes are satisfied, and the cry of 'No peace,' is drowned in a tempest of reprobation. Yet every thing we see tells of the LAODICEAN age,—the last age of the church, to be followed by the judgments of the great day."

The writer goes on to show that the Pope is not "the antichrist," because the latter is to be known by denying both the Father and the Son, and that "Christ has come in the flesh." He then goes on to say,—

"In no sense whatsoever does the church of Rome deny that Christ has come, and therefore that church wants the special mark of the LAST antichrist. That the Pope is AN antichrist, no one can doubt. No one can doubt that the church of Rome is a system of LIES and the work of Satan; no one can doubt that it is the destroyer of all who depend upon it; it is even, perhaps, worse than the last apostasy itself; we only assert that the LAST it cannot be."

"Romanists, Protestants, and Infidels, will alike belong to the last antichrist, and alike be taken in his net. . . . The two marks of antichrist are these; he denies both the Father and the Son, and he also denies that Jesus Christ has come in the flesh. Now Popery does neither one nor the other. . . .

It is most important to observe the distinction drawn between the "woman" and the beast. Observe particularly that it is never said, "All that are not written in the book of life shall worship the WOMAN, but "shall worship the BEAST." It would be utterly impossible to apply these words to any system of false religion whatever. Such an application would be downright absurdity; it follows in that case that all who did NOT belong to that system WERE written in the book of life, though they might be Turks, infidels or heretics. It would follow that every one who was NOT a Roman Catholic would be found in the book of life, which would be, as we have said, an incredible absurdity.

But now turn to the other side, and observe the marvelous exactness and comprehensiveness of Scripture. It passes by the "SYSTEM," and fixes on the EMPIRE. It does not say that ALL who are NOT saved belong to one SYSTEM, for that would be ascribing salvation even to Mahometanism. But it says ALL who are not saved belong to one EMPIRE. The beast is the head of an EMPIRE,—not the head of a SYSTEM,—and all who are not written in the book of life worship the beast, and not the woman. This is, indeed, both exact and comprehensive. The time spoken of is not ALL time since the birth of Christ, but it is the time of the END—the REIGN of antichrist. During the reign of antichrist it will be literally true that all who are not in the book of life shall worship the beast, whether they be Jews, Turks, Infidels, or Heretics; whether they be Romanists or English Protestants. All who ARE written in the book of life will either refuse to worship him, or be out of the sphere of his influence."

When the last antichrist (or beast) appears, all the ungodly people of the earth will unite in worshiping him; some from one motive, some from another. It will no longer be the apostasy of one sect, or of Rome; but it will be the apostasy of ALL sects and of ALL systems whatsoever. . . .

The source of all apostasy is MAN-WORSHIP. . . . In these enlightened times credulity is out of date, and Satan has overwhelmed Protestantism with man-worship by means of INCREDULITY. He once killed christianity by fire; and he is killing it now with frost. . . . Christendom is enveloped by APOSTASY; on one hand Romanism, on the other hand false Protestantism. . . . Power and filthy lucre are the idols of BOTH. . . . When a fit man arises he will be worshiped equally by Protestant and Papist. He will take up the principle of universal SELF-INDULGENCE. With that principle he will shape all men according to his mind. He will gratify to the utmost their love of gain, their love of pleasure, their love of knowledge, their sensuality, and their senses. He will fascinate them with refinement, dazzle them with success, bribe them over to his side by offering to each the indulgence of his favorite passions. He will be the CATALINE of the spiritual Rome, perfect in simulation and dissimulation; and adapting himself to the temper and desires of every man. As there is no God now but self interest, whoever can best gratify self interest will become a Deity, the incarnate representative of the God whom the world adores. And as the EMBODIMENT of the world's God, he will become the God of the world.

One warning we give to the few who still regard the God of heaven in preference to the God of this world. To say that the Pope is the last antichrist is the Devil's snare to catch apostate PROTESTANTISM.

All the apostasies of the earth have now met together; the 'meeting of the waters' is now complete. All that is now wanted is the MAN. . . . And that man will be the last antichrist of Revelation, the Devil's last snare for apostate PROTESTANTISM."

When the time fully comes for "the meeting of the waters," it will be like the meeting of two Niagaras, each striving for the mastery. It will be "the battle of the great day of God Almighty." The world has but a faint idea of what is coming. While looking for "a good time," when their schemes will be carried into effect, the most terrible scenes will burst upon them, as did the flood upon the Antediluvians, and the fiery tempest upon Sodom.

From now to the end, we must expect a rapid increase of wickedness, thus ripening the "tares" for destruction, and a corresponding ripening of the "wheat," so that both will be ready for the harvest, at "the end of the world."

My brethren and sisters, are you ready for the closing scenes of the long night of sorrow, through which our world has been groping six thousand years? If not, by all means make it your first business to be prepared. At once begin to work in the vineyard of the Lord; there is now no other way to be his servants. Begin to-day, and cease not till Jesus comes.

GROWING RABID.

We clip the following from the Banner of Light:

"Heavenly Visitants.—The editor of the World's Crisis, (Adventist) seems to be growing rabid daily in his tirades against Spiritualism; warning the people to beware of the 'doctrine of demons,' etc. He is not willing to have intercourse with the spirit-world, because none but evil spirits return—and he admits that this class do return. In consequence of his preconceived erroneous notions in regard to the invisible world, he warns 'Christians not to give heed to seducing spirits, and doctrines of devils.'

To show the reader that one of our most eminent divines did not believe, as does our brother of the Crisis, spirit-communion to be the work of demons, we quote from the writings of the Rev. Dr. Channing the following: 'We need not doubt the fact, that angels whose home is heaven, visit our earth, and bear a part in our transactions; and we have good reason to believe that if we obtain admission into heaven, we shall still have opportunity not only to return to earth, but to view the operation of God in distant spheres, and be his ministers in other worlds.'"

No doubt many noted Dr's. might be quoted, who would speak in harmony with Dr. Channing; but what Bible writer advances the idea that spirits of men are angels, or that they ever "return to earth," after death, before the resurrection? We find no such doctrine taught in the Scriptures. "Man lieth down and riseth not till the heavens be no more." If the dead rise not, then thay are "fallen asleep in Christ are perished." All hope of future life, if we die, is based on the resurrection of the dead.

IS IT SO?

In the Herald of Gospel Liberty, we find the following:—"Christ's truth will shake the errors of Spiritualism, Materialism, Annihilation, Soul-sleeping, and Destructionism, from its fingers, and then live on in glorious beauty. The philosophy of Jesus Christ is correct, and he brought life and immortality to light through the gospel."

We fully believe the sentiment in the last sentence; and we find the way he brought "life and immortality to light," was by a resurrection of the dead. He demonstrated his power to raise the dead to life in the case of the widow's son, Lazarus and others. Jesus said, "Lazarus is dead." If he was immortal he could not have died, for that which is immortal can never die. If Lazarus was alive when Jesus said he was "dead," then his statement could not be true. Shall we believe Jesus, or a theology that contradicts him? It is impossible to harmonize the two, and believe both.

Again, Jesus says, "Broad is the road that leadeth to destruction." How can a course of life lead to what will never happen? If there be no destruction, then it cannot be true that a certain course of conduct will lead to it.

What is destruction? Mr. Webster says, "Destruction consists in the annihilation of the form of any thing; that form of parts which constitutes it what it is." When the "form of a thing" no longer exists, that object is ended. As David says of the wicked, they are "no more;" or as the prophet says, "they are extinct;" and again, they "shall be as though they had not been." Malachi says, "All the proud, yea, all that do wickedly shall be stubble, and the day that cometh shall burn them up, saith the Lord of hosts, that it shall leave them neither root nor branch." Where will they be then? Jesus says, "As the tares are gathered and burnt, so shall it be in the end of this world." When tares are gathered and burnt, where are they? Are they still living and growing? No one would venture to advocate an idea so absurd. Why, then, say the wicked will not be destroyed, when the Lord declares they shall be. Why dispute him on this point more than any other? He says "they shall be destroyed without remedy." Then it follows that they can never be delivered from that destruction; hence it follows that their punishment consists in "everlasting" or eternal "destruction." They are never restored to life after they die "the second death;" for if they were to have life again, then they would not "be destroyed without remedy." We think no truth is more plainly taught in the Bible than that all the wicked will be destroyed totally and for ever; in other words, they will come to a perpetual end, and exist "no more" as conscious beings. As certain as this is true, then man is not immortal in this life, and sleeps, as the Bible declares, between death and the resurrection.

Truly, "Christ's truth will shake the errors of Spiritualism," also the noted lie of Satan, that man has inherent immortality, on which Spiritualism rests. And this same word proves that man is entirely mortal, and dependent on the resurrection of the dead for future life. If he dies, he can never live again, if the dead rise not. Let us believe the Lord, if it proves every man a liar, and spoils all human creeds. It requires some courage to stand up for the truth of the Bible in these days of fables; but he who does receives a blessing that affords a rich compensation for bearing the cross. The battle is waxing hot on this subject; let us stand firm, immovable, and the Lord will be our supporter. We shall be called "infidels," "heretics," etc., but never mind; that does not make us so. The martyrs were called singular names, and treated much worse than we are, besides losing their lives in defense of the truth.

Dear brethren, do not waver now. We are too near home to be faint-hearted, or to be dismayed at the sight of the Lord's enemies. "Put on the whole armor of God"; consecrate all to him, and all will be well. The faithful will soon be gathered to their blessed home in the paradise of God. Let us all be there to help sing the song of redeeming love.

USE OF TOBACCO.

We have heard of two cases where tobacco seemed to be of some use, besides when employed to kill ticks and bed bugs. One was a noted tobacco chewer who fell into the hands of cannibals, and they would not eat him because so strongly scented with the filthy substance.

The other was the following from a spirit, in answer to the question, "What effect does the use of tobacco have upon the spiritual and physical of man?" The spirit answered as follows:—

"When the poison, tobacco, is introduced into the human system, it at once takes possession of the telegraphic wires, or nervous system. It becomes master and usurps the place of nature. Through the agency of tobacco the nervous system is at once rendered abnormal, and is therefore unfit for reception of spiritual messages, either from the citadel of life to the spirit-world, or from the spirit-world to the material world. And while the human system is under the control of the narcotic, tobacco, it is absolutely impossible, understand us to say, for the disembodied spirit to manifest itself perfectly through such an organism."—Banner of Light.

If tobacco will prevent one from becoming a medium for devils, then we think some might be excused for using it, if it were not equally true that the Holy Spirit is grieved by its use, and does not delight to dwell in a temple defiled by it. Let us "cleanse ourselves from all filthiness of the flesh and spirit," trust in God to keep us from the snares of the devil, and keep ready to meet our Savior.

New Subscribers in January.

We have received 270 new subscribers in the month of January. This exceeds the number received in any previous month. Seven-tenths of these, or 190, were obtained by effort, and sent in by the following named brethren.

The prospect is encouraging for three thousand before the year closes. A little more effort, brethren, in the months to come,—a few more volunteers,—and we shall have the four thousand. WHO WILL HELP?

One each—By S Ayres, Sarah A Alley, A H Brown, Mary I. Achorn, S Benton, N F Berry, B Bethel, M E Boynton, S A Chaplin, C M Couch, S P Clark, Rachel Cull, Savilla Case, A Cook, C P Dow, T B Dustin, H S Dille, A C Doe, C S Emerson, S S Folsom, W C Ford, C Goodrich, S K Gibson, L M Goodrich, A Hawks, L L Howard, N. A. Hitchcock, G. W. Lougee, N. Lasell, S. Lampson, J A Libby, L Longfellow, C H Leverton, P Mitson, J B Morehouse, Mrs. S McDonald, S S Mooney, J S Moulton, Wm. McCullock, A C Newell, N F Nason, J T Ongley, D Platt, T W Piper, J B Paine, E A Prescott, W H Shaw, Thos. Smith, J M Stetler, J Small, W W Sutherland, E Tibbetts, Celia K Tucker, D Trecartin, Esther Tuttle, G W Turner, Rosella M Thayer, R D Warner, M E Whiting, I C Wellcome, M E wise, J Wilkinson, R C Woodward, B F Waggoner, O D Woodruff, J A Cleaveland.

Two each—By F. Burr, C. Bunnell, H. Babbitt, J. Blinn, H F Carpenter, M A Champlin, J Dick, G H Emery, D W Griffin, J W Goodwin, J M Howard, F C Mason, Phebe Rockwood, J N Sherman, E M Smith, L Scott, G W Turner, J M Wyman.

Three each—By R. F. Berry, H. C. Burnham, E C Cowles, A Fike, W E Hathaway, P W Hough, L Jackman, W Leaf, A McCurdy, C B Turner.

Four each—By Geo. T Adams, Chas. H Shepherd, S B Colton, R T Church, J S Heath.

Five each—By Samuel Kall, S W Worthington.

Seven—By J. M. Aldrich.

Ten—By N. H. Berry.

Eleven—By Miles Grant.

For the World's Crisis.

"THE LAST DAY TOKENS."

After unavoidable delay, Nos. 1, 2 and 3 of the above work are now ready for subscribers. I have been at considerable expense to place what I consider the truth before the church and the world; and now have obligations to meet. Could I obtain from my friends scattered abroad the small amount of two or three hundred subscribers, it would lift a heavy burden from me. To persons anxious to impart light and information to their friends upon the approaching crisis and destiny of the nations, I would most affectionately recommend these expository works.

Most affectionately yours,

S. S. Brewer.

South Glastenbury, Conn.

The Last Day Tokens, No. 1.—This is an argument based upon Amos 3: 7, "Surely the Lord God will do nothing but he revealeth his secrets unto his servants the prophets." Showing that God invariably has made known his judgments to his prophets: and, by them, to the doomed nations. Fifty positive and incidental instances are brought to view in the above little work. Per dozen, by mail, 87 cents. Single, 9 cents.

Last Day Tokens, No. 2.—This number is an epitome of the events that were to transpire during the absence of our Lord and Master. The moral condition of society at his return—embracing a fulfillment of the declaration he made to his disciples on the Mount of Olives, in answer to the question, "What shall be the sign of thy coming and the end of the world?" History of false Christs, earthquakes, famines, and pestilences, arranged in chronological order. Abounding iniquity, immorality of the age, great spiritual dearth, Spiritualism, its immoral and degrading tendencies. A Spiritualist's invocation to Satan—progression—the gospel preached in all the world as a witness—the harvest ripe—the end of all things at hand. Per dozen, by mail, $2.30. Single, 23 cents.

Last Day Tokens, No. 3.—This is a phenomenal compend; containing a history of the signs in the sun, in the moon, and in the stars—meteorological wonders—fearful sights and great signs in the heavens—blood, fire, and pillars of smoke, etc. This work contains a number of excellent engravings, illustrative of these last day tokens, that God, in his infinite mercy, has hung as flaming signals in the heavens to herald the approach of the great day of his wrath. Per dozen, by mail, $2.30. Single, 23 cts.

Obituary.—A place in newspapers where virtues are discovered in dead people that they were not known to have possessed when in life.

Our Tract Column.

THE NEW TRACT FUND.

Two Thousand Dollars.

We, the undersigned, agree to give the sums affixed to our names, for the purpose of raising TWO THOUSAND DOLLARS to aid the Christian Publication Society in the gratuitous distribution of tracts; and our subscriptions shall be paid at the call of the Treasurer, as soon as one half of the amount shall be subscribed.

Pledges and payments to Jan. 1st,	$395.30
M. Atkins, pd.	1.00
Lucy A. Hyde, pd.	1.00
R. W. Hill, (pd. $2)	12.00
J. D. Brown, (tracts sold)	2.00
Miles Grant	60.00
Pledges Paid—S. Gilbert.

For the World's Crisis.

THE THRONE OF DAVID.

Jehovah has made an everlasting covenant with David, in reference to his throne and kingdom, ordered in all things and sure.

David's throne will be the throne of the world, and David's Son will sit thereon, and reign as King of kings and Lord of lords. David's throne is not in heaven above, and consequently the Messiah, David's son, is not now sitting upon it. David's crown has been profaned and cast down to the ground, and surely no man will contend that this took place in heaven! Jesus does not now sit on the throne of his father David, for that throne has not been in existence for more than two thousand years. Neither is the Messiah, as some suppose, sitting on his own throne, for he has no throne except David's, and he is the only rightful heir to it. Jesus himself settles this question, for he says, "To him that overcometh will I grant to sit with me on my throne, even as I also overcame and am sit down with my Father on his throne." Rev. 3: 21. We learn from this scripture that Jesus is now sitting on his Father's throne, and he promises that those who overcome shall sit with him on his throne.

The Messiah then has never yet reigned as King, as the Son of God, and as Mediator between God and man. He sits at the right hand of the Majesty on high, waiting till his foes be made his footstool. Moreover, he promised his apostles that when he should sit on the throne of his glory, they also should "sit upon twelve thrones, judging the twelve tribes of Israel." It is impossible that he can now be sitting on his throne, for the apostles are slumbering in the dust of the earth, and the twelve tribes are in the dispersion. Before they can sit on twelve thrones judging the twelve tribes, they must be restored, the Lord must be revealed from heaven, his throne erected, and the Lord Jesus must be exalted to it. Then the saying of the prophet must come to pass,—"Then the moon shall be confounded, and the sun ashamed, when the Lord of hosts shall reign on Mount Zion, and in Jerusalem, and before (or in the midst of) his ancients gloriously."

The Messiah is to have the "heathen for his inheritance, and the uttermost parts of the earth for his possession." "He shall judge thy people with righteousness, and thy poor with judgment." "They shall fear thee (O Messiah!) as long as the sun and moon endure, throughout all generations." "He shall come down like rain upon the mown grass, and as showers that water the earth. In his days shall the righteous flourish, and abundance of peace so long as the moon endureth. He shall have dominion also from sea to sea, and from the river to the ends of the earth." Yes, all kings shall fall down before him, all nations shall serve him; and all nations shall call him blessed. Ps. 72. This will be the fulfillment of the promise made to Abraham, that in him and his seed all nations should be blessed.

It is evident that the Messiah's kingdom or dominion will extend over all countries, and all kings, monarchs and emperors shall bow the knee before him. "And the Lord shall be King over all the earth. In that day will there be one Lord, and his name one. He shall take the throne of his father David, and reign over the house of Jacob forever; and of his kingdom there shall be no end."

J. E. Clark.

For the World's Crisis.

A SHORT SERMON.

"For we have not an high priest which cannot be touched with the feelings of our infirmities, but was in all points tempted like as we are, yet without sin."—Heb. 4: 15.

Beloved brethren in the Lord; we are in a world of sin, temptation, sickness, trial, mourning, tears and death; but we have an High Priest that is passed into the heavens, who can be touched with the feelings of our infirmities. He knows all our sorrows, and shields us in the hour of temptation, and with every temptation makes a way for our escape. O! then, let us come boldly to the throne of grace, that we may obtain mercy, and find grace to help in time of need."

In these last days of peril and conflict much grace is needed, many prayers should be offered up to our faithful High Priest, and watching thereunto with all perseverance, lest we fall just in the sight of the promised land. Our High Priest lives, blessed be his name! He feels for us, he pities us, and methinks he is praying,—"Father, I will that those whom thou hast given me be with me where I am, that they may behold my glory, which thou hast given me." And our hearts beat in unison while we pray, "Let thy kingdom come, thy will be done on earth, as it is in heaven."

Praise to the Lord for a faithful High Priest. Thanks be to our God that he sent him down to earth; that he took not the nature of angels, when he came, but the seed of Abraham; and being tempted he knoweth how to succor them that are tempted; for he had our human nature in his own bosom, was "a man of sorrows and acquainted with grief."

Are we poor in this world? remember he for our sakes became poor, that we through his poverty might be rich. Are we homeless? remember "the foxes have holes, the birds of the air have nests, but the Son of man (had) not where to lay his head." Are we sick and in distress? Lo! he lives and feels for all our woes. And are we cast down, and weary with toils and labors in our journeyings? Jesus was weary with his journey, and as he passed good old father Jacob's well he sat down to rest his weary limbs. Are we thirsty? Jesus was thirsty and asked the woman of Samaria to give him drink; and while he preached to her he was the very Christ, she in turn proclaimed he was the Christ, the Savior of the world, and many believed on him for the sayings or preaching of the woman. Are we set at nought because of our faith in soon beholding Him, our best friend whom we love? He was cast out and rejected by his own brethren, yet he bore it all patiently. Are we rejected by those who profess the same faith that we do, and by those who ought to be our own familiar friends, which is more trying than all? Jesus was hated by his own (Jewish) nation, and they sought his precious life. Do we weep the loss of loved ones? See that sympathizing weeper standing beside two stricken sisters, with the silvery teardrops rolling down his cheeks, while they weep over a dear, dead brother Lazarus. Is a poor lone widow weeping the loss of an only son? See that funeral procession passing the gate at the city of Nain, and the lone mother's tears, and does Jesus feel for her, and does he speak like a God? Young man, arise! and was that mother's heart made to rejoice when she received her beloved son alive to her embrace?

And does he feel now for those who weep? Ah! yes, he is touched with the feeling of our infirmities, and although not here to call the dead to life, he passed through the gloomy grave, took with him the keys of death, and when he comes the second time he will speak like a God, his voice will pierce the tombs. Then fathers, mothers, husbands, wives and children will live to die no more. Jesus lives; and because he lives we shall live also.

M. Mussey.

For the World's Crisis.

REVIVAL.

Bro. Grant:—I have good news to tell you, in this time of backsliding.

We were favored, a short time since, with the labors of Bro. H. K. Flagg. He preached eleven evenings, being full of faith and the Holy Ghost. The church took hold with him with one mind, and the result was that a number were converted, others convicted, and the brethren and sisters were strongly united.

After Bro. Flagg left, we asked the Lord to help us and send us out to labor as a whole, brethren and sisters together. Doors were soon opened among the different denominations, so that we went into several neighborhoods, holding union-meetings from house to house. A number have been converted. The interest increases, and we have calls as fast as we can fill them. Brethren and sisters are awake, and filled with the spirit of labor. We go out into the highways and hedges, and the Lord helps us to get hold of a class that cannot be reached any other way, and the Lord blesses us and our labors abundantly.

The time has come for highway-and-hedge labor. The Lord will soon be here. Dear brethren and sisters, arouse! Sleep over perishing sinners no longer! There is a general backsliding amongst us. Brethren are asleep. May God have mercy on us and help us to awake. O, my soul! shall the Lord come and find us in this situation? Is it not time to wake up? Sinners can be saved now as well as ever. Brethren and sisters, will you live at this poor dying rate, and let unconverted men and women go to hell? O no, no! Well, then, come up to the help of the Lord. Begin where you left off, and do your first works. All the Bible knowledge God has given us will prove worse than nothing to us, if the love and Spirit of Christ dwell not in its fullness in our hearts.

Who is on the Lord's side? Let the question sink deep into the hearts of ministers and people. Not those who say, "I believe the Lord is coming," yet do not the things he commands, will be ready. O! how many of our ministers do not seem to be burdened for the salvation of sinners. O, my soul! what will become of us as a a people, ministers and all, if we do not reform. May God have mercy, and open our eyes; and show us our true standing before him, and send his mighty moving power through every heart, is the prayer of

H. L. Bradley.

Bristol, Ct.

Correspondence.

From Bro. S. V. Whitaker.

Bro. Grant:—I am thinking of the great family of "our Father" scattered through the length and breadth of the earth, sighing and crying for the abominations that are done in the land. Ah! how many trials and temptations we have. The night seemeth long and dreary. O! when will the morning come? When will the mighty trumpet call the many sleepers to come forth? When shall its silver tones proclaim the great festival, even the marriage of the Lamb? Then and there will the great scattered family be gathered. Shall I be there among that blest assembly, "clear as the sun, fair as the moon, and terrible as an army with banners"? If I am found with "clean hands and a pure heart," clad in garments pure and spotless, I shall be there, with the saints of all ages, a company with no taint of sin. No weeping there. They shall hunger no more, neither thirst any more. No dying there. A city of immortals. No curse there. And God himself shall be with them, and be their God, and they shall be his people.

Seeing we look for such things, what manner of persons we ought to be in all holy conversation.

"No room for mirth or trifling here!"

We must refuse to join in the last day sins of these modern Sodomites! Let us "watch and be sober." Shall my Lord say to me, "Could ye not watch one hour?" When I remember how I have enjoyed the favor of God, I wonder that any of earth's vain allurements could ever have charmed me. If I enter God's kingdom it will be a wonder of grace. Yet I am sincere in saying I desire above all things for me and mine a home in the gloriously fair New Earth. Notwithstanding my earnest desire for that rest, I sometimes feel as I think old Moses did, as though God might blot my name out of the book of life, if so be my dearly loved ones' names might be recorded there. O! why will they not see the fabric upon which they stand is ready to vanish away? Ye praying ones, you who are mighty with God in prayer, will you not pray for these long loved ones?

I can but believe Time's sands are almost run. "O that my head were waters, and mine eyes a fountain of tears, that I might weep day and night" for the sin of the people in this pleasure-loving age! It is high time for us to be decided whom we will serve. "If God be God, serve him; if Baal, serve him." If we are poor as to this world's goods, do not let us fret about it, but be "diligent in business, fervent in spirit, serving the Lord." And be sure that we do not spend all our strength for those things that perish with the using. If we do what is consistent, and trust in God, we shall lack nothing we really need, unless for a time, perhaps that we may see our own nothingness before God, and ask him (in earnest and because we need it) to supply us with food and raiment.

S. V. Whitaker.

From M. E. Pinkham.

Sunday morning.—I have not the opportunity of going to the house of worship to-day, but I feel that God is omnipresent, and always willing to bless those who put their trust in him. I always feel my spiritual strength renewed when I wait on him as I ought. I find that in God is all that I need to make my happiness complete. After trying the vanities and amusements of the world, and striving to make myself happy in them, I found I was left with nothing but an aching void, which the world with all its fascinating charms could not fill. I at length formed a resolution to seek my bliss in the all-atoning blood of my Redeemer. He at length came to my relief and whispered I was his.

God has done much for us, and we ought in return to give our hearts to him. Much is implied in this command of giving our hearts, our affections, and our all to him. Then we can say, Not as I will, but as thou wilt! O! in what language can I praise God most acceptably for that peace which I enjoy this morning. Truly I can say it is glory begun in my soul below. Never did I feel so completely lost to all as at present. The world with all its alluring charms does not move me from the faith of the gospel; neither do I count my life dear unto myself, so that I might finish my course with joy.

O that sinners would learn to serve the Lord! O that their eyes were opened to see their lost condition! O that this day would witness the display of the great power of an omnipresent Jehovah in a glorious manner! O how I long to be more conformed to the image of my Maker! How much he has loved the world, even such a worm as myself; and shall I not give him my heart? Yes, I will give it unreservedly, and with Jesus the hope of glory formed within me, all within is peace and love. May I never leave nor forsake him, but rather endure hardships as a good soldier of Jesus Christ.

New Durham. M. E. PINKHAM.

From Sr. M. Holmes.

BRO. GRANT:—I love the Lord and his appearing. The blessed hope has been my support through trying scenes I have been called to pass. The past year has been to me one of uncommon affliction and sorrow. It has severed from me a near and dear companion, and I am left, as it were, to breast the storms of life alone. The Lord has promised to be the widow's God, and a father to the fatherless, and I will trust him. He has supplied my wants, and led me in a way I know not.

I am striving to make the kingdom my home, that I may meet that dear companion when the faithful ones are gathered. For I believe he sleeps in Jesus, and when the trumpet sounds he will come forth free from all earthly ailments. I shall see him again soon. Blessed hope.

I have been brought very low by sickness, even to the brink of the grave, and am still feeble. I am looking forward to the time when this poor body now racked with pain, will be changed for one not susceptible of pain. I thank the Lord that he has a people that remember the poor. May the Lord bless them, is my prayer.

The word of God is more and more precious to me day by day, and I feel that it is because I earnestly seek to know more of him. The word exhorts us to "Strive to enter in at the strait gate." "Fight the good fight of faith." "Lay hold on eternal life." "Press toward the mark." "Give diligence to make your calling and election sure." A little longer we may have to endure the sorrows of this life, but, if faithful, we shall soon meet our loved ones where there will be no death-bed partings, nor tears be shed.

Thorndike. MARY HOLMES.

From Bro. S. B. Colton.

BRO. GRANT:—This is an entirely new field, Bloomfield, Ct. Bro. Pratt has been here and labored faithfully two weeks against the strongest opposition and prejudice. The good seed sown seems to be taking root. I hope to be able to give a good report from this place in due time.

A Prof. Andrews preached in the Congregational church last Sabbath, and gave the people two such heart-searching sermons as they never listened to before, on the second coming of Christ, the necessary preparation, the sifting of the church, showing that but few of the membership will be admitted into the kingdom which he is about to set up on the earth, and that the church now occupy the same position with regard to Christ's second coming that the Jews did to his first. Thanks be to God, he can and does work by just such means as he pleases, to accomplish his purpose.

I can but believe he has a blessing in store for this new field. Do pray for us, especially for me, a feeble worm of the dust, in the midst of violent opposition. Yours truly,

Bloomfield, Ct, S. B. COLTON.

From Bro. S. K. Gibson.

BRO. GRANT:—In consequence of the great storm here in the West we had but few out at our quarterly conference. Bro. Deyo, our evangelist, did not get here. The church at Pike voted to join the conference at this meeting, and appointed a delegate to the conference, but was not here. The church at Wilton also passed resolutions to unite with the conference and did so after the conference was organized, by electing a Chairman and Clerk, pro tem. I make this brief statement that those interested may understand the matter.

I would also say that Bro. Wrathburn, of Illinois, was here and preached the word. We had good meetings, and I hope good was done, although there was a good deal of opposition on the part of the clergy; they ransacked the town, and did all they could to keep people away, but there were some, even their own members, that would not be bound, others were bound, and attended the parties and places of amusement, which I suppose were more satisfactory to the leaders. Such conduct we witness almost everywhere, and clearly teaches the humble Bible student that we are nearing the judgment of this world.

As it was in the days of Noah so it is now. War sermons and pleasure parties are the rage; eating and drinking suits the taste; and so the "my Lord delayeth his coming" agrees with the feelings of the multitude. On, on, they rush, heedless of "the cry, behold the Bridegroom cometh!"

Dear brother and sister in Christ, the cry will soon be in the past, and the destiny of the world sealed. O what a thought! How faithful then we should be. How bright the light should shine from the bride of Christ. Yea, how prayerful; yea, how humble; yea, how obedient to the heavenly call ere God withdraws his gracious Spirit, and leaves man to perish by his wrath. S. K. GIBSON.

Wilton Junction, Ia.

From Bro. E. Burnham.

BRO. GRANT:—I wish to say, through your paper, to friends who have of late written to me for help, that I cannot respond to calls at present. I am now in this city in the midst of a glorious work of God. Am preaching in several churches, to large, attentive congregations of people, and sinners are flocking every night to Christ. Be patient with me. I am doing all I can. EDWIN BURNHAM.

P. S.—Will come to P. when God permits. E. B.

Albany, N. Y.

Obituaries.

AMOS P. BLAISDELL.

Died in Allenstown, N. H., Jan. 11th, 1864, Bro. Amos P. Blaisdell, aged fifty-eight years, seven months, and six days.

The subject of this notice embraced Christ about twenty-eight years ago. He had a gift peculiar to himself, but profitable to the church when he was in the work of the Lord. He embraced the Advent doctrine in the first great move in this country, and it ever after was his faith; but temptations surrounded him. Having business tact, he was put into offices of trust by the town; and these things tended to give him the spirit of the earthly government, instead of the heavenly, the one to come; so much so that one year ago last August he enlisted. But he was led to see himself, and to heartily repent before the Lord; and while away from loved ones, in the ranks of his company, his knapsack for his pillow, he wet it with tears, while he agonized in prayer, until he obtained the witness that he should be delivered. The church at the same time at home was making his case a special subject of prayer, and obtained evidence of his return. He promised the Lord if he would deliver him and bring him back to his family, if it was to be with them but two hours, that it would be enough. But the Lord, merciful and kind, brought him back, and he lived with them thirteen months, and during this time endeavored to serve the Lord; and often while bearing testimony in meeting would refer to God's goodness in his deliverance from this bloody strife.

His sickness was short,—inflammation of the lungs. But when he thought of the temptations and trials that the church might meet with in their pathway to final deliverance, if it was the will of the Lord, he chose to rest. We believe our brother will come up in the glorious resurrection morning. He leaves a wife and five children to mourn his loss. May they be ready to meet him where disease and death will never come.

The writer, by his request, attended his funeral, and endeavored to administer instruction and comfort from the words of inspiration.

J. G. SMITH.

C. F. ROBINSON.

Bro. Charles Fenelon, son of Bro. C. H. and Sister Roxana Robinson, of Litchfield, Me., calmly fell asleep in Jesus, January 6th, 1864, aged twenty-one years, five months.

Fenelon was always an amiable and affectionate son, winning by his kindness the love of all with whom he became acquainted. A few years ago he bid fair to rise to a high position of usefulness in the world; but, alas! disease early marked him for its victim. For several years he had been at times quite ill; but it was not until a few months ago his disease assumed the fearful form which threatened to cut short his earthly career. Consumption seized him with an unyielding grasp, causing him much suffering at times, which he endured with the greatest patience.

For several months previous to his death, I conversed freely with him and found that he was a praying youth, yet his natural diffidence seemed to prevent him from publicly confessing Christ. A few weeks previous to his death, he confessed his faith in the hope of the gospel, and around the family altar, with his father and mother, poured out his thanksgiving and requests to God.

During his last hours his sufferings were intense, but amid them all he calmly trusted in God, and said, "O these are the happiest hours of my life!" Bidding farewell to the numerous friends who stood weeping around his bedside, he sweetly fell asleep, with the full and blessed assurance that he should soon awake to immortality.

By his request I attended his funeral, and endeavored to comfort the heart-broken parents with some remarks founded upon Jeremiah 31: 16, 17. Bro. and Sr. Robinson are now left childless. Four beloved children sleep side by side in the cold ground. What ravages death has made in their family! With stricken hearts they now mourn, but not without hope. Soon they expect to greet all their dear children in the "Sunbright clime," where tears will flow no more, nor hearts be sad. May the blessed promise of the gospel cheer them, as they perform the remainder of this pilgrimage sad and alone. R. R. YORK.

DORCAS PAGE.

Died in Burlington, Nov. 19th, 1863, of typhoid fever, Sister Dorcas Page, wife of Bro. Samuel C. Page, aged fifty-six.

Sister Page was a native of New Hampshire, but moved to B. after her marriage, where she lived until she fell asleep. Perhaps no person ever lived in B. who was more beloved by all than was Sister Page. She is greatly missed in that vicinity. Many mourn her loss. A few years ago her eyes were opened to see the blessed truth of the Bible, while she listened to Bro. N. F. Nason, and the light shone more and more on her path until she died. While on her death bed, Bro. Page asked her about the doctrine now. She says, "The Advent doctrine is truth. 'Tis a blessed doctrine." Then reproved the believers in it for not being more faithful to God. She said she should sleep awhile with her two children, and they would rise together in the resurrection.

Sister P. has left a husband and eight children, with a large circle of friends and acquaintances to mourn her loss.

Jan. 10, 1864, I endeavored to comfort the large circle of mourners from 1 Thess. 4: 18.

S. BRAGG.

> Cease your weeping, dearest father,
> Brother, sister, dry your tears;
> Mother sleeps, but Christ will wake her
> When in glory he appears.
>
> Awake to die again? no, never!
> She will gain a heavenly home,
> Chant immortal praises ever,
> In a world where death's unknown.
>
> JONATHAN CLARY.

ELIZA BEAN.

Fell asleep in Jesus, Jan. 18th, 1864, at Concord. N. H., Sister Eliza Bean, aged seventy-four years.

Sister Bean embraced the doctrine of the sleep of the dead and the coming of the Lord about thirty-two years ago, under peculiar circumstances. She was standing at the bedside of her dying daughter, endeavoring to comfort her with the assurance that she would soon be in heaven; upon which the daughter looked up with evident surprise, saying, "Why, mother! how do you read your Bible? I shall not go to heaven, but sleep in the grave until the Lord comes and raises the dead." This led Sister Bean to search the Scriptures, which resulted in her becoming a firm believer of the same.

Sister Bean was truly a mother in Israel. Her life was consistent with her profession.

Funeral services were held at the chapel. Sermon by the writer, from Job 14: 14.

JOSEPH W. WHITE.

LILLA MAY, A. E. GARD.

Died at Earlville, Iowa, Dec. 6th, 1863, Lilla May, only child of C. W. and C. Newcome, aged two years and four months.

Also, at Hopkinton, Iowa, Dec. 10th, 1863, Alice Emily, child of E. B. and F. A. Gard, aged two years, five months, ten days.

These two little cousins were laid away to rest till Jesus comes. Sermon by the writer, from Jer. 31: 15, 16. PETER S. W. DEYO.

Summary of News.

FOREIGN.

The European Times (Liverpool) commenting on the Schleswig-Holstein trouble, says that it is well known that the Queen's family is divided on this subject, her Majesty's sympathies and those of her daughter, the Crown Princess of Prussia, being strongly German, while those of the heir apparent and his wife favor the Scandinavian view. The people of England also have no unanimity on the question.

With respect to the general aspects of the above question, a letter-writer from London, who is said to have access to good sources of information, says:

"All depends on the dark fiat of the Tuileries; and up to this time I am assured diplomacy shares the ignorance of the outer world as to the will or intentions of the Emperor. He now enjoys the pleasant revenge of regretting that England should have upset his scheme of a Congress. Had that been entertained the present crisis would not have arisen, or, having arisen, would have been swept out of the arena of war into the peaceful round of the council table. I have good authority for saying that it is not true, as has been asserted, that England has proposed a conference on the subject of the Duchies, though she may have intimated her willingness to take part in one, if agreed to and desired by the other powers. I am assured that no answer has yet been received from Paris to this intimation, and that it is quite premature to conclude that a conference will supersede the campaign that seems imminent. If collisions take place on the Eider, and Denmark invoke the aid of her allies in support of the treaty of 1852, and if Louis Napoleon march an army on to the Rhine, in answer to that appeal, Denmark is not so far in the wrong but that England's hands may be thought tied from taking any action to prevent him."

A correspondent of the London Times thus explains the difference between the populations of Holstein and Schleswig:

"Holstein is inhabited by what is commonly acknowledged as a pure German race. Schleswig, which was once known by the name of South Jutland, is more of a mixed people, and the most ardent German patriots are willing to acknowledge that the majority of the Schleswigers consist of what they call Uquatristen-men, who are both fish and flesh, or, more properly, neither fish nor flesh, as it is too often the case with border communities, where the population, brought into constant intercourse with two adjoining races, long trodden and ground to dust by the march of armies, and whisked about by the tide of political vicissitudes, easily assume a motley and amphibious nature."

It would seem from the following in the Vienna correspondence of the London Times that there is some hope of Austria's rendering justice to Hungary of her own accord, unless Kossuth's proclamation has something to do with it:

"Count Forgach, the Hungarian Chancellor, has just informed one of his political adherents in Pesth that steps of great importance will very soon be taken by the Imperial Government, which will do all in its power to effect a compromise with Hungary in a constitutional way. The Minister of State returned to Vienna the night before last, and yesterday morning at ten o'clock he was closeted with the Emperor, who evidently wishes to come to a speedy understanding with his Hungarian subjects, for whom he, in spite of their prolonged resistance to his will, has a great liking."

The London Times says on the Danish side the last resolve has been taken, and should any German regiment advance beyond the northern boundary of Federal territory, Denmark is resolved to enter on a war with all energy. It is quite time the two German powers declared their future course with equal precision. The secondary States can do no more. They cannot turn the supposed occupation of Holstein into the invasion of Denmark without aid from their powerful supporters. The real objects of Austria and Prussia are still in the dark.

The papers contain a letter from Mazzini, denying in the most explicit manner any complicity whatever with the plot said to have been discovered recently in Paris.

Austria and Prussia have decided on the military occupation of Schleswig in opposition to the Federal Diet.

A Hamburg telegram says the Danes have opened the dams of the Eider to inundate the country. The approach to Frederichstadt is partially obstructed. The principal military force of Denmark (16,000 men) was concentrated in the city of Schleswig. Colossal pallisades and extensive barricades are being erected. The class of soldiers of the age of thirty-five are being called out by the Danish Government.

COPENHAGEN, Jan. 14. It is stated that Minister Monrad declared to the English and Prussian Ambassadors that Denmark would accept the English proposal for a conference on the Holstein question, but Denmark is fully resolved on war if a single German soldier crosses the Eider.

VIENNA, Jan. 14. It is asserted that a note has been addressed to all the German States requiring the strict observance of their limits, which, if not adhered to, Austria and Prussia will be compelled to settle the question. It is denied that a correspondence between the Emperor of Austria and the German Princes has taken place.

Warlike preparations were going on in Norway.

The London Times says it is almost certain that war will be arrested in India and Japan.

It is believed in St. Petersburg that a constitution for the entire empire will be promulgated Jan. 13th.

Advices from Japan state that the agents of Satsuma have agreed to pay the indemnity immediately, and relax no effort to turn the murderers of Mr. Richardson over to the English.

It is reported that there have been numerous arrests of Italians in Paris as connected with the recent conspiracy, or engaged in recruiting for the expedition which Garibaldi is said to be contemplating.

DOMESTIC.

New York, Jan. 26th. There was a large meeting in Nashville on the evening of the 22d, to consult on the restoration of civil government in the State. Over two thousand persons were in attendance. Resolutions were passed recognizing the authority of the National Government to secure a Republican Government in rebellious States by appointing Military Governor, denouncing slavery as an evil in itself and as the cause of the rebellion; advising a reorganization of the State Government by a constitutional convention, composed of delegates pledged to immediate and universal emancipation.

The resolutions commend the integrity and fidelity of Gov. Johnson, and request him to call such a convention.

A committee was appointed to select delegates to the Southern Free State Convention in Louisville.

Gen. Johnson made a powerful speech for near two hours. He took strong grounds in favor of the immediate abolition of slavery, and the restoration of Tennessee as a free State.

New York, Jan. 26th. The Post says a gentleman who has spent several years in Macon, Ga., recently reached Newark, N. J. He declares the rebellion an utter failure. Even the leaders see that success is out of the question, while the common people would hail with delight the restoration of Federal authority. One of the principal bankers of Macon told him that the only hope now is that the Federal army will deliver them from their troubles, for without that intervention they must perish. The utmost destitution prevails everywhere.

The conscription is being enforced with pitiless energy, including even gray-haired men. Slavery, he says, is dead; and this is admitted by nine-tenths of the Southern people. Three years ago the same man wrote letters asseverating in strong terms that the South could not be subdued. Now he declares that its only hope is in the Northern armies.

New York, Jan. 26th. The Tribune's Washington letter says Gen. Longstreet is to be recalled from East Tennessee and placed at the head of a new army, with base at Suffolk, and to operate on the south side of James river. Kirby Smith is to succeed Longstreet in Tennessee.

Another correspondent reports the arrival of Jim Dennison, otherwise Pemberton, who for nearly twenty years has been the body-servant of Jeff. Davis. He says the latter is unreserved in urging the abandonment of Virginia, but Gen. Lee is peremptorily opposed thereto, and says all Virginia soldiers will lay down their arms if the State is to be given up to Yankee despotism.

Vice President Stephens has not attended Congress this session, and has not visited Jeff. Davis' house or office for over a year. Report said he had gone to Europe.

The utmost distress prevails in Richmond for food. Fresh beef is $4 per pound; oysters $25 per quart.

Negroes are forbidden to go near the Libby prison, and he believes black soldiers are confined there.

The lower two-thirds of Charleston is uninhabitable and in ruins.

He also confirms the reports that Lee, at the time of Gen. Meade's late advance made every preparation to fall back to Richmond with his thirty thousand troops.

Fortress Monroe, Jan. 27th. The Petersburg Express of Jan. 23d says:

"Seven hospital buildings at Camp Winder, near Richmond, were burned yesterday. A large quantity of commissary stores and clothing were destroyed."

An unsuccessful attempt was made to burn the President's mansion at Richmond on Tuesday night last.

New York, Jan. 28th. The Cincinnati Commercial learns from two gentlemen who escaped from Alabama to avoid the conscription, that there was a very decided reaction in Alabama against the rebel leaders, which is attributed to the wholesale impressment of persons and the seizure of property. As evidence of this the fact is stated that resolutions introduced into the Alabama Legislature endorsing secession met with decided and unexpected opposition. The anti-secession feeling is more general and better developed in the northern than in the southern part of the State. Men between the ages of eighteen and sixty-five, liable to be impressed, are escaping from the Confederacy or fleeing to the mountains or other hiding places.

In a review of the demonstrations of Union sentiment which are every day increasing in North Carolina, the Times says:

"The evidence is too clear to misinterpret, that a great majority of the people of this State are almost sick to death with the monstrous and infamous despotism of Davis and his red-handed confrerees. They cannot and will not submit much longer to the inhuman course of policy which has been pursued toward them."

A dispatch to the Chicago Tribune says Gen. Thomas' Chief of Staff, Gen. Whipple, recently stated that over seventy-three hundred deserters from Bragg's army had come in our lines since Oct. 20, as shown by the rolls. They were principally from Kentucky regiments. The number now arriving is unusually large.

Philadelphia, Jan. 29. The depot of the Camden and Amboy Railroad Company in Camden was entirely destroyed by fire at 6 o'clock this morning.

Nine freight cars loaded with government hay, three emigrant cars, one hospital car, two cars filled with hogs and sheep and a horse and mule, together with a steam fire-engine were destroyed.

THE SPRING CAMPAIGN.—The Washington correspondent of the New York Tribune, in quoting Gen. Halleck's expressed belief that a desperate effort will be made in the spring by the rebels to transfer the real fighting to Northern soil, has the following addition:

"The rebels cannot subsist their armies in their own desolated region, from all the most fruitful part of which slaves have been withdrawn into the interior Cotton States. It is difficult to determine whether their new campaign will be due North into Pennsylvania again, or across Kentucky into Ohio, using Longstreet's present position as a base of operations. All the secret advices received at the war department show that a Peter-the-Hermit crusade against the North is now being preached throughout the Confederacy, and that they are conscripting into the ranks with ruthless violence every thing human that is able to bear arms."—Journal.

THE REGULAR COLORED CAVALRY.—A correspondent at Fortress Monroe (Jan. 26th) sends the following account of this organization:

"To-day I visited the camp of the First Regiment U. S. Colored Cavalry. Authority for the raising of the regiment was given by the War Department, on the first day of December, and on the 10th day of that month the regiment was full, and on the 20th of the same month was fully armed and equipped, and to-day they are ready to take the field. In drill and discipline, as far as I can judge, there are but few volunteer regiments can compete with them, though they have but the experience of a month. This is perhaps partly accounted for by their being provided with that class of officers who are picked men. Gen. Butler says that officers of this regiment will compare favorably with those of any regiment in the service, 'volunteer or regular.'"

New York, Jan. 29th. The Tribune has a Japan letter of Dec. 1st, confirmatory of the fact that Satsuma had offered to pay £25,000 indemnity for the murder of the Englishman Richardson, but the specified number of days elapsed without the money forthcoming. It was supposed that the Tycoon would be the party really making the payment. The Yeddo Government has promised to pay $10,000 for the firing into the American steamer Pembroke by the Prince of Nagate. The government, however, still talks about foreigners leaving the shores of Yeddo Bay, and of sending embassies to America and Europe to negotiate to this end.

REVIVAL IN THE ARMY OF THE POTOMAC.—A letter from Gen. Meade's headquarters says there has been a degree of religious interest manifested by the soldiers of late that promises to be the absorbing sensation. Many of the regiments and brigades are holding protracted meetings in their camps, which are said to be largely attended and very interesting. A very large number have already been hopefully converted, and a still larger number of backsliders have experienced much anxiety for their souls' concerns.

San Francisco, Jan. 26th. All the southern counties of the State continue to suffer from drought severely. The Los Angelos Star of the 23d inst., says that during the winter only two rains have occurred—one in November and the other in January. The weather is now like summer, and the remnants of vegetation are withering. There is great loss by starvation. On some of the ranches half the stock has perished. The loss of sheep and horses is comparatively small.

☞ The London Times' correspondent at Rome says the most exciting incident there had been an order to Mr. Hume, of Spiritualism notoriety, to leave the city in three days. It appears that he was invited before the police and examined as to his spiritualism, and on that simply ordered to leave. But the next day, the British Consul interceded with the Governor of Rome, who finally assented to Mr. Hume's remaining, on condition of his entering into an engagement, through the Consul, that he would desist from all communications with the spiritual world during his stay in Rome.

MARRIED.

In Surry, Me., Jan. 20th, at the house of the bride's father, by Eld. Thomas Smith, of the Maine Advent Conference, Eld. C. H. LEVERTON, Maine Advent Missionary, to Miss FRANCES E. MILLIKEN.

Items.

☞ According to the report of the City Inspector of New York, no less than eighteen thousand people live in cellars and basements in that city, under conditions that are constantly provocative of febrile and epidemic diseases.

☞ The comet of 1810, a brilliant fellow with a tail one and a half degrees in length, is thought to be coming our way.

☞ At Warren, Ill., during the recent cold weather, a man froze to death while riding in his wagon along the public highway. When found he was frozen stiff, dead, with whip in one hand and the reins in the other.

☞ A Paris paper computes the population of the globe at one thousand millions, speaking three thousand and sixty-four languages, and having eleven hundred different forms of religion.

☞ Iceland has a population of seventy thousand, four printing presses and four newspapers. So much attention is devoted to educating the young that it is almost impossible to find a child of eight years of age who does not read or write.

Justice Keating of one of the London criminal courts the other day remarked: "It required one to come into a court of justice to have any idea of the awful depravity which prevailed in the heart of London."

☞ A merchant of Philadelphia, who a few years ago was reported to be wealthy, and making annually from five to ten thousand dollars, is now a driver on a passenger railroad car at nine dollars per week.

☞ The New York Times says that the United States Treasury now holds in its various offices $18,000,000 in gold in excess of payments on public interest.

☞ Senator Wilson intends to introduce a bill providing that all lands confiscated in the South shall be divided into homesteads for soldiers.

☞ The Tribune says Gen. Halleck expresses the belief that a last desperate effort will be made by the rebels in the Spring to transfer the real fighting to Northern soil.

☞ It is reported that Frederick Brown, brother of "Old John Brown," will be appointed General Superintendent of the Freedmen in Northern Virginia.

☞ The Great Eastern has been bought at $130,000. Only one bid $50,000.

☞ In St. Paul, Minn., there are from 7000 to 9000 Catholics, and 1245 Protestants.

☞ A company of Capitalists are boring for oil in a lime-stone quarry near Chicago. Indications of oil begin to appear.

☞ Military drill has been introduced into the public schools in Boston.

☞ The Montgomery (Alabama) people were busy on the 4th inst. taking in ice an inch thick.

☞ Much mutiny exists among the rebel soldiers in Western Texas.

Notices.

Quarterly Conference, Buchanan, Mich.

The first quarterly meeting of the Advent Christian Conference of Michigan and Indiana will commence Feb. 18th, at 10 o'clock A. M., in the Advent Chapel, and continue over the Sabbath. There will be preaching day and evening, by Elders Mansfield, Himes, Seymour, Babcock, and others. A large gathering is expected. Friends in the vicinity, and from every quarter, are invited to participate in this feast of love. Call upon Elder Mansfield, whose residence is on Day's Avenue, for directions. A. N. SEYMOUR, Sec'ry of Conf.

Conference in Norway, Me.

The Lord willing, we shall hold a conference at North Norway, in the Methodist Chapel, commencing Feb. 18th, (evening), and continue over the following Sunday. A general invitation is extended. Come, brethren and sisters, praying for the blessing of the Lord upon the meeting. Those coming from abroad may call upon Brn. French, Adams, Merrill, Pearce, and Pingree.

JAS. A. LIBBY.

NORMAL INSTITUTE and Manual Labor Academy,
REED'S FERRY, N. H.

The next term of this Academy commences Feb. 18th, and continues eleven weeks, under the instruction of H. E. Brown, A. B. For circular, address H. E. BROWN, Reed's Ferry, N. H.

Meeting in Concord, N. H.

There will be a protracted meeting at the Advent Chapel in Concord, N. H., commencing Thursday evening, Feb. 4th, to continue over the Sabbath, and longer if the interest demands.

Bro. A. Ross is expected to be with us. Come over and help us, brethren.

A. WEBSTER, for the brethren.

Maine Central Quar. Conference.

This conference is expected to be holden at the Town House in Rome, commencing Thursday, March 3d, at 6 o'clock, P. M. Come, brethren, let us come up to the help of the Lord, and encourage and strengthen each other. Watchmen and brethren of other conferences are invited. Provision will be made for all. Call on Eld. L. L. Howard, Bros. Martin, Watson, Fletcher, Bleasdell, and others. Let us meet in the spirit of the truth, prepared to do the commandments of our Master with humility. D. W. GRIFFIN, Clerk.

Meeting in Erie County, N. Y.

C. F. Sweet and C. B. Turner will commence a meeting in Newstead, Erie Co., N. Y., on Tuesday evening, Feb. 9th, at 7 o'clock P. M., and continue over the following Sunday, or longer, the Lord will. All the brethren in the surrounding country are invited to attend. Yea, come with your hearts full of faith and the Holy Spirit, consecrating yourselves and your substance to the service of God, and praying for his blessing upon the meeting, and also upon the community. O Lord, let us have thy help. C. F. SWEET.

Maine Eastern Quarterly Conference.

A quarterly conference will be held at Lincolnville Centre, Me., commencing Thursday evening, at 7 o'clock, Feb. 25th, and continue over the Sabbath following. Brethren from abroad will call on Bros. G. McKenny, E. Calderwood, D. Fletcher, E. Blood, S. Wadsworth, E. Young, and M. Young. A general invitation is given to all our brethren, etc.

M. YOUNG, Secretary.

Meeting in Canaan, Me.

There will be a protracted meeting in Canaan, Me. at the Salisbury meeting-house, commencing Friday evening, Feb. 19th. Brethren and sisters from abroad, and all interested, are invited to attend.

L. L. HOWARD,
D. M. HANSCOM.

Notice.

BRO. GRANT:—I have been instructed by the brethren to inform you that we have organized ourselves into church fellowship here in Montreal; and to request you to make it known through the Crisis, so that if any of the brethren were passing through the city, they might visit us at No. 6 St. Antwaine Street. GEO. SMITH, Secretary.

Montreal, Jan. 13th, 1864.

Appointments.

We would say to our preaching Brethren that it is necessary we should receive their appointments as early as TUESDAY MORNING, as our paper goes to press about noon; otherwise they will not be inserted till the week following.

LOWELL STREET CHAPEL, BOSTON, CORNER OF CAUSEWAY AND LOWELL STREETS. Meetings are held regularly three times every Sunday, and Tuesday and Friday evenings. Seats free.

APPOINTMENT FOR LOWELL STREET CHAPEL.

H. L. Hastings .... Sunday, Feb. 7th and onward for the present.

Exeter, N. H .... Sunday, Feb 7th
S. S. MOONEY.

South Wayne, (Jenkins school-house), Friday evening, Feb. 12th.
South Livermore .... Saturday evening, Feb. 13th and over the following Sabbath.
J. T. JORDAN.

Great Works .... Sunday, Feb. 7th
Milo or Sebec .... Sunday, Feb. 14th
THOMAS SMITH.

Hollis, Me .... Sunday, Feb. 7th
Portsmouth, N. H .... Sunday, Feb. 14th
Biddeford, Me .... Sunday, Feb. 21st
WM. H. MITCHELL.

Warehouse Point, Ct .... Feb. 7th
Scitico .... Feb. 14th
Boston, (Lowell Street Chapel) Friday evening, Feb. 19th
Portsmouth, N. H .... Sabbaths, Feb. 21st and 28th
Evenings between not engaged.
Exeter, N. H .... Tuesday evening, March 1st
Haverhill, Mass .... Wednesday evening, March 2d
Salem, Mass .... Thursday evening, March 3d
H. MUNGER.

South Sutton, N. H .... Sunday, Feb. 7th
Alton Corner, N. H .... Sunday, Feb. 14th
J. COUCH.

New London, N. H. (Chapel) .... Sunday, Feb. 7th
Warner Village (Union Hall) .... Sunday, Feb. 14th
East Andover .... Tuesday evening, Feb. 16th
A. MUSSEY.

East Hartland, Ct .... Sunday, Feb. 14th as Bro. Gains may arrange.
Hope to see the brethren and sisters from adjacent towns at this meeting.
Collinsville, Ct .... Sunday, Feb. 21st
C. GOODRICH.

Richmond, R. I., (Clark's Hall) .... Sunday, Feb. 7th
J. J. NORTHUP.

Fisherville, N. H .... Sunday, Feb. 7th
Z. FORD.

Springfield, (at Bro. Morgan's) .... Saturday, Feb. 13th
Agawam .... Sunday, Feb. 14th
I. B. POTTER.

Warehouse Point, Ct. (Adams Hall) .... Sunday, Feb. 14th
WM. A. FENN.

London Ridge, N. H .... Sunday, Feb. 14th
Pittsfield, (where Bro. Mooney may appoint), evenings, Feb. 16th and 17th.
North Barnstead .... evening, Feb. 18th
Clark Meeting-house .... Sunday, Feb. 21st
Wolfborough, (where Bro. Walker may appoint), Monday evening, Feb. 22d. T. W. PIPER.

Braggville, near Holliston, Mass., (where Bro. J. N. Sherman may appoint). Sunday, Feb. 7th, and every evening through the following week. Brethren and sisters near by, come out into the highways and hedges and work and pray for sinners.

Shall be at liberty the next week to work where the Lord opens the way. Address at Holliston, Mass., in season. H. K. FLAGG.

Amherst, Mass., East Street .... Feb. 10th
Northampton, Mass., (at Bro. Bassett's) Feb. 11th—12th
Goshen, Mass .... Feb. 14th
Plainfield, Mass., (at Bro. J. E. Healy's) Feb. 15th—17th
Plainfield, Mass., (at Bro. David Thayer's) .... Feb. 18th
Plainfield Pond .... Feb. 19th
Savoy, Mass .... Feb. 21st
Dalton, Mass .... Feb. 22d
and through the week as Brn. Warren and Smith may arrange.
North Adams, Mass .... Feb. 28th
Charlemont, Mass., (at Bro. Cudworth's), March 1st—2d
Christian Hill, Mass., (as Bro. Tenny may arrange) March 3d and 4th.
Griswoldville, Mass .... March 6th
Northfield Farms, Mass., (at Bro. A. Morgan's), March 8th. GEO. A. STREETER.

APPOINTMENTS FOR BRISTOL, CT.

S. B. Munn .... Sunday, Feb. 14th
Bro. St. John .... Sunday, Feb. 28th

Portsmouth, N. H .... Feb. 7th
Haverhill, Mass .... Feb. 14th
A. SIMPSON.

Moultonborough Centre .... Feb. 7th
Ossipee, Leighton Corner .... Feb. 14th
N. HARTSHORN.

East Stoneham, (where J. Howe may think proper,) Feb. 6th, and over Sunday the 7th. T. JORDAN.

Lafayette, R. I .... Feb. 7th
The Plains, Appanaug .... Feb. 14th
River Point, R. I .... Feb. 21st—28th
I desire to fill up the week as brethren may arrange.
J. K. BELLOWS.

Danielsonville .... Sunday, Feb. 7th
F. BURR.
Concord, N. H .... Sunday, Feb. 7th
Exeter, N. H .... Feb. 14th, 21st, and 28th
A. ROSS.

Charleston, R. I., (in the Stone meeting-house), Feb. 7th
RUFUS W. PEIRCE.

Vernon, Vt .... Feb. 7th
GEO. CHAMPLIN.

Groton, (where Bro. Putnam may appoint), Sunday, Feb. 7th. B. SPAULDING.

Meredith Center .... Feb. 7th
T. W. PIPER.

Scitico .... Feb. 7th
R. E. LADD.

Wrightville, Ct .... Feb. 7th
C. GOODRICH.

Lawrence, Mass .... Feb. 7th
J. G. SMITH.

Biddeford, Me .... evenings, Feb. 4th, 5th, and 6th, and over the following Sunday. N. D. REED.

Lawrence, Mass .... Sunday, Feb. 7th
JOSEPH W. WHITE.

Agawam, Mass .... Sunday, Feb. 7th
P. S. BUTLER.

Danielsonville, Ct .... Feb. 7th and 14th
J. W. BRITTAN.

Hoosick, N. Y .... Friday evening, Feb. 5th and over Sunday, the 7th. M. BATCHELOR.

New Haven, Ct .... Sunday, Feb. 7th
R. WILLIAMS.

Seneca Falls, N. Y .... Feb. 7th and 14th and through the week.
I hope to see friends from abroad. Come one, come all. S. S. BREWER.

Business.

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

A McCurdy—"Home Thrusts" is not yet published.

O Stockwell—Are out of some of the works you call for. Will send soon as possible.

E A McLean—Will send "Spiritualism" soon.

A P Moore—Have credited Mrs. T. to No. 476. You, to No. 419.

S S Folsom—N. D. was credited; paid to No. 383.

P W Hough—John Will; all right.

J D Brown—A. B. M. The $3.00 was received and credited; acknowledged in No. 392.

R Pratt—He will find it acknowledged in No. 423; pays to No. 442.

Wm S Deverreux—"The Two Witnesses" are all sold. Send you something else.

Wm Freeman—The $5.00 were received, but as you did not give your P. O., were not credited till now. Pays to No. 352.

J S Heath—Out of "Two Witnesses" and "Reasons." Have made up the amount with others.

G S Hart—Will have a new supply of Bibles soon, and will then fill your order.

G F Fowler—We cannot decipher the name for which you send the other dollar. Will you please give it again plainly, and his Post Office?

CASH RECEIPTS TO JAN. 28, 1864.

The present No. of the Crisis is 435.

The No. which follows your name, is the No. to which your money pays. Deduct the one from the other, and you will see how far you have paid in advance, or how much is due the office. Make a memorandum of the same, and you will be reminded when your subscription expires.

J N Berry 460, O Hodge 442, T H Newton 422, J Q Adams 459, A Wymans 460, H L Parsons 459, J Small 464, H Bostwick 459, A Bruster 459, W D Barrett 459, Wm J Leavitt 459, H Roberts 460, J G Brown 460, J K Paine 460, Wm Straight 451, S Tennant 452, Jas Smith 446, Mrs H Curtiss 458, J Rogers 456, Mrs C Staples 429, T B Ellis 460, Mrs J Warner 458, W Murphy 459, R Mason 459, C Caswell 460, Mrs O Bennett 450, B R Clark 432, E S Benton 460, T L Stanton 460, C T Peet 460, J H Burrington 454, J Bond 460, W Higby 460, Dr M Babcock 460, M Thompson 460, S Wheelock 432, J Dunham 457, Mrs H Shaw 460, Mrs L Shaw 460, P Tuttle 460, W S Darling 460, F Robinson 460, Mrs P Eastman 463, C Wakefield 442, W L Huntley 460, T J Redlon 460, A Moore 460, Mrs E Brandon 460, L Longfellow 460, J Andrus 460, R Smith 460, W Rhes 444, W Cruson 460, L Cane 460, J Blaisdel 460, E B Scott 460, J K Robinson 460, L Boon 460, J Thomas 460, O Porter 460, D Noftzer 460, B F Smith 460, H Clark 460, M E Otis 452, M Thorp 451, G F Fowler 455, E J Towle 460, J S Moulton 468, B W Berry 436, W G Poor 429, R Smalley 457, D S Osborne 460, J Buckingham 460,—$1.00 each.

E Burnham 431, W Tuttle 442, B Tuttle 442, A Maglue 487, Mrs E N Overlock 468, O M Tanner 458, E Braley 491, Mrs D C Jenness 469, M J Barrows 458, S Ayers 464, G H Holiday 416, T Apthorpe 464, H G Whitaker 457, D Kendall 459, A W Gage 459, H C Aborn 485, Mrs A Nye 460, H Rowell 484, R L Elwell 290, M C Philbrick 486, D Marden 489, C E Myers 464, Mrs O E Stuart 494, Mrs J Gilchrist 462, S Hall 476, G Watkins 476, R. Pike 491, S. W Gardner 486, Mrs. M. V. Wright 486, Mrs M M Waltz 486, H H Warne 437, Mrs T A James 486, E E Perkins 475, G L Hart 488, Mrs E Scott 490, D Braley 525, L Ransom 477, T B Dustin 486, F Nelson 483, J Crawford 488, H Thackray 483, J Wheeler 494, J W Thin 481, J Warner 486, M S Terry 486, E M Talbott 486, Mrs C Bragg 470, M Darling 432, Mrs E. Dannett 461, J. S. Blaisdel 468, M. Brooks 468, O L Fletcher 485, Mrs E M Gurney 329, A C Thorpe 478, L S Glover 486, D A Taylor 486, E Rollison 485, S McCurdy 486,—$2.00 each.

S Gilliland 446, A P Dolloff 447, M L Blodgett 431, W H Wilde 435, S A Mallory 449, F V Norcross 447, Mrs. R. Grant 447, E. Allen 445, B Stevens 447, Wm. Jenks 447, B Day 447, B Maltba 432, J Munroe 447, J Phillips 447, E Benjamin 447, A Mussey 447,—50c each.

G W Gish $1 65, 471, E Miller $3 00, 487, A B Miller $3.00, 455; Wm Miller $2 08, 479, M Boyd 25c, 428; J Boyce $1 00, 433; B Jones $4.00, 494; F J Mansfield $2.00, 418; Mrs E Miller $3.00, 490; S Kail $3 00, 537; S M Stevenson $3 00, 468, A Case $1.50, 455; L Newell $1.50, 438; E Orton 60c, 450, O Shurtliff 60c, 450; R Shurtliff 60c, 450, F Wetherell 60c, 450, Mrs B Orton 60c, 450; G W Smith $1.50, 509.

FOR BOOKS AND TRACTS.

S. Gilbert 50c, G. W. Gish 35c, S. S. Folsom 25c, E C Andrus $1.00, N R Gould 50c, A C Greene 60c, E Braley $1.50, Wm Miller $2.17, H A Arnold $5.00, J Gay $2.20, W B Perkins 25c, R Pike $2.00, S W Bartlett $1.56, J Wilkinson 35c, G L Hart 3.00, E Tuttle $1.00, C H Leverton 50c, G W Burnham 50c, J Wilbur 25c, E A McClean $1.50, G W Smith $1.50.

BOOKS AND TRACTS SENT.

BY MAIL.

A McCurdy, Dansville, N. Y.; N A Hitchcock, Paoli, Wis.; S W Worthington, N. Bennington, Vt.; E Tuttle, Rye, N. H.; G W Burnham, Farmington, N. H.; J Wilbur, W. Hoosick, N. Y.; C H Shepherd, Melvin Village, N. H.; S Kail, Victoria, Ill.; E A McClean, New Philadelphia, O.; S S Daniels, W. Suffield, Conn.; G W Smith, Waterbury, Conn.; O L Fletcher, Stafford Spr., Conn.; I M Aldrich, Whitefield, N. H.; S L Manley, Marion, O.; J A Cleaveland, Troy, Vt.; S A Gilman, So. Windsor, Conn.; J S Heath, Neponset, Ill.; D M Rinter, Kirkville, Mo.; T H Girard, Batavia, N. Y.; M E Trafton, Minneapolis, Minn.; W S Devereux, Fiskville, R. I.; B Wilson, Geneva, Ill.; R McLanchlan, Cleveland, O.

BY EXPRESS.

M Grant, Montreal, C. E.; W B Morgan, Canaan Corners, Vt.; C H Williams, No. Bay, N. Y.

LETTERS RECEIVED.

R R York, H L Bradley, P S W Deyo, H H Brown, S K Gibson, A Mussey, M A Weaver, M Holmes, M E Pinkham, J. G. Smith, W. L. Carroll, J G Hook, Wm Sweet, S Kail, E F Young, E Hutchins, J V Himes, L M Goodridge, G Dillabaugh, S L Manley, E A Ocker, S. B. Colton, S. E. Scott, J W White, F R Towle, C W Smith, E Burnham, Thos Smith, Wm Hobbs.

POST OFFICE ADDRESS.

P. W. Hough—Fairbank, Buchanan Co., Iowa.
S. S. Brewer—South Glastenbury, Ct.

PRICES REDUCED
ON PART OF THE FOLLOWING
Valuable Books.

Eusebius' Ecclesiastical History, postpaid $2.00.
Butterworth's Concordance, sheep, second hand, postpaid $1.00.
Butterworth's Concordance, sheep, new, postpaid $1.50.
Cole's Pocket Concordance, sheep, $1.00; postage 16c.
Robinson's Greek Harmony of the New Testament, cloth, postpaid $1.00.
Josephus' complete works, translated by Whiston, one vol. $1.25; postpaid $1.50.

Also the following works for the Greek Student, not sold separately:—

No. 1. Bagster's Greek Testament, 8vo., cloth, with various readings of Griesbach.
No. 2. The Polymician Greek Lexicon of the New Testament, 12mo., cloth.
No. 3. Bagster's Pocket Greek Concordance of the New Testament, 12mo., cloth.

A valuable set for any one who is travelling, and cannot carry larger works. Price for the three, postpaid, $3.50.

Address E. P. WOODWARD, (Crisis Box) Boston, Mass.

English Bibles for Sale.

1. DIAMOND, fine print, full references, morocco bound, $1.50; calf, $1.25; roan, gilt, $1.00; flexible binding, $1.00. Postage 12 cents.
2. PEARL, flat, full references, morocco, $2.25; roan, $1.50. Postage 16 cts.
3. NONPAREIL, 16 mo., references between the verses, or references in the margin, morocco, $3.00; calf, $2.50; roan, $2.00; references between verses, with gilt rims and clasps, $3.00. Postage 20 cts.
4. MINION, references between the verses, roan, $2.50. Postage 25 cts.
5. MINION, 8vo.; marginal ref., flat and clear type, roan, $2.50.
6. TESTAMENTS, roan, gilt, smallest 25 cts; larger, 33 cts. Postage 6 cts.

Address MILES GRANT, Boston, Mass.

Price Reduced.

RESURRECTION OF THE WICKED. Discussion between M. Grant and J. T. Curry.

The advertised price of this Discussion is 25 cents, postage 2 cents. We have a quantity of them on hand, and will sell them hereafter for 20 cts., postage 2 cts. Send on your orders.

PHOTOGRAPHS OF ELD. EDWIN BURNHAM. A few copies of a large, beautiful and life-like, Photograph, which the friends of Bro. Burnham will be glad to obtain. Sent by mail for $1.00. Those wishing them should order at once.

BOOKS AND TRACTS.

[illegible]

MILES GRANT'S WORKS.

Resurrection of the Wicked. Discussion with Jos. T. Curry. [illegible]

Eternal Suffering. Discussion with Dr. J. Litch. "Do the Scriptures teach the eternal conscious suffering of the Wicked?" [illegible]

Spiritualism. Discussion with J. S. Loveland, "On Spiritualism and Immortality." [illegible]

State of the Dead. Discussion with W. W. Clayton, "On the State of the Dead and the Punishment of the Wicked." [illegible]

Miles Grant's Tracts. 32 pages each. Price 5 cents [illegible]

What is Man? A Bible view of his creation; The meaning of Soul, Spirit, Death, and Hell.

The Soul, What is it? Or a careful examination of all the uses of the words [illegible]

The Spirit, What is it? Or a careful examination of all the uses of the words [illegible]

The Rich Man and Lazarus. Thief on the Cross; [illegible]

TRACTS

Issued by the Christian Publication Society.

[illegible]

FREE TO THE POOR.

The Church not in Darkness; or, the duties of the times; [illegible] By H. L. Hastings.

The Three Worlds; or, earth, past, present, and future. [illegible] By H. L. Hastings. 24 pages.

The Last Days. A calm, scriptural, and convincing argument, [illegible] By H. L. Hastings. 24 pages.

Plain Truths; or, Scripture and Tradition united. A condensed view of leading Scriptural statements [illegible] By H. L. Hastings. 32 pages.

Will all Men be Saved? A pointed, pithy, earnest and conclusive argument against Universalism, [illegible] By H. L. Hastings. 20 pages.

A Voice of Warning from the Four Winds. A compilation of brief and thrilling testimonies [illegible] By D. T. Taylor. 24 pages.

The New Heavens and New Earth. A collection of testimonies [illegible] By D. T. Taylor. 20 pages.

Ancient Landmarks. Six tracts of four pages each, [illegible] Arranged by H. L. Hastings. 24 pages.

The Duty of Christians in the present crisis. A letter to a Christian brother, [illegible] By H. L. Hastings. [illegible] 24 pages.

State of the Dead. By John Milton, author of "Paradise Lost," [illegible] 24 pages.

Silence of the Scriptures respecting the immortality of the soul, [illegible] By C. F. Hudson. [illegible] 24 pages.

Immortality Through Christ Alone. The doctrine safe and salutary. By C. F. Hudson. [illegible]

The Destiny of the Wicked. A solid mass of Scripture quotations, without note or comment, upon this subject. Arranged by H. L. Hastings. [illegible]

The Advent at Hand. A summary of reasons for expecting the speedy close of the present, and the ushering in of a new dispensation. [illegible]

BOOKS PUBLISHED BY H. L. HASTINGS,
167 HANOVER STREET, BOSTON, MASS.

Single copies sent by mail, postpaid, on receipt of the price.

The Signs of the Times; or, A Glance at Christendom as it is. By H. L. Hastings. Third edition. Enlarged. [illegible] Cloth, extra, $1.00. Paper, 75c.

[illegible]

The Voice of the Church on the Coming and Kingdom of the Redeemer; or, a History of the Doctrine of the Reign of Christ on Earth. By D. T. Taylor. Edited and published by H. L. Hastings. [illegible] Price $1.00.

[illegible]

Spiritualism a Satanic Delusion and a Sign of the Times. By William Ramsey, D. D. Edited by H. L. H. [illegible]

[illegible]

Thessalonica; or The Model Church. A sketch of Primitive Christianity. By H. L. H. [illegible]

[illegible]

The Great Controversy between God and Man. Its origin, progress, and end. [illegible] By H. L. Hastings. [illegible]

[illegible]

Reasons for my Hope, and the Tokens of its Speedy Realization. By H. L. Hastings. [illegible]

[illegible]

Thessalonica and Reasons for my Hope. Bound in one volume. Cloth, 75 cents.

Looking Forward, or the Prospects of the Church; being the concluding chapter of the Signs of the Times. [illegible]

Future Punishment, as revealed in the Scriptures, in opposition to the Three Theories of Never-ending Sin and Misery, Eternal Sleep without any Resurrection, and Universal Salvation. By H. L. Hastings. [illegible]

[illegible]

Pauline Theology; or, The Scripture Doctrine of Future Punishment, as taught in the Epistles of Paul. By H. L. Hastings. [illegible]

[illegible]

The Old Paths; or, the Primitive Doctrine of a Future Life. By H. L. Hastings. [illegible]

[illegible]

Retribution; or, The Doom of the Ungodly, after the Resurrection of the Dead, Just and Unjust. By H. L. H. [illegible]

[illegible]

C. F. HUDSON'S WORKS.

Debt and Grace. Or the Doctrine of a Future Life, by C. F. Hudson. [illegible]

Christ our Life. The Scriptural Argument for Immortality through Christ alone. [illegible]

Human Destiny. A Critique on Universalism. [illegible]

The Doctrine of Endless Misery an occasion of [illegible]

Eternal Death in the literal sense is Eternal Punishment. [illegible]

The Rich Man and Lazarus. With remarks on Josephus. [illegible]

The Rights of Wrong; or, Is Evil Eternal? [illegible]

Reviewers Reviewed. [illegible]

JACOB BLAIN'S WORKS.

Death not Life; or, The Destruction of the Wicked Scripturally established. [illegible]

Glad Tidings; or, Bible Proof that Woe and Sin are to end in the universe [illegible]

The Wicked not Immortal. [illegible]

Bible Meaning of the Word Hell. [illegible]

Endless Misery not a Bible Doctrine. [illegible]

Smoke of Torment and Unquenchable Fire Explained. [illegible]

Bible Meaning of Forever and Everlasting. [illegible]

Letter of Rev. John Foster on Future Punishment. [illegible]

[illegible] MILES GRANT, Boston, Mass.

For the World's Crisis.

IS IT RIGHT?

Somebody will unfaithful be,
And shun the cross to bear,
The glittering crown will not receive,
When Jesus shall appear.
Is it I?

Some one will shrink from suffering,
And not obey God's word;
In paradise they will not reign
When it shall be restored.
Is it I?

Some one will murmur and complain,
And seek for ease and earthly joy,
The promised land will never gain,
For God will surely them destroy.
Is it I?

Some one will lay up treasure here,
From suffering poor their goods withhold,
In Beulah's land they'll have no share,
Nor tread those streets of gold.
Is it I?

Somebody, when the Master comes,
Lacking for oil will be;
When mercy's door is closed they'll cry—
"Lord, open unto me!"
Is it I?

Some one will hear the Bridegroom say—
"You I have never known;
My house is filled, the guests all come,
For more there is no room."
Is it I?

"Often I wandered sad and lone,
In poverty and want,
And was not welcomed to your home,—
Depart! I know you not."
Is it I?

L. Otis.

CHURCH SITTINGS.

That system cannot be right which shuts out the poor from hearing the gospel. When the disciples of John would know from Christ's own lips whether he was indeed the Messiah, the Deliverer, he gave them certain signs whereby they might judge for themselves. One of these signs was, "the poor have the gospel preached unto them." If that was a criterion in the days of Christ, I know no reason why it should not be a criterion now. But if it is, there are many churches whose creed may be profoundly orthodox, yet whose practise, in this respect, would not entitle them to be called christian churches. * *

If, when these structures are built, they are accessible only to the rich, they are not the temples of the Lord, but the temples of the men that built them. I do not see how they can be any thing else but an abomination to the Lord. A majority of christians profess to believe that the ordinances of the Sabbath day are an especial and paramount means of grace. If, then, christians build costly churches, and cause that "Every door is barred with gold, and opens but to golden keys," what are they doing, but practically and effectually, on their own showing, shutting poor people away from the means of grace? Combining the doctrines and customs of such churches, we can but arrive at the conclusion that it is easier for a camel to go through the eye of a needle than for a poor man to enter the kingdom of heaven. Why should we send money to convert the heathen abroad, and shut church-doors in the faces of poor christians at home? We do it. Pew rents in several—I think in many of our churches in our large cities are such as to render it impossible not only for the impoverished, but well-nigh impossible, for any but the rich to obtain seats. A mechanic moving into the city from a country village, with a family to support, a clerk with a salary of a thousand dollars, a young merchant struggling for existence, cannot take a pew and go to church with his family. And if he stays at home, and gradually loses the distinctiveness of Sunday, if his children grow up without any church-home, or any of the influences and associations that always do, and always should, cluster around a church home—am I my brother's keeper?

How must these things look to those who are shut out? The industrious and respectable mechanic, who has been trained under religious influences though he has not wholly yielded to them, and who, coming from the social and home-like country into the city, naturally seeks among the first requisites, a place where his family may weekly worship according to their wont,—what does he think, how does he feel, as he turns away from one and another church because the expense will not permit him to enter? The poverty-stricken, squalid, houseless, friendless poor—do such customs tend to induce in them the belief and the faith that christianity is the common blessing of all mankind? How long shall the right hand baffle the left? How long shall we declare that the gospel is to be the redemption of all, that the good tidings of great joy shall be to all people, and then stall up the very place where that gospel is dispensed, the very place where those good tidings are proclaimed, as closely and exclusively as if salvation were the prerogative of moneyed men? How long will it take to convert Boston, New York and Baltimore at this rate?

I have heard of churches where pews are locked, and only their owners suffered to enter them. May they stay locked to all christian men! O, my soul, come not thou into their secrets! Unto such assemblies, mine honor, be not thou united! These pew-owners, it must be concluded, expect to get into heaven through a private entrance. They have made a gravel path outside the strait and narrow way, along which they may walk with stretched-forth neck and wanton eyes, walking and mincing as they go, and so be happily apart from the vulgar travelers toward the celestial city. There is a postern-gate remote from the thronged portals, which opens only to their touch. They have rented beforehand the stateliest of the many mansions, and will meet only their own set in the golden streets. Is it religion or is it travesty?

I suppose there must be some justification, some cause for this thing. If there is, I wish it could be brought forward. I am utterly at a loss even to conjecture it. To me it looks eminently and only unchristian—directly and sharply opposed to the whole spirit of the gospel. * * * *

We want a church where the rich and poor meet together; the Lord is the Maker of them all. In other respects there may, and often must be, distinction, but here every man stands—a naked soul before God. Christ died for all alike, heaven beckons to all. Alas! is not hell from beneath moved for all to meet them at their coming? In this matter, neither circumcision availeth any thing or uncircumcision; but whosoever is athirst, let him come and drink freely, without money and without price. Learning, leisure, wit, wealth, may be the boon of the few, but the gospel is the legacy of humanity. Christianity cannot be broken into grades by earthly distinction without detriment. At the Feast of the Passover, the master and slave alike partook; is christianity more exclusive than Judaism? Is the salvation of the world a less powerful solvent than the salvation of the first-born of the families of Israel? If Christ could have washed the feet of his disciples, can not those disciples tolerate each other's presence?

I believe in the very utmost leveling, the thorough radical democracy of the Bible. The only degrees it knows are degrees of holiness. Among them that are born of women, there may be none greater than John the Baptist, yet he that is least in the kingdom of heaven is greater than he. I do not believe religion will be aggressive in any community when it is not allowed free course to run and be glorified.

The more I think of it the more it seems to me that our system—the system of building churches and selling, or renting the pews, is a wrong system. The appearance of it is selfish. The idea of personal property is prominent. Surely every church ought to be a beacon to every wayfarer. Surely, there should be no self-intruding into social worship. As things are now, if a stranger moves into your parish, you cannot invite him to your church and your church hospitalities, without laying yourself open to the charge of catering for your own interests. You want to help out your society, you want his money to pay the expenses of the parish. Your hands may be ever so clean, but they will not look clean to a wicked and perverse generation.

Why cannot the whole matter of church taxes be abolished, and the church rest entirely upon free-will offerings? Why not let every man be accountable to God alone for what he shall do—shall I use that common phrase—"to support the gospel?" No, for wrong words, even if they do not spring from wrong ideas, tend to originate and perpetuate them. People do not support the gospel; the gospel supports them. The gospel will live whether they do or do not pay their five or fifty or five hundred dollars to uphold it. The gospel will live whether they attack, neglect or cherish it; but without the gospel, the good tidings, there is for them no life neither in this world, neither in the world to come. Our work is not to support the gospel, but to spread the gospel and drive it in.

The gospel is no pauper, but a king. We are not to dole out to it a fitful pittance, but march under its banners, conquering and to conquer.

I would have the whole matter of church rates taken out of mercantile, and put upon missionary ground. Here is a christian community; it has built a costly church. If that costly church is open only to those who can afford to buy a pew in it, it would much better have been a pine shanty or even a canvass tent. If the mission of a church is to be subordinate to its architecture, then architecture is a device of the adversary. Let a community build a church, and then throw its doors wide open to everybody—yes, to every body, native and foreign, black and white, beggar, brigand, pickpocket—the worse they are the more they ought to be in church—and then architecture may become the handmaiden of the Lord. Make your church beautiful, if so, you may better express your love to God, your appreciation of, and gratitude for, the beauty which he has lavished; make it attractive, if so, you may better lure outcasts into the fold, but let not ostentation, or rivalry, or ambition reign where only devotion should dwell; for so you shall have no cherubim, with outstretched wings, hovering over the mercy-seat, but only a golden calf.—Gail Hamilton.—Earnest Christian.

For the World's Crisis.

SEARCH THE SCRIPTURES.

How important is this precept of the sacred word to those who would become wise unto salvation! How expressive its meaning, and yet how little is it heeded! These words were uttered by our blessed Savior on that memorable Sabbath when the impotent man was healed at the pool of Bethesda. To vindicate his conduct against the cavils of the Jews, our Lord shows, from the testimony of the Father, the Holy Scriptures, John the Baptist, and his own mighty works, that he came from God to be the light and salvation of a world lying in wickedness; but, misled by their rites and traditions, confiding more in the letter than in the spirit of their own law, the veil was before their eyes,—they comprehended not that light. It was in view of this obscurity, this spiritual darkness, that the blessed Jesus said, "Search the Scriptures, for in them ye think ye have eternal life; and they are they which testify of me."—John 5: 39.

Although this injunction was spoken in reference to the Old Testament scriptures, especially the law and the prophets, in their knowledge of which the Scribes and Pharisees vaunted much, yet in all ages of the church, from that day to the present, these words have touched the heart of the believer with a peculiar force; and in these last portentous days are they most significant. Within the last twenty years, by diligently searching the Scriptures, many important innovations have been made on old and traditional ground, supplanting much error by the introduction of gospel truth.

Thus enlightened, many have turned their feet into the testimonies of the Lord, walking in the path of the just, which shineth more and more unto the perfect day. Within a recent period many of the prophetic scriptures have been made the subject of careful research that had long rested in mystical obscurity.

From such investigations much valuable light has been disseminated, theological errors detected, and many, who once took for doctrines the commandments of men, have made their disavowal, and now search the Scriptures, unbiassed, for themselves; saying, "To the law and to the testimony: if they speak not according to this word, it is because there is no light in them." "Every word of God is pure: he is a shield unto them that put their trust in him. Add thou not unto his words, lest he reprove thee, and thou be found a liar."—Prov. 40: 5, 6.

What errors, contentions and disaffections in church fellowship have arisen from a misunderstanding of the Scriptures! from a neglect of them, what darkness has covered the earth, and gross darkness the people!

"Ye do err, not knowing the Scriptures." Matt. 22: 29. Thus said Jesus to the Sadducees in reply to their question on the resurrection; and thus might he have said to most religious denominations since that day. Many persons of exalted piety have been led to reflect, when near the close of life, that they had not more diligently studied the Bible and given less attention to transitory things. But at that solemn and important hour, misspent time and misimproved opportunities are not to be recalled.

"Go, mortal, search that sacred page,
Seek there a hope that will not die,—
A hope that shall survive all age,
Surpassing all below the sky.

Go, draw from thence that priceless faith
In Him who lived and died to save,
Which shall light up the face of death,
And cast a halo o'er the grave."

E. Stoneham, Me. W. A. Manning.

THE SAVIOR'S ADVENT.

According to the popular belief, the final advent of the Savior is a far-distant event,—a mysterious and undefined something which is to transpire at some remote point in the revolutions of ages, long after the progress of Christian knowledge, the developments of science, and the march of intellect, have made the world universally pious, just and happy. On the platform and in the pulpit, we hear men talking rapturously and hopefully of some golden, blessed age, which is to be ushered in under the operation of existing instrumentalities. By the preaching of the gospel, the work of christian education, and the progress of reform, they expect the world to be converted, Antichrist destroyed, Satan cast out, and all the relations, occupations and pursuits of men purified, ennobled and regulated with justice. This is the hope which poets sing about, and orators preach about, as the great incentive to missionary effort, and the reward of self-denial, liberality, and prayer in the good work of propagating the gospel. And when once this glorious era has come, and continued through an indefinite period of duration, then, somewhere down among uncounted ages, the idea is, that Christ will appear in the heavens, join these terrestrial glories with glories celestial, and close the scene of grandeur amid songs and triumphs that die from us into the fathomless profound of eternity.

Now, all this may be very poetical, and answer very well to touch off platform speeches. It certainly is very flattering to human pride, and very pleasant for the fancy to dwell upon. But is it the truth of God? We are not inquiring now for what is captivating and beautiful, and touching to the natural heart, or even to the christian's imaginings. We want to know what Jehovah saith—what the Spirit of the Lord hath revealed concerning these things. And I am free to confess to you that my study of the Scriptures has taught me to expect a very different course and order of events. My Bible tells me of no millennium which existing processes are to bring about. Neither does it tell me of a millennium which is to precede the Savior's second advent. The only millennium I read of in the holy book is that which is to be introduced by the glory and power of Christ's coming, and the chief excellence of which is, his personal presence and reign with his saints upon the earth. It is not the reign of art, science, human culture or free governments, for which the Bible teaches me to look; nor yet for the universal triumph of christianity or the church as we now have it: nor yet for the reign of justice, holiness, or any mere abstract principle; but for the personal reign of Jesus my Lord, when "all people, nations and languages, shall serve him," and shall "come up unto Jerusalem to worship the King, the Lord of hosts." And that this millennium may come, and this glorious reign be established, the Savior himself must first come, as he promised, and as the angels declared in the day that he was taken up into heaven.

The advent of Christ, then, for which I look, and for which I would have all men look, is not a post-millennial, but a pre-millennial coming; not a coming long hence, after an era of liberty and perfection such as orators and poets have dreamed of, but a coming which is to usher in and begin the promised age of gold, and introduce to the world the fruits of a consummated redemption. It is Christ's coming that is to make the millennium, and not the millennium which is to prepare the world for Christ's coming. Upon this point my mind is clear, and my faith too firm to be shaken. There is hardly another subject in the Bible upon which there is such a mass of veried divine testimony as upon this. —Last Times.

PEACE OR WAR IN EUROPE.

The angry feeling of France towards England, caused by rejection of the Congress, has not subsided. Journals of all classes of opinion attack England fiercely, day after day. The Liberals vie with the Imperialists in bitterness. The significance of all this is greatly heightened by the fact that the journals publish nothing except by consent of the government. It is therefore the feeling of the Emperor which is expressed by the journals; or, at least, it is his present cue to allow it to appear so. So long as the press remains under the iron rule which at present constrains it, so long will the government be held responsible for its utterances.

The Siecle reviews the apologies and explanations of the Times in a tone of bitter irony. "The English government, according to the Times, always acts in a spirit of the completest abnegation and the purest generosity. It reminds France, also, that it was the intercession of Britain that saved Napoleon I. from the fate of Marshal Ney. But the Times says nothing of the treachery on Northumberland. Nor has it a word of Napoleon's long captivity at St. Helena." The Times had also spoken of the supply of coal (!) which France draws from England. "We are duly thankful," says the Siecle, "for the coal England sends us for a consideration. No doubt it is very ungrateful of France to criticise the England that sells her coals at a profit. But really this obligation is not great enough to make us forget the persevering hatred with which the British aristocracy kept up its war upon the French democracy, and thereby caused the errors of the revolution. We cannot forget that it was this aristocracy which compelled France to take refuge under the dictatorship of Napoleon I., and which hindered the cause of liberty from achieving its final victory, not only in France but throughout the world." The Siecle, you will remember, is a democratic journal. The Debats which represent the Orleanists, and is the best conducted paper in France, or perhaps in Europe, is equally outspoken: "All the apologies and recriminations of the English journals are alike inconclusive and offensive. Who could believe that England, at this day, could accuse France of ingratitude. It is to England, forsooth, that France is indebted for its escape from dismemberment in 1815! These haughty words will add a fresh complaint to those which France has already a right to make against England."

The question now is, how will all these bickerings end? Will there be a continental Congress, leaving England out in the cold, to warm herself by her own pride? Can peace continue, amid the causes of conflict which are rising up in every part of Europe? Ask any Frenchman you meet the question, whether there will be war in the spring, and he will answer, "Yes." Ask him with whom, and he will shrug his shoulders and answer, "I don't know." And such is the real position of Europe. Every one believes we shall soon hear the clash of arms; yet so tangled is the skein of European politics, so distrustful are the various powers of each other, and so divergent are their interests, that they do not see how to make combinations either with or against each other. Whether it shall be England, France, or Austria against Russia; or France and Russia against England and Austria; or the German powers against France and England, nobody—not even the rulers themselves—can tell.—Dr. McClintock.

For the World's Crisis.

THOUGHTS.

Think, think, think,
Through all the livelong day,
Mayhap through half the night,
And yet each thought is known
To Him who dwells in light.
O vain and sinful man!
Whose days pass swiftly by,
Dost never pause and think
Of that All-seeing eye?

The deeds of sin and shame,
Which meet our eyes and ears,
Have made this lovely earth
A scene of woe and tears;
But if each inmost heart
Was open to our ken
As God's omniscient eye
Beholds the thoughts of men;

How would the pure in heart
Cry out for quick release
From such a gloomy scene,
From such a world as this.
Then, oh! what pitying love
Prevents the chast'ning rod;
Oh! mercy without bound,
Oh! what a gracious God!

Mar.

A PERILOUS CRISIS.

"It cannot be denied that we are in the midst of a perilous crisis, in which it becomes the duty of the government and the people to look to the Lord for guidance and direction." And yet amid all these perils, our leading men at the helm of the ship of State seem to have forgotten the Lord, and are trusting in puny man, "whose breath is in his nostrils." Boasting pride still leads the way in all our popular journals. Men seem unwilling to stoop sufficiently to acknowledge their dependence on God; hence we do not yet see any indications that the dangers will be any less than now.

'Tis true, "a perilous Crisis" is upon us nationally, but more especially in a moral sense. Wickedness and infidelity abound to an alarming extent. Like Noah's flood, it seems to be sweeping all away with its terrible current. None are safe but those who are hid in Christ. He alone can keep us in this "hour of temptation."

Our great men begin to tremble at the dark aspect of things that are hanging over this nation. Their plans all prove failures and their prophecies of good times are seen to be no more reliable than the wild dreams of the insane. They begin to realize that some high power is disposing of events without consulting those who are governed by the principle of the proud, the selfish and the covetous; whose hearts send forth no notes of grateful praise to him from whom all blessings flow.

It is a fearful thing and sad to live in the days of a nation's calamity, when the judgments of the Most High come down upon the land for its iniquity, oppression and wrong, and after such nation has refused to hear the voice of God in the days of its prosperity and to repent and reform of its evil doings. It is a sad and fearful time to live in our days, and in such a crisis in the history of our government and of the kingdoms of the world as we are living in; when after a long season of unexampled peace and prosperity, in which God has called upon all nations to repent and fear him (Rev. 14: 6, 7), and they have refused, and now he has begun or is about to begin his dreadful controversy with the nations, in which they are to be involved in one universal ruin, to make way for the everlasting, righteous and peaceable kingdom of God.

The time was in the history of our nation, and of all these nations, when to live was a favor, and it was fortunate to have birth and being in such a day. But it is not now. It will be no pleasure to live to witness the overthrow and ruin of this Republic—nor the last plagues that shall be "poured out without mixture into the cup of his indignation" for all the nations to drink.

All things indicate that the time has come for a radical change in the affairs of this wicked world. The Lord has borne long, and been very merciful; but his goodness has been disregarded, his laws trampled in the dust, his truth spurned; and so much the more as blessings have been multiplied, till forbearance seems to be of no avail. Now the time has come to take the consequences; and truly they are terrible. Let all flee to Christ who wish protection.—Exchange from California.

For the World's Crisis.

REPORT OF THE MAINE CENTRAL QUAR. CONF. AT CORNVILLE.

Commenced Dec. 24th, 1863, at 6 o'clock P. M. Prayer and social meeting. It was evident that the brethren and sisters had met in the right spirit, and were ready to labor as the Lord might direct. Closed at 9 o'clock P. M. Friday, 25th, half past 9 A. M., social meeting; interest good, time well occupied, we having pledged ourselves to obey the commands of Him who is worthy of all praise. This meeting was continued during the forenoon, the brethren and sisters having taken the preaching into their own hands. The Spirit of the Lord was with us, and we felt that it was blessed to be there.

One o'clock P. M. Watchmen present—L. L. Howard, James Dudley, D. M. Hanscomb, J. Bemis, and Chas. Stratton. Sermon by L. L. Howard, from Jas. 5: 7;—"Be patient therefore, brethren, unto the coming of the Lord." Subject—plan of salvation, which was presented with Bro. Howard's usual force and clearness; and all present appeared to feel a deep interest. At six o'clock P. M., preaching by Eld. Howard, from Heb. 8: 6, 7;—"But now hath he obtained a more excellent ministry, by how much also he is the mediator of a better covenant, which was established upon better promises. For if that first covenant had been faultless, then should no place have been sought for the second." It is unnecessary to say that Bro. H. brought out things new and old for our instruction, and was listened to with intense interest.

Saturday, 26th, 9 1-2 A. M. Social and prayer meeting. The house well filled, and the brethren and sisters seemed to feel a deep sense of humiliation. There was a perfect union of sentiment and freedom of spirit, and a realizing sense of the necessity of a full preparation in view of the soon appearing of our Lord. Every one present seemed to have a duty to do, and a determination to do it; the time was fully occupied until half past 12.

One o'clock P. M. Sermon by Bro. Hanscomb, from Rom. 12: 1;—"I beseech you therefore, brethren, by the mercies of God, that ye present your bodies a living sacrifice, holy, acceptable unto God, which is your reasonable service." Subject—holiness of heart. Bro. H. showed to us that his earnestness and zeal in the cause knows no abatement. At six o'clock P. M., Bro. H. instructed and interested us with remarks from 1 Cor. 15: 44, 48;—"There is a natural body, and there is a spiritual body. . . . As is the earthy, such are they also that are earthy; and as is the heavenly, such are they also that are heavenly."

Sunday, 27th, 9 1-2 A. M. A short time was occupied by brethren and sisters in thanking the Lord and expressing their determination to continue faithful to the end. Bro. Stratton has by no means remained a silent spectator during these meetings, but has frequently instructed and encouraged us by timely and appropriate remarks. A brother and sister, who had of late been apparently somewhat entangled in the satanic evils of modern Spiritualism, publicly acknowledged a renewal of their faith in the Lord, and determination to continue faithful unto the end. May the Lord give them grace to withstand the evil temptations with which we are surrounded in these last days.

Half past 10 A. M. Sermon by Bro. Hanscomb, from Matt. 24: 44;—"Therefore be ye also ready; for in such an hour as ye think not, the Son of man cometh." Subject—the final redemption of Israel. The house was filled to its utmost capacity with candid and attentive listeners, and Bro. H. had great liberty and freedom in presenting the word.

Before the commencement of the afternoon services, a few minutes were occupied in giving expression to the question of dividing the Maine Central Quarterly Conference; the subject being now before the Maine Conference. The President being absent, Bro. Howard was requested to serve for the time being,—there being such union of feeling and harmony of sentiment with the brethren present, that no one was found to say, divide; the expression was therefore unanimous in the negative. The Clerk was requested to furnish a report of this conference to the Crisis for publication. Agreed that when we close, we do so to come together again at the call of the Clerk.

One o'clock P. M. Preaching by Eld. Howard, from Jer. 30: 7;—"Alas! for that day is great, so that none is like it: it is even the time of Jacob's trouble, but he shall be saved out of it." Bro. H. made his subject plain, and clearly showed that we needed something more than rappings, table tippings, or the croakings of the frog spirits, to keep us in the truth in these last days. It was listened to with much candor, and we felt thankful that the word had been recorded for our instruction. The brethren and friends show by their practise that their love of truth and their desire to bear each other's burdens reached down into their pockets, and they appeared to feel that it was more blessed to give than to receive.

Six o'clock P. M. Sermon by Eld. Hanscomb, from Luke 14: 15;—"Blessed is he that shall eat bread in the kingdom of God." Many of us felt that the best of the wine had been kept for the last of the feast.

We closed these meetings and parted with our brethren and friends at Cornville, with gratitude to them for their kindness to us in making us feel that their homes were our homes for the time being. May the Lord reward them, and gather them and us with his jewels. D. W. Griffin, Clerk.

For the World's Crisis.

TRADITION.

Bro. Grant:—Our Savior said to the Jews, "Ye have made void the Law by your traditions." Is it not strange indeed, that men of good minds, with the word of God in their hands, should make void the gospel in the same manner?

On my tour to Pennsylvania, I called at Elmira, on Bro. T. F., a member of the Baptist church in that place, and was received with great kindness (and, by the way, he is not exactly sound, as a Baptist). In our conversation, he spoke of a certain lady in the place, who was a subject of deep anxiety to him and some others, for she being deeply concerned for the salvation of her soul had applied to the Rev. Mr. B——, of the Congregational church for baptism. But he would immerse only on the condition that she had rather have him do it than any other man. She told him her mind did not incline her to a choice in the administration, so much as in the mode of performance. So he could not immerse her, and she utterly refused to be sprinkled.

Her case was made known to two Baptist clergymen of the place. They were very ready to baptize her, if she would by the act be baptized into the Baptist church. This she was not inclined to do. So, one of them said, for him to baptize her would look too much like doing Mr. B.'s dirty work for him. How elevated must have been his conception of the authority of our blessed Lord in the commission (Matt. 28: 19–21,) when calling the obedience of Christ the "dirty work of Mr. B."

O! poor old "tradition," what a blighting curse follows in thy path, not only in the Levitical dispensation but also in the gospel as well.

But to return to the subject. Bro. F., after stating the case, asked me if I had any objection to baptizing her. I said, "No, if she wishes from the heart to obey God." He said, "We will go and see her." We went. She received us gladly. We made our business known, and I found her not only intelligent but enlightened, and her heart filled with the love and fear of God. I stated to her that if she desired me to baptize her, I would do it then, (it was a very cold day and the anchor ice was running in the river,) or if she preferred, I would do it in three or four weeks, on my return from Pennsylvania. "No!" she said, "delays are dangerous." "We will be ready," said Bro. F., "in about an hour or so." Her face flushed, she seemed filled with joy, and thanked Bro. F. for his interest in her eternal well-being. He was overcome by this, and they both wept,—and I now weep as I write the facts.

At the time appointed by Bro. F., we called again. Her kind husband (who is not a professor) took her to the river, some ten being present, and she was buried in the likeness of the death of our holy Redeemer, and thus took upon her his name, being made an heir of his inheritance in the covenant of life eternal.

I left for my appointment, and called to see her on my return, some three weeks after, and found her rejoicing in the peace and love of God.

Did I do the "dirty work" of Mr. B. in thus working for God? If so, I am glad. Yes, if so, I am glad. Bless the Lord!

C. F. Sweet.

Hygiene.

"This is for your health."—Paul.

For the World's Crisis.

DAMP BEDS.

A kind word to our Marthas and Marys about damp beds. I have traveled very extensively, and have received the greatest kindness and hospitality everywhere; and the only thing I have to complain of, is damp beds. I have generally been put into the best beds the house afforded. But they were "spare beds," not often used, and it is well known that bedclothes gather dampness by lying a long time unused, and they frequently feel wet as well as cold.

During last winter, after a hard day's work, on a Sunday, I was invited by a good brother to spend the night with him. I did so, and spent a very pleasant evening with his family. When I retired, I was shown into a large, well-finished and well-furnished chamber, with a very nice live geese feather-bed, neat white counterpane covering, but not sufficient clothing. When I got in between those nice, fine sheets, they seemed like ice sheets. I lay and trembled with cold all night without any sleep; and in the morning I felt about sick; and it seems almost a miracle that I did not get my death by it. None but the strongest constitutions could have endured it.

This is only one case out of many, I might relate. Now this family meant to treat me with all the hospitality of friends; yet were thoughtless in relation to the state of the bed.

Let our Marthas and Marys remember, when they receive a guest, that very much of his comfort depends on the state of their bed. A very little pains to warm the sheets, or to put a hot freestone, or brick, or flat-iron, into the bed a few minutes before retiring, will make the bed comfortable. A word to the wise is sufficient. My good sisters will excuse this gentle hint, and profit by it.

B. Spaulding.

PURE AIR.

The air cells in the lungs are covered on one side by minute arteries, spread over them somewhat like the spreading of a trained grape vine on a wall, and terminate in veins which are spread out on the other side of the cell in a similar manner, and, like sap, running from the extremities of the branches of a tree towards its trunk and roots, so these minute veins, all terminating in one, empty into the heart. The whole volume of blood in this manner passes through these small capillary vessels in the lungs once every four or five minutes. The delicate membrane of which the walls of the cell consist, is all that separates the blood in lung capillaries from the air in the lung cells; and a part of the oxygen of the air passes through this membrane into the blood, and the carbonic acid and other impurities pass from the blood through this membrane into the air in the cells to be sent out in the out-going breath. This process is called the aeration of the blood. It will be seen that the whole of the blood is thus aerated once every four or five minutes, and requires, for this purpose, a cubic foot of fresh air.

Every breath of air taken into the lungs, supposing the air to be pure, loses one-fourth of its oxygen by passing into the blood, and receives as much carbonic acid in lieu of it, besides much moisture loaded with other impurities. The presence of the newly acquired oxygen in the blood makes it red, and gives life and animation to the whole being. The presence of carbon and the want of oxygen make the blood dark, called venous blood, and induces stupor, coma, and, eventually, death. If a person were confined in a tight room, cut off from all supplies of fresh air, his death would take place as soon as he should have breathed all the air in his room four times over.

If we are confined to an atmosphere which contains noxious gases, smoke or other injurious impurities, the lungs are very loth to expand and admit such air; and if we are long confined to such air the lungs become permanently contracted, weakened, and more or less shriveled up, unless we regularly and forcibly expand them by a well devised system of vocal gymnastics, or breathing exercises.

You cannot help exclaiming what a horrid sin it must be, to shut ourselves up in tight rooms, with, perhaps, lights and air-tight stoves, besides our lungs, to consume the air, shutting out the breath of heaven, the indispensable and profusely bestowed source of all life!—Herald of Health.

HOUSEKEEPING HINTS.

Health is impaired, and even life lost sometimes, by using imperfect, unripe, musty, or decaying articles of food. The same money's worth of a smaller amount of good is more nutritious, more healthful, and more invigorating than a much larger amount of what is of an inferior quality. Therefore, get good food, and keep it good until used. Remmeber that fresh meats should be kept in a cool place, but not freezing or in actual contact with ice.

Flour and meal should be kept in a cool, dry place, with a space of an inch or more between the floor and the bottom of the barrel.

Havana sugar is seldom clean, hence not so good as that from Brazil, Porto Rico, and Santa Cruz. Loaf, crushed, and granulated sugars have more sweetness, and go further than brown.

Butter for winter use should be made in mid-autumn.

Cheese soft between fingers is richest and best. Keep it tied in a bag hung in a cool, dry place. Wipe off the mould with a dry cloth.

Rice, large, clean, and fresh-looking is best.

Sago, small and white, called "Pearl," is best.

Apples, oranges and lemons keep longest wrapped close in paper, and kept in a cool, dry place. Thaw frozen apples in cold water. —Bread and cake should be kept in a dry, cool place, in a wooden box, aired in the sun every day or two.

All strong-odored food should be kept by itself, where it cannot scent the house.

Bar-soap should be piled up with spaces between them in a dry cellar, having the air all around it to dry it for months before using; the drier, the less waste.

Cranberries kept covered with water will keep for months in a cellar.

Potatoes spread over a dry floor will not sprout. If they do, cut off the sprouts often. If frozen, thaw them in hot water, and cook at once. By peeling off the skin after they are cooked, the most nutritious and healthful part is saved.

Corned beef should be put in boiling water, and boil steadily for several hours.

Hominy or "samp" should steep in warm water all night, and boil all next day in an earthen jar surrounded with water.

Spices and peppers should be ground fine, and kept in tin cans in a dry place. A good nutmeg "bleeds" at the puncture of a pin. Cayenne pepper is better for all purposes of health than black.

Beans, white, are the cheapest and most nutritious of all articles of food in this country.

The best mealy potatoes sink in strong salt water.

Warm drinks are best at meals; the less of any fluid the better. Any thing cold arrests digestion on the instant.

It is hurtful and is a wicked waste of food to eat without an appetite.

All meats should be cut up as fine as a pea, more especially for children. The same amount of stomach-power expended on such a small amount of food, as to be digested perfectly without its being felt to be a labor, namely, without any appreciable discomfort in any part of the body, gives more nutriment, strength and vigor to the system, than upon a larger amount, which is felt to require an effort, giving nausea, fullness, acidity, wind, etc.

Milk, however fresh, pure and rich, if drank largely at each meal, say a glass or two, is generally hurtful to invalids and sedentary persons, as it tends to cause fever, constipation, or biliousness.

IS TOBACCO POISONOUS?

Some five years since a gentleman in Philadelphia, at the head of one of the most extensive banking houses in this country, literally died of starvation! He was an inveterate smoker, and seldom was without a cigar in his mouth, even during business hours. The habit, contracted in early life, led to the use of a cigar, whether lighted or not, permitting its moistenrd and chewed surface to remain under his tongue. This was pursued for years, and it resulted in impregnating the glands beneath the tongue, which terminated in cancerous ulcerations. At first it was not regarded with any anxiety, but inflammation was an attendant evil, and the immediate cause of death. The roots of the tongue ulcerated, and the throat sympathized with them, until it was almost impossible to swallow or breathe. The only nourishment taken for some months previous to his death was of a liquid character; even that at last could not be received, so swollen and inflamed was the seat of the disorder. Death from starvation and suffocation finally closed the scene, the victim being otherwise in perfect health, except greatly emaciated.—N. Y. Observer.

HOW TO SAVE YOUR TEETH.

Mr. Beecher, who is something of a physiologist, as well as a theologist, farmer, editor, author, lecturer, and reformer generally, says: "Our teeth decay. Hence unseemly mouths, bad breath, imperfect mastication. Everybody regrets it. What is the cause? It is the cause? It is want of cleanliness. A clean tooth never decays. The mouth is a warm place—ninety-eight degrees. Particles of meat between the teeth decompose. Gums and teeth must suffer. Cleanliness will preserve the teeth to old age. Use a quill-pick, and rinse the mouth after eating. Brush and Castile soap every morning; the brush with pure water on retiring. Bestow this trifling care upon your precious teeth, you will keep them and ruin the dentists. Neglect it, and you will be sorry all your lives. Children forget. Watch them. The first teeth determine the character of the second set. Give them equal care.

Sugars, acids, hot drinks, saleratus, are nothing compared with food decomposing between the teeth. Mercury may loosen the teeth, use may wear them out, but keep them clean and they will never decay. This advice is worth more than thousands of dollars to every boy and girl. Books have been wrtten on this subject. This brief article contains all that is essential.

Influence of Tobacco on the Brain.—Mr. Solly, the eminent writer on the brain, says, in a late clinical lecture on that frightful and formidable malady, softening of the brain: "I would caution you, as students, against excess in the use of tobacco, and I would advise you to disabuse your patients' minds of the idea that it is harmless. I have had a large experience of brain disease, and I am satisfied now that smoking is a most noxious habit. I know of no other cause or agent that tends so much to bring on functional disease, and through this, in the end, to lead to organic diseases of the brain, as excessive use of tobacco."

☞ If a man during fifty years chews every day two inches of solid plug tobacco (and millions do it) it will amount at the end of that time to nine thousand three hundred and sixty-six feet, or a mile and a quarter of tobacco, half an inch thick and two inches broad, and will cost $1.500. The quids would make a huge pile, forming a heap the size of a haystack.

The World's Crisis

AND SECOND ADVENT MESSENGER.

TERMS:

A single copy, one year	$2.00
A single copy, six months	1.00
A single copy, three months	.50
5 copies, six months, when sent to one address	4.50
10 copies, six months, when sent to one address	8.00
20 copies, six months, when sent to one address	15.00
30 copies, six months, when sent to one address	22.00

PAYABLE IN ADVANCE.

These terms, allowing a subscription of 50 cents for three months, place the paper within reach of all who are able to pay any thing. The reduction in price, where five or more papers are sent to one address, enables subscribers, by combining, to receive a large number at reduced rates; thus supplying the poor in their neighborhood.

We propose that those who have ability, when sending their own subscriptions, also send what they are willing to give to aid in circulating the Crisis among the poor who we have always with us.

Postage.—The postage, in the United States, on each single copy of the Crisis, is 20 cents a year, payable quarterly, in advance, at the office of delivery.

Rules for Correspondents.—Over all matters not intended for publication, write Private.

Over all business matters, write Business.

Over all articles for the paper, write For the Crisis.

All articles should be accompanied by the writer's name, for the Editor's information, even if it is not published.

When the names of new subscribers are sent, please say they are new, and it will save us much labor.

Private Letters.—Those wishing to address the Editor on matters not connected with the office, will please write the word Private on the outside of the envelope.

Please put the business matters and appointments on a piece of paper separate from other communications.

All persons writing to the office should give distinctly and plainly the Post Office, County and State at which they wish to be addressed; and all orders, subscriptions, communications and remittances, should be plainly directed to MILES GRANT, Boston, Mass.

PUBLISHED ALSO AT THE SAME OFFICE,

THE YOUNG PILGRIM,

A NEW ILLUSTRATED SUNDAY SCHOOL PAPER,

DEVOTED TO

The Interests of our Children and Youth.

TERMS:

For a single copy, 25 cents a year; and at the same rate for any number of copies under ten.

10 copies, when sent to one address	$2.00
20 copies, when sent to one address	3.80
30 copies, when sent to one address	5.40
40 copies, when sent to one address	6.80
50 copies, when sent to one address	8.00
100 copies, when sent to one address	15.00

PAYABLE ALWAYS IN ADVANCE.

Postage—(12 cents a year, for every single copy, and the same for every 10 copies or less to one address) must be paid quarterly in advance, at the office where the paper is received.

All communications and remittances should be addressed to THE YOUNG PILGRIM, Crisis Box, Boston, Mass.

The World's Crisis

AND SECOND ADVENT MESSENGER.

"BEHOLD, I COME QUICKLY; AND MY REWARD IS WITH ME."

WHOLE NO. 436. BOSTON, TUESDAY, FEBRUARY 9, 1864. VOL. XVIII.—NO. 21.

The World's Crisis
AND SECOND ADVENT MESSENGER,
Issued every Tuesday Afternoon, at
167 HANOVER STREET, BOSTON.

MILES GRANT, EDITOR.

EDITORIAL COMMITTEE:
H. L. HASTINGS, D. T. TAYLOR,
H. F. CARPENTER.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEE:
H. V. DAVIS, S. S. BREWER,
A. ROSS, J. G. HAMBLIN,
SOLOMON HOVEY.

GEO. T. ADAMS, TREASURER.

☞ THE CRISIS is devoted to the exposition of all Bible truth; especially the doctrine of the immediate, personal coming and reign of Christ on the earth; holiness of heart; the unconscious state of the dead; their literal resurrection, and the final destruction of the wicked.

For the World's Crisis.

STAND FOR TRUTH.

Stand for truth, and stand forever!
Give not up the right—no, never!
Bravely battle if assailed,
Think how Right has oft prevailed.

Stand alone, if others cower;
Fail not in the trial hour;
Yet the victory will be
On the side of truth and thee.

O! the brave, the firm, the wise,
Here alone true manhood lies;
Men who stand when thunders rattle,
Quitting not till after battle.

Welcome, welcome, hate and scorn,
Ye are of foul envy born;
Rail and rage, O graceless band,
Still the firmer will we stand.

Dearer far the sense of RIGHT
Than the smiles of power and might:
Yes, we'll stand for TRUTH forever,
Yielding to the foeman never.

Canada East. MARIA MATHEWS.

For the World's Crisis.

THE NEW HEAVENS AND THE NEW EARTH: KTISIS.

(A Review of Dr. Hawley. See last Crisis.)

BY D. T. TAYLOR.

19. "For the earnest expectation of the creature (tees ktiseos) waiteth for the manifestation of the sons of God.
20. "For the creature (he ktisis) was made subject to vanity, not willingly, but by reason of him who hath subjected the same in hope;
21. "Because the creature (he ktisis) itself also shall be delivered from the bondage of corruption into the glorious liberty of the children of God.
22. "For we know that the whole creation (pasa he ktisis) groaneth and travaileth in pain together until now.
23. "And not only they, but ourselves also, which have the first-fruits of the Spirit, even we ourselves groan within ourselves, waiting for the adoption, to wit, the redemption of our body." (Received Version of Rom. 8: 19–23.)

The word Ktisis in the above passage has attracted no little attention from the critics and commentators of the whole christian church. Learned men have long and earnestly sought to know the meaning of the Holy Spirit in the apostle. Dr. Hawley appears in his own mind to arrive at a quick conclusion respecting its meaning, but the passage is not so easily disposed of. Professor Stuart, in the Biblical Repository, Vol. 1., p. 363, and in his Commentary on the Epistle to the Romans, enumerates eleven different significations which have been attached to the word. To name is to refute the majority of them. For instance, Origen held it meant "the soul of the planets." Again it is referred to "angels" either good or bad. By others to "Adam and Eve." Such puerilities as these, and others, viz: that it denotes "the souls of believers," and again "their bodies," we need not spend time in answering. Some held it denotes Christians in general: this opinion is upheld by Dr. Barnes, and is partially endorsed by our writer, who adds to it "all intelligent creatures, or all men." This opinion is in reality entitled to but little consideration, for it is admitted the sense of the word in each verse should be uniform, and the apostle in verses 19, 22, 23 carefully distinguishes the ktisis from the sons of God for whose manifestation he represents it as waiting, and by the word "also," in verses 21, 23, obviously makes them to be one thing, and the ktisis another. This is so plain that the dullest mind can apprehend it. A two-fold subjection to vanity and bondage is taught, as also a two-fold deliverance from the same; first, of the church, second, of the ktisis or creation. Neither does it help this conclusion of Barnes by supposing the clause "We who have the first-fruits of the Spirit" to mean not christians in general, but the apostles alone who were endowed with miraculous powers. This idea is far fetched, and the context excludes it. So does Rom. 16: 5, 1 Cor. 16: 15, and James 1: 18. The whole one hundred and twenty disciples at Pentecost, laymen and women, as well as the apostles, were baptized with the Spirit and experienced its first-fruits.

There are in reality but three views ever proposed that are worth considering, viz:

1. That ktisis here refers to unconverted men, Jews and Gentiles, as distinct from the church.

2. It means mankind in general, all men; or

3. It denotes the irrational and more particularly the material and terrestrial creation, the earth or globe itself. Dr. Hawley, if I understand him (and he is not clear), appears to refer it to the whole world of intelligences, separately and collectively, good and bad, Christians and all men. The Dr. is far from being an Universalist, yet his premises and conclusions inevitably lead him into that school of reasoners. For if the creature means man, separately, severally, and totally, I have read Paul in vain if he does not teach that "it" or "they" shall be delivered into the uncorrupt and glorified liberty of the church of the Redeemer. Such a conclusion may well cause him to pause in his argumentation and carefully review his own ground. His view is in fact "simply absurd." The view of a material creation waiting and groaning with a promise of a removal of the curse involves less absurdity in my humble opinion.

The first opinion, i. e., that the term means unconverted men, involves a contrast between ktisis and the persons denoted by "we" and "we ourselves." Now there is no contrast drawn by the apostle. He only states one thing of one party, and then advances to specify the same thing of another party: "And not only they (or it), but we ourselves," etc. The view is consequently a forced one. Furthermore, to specify the unconverted as subject to frailty, omits to say the same thing of the rest of mankind, who are equally so, and is writing without reason. I dismiss this view as unsound and tending to Universalism. The great body of sound critics are divided between the two remaining opinions. In favor of the former of the two it is argued, from the general usage of the word ktisis, from the feelings of mankind generally, and from the supposed internal argument of the apostle, that it refers to the universal yearning for something better by the whole race of men. Lightfoot, Locke, Whitby, Macknight, Stuart and others support this view of the passage.

To help our readers to judge for themselves on the usus loquendi of the word in the New Testament, I here present from the Greek Concordance every text in which it is found, the term in English being italicized.

1. Mark 10: 6. But from the beginning of the creation God made.
2. Mark 13: 19. From the beginning of the creation which God created.
3. Mark 16: 15. And preach the gospel to every creature.
4. Rom. 1: 20. From the creation of the world are clearly.
5. Rom. 1: 25. And served the creature more than the Creator.
6. Rom. 8: 19. Expectation of the creature waiteth.
7. Rom. 8: 20. For the creature was made subject.
8. Rom. 8: 21. The creature itself also shall be delivered.
9. Rom. 8: 22. The whole creation groaneth and.
10. Rom. 8: 39. Nor any other creature shall be able.
11. 2 Cor. 5: 17. Be in Christ, he is a new creature.
12. Gal. 6: 15. But a new creature.
13. Col. 1: 15. The first-born of every creature.
14. Col. 1: 23. Was preached to every creature.
15. Heb. 4: 13. Neither is there any creature that is.
16. Heb. 9: 11. That is to say, not of this building.
17. 1 Pet. 2: 13. To every ordinance of man for the.
18. 2 Pet. 3: 4. From the beginning of the creation.
19. Rev. 3: 14. The beginning of the creation of God.

I will also add that the verb ktizo is once rendered Creator in Rom. 1: 25; once rendered make in Eph. 2: 15; and eleven times rendered created, in the following texts, viz: Mark 13: 19; 1 Cor. 11: 9; Eph. 2: 10; 3: 9, and 4: 24; Col. 1: 16, and 3: 10; 1 Tim. 4: 3; Rev. 4: 11, and 10: 16.

Ktisma is rendered creature and creatures in each place where it occurs, viz: 1 Tim. 4: 4; James 1: 18; Rev. 5: 13, and 8: 9.

Ktistees is found but once, in 1 Pet. 4: 9, where it is translated Creator. These are all the usages of the word and its variations in the Greek Testament.

It is well known that King James' version of the Scriptures is greatly lacking in proper uniformity. Now I appeal to any Greek scholar if ktisis, in the nineteen passages where it occurs, can not be more uniformly translated creation without doing the least violence to the text? Texts numbered 5, 6, 7, 8, 10, 16, 17, could be fairly thus rendered, indeed should be in the name of common sense. This done, thirteen out of nineteen occurrences of ktisis would be rendered creation, and the usus loquendi, or general usage of the word, be against applying it to the creature man. Indeed, in my opinion there are still other places where it might be rendered creation by every sound law of sacred hermeneutics, but I forbear to allude to them, having developed a sufficient number to answer my purpose. Both the verb and its substantive in the classics refer to things as well as men; to material cities and lands as well as to their intelligent inhabitants; and the first meaning of ktisis, according to Parkhurst, Robinson, Greenfield, and the lexicographers generally, is creation or created things. (See Lex.) I am not a master of the Greek, but I see no reason why pasee tee ktisei in Mark 16: 15 and Col. 1: 23 cannot be as well rendered "in all the creation," or, "in the whole creation." In my opinion Mark and Paul never penned the sentiment attributed to them by our received version. My view of the passages solves an inexplicable mystery which has long hung over them, baffling all the wisdom of the learned, and helping to create infidels. For the gospel, in A. D. 64, had not been preached to every man in the world, although it might be true it had been proclaimed in all the known and habitable globe in a general sense. I invite criticism on the point. Render ktisis creation in these two passages, and there remain but four passages out of nineteen where it may be referred to human intelligences.

Various translations aid and confirm these conclusions. Dr. Murdock renders Mark 16: 15, from the Syriac, "in the whole creation," and Col. 1: 23, "in all the creation beneath heaven." Rom. 1: 20 he renders "in the things he created," and verse 25, "the created things." The passage under consideration is uniformly translated creation, save verse 22, which is "all the creatures." Eph. 6: 15 is made "a new creation," and Heb. 9: 11 "these created things"; and he renders the Syriac word "creature" only four times.

Wakefield (one of the best translators), with Murdock, gives the passage I am considering the uniform rendering of creation, and refusing to put a lie in Paul's mouth, by making him say the gospel had been preached to every human soul on earth in the short space of thirty years, from A. D. 34 to A. D. 64, he very sensibly gives pasa tee ktisis, which is exactly as it occurs in Mark 16: 15, Rom. 8: 22, and Col. 1: 23, one and the same rendering, viz: "in the whole creation.' Sawyer, in his translation, does the same. I could add others, but having exhibited sufficient learned authority to clear my views of the charge of novelty or innovation in forming new translations, it is useless to produce any others. It might be well also to observe here that the verb ktizo in Rom. 1: 25 (see and compare verse 23,), Eph. 3: 9; Col. 1: 16 (twice used); Rev. 4: 11; (twice used) and Rev. 10: 16, is in every instance referred not to rational or intelligent persons, but to inanimate and material things. So too with ktisma, in the four places where it is found, but two (James 1: 18 and Rev. 5: 13), refers to man; the others refer the word to irrational creatures, creatures in the sea and earth, such as brute beasts, etc.

It is therefore conclusively and overwhelmingly proved that while the term in some instances relates to men, the general usage of ktisis denotes not mankind, but the irrational and material created things, the earth, globe, or terrene world itself, and its brute creation and inanimate furniture. And the exact corresponding words in Mark and Colossians used by our opponents to prove that the pasa tee ktisis in Rom. 8: 22 means the whole race of mankind are fairly and without violence wrested from them and made to support our own view. And the argument supposed to be derived from the feelings of men is at once disposed of, when it is shown that ktisis in the passage I am considering does not refer to mankind at all. Let the truth abide, if every darling theory is swept away.

Some will contend that our evidences compel us to make Paul in the passage teach a redemption and resurrection of all the brute beasts. John Wesley thus argued. But this is by no means the result of my conclusions. It is seen that ktisis has its separate special application; first, to the earth, as in Mark 16: 15; Rom. 1: 20; second, to mankind, as in Gal. 6: 15; and third, to the irrational creatures or brutes, as in Rom. 1: 25 compared with verse 23. Consequently, while the earth and all things in it feel the effects of the curse, the result of man's disobedience, and even beasts are represented as groaning (Joel 1: 18) under it, we are not forced to suppose the apostle in verse 21 must necessarily include the beasts as among the ktisis or created things that shall, when the sons of God are manifested, be delivered from corruption into the incorruptible glory of the church of Christ. Beasts are not moral agents, and have nowhere any promise of salvation through Christ, but are described as utterly perishing. Ps. 49: 12; Ezek. 34; 25; 2 Pet. 2: 12. If all the beasts and other creatures that have lived on earth were brought into the new earth, they would actually crowd out the saints and leave them no room. The very idea is chimerical. Beasts, birds and fishes may indeed be there, as they were in the first paradise; not resurrected, but newly created.

I would here also notice that the italicized word they in verse 23 is not found in the original. Wiclif, Cranmer and Rheims' Bibles supply the pronoun "it." The supplied word should be it in the neuter gender, so making the sense correspond with creation itself in verse 21, which word is also supplied. The idea of a plurality, as of men or beasts, finds here no warrant. The earth in the aggregate, with its material furniture, is only included in the term.

Our view is further supported by the internal evidence and construction of this remarkable passage. The apostle makes a clear distinction between the ktisis and men, or christians. In verses 18, 19, the ktisis is one thing, and the "us" or "sons of God" another and different subject. In verse 21 the ktisis itself is first named, then the "children of God" referred to, with a most obvious distinction between the two. And in verse 23 the sentence "not only (the ktisis) but ourselves also," marks the difference as plainly as that twice one makes two. The fact is, the apostle was simply writing about two grand subjects, viz., the saints, and their inheritance, each now under the curse, and both alike groaning and travailing for the glad era of the two-fold redemption. The words "travaileth in pain together" (sunodino) are very striking and significant. The Greek is composed of two words, viz., sun, with, and odino, to travail in birth. Frequently the ktisis is said to groan with the pains and throes of a woman in the pangs of childbirth. Consequently creation's groans are not the presages of death, but of birth. The sense accords well with the predicted epoch of the palingenesia, or re-generation, described in Matt. 19: 28, as occurring "when the Son of Man shall sit in the throne of his glory." Creation having had one genesis, one birth, is to have a second genesis and be born anew. This new ktisis will form the new heavens and the new earth.

The mataiotees, or "vanity" (verse 20), to which the ktisis was made subject, is defined by lexicographers and translators as meaning frailty, a vanishing and flitting state, corruptibility; and the apostle himself refers to it as a bondage of corruption. The agency of its subjection, as indicated by the word "him," has been a matter of dispute. Locke supposes it to mean the devil. But the sense evidently refers it to Adam, on whose account or for whose sins the Creator cursed the earth. The received version of Gen. 3: 17 is somewhat awkward. De Sola, Lindenthal and Raphall's version renders it "cursed be the ground because of thee"; that is to say, on account of Adam's sin. This idea is carried out in Isa. 24: 6,—"Therefore (on account of sin) hath the curse devoured the earth," and in Hos. 4: 2–3,—"Therefore (for sin, see verse 2) shall the land mourn," etc.; also Jer. 12: 4,—"How long shall the land mourn, and the herbs of every field wither, for the wickedness of them that dwell therein?" It was specially the land, ground, or earth, that was cursed and reduced to a state of vanity and servitude on account of sin.

Thus regarded, a very serious difficulty is offered to Prof. Stuart's and Dr. Hawley's reading of ktisis; for if he who subjected the ktisis be man, the ktisis subjected must, it should seem, be something else than man, the inanimate creation at least. But all is not irretrievably and forever lost. "For the creation was subjected to vanity, not by its own choice, but because of him who subjected it, in the HOPE, that also the creation itself would be emancipated from the bondage of corruption, into the liberty of the glory of the sons of God."—Murdock's Syriac. There is hope then for our ruined planet, that it shall yet take its place among the sister planets restored, beautified, blest, and adorned by its Maker, a fit abode for the Bridegroom and his Bride. In the light of our view how sublime are the apostle's words. How tame and insignificant the others we have examined compared to it!

This view of Rom. 8: 19–23 was held and supported by Chrysostom, Theodoret, and many others in the early church; Erasmus, Grotius, Luther, and other Reformers; Charnock, Joseph Benson, Owen, John Wesley, Bishop Horne, Andrew Fuller, Koppe, Rosenmuller; and later still by Flatt, Scott, Hodge, Tholuck, Chalmers, Cumming, and a multitude of others. It is but fair to state that many of these eminent divines regarded the passage as teaching the redemption of the beasts and other irrational creatures, a conclusion I have avoided.

But to all this view of the material creation, "unwillingly subjected to vanity," "groaning and travailing" and "waiting" in "earnest expectation" for deliverance at the resurrection era, Dr. Hawley has but one answer, namely, "which things are simply absurd"! Strange that he or any other learned man should overlook the splendid figure used by the apostle in this sublime passage, and which lies on the face of the words I have italicized. This figure is the prosopopœia, an intense form of personification "by which things are (says Webster) represented as persons, or by which things inanimate are spoken of as animate beings, or by which an absent person is introduced as speaking, or a deceased person is represented as alive and present." (And right here I will inform my Advent brethren that this trope, the prosopopœia, is the key used by Bishop Lowth—than whom no one understood Hebrew poetry better—to unlock the meaning of the parable in Isa. 14: 4–16, and which I use to unlock the meaning of another parable in Luke 16: 19–31.) This figure abounds in the Scriptures as applied to inanimate nature, which is constantly represented by it as sympathizing in the fall and restoration of man. Witness the following, viz:—

"The earth mourneth and fadeth away, the world languisheth and fadeth away."—Isa. 24: 4.

"Because of swearing the land mourneth." Jer. 23: 10.

"For this shall the earth mourn and the heavens above be black.'—Jer. 4: 28; and Jer. 12: 4.

"How do the beasts groan."—Joel 1: 18.

"These all wait upon thee"; i. e., birds, fish, beasts, etc. Ps. 104: 27. See and read verses 28–30, where their re-creation is possibly hinted at.

"The little hills rejoice on every side: the pastures shout for joy, they also sing."—Ps. 65: 12, 13.

"Then shall the trees of the wood sing out at the presence of the Lord, because he cometh to judge the earth."—1 Chron. 16: 33.

"Sing, O ye heavens, for the Lord hath done it: shout, ye lower parts of the earth; break forth into singing, ye mountains, O forest and every tree therein; for the Lord hath redeemed Jacob, and glorified himself in Israel."—Isa. 45: 23. See also 49: 13, and 55: 12.

"Let the heavens rejoice and let the earth be glad; let the sea roar, and the fullness thereof. Let the field be joyful, and all that is therein: then shall all the trees of the wood rejoice before the Lord: for he cometh, for he cometh to judge the earth; he shall judge the world with righteousness and the people with his truth."—Ps. 96: 11–13 and 98: 7–9.

The whole of Isaiah's thirty-fifth chapter is also in harmony with this exultant strain. So too Milton represents the earth as "groaning and sighing in all her entrails" at the fall of man; and again Cowper declares "nature with a dim and sickly eye to wait the close of all"; and again, "The groans of nature in this nether world, which heaven has heard for ages, have an end." And Robert Hall carries out this trope in his eloquent funeral sermon on the death of Princess Charlotte; when speaking of the loss of a single soul he says, "Were the whole fabric of nature to become animated and vocal, would it be possible for her to utter a groan too deep, or a cry too piercing to express the magnitude and extent of such a catastrophe?"

I here present several excellent comments which are strikingly apropos to the subject. Says Chrysostom in his Homily on Romans: "The apostle makes a living person of the creature here, and declares that it groans; not because he heard any groan from earth or heaven, but that he might show the exceeding greatness of the good things to come, and the desire of freedom from the ills which now pervade them." To which Dr. Bonar adds, "The groaning of creation, therefore, is not the synonym for anguish,—for the groaning is to be connected with the travailing and the earnest expectation,—it is the emblem of hope; it is not the precursor of death, but the herald of birth; it is not the plaintive cry of wretchedness, but the full longing of intense desire." And Stephen Charnock asks, "How could the creature—the world or any part of it—be said to be delivered from the bondage of corruption into the glorious liberty of the sons of God, if the whole frame of heaven and earth were to be annihilated? The waiting would have no foundation if the whole frame should be reduced to nothing. What joyful expectation can there be, in any, of a total ruin? * * * As when a prince's nuptials are solemnized, the whole country echoes with joy, so the inanimate creatures, when the time of the marriage of the Lamb is come, shall have a delight and pleasure from that renovation. The apostle sets forth the whole world as a person groaning, and the Scriptures are frequent in such metaphors, as when the creatures are said to wait upon God and to be troubled; the hills are said to leap and the mountains rejoice. The creature is said to groan, as the heavens are said to declare the glory of God, passively, naturally, —not rationally." And referring to Ps. 96: 12–13, he quotes the terse and truthful remark of Daille on the passage, that "it would seem to be an impertinent figure, if the Judge of the world brought nature there described to a total destruction." And surely, how could the Psalmist bid them rejoice, if when the Judge appears the earth is to be annihilated, as Vinet, Howe, Doddridge, Hopkins and Dwight imagined?

I have nearly done. Dr. H. is, I think, answered and refuted,—sufficiently, and overwhelmingly. Knowing how little value he attaches to traditional testimony as embodied in a list of human names and erudite authorities, I have in addition to these presented translations, criticisms, originals, evidence and argument. But I cannot forbear to add that his position arrays against him the almost unanimous voice of primitive Methodism from which his views are a plain departure. For in the faith of our earth's renovation and possession by the just—in a literal sense—for a thousand years or forever, I am fortified and sustained by Fletcher, Taylor, Benson, Toplady, John and Charles Wesley, and Dr. Clarke, names not to be despised by modern Methodists. The "Father of Methodism" had an anxious eye to the doctrines and system of interpretation of his children (Sermon on 2 Cor. 2: 17, and Notes on 2 Tim. 4: 2–5). O that some Elijah would appear and complete the work by "turning the hearts of the children to the fathers"!

From the abundance of "may be's" (not less than ten) used by Dr. Hawley, I have, as already hinted, judged him to be uncertain on the question at issue. It "may be" he has thought before he studied, and wrote before he thought, and will yet see his way clearly to the blessed doctrines of the pre-millennial advent of our Lord and the true inheritance of the saints in light.

Meanwhile we, who like lawyers have fretted over the evidence, will, as they do, shake hands as the case goes to the jury; "And if ever we are permitted," writes Bonar, "to walk along a holy Earth, in our robes of white,—singing our songs of praise, and waving the palms of triumph, how shall we wonder that we ever doubted that 'the MEEK shall inherit the EARTH'!"

For the World's Crisis.

HOLINESS OF HEART.—No. 2.

Holiness is God's great rule of right. God's love as is manifest in nature, revealed in his word, and should be imprinted on all our hearts. Holiness is the work of the Spirit of God wrought out in the hearts of christians. It is that purity of heart which makes man blind to the world and enables him to see his God. Such holiness is beautiful in its character, divine in its nature, and highly advantageous in its results.

All men are building. Some are building upon the sandy foundations of hay, wood and stubble. But these are of short duration and must be all swept to destruction. Some are building upon the only foundation laid in Zion. The floodgates of hell shall not remove them. Man is the temple of God in the process of erection.

Christians are God's building. Christ is their foundation. Holiness is the material that cements all together—the inside occupant, and when it enters it drives the devils out. We are the temple of God; and as good servants, we must keep it swept and garnished. O how many defile it. The fumes of tobacco befog, the fire-water burns, and this sin, and that sin disarms, disfigures and destroys his beauty and noble form, bringing him down to speedy ruin and degradation. But they who let the Spirit of God dwell in them, grow up in Christ their living head into a perfect christian manhood.

Such a character is built upon holiness, strengthened by knowledge, cultivated and improved by the intercourse of society, and benefitted and blessed by daily and divine communion with God. The life of Christ in its beginning, going on and ending, is looked upon by the impartial observer, regarded by the philosopher, and admired by the christian, as an example of spotless purity and a character rich in all the radiant beauty of holiness.

This is the Spirit, the power, the principle of holiness. This is the stream coming down from the fountain of life. We come to this. We drink. Our thirst is quenched. Holiness is the manna of God, the bread from heaven. We partake. We hunger no more. We feast forever.

The gospel opens this fountain of life, and lets down the bread from heaven. O! the grace and goodness of God reaching out after rebellious man. Thanks be to God! he gives us no stinted measure of holiness. The wells of salvation are full and free. 'Tis salvation, universal salvation, authorized by the Creator, presented by the Savior, confirmed by the apostle, carried forward by christians to regenerate mankind.

The Almighty never drafts. He forces no man to action. When he created man he gave him reason and conscience, judgment and will. Man had the ability to choose and the power to act. So made that he must choose, that he must act. The choice he makes, and the acts he performs are right or wrong. They result either in sin and misery, or in holiness and its consequent happiness, just in accordance to the direction he takes and the manner of his performance.

Life and death are set before every man. Sin is the broad way to death. Holiness is the narrow way to life. We are all traveling one of these ways. Let not sin reign in your mortal body. If it does we are taken captive by the devil at his well. Let righteousness reign in our hearts, and life, eternal life is ours.

A. A. LASON.

For the World's Crisis.

THE REST OF THE GRAVE.

How still and peaceful is the grave,
Where life's vain tumult's past;
The appointed house by Heaven's decree,
Receives us all at last.

The wicked there from troubling cease,
There passions rage no more;
And there the weary pilgrim rests
From all the toils he bore.

There servants, master, small and great,
Partake the same repose;
And there in peace the ashes mix
Of those who once were foes.

All, leveled by the hand of death,
Lie sleeping in the tomb,
Till God in judgment calls them forth
To meet their final doom.

Athol Depot Mass. HANNAH.

RESURRECTION OF THE DEAD.

That the dead shall rise again, is the universal belief of christians. As no historic fact was ever more invincibly established than the resurrection of our Divine Redeemer, so no article of our faith is more clear and indisputable than the doctrine of our rising again like him at our appointed time. It is hardly worth while, in this connection, to accumulate proofs and authorities to support what is so generally admitted and believed, and so clearly announced in the holy Scriptures.

Certainly, no one will deny that the raising of the dead lies entirely within the reach of divine power. No one will say that it is a thing impossible to omnipotence. It involves no contradiction. It is prohibited by no foregone law or necessity. It is not rendered impossible by incapacity in the decomposed bodies of the departed for reorganization. God knows each atom, and where it rests. Our substance was not hid from him when we were made in secret. His eye saw it yet being imperfect. All our members were written in his book when yet there was none of them. He has his number for every hair upon each head. Wherever the particles of these dissolving bodies may be scattered or lodged, they lie completely within his knowledge and power. And he who could at the first so attemper the vulgar dust as to constitute a man can also again recover these attempered particles and restore them to their places. If he can bring a new and glorious ear out of the rotting seed, he can also bring a spiritual body out of the corruptible one.

And as the resurrection of the dead is not a thing impossible, so it is not a thing improbable. Faint analogies of it may be traced in the ordinary changes and revolutions beheld in nature around us. Clement, the contemporary and friend of St. Paul, says, "The Lord does continually show us that there shall be a future resurrection. Day and night manifest it. The seed sown in the earth displays it." The day fades and dies. It is buried in sleep, silence and darkness. In the morning it revives, opens its grave of gloom, and rises from "the dead of night." The summer dies, and lies down in its wintry grave. The winds of heaven sigh and weep over it as if they would not be comforted. In the spring, life begins to work again in the buried roots and seeds; the plants and flowers burst out of their dark cerements; and every thing arrays itself in newness and glory. The sower goes forth and casts his seed upon the earth. It falls down dry and naked, and in time dissolves. But the great power of the providence of the Lord raises it again from that dissolution; and from the old seed new germs arise, and bring forth fruit. The caterpillar builds himself a tomb, and then lies down in it and dies. But out of the grave of the ugly worm comes forth the butterfly which sallies forth in the sunshine like a living flower. And so there are many things in nature that are repaired by corrupting, preserved by perishing, and revived by dying. And so we behold man, the lord of these things, dying like them, it is but a fair presumption that he will revive again hereafter as we see them revive.

But God has not left us in the school of nature, nor given us over to settle our persuasions upon mere likelihoods. In the glorious record of his word, he has put the doctrine of the resurrection of the dead beyond dispute. Distinct glimmerings of it may be found all through the Old Testament; and it is predicted in the New in language which no one can misunderstand. Paul says there were many saints before his day who "were tortured, not accepting deliverance, that they might obtain a better resurrection." He says that the Jews allowed "that there shall be a resurrection of the dead, both of the just and unjust." The heroic Maccabees hoped for it. The sisters of Lazarus consoled themselves by thinking of it as they lingered at their only brother's grave. Christ explicitly pointed to a coming period, when "they that are in the graves shall hear the voice of the Son of man, and come forth." The great apostle to the Gentiles argued it as a thing demonstrated by the resurrection of the crucified Savior. It was the great consolation of the noble army of the martyrs. And in every age of christianity it has been cherished as the glad hope by which the believer triumphs over the gloom of corporeal dissolution.

God has also added a seal to this doctrine which cannot be counterfeited. He has actually restored deceased persons to life again. When Elijah prayed for the resuscitation of the dead child of the widow of Sarepta, God heard him, "and the soul of the child came into him again, and he revived." Elisha, in his lifetime, received power to raise the young Shunamite; and the mere touch of his bones caused a dead man to revive and stand upon his feet. When the daughter of Jairus died, Jesus "said unto her, Talitha cumi, and her spirit came again, and straightway the damsel arose." When he came "nigh to the gate of a city called Nain, there was a dead man carried out; and he came near and touched the bier, and said, Young man, I say unto thee, Arise; and he that was dead sat up, and began to speak." And not only in the chamber and in the street, from the bed and from the bier, did Christ call the dead to life. His voice was heard with equal effect even in the putrid grave. When Lazarus had been "dead four days," and so long buried that his sisters said, "Lord, by this time he stinketh," Jesus "cried with a loud voice, Lazarus, come forth; and he that was dead" and putrid obeyed and lived again. And the blessed Savior himself, after being "crucified, dead and buried," took to himself the might of his superior nature, and came forth from the sepulchre, and showed himself to hundreds with many notable signs. In these cases the problem has been solved, and the fact demonstrated forever, that there is such a thing as the resurrection of the dead. Though we may not be able to comprehend the processes by which it shall be effected, we may rest assured that it is no idle dream, no cunningly-devised fable, but a sublime and stupendous reality.—Last Times.

For the World's Crisis.

THE BOOK.

The Book is often spoken of in the word of God. Sometimes it is commanded to be sealed up. In Rev. 5: 1, we hear of it being in the right hand of Him that sat on the throne. The question arises, what can this book mean? It cannot mean the Book of Revelation, for John was commanded not to seal the sayings of this book. Rev. 22: 10. Neither could it mean the prophecies, for they were commanded to be read by the Jews. Yet John tells us in Rev. 5: 3, that no man in heaven, nor in earth, neither under the earth, was able to open the book, neither to look thereon; and he says, "I wept much, because no man was found worthy to open and read the book, neither to look thereon."

We see by reading the above text that it could not be either the Old or the New Testaments, for these were committed to us, and to be read by all; but this book no man can open, read, or look thereon.

There is one book which answers to John's description, which no man, neither in heaven nor on earth, nor under the earth, has yet been able to look thereon, or open, or read, as we have any account of; and which, according to the Scriptures, will never be opened, read, or looked upon by mortal man until the last seal is broken, and the judgment sets.

"And I saw the dead, small and great, stand before God, and the books were opened; and another book was opened, which is the book of life, and the dead were judged out of those things which were written in the books." In this book, which is called the book of life, the names of all the redeemed in heaven, in earth or under the earth, are written, which are not known to any man; neither will be known until the last seal is broken open. For the judgment will declare who is on the Lord's side. For the apostle tells us, "Our lives are hid with Christ in God," that when he "appears then we shall appear with him in glory."

The Revelator in speaking of the city (Rev. 21: 26, 27) says, "And they shall bring the glory and honor of the nations into it. And there shall in no wise enter into it any thing that defileth, neither whatsoever worketh abominations or maketh a lie; but they which are written in the Lamb's book of life." "And they whose names were not written in the book of life, from the foundation of the world, shall wonder," etc.

This book of life which no man, as we are any where informed, has been able to look upon, or to open, or to read its contents, is the book on account of which John wept to know its contents. And so it has been with all the saints of God; they are anxious to know whether their names are written in the Lamb's book of life.

Dear reader, we may so live as to have the witness that our names are written in the Lamb's book of life. What a blessed assurance to feel approved of God, and that our name is written in the book of life. But we shall never be permitted to look thereon or therein, till it is opened in the presence of the universe. When the last seal is opened, and the last trumpet has sounded, and the gospel day is ended, then we shall be permitted to know the contents of the book. If we have not the assurance that our names are written in the book of life, remember there are a few golden moments to secure eternal life.

J. E. CLARK.

REPENTANCE.—You might pound a lump of ice with a pestle into a thousand fragments, but bring it in beside your own bright and blazing fire, and soon in that genial glow the living waters flow. A man may try to make himself contrite. He may search out his sins, and dwell on all their enormity, and still feel no true repentance. But come to Jesus with his words of grace and truth. Let that flinty, frozen spirit bask in the beams of the Sun of Righteousness, then will it melt.

For the World's Crisis.

MOVING FORWARD.

I think the above is expressive of the cause of Bible truth in many places in western New York. I do not mean to be given to overrating results connected with preaching the word, as I fear some are who seek newspaper notoriety. I would rather a future day should declare our works, than to sound a trumpet before me. But that truth is making some progress here is evident from the number of new subscribers for the Crisis that are continually coming in from laborers among us.

A two weeks' meeting has been held lately in Dansville, by Eld. C. B. Turner and myself, with good results. Several have been brought to a knowledge of the truth, and the cause of Christ is moving on with a fresh impetus, such as has not been felt for a long time. When men become disgusted with the pretended christianity of the day, then is the time to show them a "more excellent way."

But the truth is not popular, and while many may be convinced, but few have the courage and will to try to live for the kingdom. As Bro. Turner expressed it, so we see it is, that the few who receive the word are "like the gleaning of grapes when the vintage is done." Yet we rejoice over these gleanings, each soul saved being of more value than a whole world. Probably many more are convinced of the truth at the present day than will ever have the moral courage to come out from the world and live for the kingdom.

Bro. Turner has a clear and forcible way of presenting truth and answering objections. Some questions were asked by a noted Spiritualist, who set forth Spiritualism in a false light by claiming it taught a literal resurrection of the dead. One question was like this:

"If man is wholly unconscious in death, what hears the trumpet sound in the resurrection?"

Ans. "The dead man."

Question repeated, as though not fully comprehended.

Ans. "'The dead shall hear.'"

"But that which is unconscious cannot hear."

Ans. "Lazarus heard."

"But Lazarus was not dead."

Ans. "Jesus said Lazarus was dead. Also the winds and waves obeyed his voice. How did they hear?"

How easy it is to stand firm when we are upon a rock. And is not God's word a rock? Then let us stand upon it and press the battle to the gate.

My health has been very poor for a month past, but "The Lord is my strength and my salvation: whom shall I fear?" May the Lord bless his people. F. Burr.

Dansville, N. Y.

HELL—SHEOL—HADES.

Dr. Eadie says, in his Biblical Cyclopædia, on the word "Hell:" "This word is the representation of the Hebrew sheol and hades; another Greek word translated hell, literally means 'the valley of Hinnom,' where the most abominable idolatries were practised; called also 'Tophet,' from toph (a drum), because that instrument was used there to drown the cries of victims.* Hinnom or Tophet thus became a fit emblem of hell. The undoubted meaning of sheol, is the grave or world of the dead—the region of the Rephaim—the helpless."

When speaking of Ps. 16: 10, and Acts 2; 27, he says: "A very little attention to the laws of Hebrew grammar and principles of Hebrew poetry and parallelism, will at once render the meaning of this prophecy plain to the meanest capacity. The 16th Ps. refers to Messiah. Messiah expresses perfect confidence in his Father. Being assured of his own ability to fulfil his commission, he has no less confidence that the Father whom he served would raise him from the dead,—the law being satisfied, and his work being concluded. 'My flesh shall also rest in hope,' for

"'Thou wilt not abandon me to sheol,
Nor permit thy Holy One to see corruption.'

"The two lines form what is usually termed a parallelism—the last hemistich echoing the sentiment of the former. The words 'my soul,' mean merely myself. This mode of speech is not confined to the oriental tongues, but may be illustrated from the classics. Both Homer and Pindar use similar forms of expression. It is said of Ulysses by the former, 'that he chided his heart or himself—kradien.' The latter makes the Olympic victor address philon etor—his beloved soul—himself. The Hebrew and Arabic abound in similar instances. Gesenius illustrates it by the German selb or selber. Nordheimer, in the second volume of his Hebrew grammar, illustrates such usages at considerable length. Nouns of this nature are used, because the Hebrew has no intensive or reflective pronouns. It is thus obvious that the argument based upon the idea, that Christ's soul went to sheol, and his body to the grave, has no foundation. The Hebrew does not warrant this distinction. Christ's soul, in such an idiom, is his entire person. Now what is meant by sheol? It is the place where corruption is seen, the region of the dead. So the apostles understood it. Though Messiah was to die, death's power over him was to be very limited; he was not to be abandoned to his dark dominion; his body was to be so short time in the grave as not to suffer the ordinary process of decomposition."

"Sheol and hades do not mean that narrow bed in which one corpse is laid, but in this relation they signify that region of darkness and insensibility in which all corpses repose. One corpse is lowered into its keber—all corpses lie in sheol."—Ex.

For the World's Crisis.

QUERIES.

Bro. Grant:—Will you please publish in the Crisis the following inquiries, etc.:

Will some brother inform us, through the Crisis, who it was that said, in defining God, 'His center is everywhere, and circumference nowhere'?

Will Bro. P. B. Morgan, who quoted in the Crisis a year or two ago from Gibbon, "That power around which the history of Europe arrayed itself for twelve centuries was the Papacy," tell us where, in his history, he found it? He failed to mention where, and I have looked in vain for it. It has an important bearing on the fulfillment of prophecy. The desired information will be equally acceptable from any one else.

I would here express my thanks to those brethren who answered so readily through the Crisis my call for a Chart and Key. Receiving the offer of three by letter direct, I took one of them, and have been using it, I trust, for good. I. K. Lombard.

The World's Crisis
AND SECOND ADVENT MESSENGER.

Boston, Tuesday, February 9, 1864.

Take Notice.—In remitting monies to this office, do not send us any more little bank bills for fractional parts of a dollar. They are not passable here, and we are only subjected to the trouble and expense of sending them back. We have several now on hand,—worthless to us,—on the Veazie Bank, Brandon Bank, etc., etc. Send us only current bills, postal currency, or stamps.

Postage on Canada Papers.—We have concluded to let our brethren in the British Provinces have the Crisis at the same price as those in the States. In other words, we will pay the postage "to the line; hence those taking the paper will pay only $2.00 a year, instead of $2.20, as formerly.

MONTREAL.

We suppose our readers will be anxious to hear from our meetings in Montreal, C. E. Well, we can truly say the Spirit of the Lord is with us, and we are witnessing happy results of our labors. We began our meetings at Bonaventure Hall Tuesday evening, Jan. 26th, and met a goodly number who had become deeply interested in the study of the Bible, as the result of our discussion, when here in November. We have seldom seen people more earnest to know the right way. They truly have "ears to hear." They have broken loose from sectarian fetters, are resolved to buy "the truth" and sell it not." We found a number of hearts joyful in the Lord, who, before the discussion, were in the bondage of sin and error, wandering like blind men with blind leaders. They often said, "We know not how to express our gratitude for the light we have recently received on the word of the Lord.

At the close of our first meeting, some ten or twelve rose for prayers. Others have since done the same, and several have found peace. The clergy are doing all they can to keep people away from our meetings, but many feel they have a right to act for themselves in matters so important as those which relate to their eternal interests. We have never been in a place where the mass of the people were so fully under the control of the priesthood as in this city. When they curse, it falls heavily upon those who happen to receive it. It takes a martyr's courage to stand against it; hence those who do come out on the side of truth under such circumstances are more likely to endure. The heavier the cross, the firmer one stands who bears it. For this reason those who have embraced the blessed hope here are very joyful and firm. The more we sacrifice for Christ, the richer we feel, and the brighter our prospects for a home in the kingdom.

There are a number of noble hearts here who have embraced the truth we hold so dear, and they appear to be willing to make any sacrifice which the Lord may require. We have seldom seen any more active in the vineyard of the Lord, than are some here.

February 1st. Our meetings in this city are still increasing in interest. Some new ones start in the service of the Lord nearly every evening. Notwithstanding the earnest opposition of the Montreal ministers, the truth is making noble conquests. While those who hear are astonished at the doctrine, they are equally surprised that they never saw it before. They marvel at its simplicity and harmony. Hitherto the Bible had been almost a sealed book to their understandings; but now they read and rejoice in the light. The cloud of mystery with which popular teachers and writers have invested it, has departed, and it has truly become a "lamp" to their feet and a "light" unto their path. Those who have embraced the christian's hope are progressing rapidly in divine life. They appear like those who have fully counted the cost, and are willing to serve the Lord at the loss of all things. Their testimonies in our conference meetings are soul-stirring, proceeding as they do from hearts warm with the love of Jesus.

One who is said to be the ablest minister in Montreal, and who holds the view that Napoleon III. is to be the real antichrist, which event he is expecting to transpire soon, is said to have remarked;—"If Napoleon should declare himself the antichrist, it would be no more a sign of the times than to see Miles Grant in Montreal." He looks upon our visit here as a great calamity.

We found several who wished to be baptized, but the waters of the St. Lawrence river are almost inaccessible for baptism at this season of the year, on account of the piles of ice on its banks, and its depth where an entrance might be found. On this account, we saw no way to baptize, unless we could get the use of a Baptistry. On inquiry, we found one had been prepared in Nordheimer's Hall, but it was under the control of the minister who called our visit to the city a sign of the times. But as we thought he would let us have it for the purpose of baptizing some of Jesus' disciples, when not wanted for any other use, we went to the one who has charge of the hall, and found that we could have that if desired. Then all that was wanting was the privilege to use the baptistry. We accordingly sought an interview with the minister, entered his presence, and stated our wishes; when the following conversation took place:—"What is your name, sir?"—"Miles Grant." "I should not dream of letting you have it." We said, "Good morning, sir," and departed, thinking that Jesus Christ had said, "Verily I say unto you, Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these my brethren, ye have done it unto me." We felt a sweet peace of mind as we wound our way back to our resting place in the house of the friends of our Savior, and concluded that we had found an answer to Peter's inquiry in Acts 10: 47, "Can any man forbid water, that these should not be baptized?"

The following scripture has been a source of co[illegible]:—"Blessed are ye, when men shall [illegible] you, and persecute you, and shall say all manner of evil against you falsely, for my sake. Rejoice, and be exceeding glad; for so persecuted they the prophets which were before you." It is blessed to suffer with Jesus. His "yoke is easy," and his "burden is light."

Dear reader, let us take more pains to please him in all things; for we have no other friend half so valuable. It should be a pleasure to suffer for his sake. Like Paul, we should glory in the cross. The shame that comes from the enemies of our Redeemer is unworthy of notice, and should never hinder us from doing our duty. No murmur should escape our lips, when called to suffer reproach for the truth's sake. Our crosses are light compared with those of the martyrs. But, whatever be the opposition, let us press bravely on till the prize is gained.

Brethren, remember Montreal in your prayers. We hope to have more good news from this city to tell you. It is a stronghold of error and superstion, but light and truth are advancing and producing heavenly results.

RELIGIOUS AMUSEMENT.

It is truly alarming to see how the professed church of Christ is rushing into scenes of amusement. This is positive proof that their joy in the Holy Spirit has departed; for no one seeks pleasure in worldly festivities till they have grieved the Spirit of the Lord, so that it cannot dwell in them as temples. Instead of taking the Bible for their guide, they appear to be governed by the popular sentiment of the world. Those who take such a course must of necessity become only stumbling blocks in the way of others. This results in leading many into infidelity.

The signs are dark and gloomy for the church at the present hour. The downward progress is rapid, and daily increasing. We know of no scripture to show that we may expect any improvement before the coming of Christ. The time is at hand when all who intend to be ready for the Lord, must separate themselves from every unhallowed thing, and keep unspotted from the world.

We clip the following from the Montreal Daily Witness of Jan. 30th, 1863. The writer reports himself as "A pedestrian missionary . . . in the Eastern Township" in C. E. He appears to have his eyes open to the true state of things. When speaking of the course pursued by the churches at the present day, in their efforts to raise money, he says:—

"You must conjoin amusement with an appeal to christian principle, you must bring the world into the church, you must come down from the lofty platform of christianity and bring inferior motives to bear upon the public mind, you must substitute a soirce, a pic-nic, a strawberry festival, an oyster supper, or a fancy fair for a 'thus saith the Lord.' Practically, amidst much talk in pulpit, platform and parlor about the onward progress of christianity and the vast influence which it is exerting on the public mind, we are reduced to the humiliating confession that we cannot trust to that christianity in order to carry on the work of Christ. Do not tell me of progress. I do not believe in it. Do not flaunt your lists of church members before my eyes. Show me the effects which their professed faith is producing in practically sustaining the work of God amongst ourselves without this debasing appeal to the lower sensibilities of our nature. If our faith is real it will be operative. If it is not let us realize our true position, acknowledge our defection, act up to our privileges, and discharge our duty. I confess that I never hear of any of these church festivals of whatsoever kind they be, without a feeling of sadness, for me they afford a proof that eighteen hundred years after the death of that dear Savior who died that we might live,—our love to him is so cold, that we cannot even repair a house erected for the honor of his name or defray the incidental expenses of that house, unless we get a feast of strawberries or an oyster supper! Oh, everlasting shame! Is it indeed come to this that, after all the benefits which guilty men have obtained through the blood of Jesus, it must now be said of them that they are lovers of pleasure more than lovers of God! Imagine what would have been thought of such doings in the days of the Apostles, when 'men sold their possessions and goods, and parted them to all men as every man had need.' I have in my possession an advertisement, cut out of a local paper in the Towships, announcing a church festival in the form of an oyster supper, with tableaux vivants, and music. Now, only think of the apostle Paul presiding at an oyster supper, and gazing at a number of folks dressed in fancy garbs, exhibiting themselves in various attitudes before a grinning audience to the sound of fiddles and flutes! I suspect that the apostle Paul would have done to them what he on one occasion did to the apostle Peter: 'withstood him to the face because he was to be blamed.'"

WAR PROSPECTS.

Those who thought that seventy-five thousand men was a large number to put down the rebellion, have had occasion to change their minds during the past two years. And now we find the following order from the President:

"Washington, Jan. 31. It is ordered that a draft for five hundred thousand men, to serve for three years or during the war, be made on the 10th day of March next, for the military service of the United States, crediting and deducting therefrom so many as may have been enlisted or drafted into the service prior to the first day of March, and not heretofore credited.

(Signed) Abraham Lincoln."

This shows that our government does not think that the rebels are subdued. Our nation is still preparing for war—war more terrible than any in the past. The genius of our mechanics is turned to inventing instruments of death. He who can produce a machine to kill men faster than any hitherto in use, is sure of a fortune; and as covetousness is a ruling passion of the age, its gratification is sought through the most available means. Men care but little for the lives of their fellow men, if they can only make money by inventions to kill them. Is this the boasted "progress" of these last days? When will it end?—When Jesus comes. Till that glorious event transpires, we can expect only heavier waves of wickedness, deeper seas of iniquity, blacker crimes rapidly multiplied, till the saints, like Lot, will be sorely tried by the works and w[illegible] wicked, scoffing [illegible]. Earth's cup [illegible] full.

Every true philanthropist has reason to rejoice in the fact that the Deliverer will soon come to end the age of sin, and introduce the one of holiness. O Lord, hasten the glad hour. The weary bride is anxiously waiting thy return. Her foes laugh at her longings, and mock at her hopes. Dear Savior, help us to bear all things patiently till the happy hour of deliverence arrives.

TO WHOM IT MAY CONCERN.

Bro. C. W. Smith, Oswego, Ill., wishes us to say, that "the Minutes, together with the Constitution of the Illinois Advent Christian Association," are now "printed in pamphlet form," and ready for those who desire copies. Bro. Smith also wishes to say, that "he neglected to take the address of the contributors," and wishes that they would send it to him, in order that he may forward the work to them at once.

Our Tract Column.

THE NEW TRACT FUND.

Two Thousand Dollars.

We, the undersigned, agree to give the sums affixed to our names, for the purpose of raising TWO THOUSAND DOLLARS to aid the Christian Publication Society in the gratuitous distribution of tracts; and our subscriptions shall be paid at the call of the Treasurer, as soon as one half of the amount shall be subscribed.

Pledges and payments to Jan. 1st,	$395.30
M. Atkins, pd	1.00
Lucy A. Hyde, pd	1.00
R. W. Hill, (pd. $2)	12.00
J. D. Brown, (tracts sold)	2.00
Miles Grant	60.00
S. P. Clark	10.00
Jas. Danforth	1.00
Chas. W. Dudley	2.00
L. H. Davis	2.50
John E. Phelps	3.00

Pledges Paid—S. Gilbert.

TRACTS.

About tracts. Let us see,—there are fifteen hundred dollars yet to raise in eight months, to make up the proposed two thousand dollar Tract Fund. Now we suppose there are six thousand subscribers to the Crisis; this being true, or nearly true, how much would each subscriber have to pay to make up the fifteen hundred dollars? Why, only twenty-five cents apiece. Who is so stingy as to withhold this paltry sum? Twenty-five cents in eight months or two hundred and forty days, about one mill a day. What reader of the paper does not make, yes, waste this, and often a hundred times more, every day? Tea will cost one dollar per month, or twelve dollars per annum, and do us no good at that. One dollar a month for a medical plant from China, and can't pay three cents a month towards purchasing tracts to freely distribute among the people.

Do you say, "I am poor; let the rich give their money"? Let me suggest that one reason why you are poor is because you never give anything for God's cause. Please do believe Luke 6: 38. Let two thousand of the poorest christians that read the Crisis, at once send Miles Grant twenty-five cents on the Tract Fund, doing it for the glory of God; then wait and see if God is not as good as his word. I have said enough for this time. D. T. T.

For the World's Crisis.

"THE LAST DAY TOKENS."

After unavoidable delay, Nos. 1, 2 and 3 of the above work are now ready for subscribers. I have been at considerable expense to place what I consider the truth before the church and the world; and now have obligations to meet. Could I obtain from my friends scattered abroad the small amount of two or three hundred subscribers, it would lift a heavy burden from me. To persons anxious to impart light and information to their friends upon the approaching crisis and destiny of the nations, I would most affectionately recommend these expository works.

Most affectionately yours,
S. S. Brewer.

South Glastenbury, Conn.

The Last Day Tokens, No. 1.—This is an argument based upon Amos 3; 7, "Surely the Lord God will do nothing but he revealeth his secrets unto his servants the prophets." Showing that God invariably has made known his judgments to his prophets: and, by them, to the doomed nations. Fifty positive and incidental instances are brought to view in the above little work. Per dozen, by mail, 87 cents. Single, 9 cents.

Last Day Tokens, No. 2.—This number is an epitome of the events that were to transpire during the absence of our Lord and Master. The moral condition of society at his return—embracing a fulfillment of the declaration he made to his disciples on the Mount of Olives, in answer to the question, "What shall be the sign of thy coming and the end of the world?" History of false Christs, earthquakes, famines, and pestilences, arranged in chronological order. Abounding iniquity, immorality of the age, great spiritual dearth, Spiritualism, its immoral and degrading tendencies. A Spiritualist's invocation to Satan—progression—the gospel preached in all the world as a witness—the harvest ripe—the end of all things at hand. Per dozen, by mail, $2.30. Single, 23 cents.

Last Day Tokens, No. 3.—This is a phenomenal compend; containing a history of the signs in the sun, in the moon, and in the stars—meteorological wonders—fearful sights and great signs in the heavens—blood, fire, and pillars of smoke, etc. This work contains a number of excellent engravings, illustrative of these last day tokens, that God, in his infinite mercy, has hung as flaming signals in the heavens to herald the approach of the great day of his wrath. Per dozen, by mail, $2.30. Single, 23 cts.

For the World's Crisis.

TAKE NOTICE.

I have about fifty volumes of books, composing a part of my library, that I desire to sell; books on Daniel, John, on Prophecy, and other subjects. Our ministers, antiquarians, laymen, ought to have them. I will sell at the prices they cost six and ten years ago, when imported English works cost about half they do now. I will send a written catalogue to any one who desires it, and who will return the same to me after selecting, stating how I shall send, by mail or express. Brethren, preserve this, as it may prove advantageous to our preachers who are collecting libraries. Send orders soon. D. T. Taylor.

Castleton, Vt.

For the World's Crisis.

BOOK NOTICE.

[illegible] An Essay. London: Simpkin, Marshall & Co. 1855. Pp. 145, 12mo.

Few persons have done more to blend together theology and the fine arts than John Ruskin, the author of several volumes on "Modern Painters," and of "The Stones of Venice." In the latter work he makes the following statement of the so-called orthodox faith: "The good succeeds to the evil as day succeeds the night, but so also the evil to the good. Gerizim and Ebal, birth and death, light and darkness, heaven and hell, divide the existence of man, and his futurity."

And he adds in a note: "The love of God is, however, always shown by the predominance, or greater sum of good, in the end; but never by the annihilation of evil. The modern doubts of eternal punishment are not so much the consequence of benevolence, as of feeble powers of reasoning. Every one admits that God brings finite good out of finite evil. Why not, therefore, infinite good out of infinite evil?"

This challenge of the mental capacity of those who believe that Satan's works will be finally destroyed, called out the author of the above Essay. In thirty-one compact chapters he shows, at least, that he is "nobody's fool." Some use is made of the book in "Debt and Grace," and its facts and reasonings entitle it to the further notice of American readers interested in the question it treats.

I have recently procured a few copies, which I will dispose of at $1.13, the price I paid for my own copy when gold was at par. It will be sent by mail postpaid.

I have tried to learn the name of the author, but for good reasons that seems to be reserved. But when we get the substance of a substantial intellect, who cares for the empty words that tell him from some other child of Adam? C. F. H.

RESPONSE.

"They [the poor family in Illinois, spoken of in Crisis of Jan. 26th] shall have it, and somebody else who has the Lord's money, will send it on to pay for it.—W. B. H."

Yes, Bro. H., "they shall have it." And here is $1.00 of "the Lord's money" to pay for it six months. Let them have the word of life which the Crisis sends forth. I am glad somebody is hungering for the truth in these days of error, war, strife and blood. God grant they may love it, as I do, and be ready for the appearing and kingdom of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ. D., D. C.

South Wilbraham, Mass.

Correction.—The names of J. C. Wheeler and Isaac Wight were sent in by Bro. Wellcome to be added to the list of members in his Report of the Maine Ministerial Conference; but as we received and published that report before we got his note, they were added, by mistake, to his Report of ministers present at Round Pond Conference, thus making Bro. W. to say they were present at a Conference which they did not attend.

For the World's Crisis.

BACKSLIDDEN MINISTERS.

A Philadelphia missionary writes the following:—"A few days ago a man staggered into the Mission House, with not a stitch on but an old pair of pants, shoes, vest and hat, with breast all open—no shirt or coat on,—a bleeding face, fresh from a fight, and one of his fingers nearly chawed off by his antagonist's teeth; yet that man was once a minister of the gospel, and when sixteen years old was placarded as the great juvenile preacher, and preached to five thousand persons. He proved his talent to me, by making out a skeleton on the text, 'Let us not, therefore, sleep as do others, but watch and be sober'; which he did well for a mind stupid with liquor. He said he once had three times in the day for private devotion, afterwards two, and then one; finally none,—so he fell. We got him to wash up, dressed his wounds, clothed him as best we could, for we had no means provided but a boy's shirt, an old coat, and an old hat. Then we talked to him, prayed with him, reached down the hope of Peter's case, who was restored again, and made a more earnest preacher than ever of the Master whom he denied, and kept ever faithful. He seemed encouraged, and went up town to his work followed by our anxious prayers."—Ex.

There! is n't that sad? But it is not a solitary instance of ministerial backsliding. Perhaps all do not fall as far as that poor man did; but many a man turns aside to serve tables, or because he gets sick of his work.

No man or woman is so exposed to temptation as a preacher of the gospel. He stands "on the walls of Zion," and so is more exposed to the bombardment of the enemy than those who are behind the intrenchments. He is put to warn others, and often needs warning himself. He is to declare the whole counsel of God, and while he thus labors has the double work of telling others what that "counsel" is, and being himself in the "counsel."

God has put his ministers in an awfully solemn and responsible place. "They watch for souls as those that must give account," and yet they are but men who, because of their work, need more than ordinary grace. They are closely watched, because the people know that sometimes "grievous wolves" get into the fold and frighten, kill, and scatter the sheep. With all this responsibility, they may stand "and having done all, stand"; and they may fall, and if they do their last state is worse than the first.

A backslidden minister! one set as a watchman on Zion's walls; one God has favored as he favors few, having had committed to him the dispensation of the gospel; a man who has warned others many a time of impending doom—gone back!

You may find such a man who is trying to keep up appearances, but has done preaching, "got discouraged," "cross too heavy," "willingness departed," "lost his spirituality—his enjoyments." Felt in the first place that he must preach or go to perdition. The "woe" rested on him as it did on Paul. He preached awhile, and then concluded that either God had made a mistake in calling him, or he had taken a feeling or a desire as a call, and been mistaken himself. So he gave it up.

Another tampered with temptation, like Solomon. God have mercy on such! Could not keep his garments unspotted, so he fell! Oh! how sad. How it makes the heart ache to think of these unhappy departures of the watchmen from the right paths. What a condemnation rests upon such! God keep me and my preaching brethren from such a condition.

I read of some watchmen who are "dumb." It is because they are thus out of the way. If they have n't got so far as to be openly wicked, they [illegible] are dumb.

A minister [illegible] be careful to keep his conscience void of offence. Condemnation takes all the power away from him and his words, if he tries to speak. Then he is dumb. He opens not his mouth, because he cannot be justified in speaking; or if he goes on pushing himself into the way, preaching what he does not practise, he is worse than a Hottentot. He imposes on people, but not long; they soon find him out. His trumpet does not "give a certain sound." He is a dumb-dog watchman.

Paul in Eph. 3: 2 says, "Beware of dogs," and he doubtless means these dumb ministers; for I read in Isa. 56: 10, "Thy watchmen are all dumb dogs." O! how careful must the watchman be of his influence, of his character, especially to keep himself in the love of God, for then he will be right in other respects.

Thank God! that so many are faithful. I am glad that many trumpets are giving a "certain sound" in this "time of the end." Let all whom God calls to preach go into the work. Come with your "ram's horn," your silver trumpet, or any other that God gives you; but do not come to blow a "bugle." We do not want any war ministers, bugle blowers. Let the world do the bugle blasting, and the dumb watchmen may help, if they will; it is all they are good for.

There are so few who are faithful, I would encourage all who feel it to be duty to "come over and help us," male or female. Let any body who feels the "woe," who "discerns the signs of the times," and is willing to separate himself to this work; and who can be more separate than the "Phebes" who labor in the gospel? They are despised for it more than any man. Let them do what they can. Do not hinder any faithful laborer.

The end is close at hand. We have none too much time. We need every laborer we can get, for the harvest is great, and the laborers are few. Brothers, let us do with our might what our hands find to do. Sisters in the gospel, be faithful, and all together we will get as many as possible ready for the judgment. L. C. McKinstry.

For the World's Crisis

THE LAST DAYS.

If six thousand years were to mark the period of earth's history, or working days of the great week of time before the dawn of the millennial Sabbath of rest, which is allowed by the best authority to have been the belief of the early church for many centuries; and if we are at their very terminating point, as the best of Bible chronologists allow; and are also near the end of all the great prophetic periods, as hundreds of the most thorough Bible students unanimously agree in and assert; and if Paul was correct on the time of the judges being about four hundred and fifty years, instead of about three hundred and fifteen years, according to Usher; bringing us to about the 5,999th year of the world; and if Paul, Peter, James and John all declared they were in the last days, which perfectly harmonizes with Bible chronology, as more than four thousand years had already past, and the apostles were already entered on the last two thousand years; then with all due solemnity I would ask, How long will it be before the end shall come?

Tell me, ye clergy, and laity, and wise men of the world, who do not "take heed to the sure word of prophecy," nor "discern the signs of the times," nor "watch," "look for," nor "love his appearing," but who turn aside from these truths, and willingly are ignorant of the same. Answer me, if you can correctly, or else "take heed," as commanded, and go to the true source of light and knowledge, that your darkness may be dispelled, that you too may be found watching and in readiness for the coming of the Son of man.

Says Paul, "God, who at sundry times and in divers manners, spake in time past unto the fathers by the prophets, hath in these last days spoken unto us by his Son."—Heb. 1: 1, 2. "But now once in the end of the world hath he appeared to put away sin by the sacrifice of himself." Heb. 9: 26. "And they are written for our admonition, upon whom the ends of the world are come." 1 Cor. 10: 11. "The night is far spent, the day is at hand." Rom. 13: 12. "But exhorting one another; and so much the more as ye see the day approaching. . . . For yet a little while, and he that shall come will come, and will not tarry." Heb. 10: 25, 37. Thus the apostle's testimony is clear, emphatic and decisive. Let us hear from others.

"But Peter, ... lifted up his voice and said, ... But this is that which was spoken by the prophet Joel. And it shall come to pass in the last days, saith God, I will pour out my Spirit upon all flesh." Acts 2. "Looking for and hastening unto the coming of the day of God. . . . Wherefore, beloved, seeing that ye look for such things, be diligent, that ye may be found of him in peace, without spot and blameless." 2 Peter 3. Thus Peter expresses himself positively as being in the last days and dispensation; as the next great event would be the coming day of the Lord.

Let us note the testimony of James: "Ye have heaped treasure together for the last days. . . . Be patient, therefore, brethren, unto the coming of the Lord. . . . Be ye also patient; stablish your hearts; for the coming of the Lord draweth nigh." James 5. This language is also clear, that they had entered upon the last dispensation which would witness the coming of the Lord. John also emphatically declared, "Little children, it is the last time; and as ye have heard that antichrist shall come, even now are there many antichrist; whereby we know that it is the last time." 1 John 2: 18. Thus the evangelist confirms the previous testimony of others.

The testimony of St. John the Divine, of "The revelation of Jesus Christ, which God gave unto him, to show unto his servants things which must shortly come to pass; for the time is at hand," the time for these things to be revealed, when this great event would soon transpire. "Behold, he cometh with clouds; and every eye shall see him." Rev. 1: 1, 3, 7. Behold, I come quickly.' Rev. 3: 11 "And the Lord God of the holy prophets sent his angel to show unto his servants the prophets the things which must shortly be done. And he saith unto me, Seal not the sayings of the prophecy of this book; for the time is at hand. And behold, I come quickly. . . . He which testifieth these things saith, Surely I come quickly." Rev. 22: 6, 10, 12, 20.

Thus the Revelator also confirms the testimony of all the others, of the certainty and nearness of the coming of our Lord, and in language too plain, emphatic, and comprehensive to allow of the possibility of a misunderstanding of the same.

Now, in view of all these things here recorded, and if the apostles all wrote and spake as they were moved by the Holy Ghost, is not the coming of the Lord just at hand? Is not the day near, even at the doors? Shall we believe these truths of God's word, or shall we presumptuously deny them? I, for one, must and do believe them. Reader, do you? S. L. Manley.

Marion, N. Y.

Correspondence.

From Bro. S. W. Woodruff.

Dear Brethren:—Our Savior says in Matt. 24: 44,—"Therefore be ye also ready, for in such an hour as ye think not the Son of man cometh." Many of us have been taught to believe, in the past, that the Son of man came at death. This we now find to be false teaching. The word of the Lord tells us that his first coming is in the past and his second coming is yet in the future. It is for that we wait, and watch, and pray, not knowing the day nor hour.

We see more, daily, the importance of taking heed to the things written, that we may discern the times in which we live, that the day of the Lord come not upon us unawares. I feel like praising the Lord that we are not left in darkness, but may know when "he is nigh, even at the doors." Who is there that can doubt that these are the times which tell us plainly our Lord is at hand? A little while, and he will descend the pathway of heaven, in shining glory. We shall hear his voice; will it say, "Come, ye blessed of my Father?" This will depend upon our faithfulness here. O! may the Lord help us to gird up the loins of our mind, call in every wandering thought, and bring it in captivity to the obedience of Christ, that we be also ready, like men who wait for their Lord, to hail that morning with joy.

Many are saying, "It makes no difference what we believe, if [illegible] are only prepared for death." But God says in his word, that he has chosen us to salvation through sanctification of the Spirit, and belief of the truth. Noah believed God's word, and it led him and his family to prepare for life. Those to whom he preached the words of life did not believe, supposing it not essential, therefore they were prepared for death.

Noah gave good heed to the words of the Lord, and when the flood came the ark was finished, and he was ready, and in the ark he found a shelter, yea, a covert from the storm; and he was saved. But the storm swept his hearers all away. They believed not, therefore knew not, and were destroyed.

Thus will it be in the day when the Son of man is revealed from heaven in flaming fire, taking vengeance on them that know not God and obey not the gospel. Few believe that the gospel teaches Christ's coming, and that he is to find a people not mingling in worldly amusements, but prepared and made ready, looking for and loving his appearing. His church will be found watching, praying, and loving the appearing of the Lord of life and glory.

It is Life we want, Life Eternal. But we have no promise of it, until the Life Giver comes,—not at Death, but at the close of gospel day. Then, and not till then, can it be said, "O death, where is thy sting? O grave, where is thy victory?"

Dear reader, "be ye also ready!" Believe God's word, for the day is at hand when the Lord, the righteous Judge, will appear in his glory, to make up his jewels. Go not with the giddy throng down to ruin, I pray you. Be wise; seek the Lord ere it be too late. O think of the joys that await the christian; think of the paradise of God; of "Eden's bowers so lovely;" of the tree of life standing on either side of the river yielding its fruits every month. You can eat of that fruit and never die, drink from the river of life and live forever. We are hastening to the judgment. Prepare! O prepare to meet thy God!

S. W. Woodruff.

From Bro. R. H. Clark.

Bro. Grant:—Although I am alone in the far Northwest, and have none to associate with who believe in the coming of the Lord, yet I am decided for the truth, and rooted and grounded in the doctrine of the gospel. The more I hear it spoken against, the more I am determined to persevere, and the plainer the truth appears to me.

I have been in this place five years, during which time I have not had the pleasure of seeing one of "like precious faith"; and the people generally regard the all-absorbing truths of the kingdom as something foolish and absurd, yet occasionally we meet with one who is reasonable, and will assent to the truths of the Scriptures. As for ministers, we can seldom get into conversation with them the second time. This latter class seem instinctively to shun us.

Now are there not some preaching brethren who can come this way and give the people a chance to hear? The probability is, some would believe. Nothing would give me greater pleasure than to entertain a faithful servant of the Lord, and to hear the word preached once more. I think an interest could be awakened, and precious souls might be saved, which are of infinitely more value than the golden treasures of California.

If any of the brethren have books or tracts, which they have read and wish to scatter, here is a good place to sow the seed, and I would gladly receive by mail and distribute them.

Yours in hope of immortality through Jesus Christ, R. H. Clark.

Falls St. Croix, Polk Co., Wis.

From Bro. N. T. Willard.

Bro. Grant:—After a sore famine in this city, the Lord has in answer to prayer seen fit to send us a shower of manna. We had almost concluded that we were destined to languish and die, for want of spiritual food, and our hungry souls cried out "Save, Lord, or we perish."

Two or three praying ones got together in Jesus' name, and in faith, believing, asked that our house might be once more filled with the bread of life. Like the Prodigal, we had gone astray, spent all, and were trying to feed upon dry husks. But they miserably failed to satisfy, and in our extremity we resolved to return again to our Father's house. He met us, and upon asking for food, he not only told us that he had a plenty for us, but to spare. He filled our souls with fat things and bade us go out and seek for others, and bring them in, that his house might be filled. We went and told the good news to all whom we thought would come, and the results was, our efforts were rewarded by seeing many poor souls revived and strengthened.

Yes, the Lord is renewing his work in our midst. From two or three, we have increased to a house full, and still they come. Many of the old soldiers are re-enlisting, and quite a number of new recruits have come in, and those, too, whom we least expected. They are now waiting for a mustering officer. One or two whom we had almost given up have come back, and are laboring most manfully in the cause.

O! this does us good. We do not have much preaching, but a great deal of praying. Here we believe is the secret of our success. We all try to do our duty by taking up our cross and speaking for Jesus, and it is quite remarkable how very easy it soon becomes. Yet it should not be strange either, for Jesus told us that his "yoke was easy," but we poor sinners did not believe him.

Sunday does not come often enough, so we meet once or twice a week, and we go away every time with our hearts brim full of love to God and man. Quite an interest is manifested outside of our little circle, and we believe that many will yet be brought to see the truth as revealed in the Bible.

May God still continue to bless us and add to our numbers such as shall be saved.

N. T. WILLARD.

Rochester, N. Y., Feb. 2d, 1864.

From Bro. L. A. Gilbert.

BRO. GRANT:—Have read your paper with an increasing interest for nearly three years. I welcome it as I do a much-loved and tried friend. Have never known an individual without faults, neither have I ever known a newspaper without the same. I sometimes notice assertions in the Crisis that savor of sectarianism, bigotry, and the like—such as will drive people from the truth rather than attract to it, but, in the main, I consider it an exception among the productions of these last days.

Above all the rest am glad of the position it takes with regard to war and Spiritualism. The former I consider as contrary to the teachings of the New Testament, and consequently we, as christians, cannot engage in it. The latter I consider, with all its accompaniments, truly the king of sins among us. It has been my lot to see much of its direful influence on some of my dearest friends. Not in the form of "rappings," "furniture-moving," etc., but through the teaching of popular theology; yes, popular with some of the most learned and refined in the land—Swedenborgianism! I believe it to be not one step removed from Spiritualism, but part and parcel of the same. And is not our most approved literature all tinctured with the same? And is not all orthodoxy drifting there? Where, O my Father, I ask, are we who profess to believe in immortality only through Christ? Are we stopping over our neighbors' sins, or are we "laying aside every weight and pressing forward toward the mark of the prize? Let us not slumber now on the verge of the world's destruction!

"Whatsoe'er afflictions seize us,
They shall profit, if not please;
But defend, defend us, Jesus,
From security and ease."

May the Lord God Omnipotent help thee, my brother, in thy responsible station! With bowed head, "cry aloud and spare not," knowing that God will "guide the meek in judgment, and the meek will he teach his way."

Dryden Springs, N. Y. L. A. GILBERT.

From Bro. H. K. Flagg.

BRO. GRANT:—I wish to say to those where I have promised to come and preach, that I cannot send my appointments to the Crisis at present, for my work is with the lost sheep of Israel. I believe in reformation still, and feel that my work is in the highways and hedges; and, when I go into a new place, I cannot tell how long I shall feel it my duty to stay. I am preaching at Holliston, Mass. Have been here since last Friday evening. We have the Town Hall. The interest increases every meeting. Yesterday we had a large audience, and last evening the hall was filled. A number came forward for prayers, and many more appear to be anxious about their eternal interests. How long the meeting may continue I cannot tell. Those who are willing to take hold in good earnest and labor for the salvation of sinners, and wish for my labors, may address me at this place. This is a new field. Pray for us. Yours in the blessed hope, H. K. FLAGG.

Holliston, Mass., Feb. 8th, 1864.

From Bro. Chas. Stratton.

BRO. GRANT:—My heart has been made sad by the loss of my dear father and mother. In the short space of two months we laid them down side by side in the lonely graveyard, but not without hope of a resurrection to immortallity and eternal life, beyond the power of death and the tomb. They have been worthy members of the christian church in Albian for more than thirty years. Under their christian influence I lived many years, till made to feel that I must leave all if I would follow Christ. Accordingly I left the parental roof, with Bible in hand, to invite sinners to Christ. Since that time, I have had the privilege of visiting my parents occasionally and bowing around the family altar, with my dear father to lead in prayer. But, alas! my heart and former home are made desolate indeed. God grant we may be reunited in the kingdom. CHAS. STRATTON.

Cornville, Feb. 1st, 1864.

From Bro. S. E. Mabey.

BRO GRANT:—I would say that we as a band of brethren here at Amboy are growing stronger in love, and in the unity of the Spirit and bonds of peace. We meet twice a week for prayer and mutual benefit, exhorting one another so much the more as we see the day of God approaching, that we may continue in the faith, rooted and grounded, and not be moved away from the hope of the gospel. If ever the children of the Most High had reason to be strong in faith, giving glory to God, now is the time. And we are that class. While governments and systems of men's devising are trembling and tottering to their fall, we expect a kingdom which cannot be shaken, but will stand forever, and will not be left to another people.

We expect soon to be translated into Paradise restored; to be made immortal like our dear Savior, by that same Spirit that raised him from the dead; expecting to meet with loved ones now sleeping, whom in bitterness of heart and sorrow we laid away, but not without hope. They will soon sing that triumphant song—"O death, where is thy sting? O grave, where is thy victory?" We expect soon to see the King in his beauty and glory riding down the shining pathway of heaven, with a bright retinue of angels to gather his chosen ones from the four quarters of the earth to Mount Zion. They will come with songs of everlasting joy, and sorrow will forever flee away. Dear waiting ones, let us live every moment so that we may not be disappointed in sharing in the glories soon to be revealed.

My faith never was stronger. We highly prize the Crisis. I mean to extend its circulation. You have our prayers.

Yours in hope, S. E. MABEY.

From Bro. J. M. Moulton.

BRO. GRANT:—Though this new settlement is reputed the country over as comprising many that seek after "familiar spirits," yet I cannot but think that there is a leaven working in our midst. When I see the bundle of Crisis papers distributed at our office each week, I find that they are sought after by some of that class of unbelievers. And I would say for the encouragement of the little flock scattered abroad, there is a small church of believers here, waiting for the "redemption of Israel."

Brethren and sisters, we are living in perilous times. Let us hold fast to the "faith once delivered to the saints." The driving storm will soon be over, and we shall be safe in the everlasting kingdom.

Your Bro., hoping to be gathered with God's elect when Christ shall come,

Hammonton, N. J. J. M. MOULTON.

From Eld. L. Boutell.

BRN. GRANT AND HASTINGS:—I was glad to see in the Crisis an intimation that there would be a conference in Boston soon for the believers to come together and consult and confer upon the best method of increasing our effort in every department of christian activity to save our fellow men. I doubt not such a meeting will quicken into more united action in the great cause. This is emphatically the time to work. Let us come together, pray with and for one another, confess and forsake the wrong, and take hold of the right. There are better times in most places, and the Lord is gracious and willing to save. Then let us all come up to the work in earnest. Yours in hope of a meeting,

Groton, Feb. 5th. L. BOUTELL.

Obituaries.

CALVIN T. LIVERMORE.

Died in Virginia, in camp, near Brandy Station, Dec. 24th, 1863, of dropsy and kidney complaint, Sergeant Calvin T. Livermore, of Sebec, son of Joshua and Mary Livermore, aged twenty-five years, one month and thirteen days.

He was a member of Camp T. of the 6th Maine Vols. Such was the strong attachment of the company of which he was a member, that they raised a hundred dollars, and had him embalmed and sent home to his deeply afflicted friends, for which they take the opportunity to express their unfeigned gratitude.

Justice to the memory of our esteemed friend demands some further remarks. Calvin was cradled in piety, early sought and found the pearl of great price, and retained his devotion to God to the end of his short pilgrimage. Amiable in his disposition, and sympathetic in his associations, he won for himself friends in every sphere in which he moved. Hence the kindness of his fellow soldiers in so readily embalming him when dead, the deep and heartfelt sorrow of lover, parents, brothers, sisters, and friends, and the large, attentive, and feeling congregation who attended the funeral to sympathize with relatives and friends, while they were exhorted by the writer to comfort one another with these words, 1 Thess. 4: 13.

THOMAS SMITH.

Herald of Life, please copy.

MARY CRANE.

Died in Hartford, Conn., Jan. 4th, Mrs. Mary Crane, aged seventy-four, after a protracted illness, which she suffered with christian patience and resignation.

To the last her faith in God was firm and unshaken. Sister Crane experienced religion in early life, and has ever maintained the character of a christian. Her life was varied. She was called to endure many and severe trials, through which, though painful and sorrowful, she always triumphed in Christ, looking to the end of all her trials, the consummation of the christian's hope. Much might be said of the love she evinced to the followers of Christ, as many will remember who have shared the hospitalities of her house. The death of a beloved and only daughter a few years since seemed to ripen her for the kingdom of God.

Her remains were interred in Warehouse Point burial ground, to await the morning of the resurrection. "Blessed are the dead who die in the Lord . . . yea, saith the spirit, for they rest from their labors, and their works do follow them.

L. J. R.

WILLIAM A. STANWOOD.

Fell asleep on Tuesday morning, Jan. 26th, 1864, in Salem, Mass., William A., infant son of William H. and Mary E. Stanwood, aged nineteen months, fifteen days.

Bro. and Sr. Stanwood have been deeply afflicted. They have, within a few years, been bereft by the "enemy" of three little ones. Willie had just recovered from a long fever, and his parents were filled with joy and gratitude, when their child was attacked by the membraneous croup, and in a short time expired in great agony.

Our brother and sister sorrow not even as others that have no hope; for they know that their little ones "shall come again from the land of the enemy." Three cords have been broken that bound them to this world; but now, a three-fold cord binds them to the kingdom of heaven. The writer endeavored to comfort their hearts by reading the promises of God's word.

F. H. BURBANK.

LUCRETIA JOHNSON.

Died, Nov. 17th, 1863, aged seventy-two years, six months.

She calmly and peacefully closed her eyes in death after a severe sickness of many days. We called on her a few days before she died, and found that although she was nearing the valley of the shadow of death, yet she feared no evil. Confident was she that He in whom she had believed, was able to bring her from the very dust to sing praises anew to him, when death should be swallowed up in victory, and the rebuke of his people should be wiped away.

May the friends that are left to mourn strive to check the unavailing tear as they remember that it is "well with her," and that he "giveth his beloved sleep." When he shall redeem his people from death, and shall bring again Zion, we hope to meet this beloved mother in Israel, where—

"Death divided friends shall meet,
And meet to part no more."

A. M. HOLLIS.

HELEN E. COLE.

Died at Berlin Falls, N. H., Jan. 10th, 1864, of diphtheria, Helen E. Cole, daughter of Daniel and Polly Green, aged twenty years, three months and fifteen days.

She has left a husband and daughter, with a large circle of friends, to mourn her departure. She was beloved and respected by all who knew her. Her funeral was attended by Eld. Pettingel, of Milan. Text, "Set your affections on things above, and not on things on the earth." F. G.

FREDDY, OTTIWELL, AND ALBA EASTMAN.

Died in Orange, N. H., Jan. 21st, 1864, of diphtheria, Freddy E., son of Enoch C. and Mary N. Eastman, aged two years and eleven days.

Also, Jan. 22d, 1864, of diphtheria, Ottiwell and Alba J., sons of the above, aged respectively six years, four months, eight days, and seven years, seven months, and six days.

Hard indeed is our Bro. and Sr.'s lot while they have so suddenly been called to part with all their loved ones, except one little babe. May God's grace sustain them in this their affliction and bereavement, and they be enabled to shine as lights in the world, that they may shine with those loved ones in the kingdom of God. They desire the prayers of all God's children, that they may bear this affliction with christian fortitude.

S. K. FORD.

EDGAR S. EASTMAN.

Died in Orange, N. H., Jan. 22d, 1864, of diphtheria, Edgar S., only son of Daniel and Hannah A. Eastman, aged five years, three months, and twenty-six days.

Our brother and sister feel that heavy indeed is the blow that has thus fallen upon them. But they are comforted with the hope that soon, yea, very soon their loved one will come again from the land of the enemy, and come to his own border, and that they with him shall inherit the land promised to the faithful. S. K. FORD.

GEO. W. SWIFT.

Fell asleep in Jesus, Nov. 25th, 1863, George W. Swift, son of Henry F. and Sarah B. Swift, of Meredith, N. H., aged twelve years, six months, twenty-one days.

It was no lingering illness which bore the deceased away from earth. He was taken sick Sunday morning, and died Wednesday afternoon, of scarlet fever, canker rash and diphtheria. His father, who is in the army, mother, brothers and sisters, mourn his loss.

Funeral sermon by Bro. Bunday. Text, Heb. 9: 27, 28.

MORDENNA HOLLAND.

Died at Lafayette, Mordenna Holland, aged nine years, nine months, twenty-seven days.

Death has again taken its victim. But we rejoice that our brother and sister have the consoling thought of Jesus and the resurrection soon to come, when they, together with all those that have laid their little ones down to sleep, will be made to rejoice. God sanctify this to the afflicted ones.

ALBERT P. ALLEN.

SALLY KIDDER.

Died in Albion, Me., Jan. 12th, 1864, Sally, wife of Benjamin Kidder, aged seventy-seven years and eleven months.

This excellent woman has been an exemplary christian for over forty years. She died in hope of soon being brought from death in the likeness of Jesus. God comfort the lonely husband and children with the hope of her soon being ransomed from the power of the grave. L. L. HOWARD.

Fell asleep Jan. 17th, in Earlville, Lasalle Co., Ill., the infant child of Isaac and Clarissa Stafford, being sixteen days old.

Discourse by the writer, from the words of King Solomon. Eccl. 12: 1. I. R. TOWLE.

FRANKLIN H. STEVENS.

Died in Orange, N. H., Jan. 20th, 1864, of diphtheria, Franklin H., son of Samuel H. and Belinda W. Stevens, aged fourteen years, one month, and eighteen days. S. K. FORD.

Summary of News.

FOREIGN.

Paris, Jan. 24. Before assuming the reins of government Maximillian will await the return of the Mexican Deputation, who offered him the crown on the 3d of october, with the vote of the Mexican notables and a decision of certain cities specified by the Archduke, who demanded that the vote of the notables should be ratified by a vote of the Mexican principal councils. The mission of the French expedition will be accomplished by the middle of January. The deputation was expected to return to France by the first fortnight in Februrary and will proceed to Miramar to announce to the Archduke his election. The Archduke will not only accept, but immediately assume the sceptre and visit Paris in the quality of the Emperor of Mexico.

A Kiel telegram of the 22d says the Danish outposts were ordered to retire on the approach of the Prussian troops. It is expected that the Danes will defend Dauneiwicke to the last extremity. The Prussian Chamber has adopted a resolution opposing the policy of Prussia in separating herself from the other German States, and threatening every resistance thereto.

The London Times of the 21st has a report that Denmark has offered to suspend the obnoxious constitution, and adds, if such an offer has really been made it will for a time avert the imminent danger of a war.

It is stated that the English squadron will be ordered to Heligoland.

BERLIN, Jan. 20. The Prussian and Austrian troops march without delay into Schleswig under Marshal Van Wragel.

STUTGARD, Jan. 20. The Chamber of Deputies to-day resolved to place the army of Wurtemburg on a war footing and place a certain number of troops at the immediate disposal of the confederation.

JAPAN NOT WARLIKE.—The Kanagawa correspondent of the New York Tribune says of recent Japanese events already published:

"But of one thing we may be sure, that this ready coming to terms of Satsuma, clearly indicates that Japan will have no war with the Treaty Powers unless forced into it. The Treaty Powers may be compelled to a large forbearance, certainly to employ a careful skill to avoid war, but Japan does not wish to fight. Three centuries of peace have enervated her sword-arm. Or we may assign, perhaps, a more creditable reason, that she alone of all the Oriental nations has had the sagacity to avoid conflict with the Western Powers, knowing its futility."

THE HOLY PLACES.—M. de Saulcy, a Frenchman, is at Jerusalem, exploring the graves of the prophets. He has taken the sarcophagus and the bones it contained from the tomb of St. Kelba Lebona, and declared that he would do the same with the other holy burial places. The Jews took alarm at this, and telegraphed to the Rothschilds and other powerful Israelites in Europe, who obtained an order from the Turkish Grand Vizier forbidding further molestation of the tombs.

DOMESTIC.

Huntsville, Ala., Jan. 31st. I have just arrived here from Chattanooga. Before I left Gen. Palmer just arrived from a reconnoissance to Ringgold and Dalton. The main force of the enemy had undoubtedly left, and Gen. Palmer thinks they marched towards Longstreet for the purpose of invading Kentucky.

Since arriving here I have obtained information which satisfies me that Hardee has reinforced Mobile. An attack was undoubtedly made on Mobile within five days past. Persons here have solicited information to go through our lines to attend relatives wounded at Mobile. Positive information may soon be expected of an attack on that place and its probable fall.

NEWBERN, Feb. 1st,
Via Fortress Monroe, Feb. 2d.

To Major-General Butler:

Early this morning our outposts at Bachelor's Creek were attacked by the enemy, represented to be a force of about 15,000 strong, consisting of Thoke's brigade and Picket's entire division. It being impracticable to make an adequate defence, our force fell back in good order, destroying the camps, abandoning but few stores, with a loss of fifty to one hundred men and one section of light artillery. Our forces are now so arranged that we are confident of a successful resistance.

Almost simultaneously with this attack the enemy advanced on the south side of the Trent, with what force it is difficult to estimate, and were handsomely repulsed. Communication continues with Morehead City, but the enemy are near the road with the evident intention of cutting it. The commander at Beaufort is aware of the situation, and will use every effort to prevent any interruption of the road.

(Signed) J. W. PALMER, Brig. Gen.

Cincinnati, Feb. 3d. Considerable excitement prevails at Paris, Ill., in consequence of an anticipated attack on the returned soldiers by the "Butternuts" in that vicinity. The citizens of Paris have telegraphed to Terre Haute for aid.

Washington, Feb. 3d. The following dispatch was received at the headquarters of the army here to-day:

Nashville, Tenn., Feb. 2d.

Gen. Dodge reports that on the 24th ult. the forces under Col. Phillips drove Roddy to the south side of the Tennessee River and captured all his trains, consisting of over twenty mule teams, two hundred head of cattle, six hundred head of sheep and about one hundred horses and mules, and destroyed a factory and mill, which had largely supplied him.

(Signed) JOHN A. RAWLINS,
Brig. Gen. and Chief of Staff.

New York, Feb. 4th. The Herald's Washington dispatch says: "An unusual number of refugees from the South were entering our lines in order to escape conscription. They state that the night after the passage of the act conscripting all persons liable to military duty, ninety refugees were caught by the rebel pickets along the Chickahominy. These men were given a pass for thirty days, with orders to report at the expiration of that time for duty. Fears are entertained in Richmond of an insurrection on the part of this class, and the rebel authorities will not allow more than five hundred conscripts to accumulate at the camp near Richmond, from apprehension of such an attempt. Bands are being organized in many parts of the South for the purpose of resisting the conscription."

Fortress Monroe, Feb. 4th. Eight refugees from the South arrived here this morning via Yorktown.

Three hundred and fifty contrabands with forty mule teams arrived at Norfolk yesterday from rebeldom.

New York, Feb. 6th. The Times' letter from Chattanooga says rebel deserters are pouring into our lines by hundreds, and open mutiny is feared by the rebel leaders in consequence of their late conscription law.

New York, Feb. 6th. The World's New Orleans letter says: Our forces at Madisonville are being constantly increased, evidently with a view of making it a base of supplies. Rumor says Gen. Banks will soon embark for Texas, betokening advance movements in that quarter. The people of that State are ready in large numbers to join our forces.

New York, Feb. 6th. News from Memphis of the 29th ult., says Corinth was evacuated on Monday last, and every thing of value brought to Memphis. The Memphis and Charleston Railroad will be evacuated from Lagrange to Memphis to-night.

The force that has been holding Corinth and the road between that place and Memphis was concentrated at Memphis, and the entire infantry and artillery have gone under Gen. Hurlburt, upon boats down the river. This expedition is splendidly equipped and in numbers that will make the rebels tremble wherever they may go. The whole Sixteenth Corps is in this expedition, and more too. The troops are now well on their way to their destination which is not as yet to be divulged.

A great cavalry expedition has also been organized under Brig. Gen. W. L. Smith, Chief of Gen. Grant's cavalry, which will soon be heard from. This expedition will make an extensive raid into Alabama, Mississippi and Georgia. Gen. Grierson accompanies the expedition. The force is large and well appointed and it is expected that they will make terrible havoc along the railroads, bridges, etc.

THE TOMB OF EZRA THE SCRIBE.—This is the age of commemorations. While we here in England are preparing to celebrate the three hundredth anniversary of the bard of Avon, the Jews in the heart of Asia are bestirring themselves to erect a monument to the memory of the great restorer of their sacred writings. After having rested in his honored grave for nearly 2500 years, the Jews of Bagdad have been roused to erect him a monument on the spot which the most ancient tradition has designated as his grave, and the correctness of which there is no reason to doubt. This spot lies in the desert, near the confluence of the Euphrates and Tigris, and the monument to be established is the only one befitting the memory of a man as much venerated by Christians as Jews. The proposed monument is a college for the study of the writings preserved through his care for the civilized world. Contributions for this purpose have been forwarded from Bombay, London and Paris.—Jewish Chronicle.

REBEL PLANS.—As an offset, probably, to the gloomy reports brought by refugees from the South respecting the declining fortunes of the rebellion, the Washington correspondent of the Chicago Times (Copperhead) says, "intelligent men from the South" declare that the Confederacy will have fully 500,000 effective troops in the field in the spring; that Gen. Johnston will have 150,000 of them to fight Grant, 150,000 more will invade the North, and the rest will defend Richmond, Charleston, etc. The Washington correspondent of the St. Louis Republican says Lee and Jeff. Davis recently had a protracted consultation, in which Davis urged an invasion of the North across the Ohio River to Lake Erie, which Lee declared impracticable and advised the recapture of Knoxville, thus compelling Grant to evacuate Chattanooga, when a union of the forces under Longstreet and Johnston would drive the Federals out of Tennessee and Kentucky.—Journal.

FROM NEWBERN.—We learn by a private letter from Newbern, that during the late rebel attack on that post, Adjutant Cheever, of the 17th Massachusetts regiment, was mortally wounded, has since died, and his body is in the hands of the enemy. Lieut. Col. Fellows, Dr. Galloupe, Capt. Floyd, Lieuts. Hill, Mann, Comins and Day, of the 17th, are supposed to have been taken prisoners. Out of 120 men and 13 officers who went out to meet the enemy, only 50 or 60 men and five officers have returned. The rest were captured.

The Hilton Head correspondent of the New York Times writes that several of the officers there having become impressed with the growing evils of intemperance in the army, have given up the use of ardent spirits.

HARTFORD, CONN., Feb. 5th. The original building of Colt's Pistol Factory was destroyed by fire this morning, with all the machinery and a large amount of other property. The building was five hundred feet long by sixty wide; L, one hundred by sixty. The office, a large three-story building, was also destroyed. The new building in which the Minie rifles are made was saved. Seventeen hundred workmen were employed, half of whom are thrown out of work. Several lives have been lost by the falling in of the roof of one of the buildings. Their names are not yet known. The loss, it is believed, will exceed $1,000,000. Insured for $750,000.

THE MALDEN TRAGEDY.—On Sunday evening, the 7th, Edward W. Green, Postmaster of Malden, was arrested for the murder of young Converse, who was shot in the Bank on the 15th of Dec. last. He makes full confession, and in jail awaits his trial before the Grand Jury of Middlesex county.

Items.

☞ It is more than a hundred years since an heir apparent to the British crown has had a son. The eldest son of George II. died a few years before his father, leaving his son, afterwards George III., surviving. Since that time there has been no such state of things as now exist. The children of George III. were all born while he was on the throne. George IV. had no son either before or after he ascended the throne. William IV. had no children.

☞ There is to be a Queen Eugenia as well as an Empress Eugenia. The new King of Greece, George the First, is to wed Eugenia, a daughter of the Duchess of Leutchenberg. The duchess's eldest daughter is betrothed to Prince Humbert, heir to the crown of Italy. These young women are great-granddaughters of the Empress Josephine.

☞ In Rockingham county, Va., corn has been sold at five dollars, and sometimes at a higher figure. A day laborer commands five dollars per day for his work, if an efficient hand. Flour is worth fifty dollars per barrel, cotton cloth commands five dollars per yard, beef brings fifty cents per pound, sugar is held at four dollars, and coffee at fifteen dollars.

☞ The school books lately published by the Austrian Government are printed on paper made of "corn shucks," or the leaves which protect the ear of maize. This material gives the paper a yellowish color, which medical men hold to be less fatiguing to the eye than our snowy pages.

☞ A mosquito flotilla, which has been preparing for some weeks at New York, is about to sail for New Orleans, where it will be divided into several fleets, to operate in such rivers and lagoons as are impassable to larger vessels.

☞ A meeting of the loyal citizens of Florida was held at Key West on the 28th ult., for the purpose of restoring the State to its original status under the United States Government.

☞ In certain places in Indiana so many young men have enlisted that it is almost impossible to get work done upon the farms. Many large farms are without a single hand to cultivate them.

☞ A railroad track was laid on the ice of the Upper Mississippi during the late cold snap, for the transportation of freight from one shore to the other.

☞ The Springfield armory turned out 23,700 muskets last month. The largest number ever fabricated in a single month. There are 200,000 on hand.

☞ Cotton of the value of $3,000,000 was recently burnt at Columbia, S. C.

☞ Before the war there were about seventy-five papers published on the soil of Mississippi; now there are only nine.

☞ Gen. Foster has prohibited the further distillation of grain within the limits of his department in Tennessee.

☞ The comet discovered by Prof. Watson of Mich., is rapidly approaching the earth, and will soon be visible to the naked eye.

☞ A Vermont exchange says that last week many farmers tapped a few maple trees and made small quantities of syrup and sugar.

☞ Rev. Dr. True writes to Zion's Herald that the Methodist itinerant system is brought to the verge of an abyss into which it will speedily sink.

☞ The Southern Methodist Book Concern in Nashville has been taken by the civil authorities for a government printing office.

☞ There are 700,000 men on the army pay rolls, and about 500,000 in service, with officers for about a million and a half.

☞ A remarkable religious revival is going on at Corning, N. Y.

☞ A pyramid, like the Egyptian pyramids, but smaller, has been discovered in California.

☞ Desertions from Hardee's army in Georgia are reported to average fifty daily.

☞ France consumed $43,225,000 worth of tobacco last year.

☞ The greenbacks and postal currency now in circulation amount to five hundred million.

☞ Corn is said to be higher at the West than it has been before for forty years.

☞ Immense deposits of lead have been discovered near Albuquerque, New Mexico.

☞ Wm. E. Dodge, of New York, has given $10,000 to found a college in Syria.

☞ Australia has a population of two millions.

☞ Ice is three inches thick at Richmond.

☞ Iowa has a population of 702,368.

Notices.

Quarterly Conference, Buchanan, Mich.

The first quarterly meeting of the Advent Christian Conference of Michigan and Indiana will commence Feb. 18th, at 10 o'clock A. M., in the Advent Chapel, and continue over the Sabbath. There will be preaching day and evening, by Elders Mansfield, Himes, Seymour, Babcock, and others. A large gathering is expected. Friends in the vicinity, and from every quarter, are invited to participate in this feast of love. Call upon Elder Mansfield, whose residence is on Day's Avenue, for directions. A. N. SEYMOUR, Sec'ry of Conf.

Conference in Norway, Me.

The Lord willing, we shall hold a conference at North Norway, in the Methodist Chapel, commencing Feb. 18th, (evening), and continue over the following Sunday. A general invitation is extended. Come, brethren and sisters, praying for the blessing of the Lord upon the meeting. Those coming from abroad may call upon Brn. French, Adams, Merrill, Pearce, and Pingree.

JAS. A. LIBBY.

Normal Institute
AND MANUAL LABOR ACADEMY.
REED'S FERRY, N. H.

The next term of this Academy commences Feb. 18th, and continues eleven weeks, under the instruction of H. E. Brown, A. B. For circular, address H. E. BROWN, Reed's Ferry, N. H.

Maine Central Quar. Conference.

This conference is expected to be holden at the Town House in Rome, commencing Thursday, March 3d, at 6 o'clock, P. M. Come, brethren, let us come up to the help of the Lord, and encourage and strengthen each other. Watchmen and brethren of other conferences are invited. Provision will be made for all. Call on Eld. L. L. Howard, Bros. Martin, Watson, Fletcher, Bleasdell, and others. Let us meet in the spirit of the truth, prepared to do the commandments of our Master with humility. D. W. GRIFFIN, Clerk.

Maine Eastern Quarterly Conference.

A quarterly conference will be held at Lincolnville Centre, Me., commencing Thursday evening, at 7 o'clock, Feb. 25th, and continue over the Sabbath following. Brethren from abroad will call on Bros. G. McKenny, E. Calderwood, D. Fletcher, E. Blood, S. Wadsworth, E. Young, and M. Young. A general invitation is given to all our brethren, etc.

M. YOUNG, Secretary.

Meeting in Canaan, Me.

There will be a protracted meeting in Canaan, Me. at the Salisbury meeting-house, commencing Friday evening, Feb. 19th. Brethren and sisters from abroad, and all interested, are invited to attend.

L. L. HOWARD,
D. M. HANSCOM.

Tract Notice.

Elder I. C. Wellcome, Yarmouth, Me., has a good supply of tracts and books, hymn books, etc., published by the C. P. Society, and by H. L. Hastings and others. Also, a great variety of other best works on the Advent, and inheritance of the saints.

Notice.

Elder Thomas Smith, Bangor, Me., has on hand for sale H. L. Hastings' "Signs of the Times," with an assortment of his various Tracts; also, the Tracts by Miles Grant, on "The Soul," "The Spirit," and "What is Man?" and other Advent tracts.

A Liberal Offer.

Being satisfied that time is short, and that what is done must be done quickly; and feeling anxious to do what we can to arouse a sleeping world and church, we make the following liberal offer:—

Any one who will send three or more new subscribers to the Crisis for six months or one year, with advance pay for the same, shall receive one third the value of the money sent, in any of our books and tracts they may select. For instance, if they send three dollars, they receive one dollar's worth of books or tracts; for six dollars, we send them two dollars' worth; for twelve dollars, four dollars' worth, etc.

Let every reader take hold of the work in earnest, and help scatter tracts, books and papers like autumnal leaves.

MILES GRANT, per order of
Publishing Committee.

Appointments.

We would say to our preaching Brethren that it is necessary we should receive their appointments as early as TUESDAY MORNING, as our paper goes to press about noon; otherwise they will not be inserted till the week following.

LOWELL STREET CHAPEL, BOSTON, CORNER OF CAUSEWAY AND LOWELL STREETS. Meetings are held regularly three times every Sunday, and Tuesday and Friday evenings. Seats free.

APPOINTMENT FOR LOWELL STREET CHAPEL.

H. L. Hastings .... Sunday, Feb. 14th and onward for the present.

Alton, N. H., Saturday evening, and Lord's day, Feb. 14th. MILES GRANT.

Dansville, N. Y. .... Feb. 14th
Bristol, N. Y. .... Wednesday evening, Feb. 17th and every evening through the week, and Sunday, Feb. 21st, at 10 1-2 A. M.
Honeoye, 2 o'clock, P. M. .... Feb. 21st
Dansville .... Feb. 28th
F. BURR.

New Britain, Ct. .... Sunday, Feb. 14th
R. H. LADD.

APPOINTMENTS FOR HOLLIS, ME.

I. C. Wellcome .... Sunday, Feb. 21st
W. H. Mitchell .... Sunday, Feb. 28th

Plymouth, Mass. .... Feb. 11th and over Sunday. J. M. MURLIO.

Lawrence, Mass. .... Sunday, Feb. 14th
J. G. SMITH.

Hoosick Falls, N. Y. .... Friday, Feb. 19th and over the Sunday following.
H. F. CARPENTER.

Troy, or Lansingburg, N. Y., (as the brethren may appoint) .... Sunday, Feb. 14th
H. PRATT.

Seneca Falls, N. Y. .... Feb. 14th and through the week.
Warehouse Point, Conn .... Feb. 21st through the week, and Sunday the 28th.
S. S. BREWER.

Griswoldville, Mass .... Feb. 17th to continue evenings and over the following Sabbath.
Vernon, Vt. .... Sunday, Feb. 28th
J. HEMENWAY.

Richmond, Me., (Reed meeting-house), Sunday, Feb. 14th.
Augusta, Me., (in the Hall) .... Sunday, Feb. 21st
N. O. REED.

Lower Gilmanton, N. H. .... Feb. 14th
London Ridge, N. H. .... Feb. 21st
C. S. EMERSON.

South Reading, Mass. .... Sunday, Feb. 14th
Lawrence, Mass. .... Sunday, Feb. 21st
Concord, N. H. .... Sunday, Feb. 28th
JOSEPH W. WHITE.

Vernon, Vt. .... Sunday, Feb 14th
West Brattleboro, Vt. .... Sunday, Feb. 21st
GEORGE CHAMPLIN.

Hampton, N. H., (where Bro. Pike may appoint), Friday evening, Feb. 19th, and the following Saturday and Sunday, A. SIMPSON.

Central .... Sunday, March 6th
Coventry, (Town House) .... evening, March 8th
Summit .... evening, March 10th
North Scituate .... Sunday, March 13th
North Poster .... Sunday, March 20th
Gloucester .... Sunday, March 27th
Blackstone, Mass. .... Sunday, April 3d
If any of these appointments conflict, please write to me. J. K. BELLOWS.

South Wayne, (Jenkins school-house), Friday evening, Feb. 12th.
South Livermore .... Saturday evening, Feb. 13th and over the following Sabbath.
J. T. JORDAN.

Milo or Sebec .... Sunday, Feb. 14th
THOMAS SMITH.

Portsmouth, N. H. .... Sunday, Feb. 14th
Biddeford, Me .... Sunday, Feb. 21st
WM. H. MITCHELL.

Scitico .... Feb. 14th
Boston, (Lowell Street Chapel) Friday evening, Feb. 19th
Portsmouth, N. H. .... Sabbaths, Feb. 21st and 28th
Evenings between not engaged.
Exeter, N. H. .... Tuesday evening, March 1st
Haverhill, Mass. .... Wednesday evening, March 2d
Salem, Mass. .... Thursday evening, March 3d
H. MUNGER.

Alton Corner, N. H. .... Sunday, Feb. 14th
J. COUCH.

Warner Village (Union Hall) .... Sunday, Feb. 14th
East Andover .... Tuesday evening, Feb. 16th
A. MERRY.

East Hartland, Ct .... Sunday, Feb. 14th as Bro. Gains may arrange.
Hope to see the brethren and sisters from adjacent towns at this meeting.
Collinsville, Ct. .... Sunday, Feb. 21st
C. GOODRICH.

Springfield, (at Bro. Morgan's) .... Saturday, Feb. 13th
Agawam .... Sunday, Feb. 14th
I. H. POTTER.

Warehouse Point, Ct. (Adams Hall), Sunday, Feb. 14th
WM. A. FENN.

London Ridge, N. H. .... Sunday, Feb. 14th
Pittsfield, (where Bro. Mooney may appoint), evenings, Feb. 16th and 17th.
North Barnstead .... evening, Feb. 18th
Clark Meeting-house .... Sunday, Feb. 21st
Wolfborough, (where Bro. Walker may appoint), Monday evening, Feb. 22d. T. W. PIPER.

Goshen, Mass. .... Feb. 14th
Plainfield, Mass., (at Bro. J. E. Healy's) Feb. 16th–17th
Plainfield, Mass., (at Bro. David Thayer's) .... Feb. 18th
Plainfield Pond .... Feb. 19th
Savoy, Mass. .... Feb. 21st
Dalton, Mass .... Feb. 22d and through the week as Brn. Warren and Smith may arrange.
North Adams, Mass. .... Feb. 28th
Charlemont, Mass., (at Bro. Cudworth's), March 1st–2d
Christian Hill, Mass., (as Bro. Tenny may arrange) March 3d and 4th.
Griswoldville, Mass .... March 6th
Northfield Farms, Mass., (at Bro. A. Morgan's), March 8th. GEO. A. STREETER.

APPOINTMENTS FOR BRISTOL, CT.

S. B. Munn .... Sunday, Feb. 14th
Bro. St. John .... Sunday, Feb. 28th

Haverhill, Mass. .... Feb. 14th
A. SIMPSON.

Ossipee, Leighton Corner .... Feb 14th
N. HARRISON.

The Plains, Appanaug .... Feb. 14th
River Point, R. I .... Feb. 21st–2 th
I desire to fill up the week as brethren may arrange.
J. K. BELLOWS.

Exeter, N. H. .... Feb. 21st, and 28th
A. ROSS.

Danielsonville, Ct .... Feb. 14th
J. W. BRITTAN.

Business.

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

E. Bryson—Has been sent regularly.
Chas. Stratton—Are out of that kind now. Will have some in a few days.
C Bond and O. Kimball—Your remittances last Dec. were received and acknowledged in No. 431.
S. D. Daniel—To No. 407.
E. Tibbetts—To No. 483, Jan 1st, 1865.

CASH RECEIPTS TO FEB. 4, 1864.

The present No. of the Crisis is 433.

The No. which follows your name, is the No. to which your money pays. Deduct the one from the other, and you will see how far you have paid in advance, or how much is due the office. Make a memorandum of the same, and you will be reminded when your subscription expires.

S Knight 470, J Newell 460, R Hunt 460, M B Hubbel 470, A M Humphreville 455, E A Prescott 457, Mrs H McAlpine 341, C Willard 461, G Wheeler 419, M L Calder 461, N Wheeler 462, S B Bliss 452, N Blodgett 440, D Grant 442, D Clark 442, Mrs S A Macomber 4?0, M Osman 460, M E Trafton 460, Wm Shattuck 460, Mrs M F Hunt 460, H S Barton 457, A B Cook 455, L Cook 400, J. S. Morgan 432, Edward (Joel) Jones 421, S. C. Smith 404, Mrs A Case 455, Wm Elden 461, M Lancton 461, G Morgan 464, J Luther 461, L Wright 461, S Abbott 461, J H Jordan 461, J Partridge 447, H Greeley [illegible], S M Hasty 461, J Bickford 451, M E Murphy 451, S Tracy 461, C Judson 487, Mrs M Underhood 461, D J Burditt 461, E M Rice 454, Mrs B Stiles 433, G E Smith [illegible], H. Watt 461, J. Shefield 461, Mrs. M. J. Hammond 461, J J Gibberson 461, Mrs J E Wood 447, M A Rockwell 445, Mrs E Burnham 461, G Hall 461, S C Wilcox 403, T J Wetherell 455, G R Coburn 442, J Clothey 461,—$1.00 each.

W Green 483, E Potter 475, C Wilton 491, Mrs A Dunham 486, J C Safford 444, A Y Culver 446, D Austin 473, F Cummings 486, W H Donaldson 48?, T Applegate 486, W McCulloch 476, L M Whitney 462, G W Mingle 486, P Curtis 406, L Wade 438, A P Morril 481, M Young 461, E Young 486, J L Wiggin 487, Z Fairfield 487, Mrs J G Clark 487, C Greene 479, A P Hyde 423, W S Fulton 487, G Godfrey 487, W S Darling 487, E B Nelson 483, B Graves 473, S F Field 487, S Crispin 454, L Storrs 465, M Fiske 435, G B Keach 487, I Young 494, A Cooper 477, M L Lawrence 472, Mrs I B Northrup 487, J F Furber 487,—$2.00 each.

D. Morse 431, H. N. Watts 447, Miss H. P. Vankirk 444, R Gould 445, O B Holt 447, J G Kelly 446, A Watties 444,—50c each.

G. Hooper 75c, 414; J. Ellis $1.20, 442; R. Gibson $3.00, 416; J. S. Potter 70c, 434; D. McFarland $3.00, 442; D W Comstock $1.25, 470; Mrs S Folsom $11.55, 418; E Tibbetts $3.23, 483; J R Savage $4.00, 3?9; J L Rich $3.00, 335; L M Cottrell $3.00, 455; S R Hathorn $3.00, 516.

FOR BOOKS AND TRACTS.

B Wilson $5.00, J A Cleaveland $1.00, M E Trafton 30c, D W Comstock $3.75, S C Wilcox 50c, D T Taylor $1.00, S Crispin 25c, Z Fairfield $1.45.

TO SEND CRISIS TO THE POOR.—Wm. Nichols, $2.00, D. D. Chaffee, $1.00.

BOOKS AND TRACTS SENT.

BY MAIL.

I K Lombard, Hawleyville, Iowa; S W Bartlett, W. Stafford, Ct.; C H Leverton, Surry, Me; S Crispin, Cortica, O.; J A Layton, Liberty Cor., N. J.; N A Hitchcock, Warren, Ill.; J Bickford, Great Falls, N. H; S C Wilcox, Centreville, W. Va.; W. Nichols, Albany, N. Y.; J Morrison, New Glasgow, C. E.; D W Comstock, Keene, N. H.; S. M. Griswold, Alexandria, Va.; J. B. Bell, Augusta, Me.; S. E. Trott, Middleport, Ill.; S W Worthington, N. Bennington, Vt.; H Rotherham, Cascade, Iowa; L. E. Hendrix, Montgomery, Vt.; J. D. Brown, Brockport, N. Y.; G W Rathburn, Cordova, Ill.; E. Town, Reading, Mich.; L. H. Davis, La Claire, Ill; F B Jones, Florence, Mass.; A G Lombard, Rochester, Minn.

LETTERS RECEIVED.

W. L. Seward, A. M. Smith, W H Ball, L Boutell, J Croffut, A W Fisk, G W Stetson, G W Hurd, P Green, H H Cheney, Minerva, S S Wardwell, C W Swett, W H Mitchell, G W Rathbun, I C Wellcome, J Ozanne, S B Roter, M R Hook, S S Brewer, Mary L Pratt, C H Williams, A. Dow, T. M. Preble, Chas Greene, G W Stetson, A. A. Lason, I K Lombard, F. H. Burbank, P. Burr, Mrs C A Knowles, A P Allen, E. M. Rice, A M Hollis, D T Taylor 2, S K Ford, C Stratton, C H Sweet, N L Willard, L L Howard, S B Swift, C S E, J Taylor, L P Hastings.

POST OFFICE ADDRESS.

Elder J. V. Himes—Buchanan, Mich.
P. W. Hough—Fairbank, Buchanan Co, Iowa.
S. S. Brewer—South Glastenbury, Ct.

English Bibles for Sale.

1. DIAMOND, fine print, full references, morocco bound, $1.50; calf, $1.25; roan, gilt, $1.00; flexible binding, $1.00. Postage 12 cents.
2. PEARL, flat, full references, morocco, $2.25; roan, $1.50. Postage 16 cts.
3. NONPAREIL, 16 mo., references between the verses, or references in the margin, morocco, $3.00; calf, $2.50; roan, $2.00; references between verses, with gilt rims and clasps, $3.00. Postage 20 cts.
4. MINION, references between the verses, roan, $2.50. Postage 25 cts.
5. MINION, 8vo.; marginal ref., flat and clear type, roan, $2.50.
6. TESTAMENTS, roan, gilt, smallest 25 cts; larger, 33 cts. Postage 6 cts.

Address MILES GRANT, Boston, Mass.

Price Reduced.

RESURRECTION OF THE WICKED. Discussion between M. Grant and J. T. Curry.

The advertised price of this Discussion is 25 cents, postage 2 cents. We have a quantity of them on hand, and will sell them hereafter for 20 cts., postage 2 cts. Send on your orders.

PHOTOGRAPHS OF ELD. EDWIN BURNHAM. A few copies of a large, beautiful and life-like Photograph, which the friends of Bro. Burnham will be glad to obtain. Sent by mail for $1.00. Those wishing them should order at once.

BOOKS AND TRACTS.

[illegible]

MILES GRANT'S WORKS.

Resurrection of the Wicked. Discussion with Jos. T. Curry. [illegible]

Eternal Suffering. Discussion with Dr. J. Litch. [illegible]

Spiritualism. Discussion with J. S. Loveland. [illegible]

State of the Dead. Discussion with W. W. Clayton. [illegible]

Miles Grant's Tracts. 32 pages each. Price 5 cents [illegible]

What is Man? A Bible view of his creation; [illegible]

The Soul, What is it? Or a careful examination of [illegible]

The Spirit, What is it? Or a careful examination [illegible]

The Rich Man and Lazarus. Thief on the Cross; [illegible]

TRACTS

Issued by the Christian Publication Society.

[illegible]

FREE TO THE POOR.

The Church not in Darkness; or, the duties of the times; [illegible] By H. L. Hastings.

The Three Worlds; or, earth, past, present, and future. [illegible] By H. L. Hastings. 24 pages.

The Last Days. A calm, scriptural, and convincing argument, [illegible]

Plain Truths; or, Scripture and Tradition united. A condensed view of [illegible] By H. L. Hastings. 32 pages.

Will all Men be Saved? A pointed, pithy, earnest and conclusive argument against Universalism, [illegible] By H. L. Hastings. 20 pages.

A Voice of Warning from the Four Winds. A compilation of brief and thrilling testimonies [illegible] By D. T. Taylor. 24 pages.

The New Heavens and New Earth. A collection of testimonies [illegible] By D. T. Taylor. 20 pages.

Ancient Landmarks. Six tracts of four pages each, [illegible]

The Duty of Christians in the present crisis. [illegible] By H. L. Hastings. [illegible] 24 pages.

State of the Dead. By John Milton, author of "Paradise Lost," being extracts from his "Treatise on Christian Doctrine," giving his views upon the nature and condition of man in life and death. 24 pages.

Silence of the Scriptures respecting the Immortality of the soul, or of the race, or of the lost. By C. F. Hudson. [illegible] 24 pages.

Immortality Through Christ Alone. The doctrine safe and salutary. By C. F. Hudson. 29 pages.

The Destiny of the Wicked. A solid mass of Scripture quotations, without note or comment, upon this subject. Arranged by H. L. Hastings. 12 pages.

The Advent at Hand. A summary of reasons for expecting the speedy close of the present, and the ushering in of a new dispensation. 24 pages.

BOOKS PUBLISHED BY H. L. HASTINGS,
167 HANOVER STREET, BOSTON, MASS.
Single copies sent by mail, postpaid, on receipt of the price.

The Signs of the Times; or, A Glance at Christendom as it is. By H. L. Hastings. Third edition. Enlarged. [illegible] pages. Cloth, extra, $1.00. Paper, 75c.

[illegible]

The Voice of the Church on the Coming and Kingdom of the Redeemer; or, a History of the Doctrine of the Reign of Christ on Earth. By D. T. Taylor. Edited and prefaced by H. L. Hastings. [illegible] Price $1.00.

[illegible]

Spiritualism a Satanic Delusion and a Sign of the Times. By William Ramsey, D. D. Edited by H. L. H. Price, cloth, 40c. Paper, 15c.

[illegible]

Thessalonica; or The Model Church. A sketch of Primitive Christianity. By H. L. H. [illegible] Paper, 20c. Cloth, 35c.

[illegible]

The Great Controversy between God and Man. Its origin, progress, and end. A sketch of man's "Secession and Rebellion." By H. L. Hastings. [illegible] Paper, 25c. Cloth, 50c.

[illegible]

Reasons for my Hope, and the Tokens of its Speedy Realization. By H. L. Hastings. [illegible] Paper, 25c. Cloth, 40c.

[illegible]

Thessalonica and Reasons for my Hope. Bound in one volume. Cloth, 75 cents.

Looking Forward, or the Prospects of the Church; being the concluding chapter of the Signs of the Times. Paper, 10 cents.

Future Punishment, as revealed in the Scriptures, in opposition to the Three Theories of Never-ending Sin and Misery, Eternal Sleep without any Resurrection, and Universal Salvation. By H. L. Hastings. Cloth, $1. Paper, 60c.

[illegible]

Pauline Theology; or, The Scripture Doctrine of Future Punishment, as taught in the Epistles of Paul. By H. L. Hastings. [illegible] Paper, 10c.

[illegible]

The Old Paths; or, the Primitive Doctrine of a Future Life. By H. L. Hastings. [illegible] Paper 12c.

[illegible]

Retribution; or, The Doom of the Ungodly, after the Resurrection of the Dead, Just and Unjust. By H. L. H. Paper, 10 cents.

[illegible]

C. F. HUDSON'S WORKS.

Debt and Grace. Or the Doctrine of a Future Life. By C. F. Hudson. [illegible] price $1.25—post paid.

Christ our Life. The Scriptural Argument for Immortality through Christ alone. [illegible]

Human Destiny. A Critique on Universalism. [illegible]

The Doctrine of Endless Misery an occasion of Scepticism. [illegible]

Eternal Death in the literal sense is Eternal Punishment. [illegible]

The Rich Man and Lazarus. With remarks on Josephus. [illegible]

The Rights of Wrong; or, is Evil Eternal? With Reply to Dr. Mansel. [illegible]

Reviewers Reviewed. New edition with replies to articles in the Quarterlies, [illegible]

JACOB BLAIN'S WORKS.

Death not Life; or, The Destruction of the Wicked Scripturally established. [illegible]

Glad Tidings; or, Bible Proof that Woe and Sin are to end in the universe by a literal destruction of wicked men and devils after the day of Judgment. [illegible]

The Wicked not Immortal. Two hundred texts quoted to prove their destruction. [illegible]

Bible Meaning of the Word Hell. [illegible]

Endless Misery not a Bible Doctrine. [illegible]

Smoke of Torment and Unquenchable Fire Explained. [illegible]

The above five Tracts are parts of Death not Life.

Bible Meaning of Forever and Everlasting. [illegible]

Letter of Rev. John Foster on Future Punishment. [illegible]

☞ All orders for any of the above works should be addressed to MILES GRANT, Boston, Mass.

bring them in, that his house might be filled. We went and told the good news to all whom we thought would come, and the results was, our efforts were rewarded by seeing many poor souls revived and strengthened.

Yes, the Lord is renewing his work in our midst. From two or three, we have increased to a house full, and still they come. Many of the old soldiers are re-enlisting, and quite a number of new recruits have come in, and those, too, whom we least expected. They are now waiting for a mustering officer. One or two whom we had almost given up have come back, and are laboring most manfully in the cause.

O! this does us good. We do not have much preaching, but a great deal of praying. Here we believe is the secret of our success. We all try to do our duty by taking up our cross and speaking for Jesus, and it is quite remarkable how very easy it soon becomes. Yet it should not be strange either, for Jesus told us that his "yoke was easy," but we poor sinners did not believe him.

Sunday does not come often enough, so we meet once or twice a week, and we go away every time with our hearts brim full of love to God and man. Quite an interest is manifested outside of our little circle, and we believe that many will yet be brought to see the truth as revealed in the Bible.

May God still continue to bless us and add to our numbers such as shall be saved.

N. T. WILLARD.

Rochester, N. Y., Feb. 2d, 1864.

From Bro. L. A. Gilbert.

BRO. GRANT:—Have read your paper with an increasing interest for nearly three years. I welcome it as I do a much-loved and tried friend. Have never known an individual without faults, neither have I ever known a newspaper without the same. I sometimes notice assertions in the Crisis that savor of sectarianism, bigotry, and the like—such as will drive people from the truth rather than attract to it, but, in the main, I consider it an exception among the productions of these last days.

Above all the rest am glad of the position it takes with regard to war and Spiritualism. The former I consider as contrary to the teachings of the New Testament, and consequently we, as christians, cannot engage in it. The latter I consider, with all its accompaniments, truly the king of sins among us. It has been my lot to see much of its direful influence on some of my dearest friends. Not in the form of "rappings," "furniture-moving," etc., but through the teaching of popular theology; yes, popular with some of the most learned and refined in the land—Swedenborgianism! I believe it to be not one step removed from Spiritualism, but part and parcel of the same. And is not our most approved literature all tinctured with the same? And is not all orthodoxy drifting there? Where, O my Father, I ask, are we who profess to believe in immortality only through Christ? Are we stopping over our neighbors' sins, or are we "laying aside every weight and pressing forward toward the mark of the prize? Let us not slumber now on the verge of the world's destruction!

"Whatsoe'er afflictions seize us,
They shall profit, if not please;
But defend, defend us, Jesus,
From security and ease."

May the Lord God Omnipotent help thee, my brother, in thy responsible station! With bowed head, "cry aloud and spare not," knowing that God will "guide the meek in judgment, and the meek will he teach his way."

Dryden Springs, N. Y. L. A. GILBERT.

From Bro. H. K. Flagg.

BRO. GRANT:—I wish to say to those where I have promised to come and preach, that I cannot send my appointments to the Crisis at present, for my work is with the lost sheep of Israel. I believe in reformation still, and feel that my work is in the highways and hedges; and, when I go into a new place, I cannot tell how long I shall feel it my duty to stay. I am preaching at Holliston, Mass. Have been here since last Friday evening. We have the Town Hall. The interest increases every meeting. Yesterday we had a large audience, and last evening the hall was filled. A number came forward for prayers, and many more appear to be anxious about their eternal interests. How long the meeting may continue I cannot tell. Those who are willing to take hold in good earnest and labor for the salvation of sinners, and wish for my labors, may address me at this place. This is a new field. Pray for us. Yours in the blessed hope, H. K. FLAGG.

Holliston, Mass., Feb. 8th, 1864.

From Bro. Chas. Stratton.

BRO. GRANT:—My heart has been made sad by the loss of my dear father and mother. In the short space of two months we laid them down side by side in the lonely graveyard, but not without hope of a resurrection to immortallity and eternal life, beyond the power of death and the tomb. They have been worthy members of the christian church in Albian for more than thirty years. Under their christian influence I lived many years, till made to feel that I must leave all if I would follow Christ. Accordingly I left the parental roof, with Bible in hand, to invite sinners to Christ. Since that time, I have had the privilege of visiting my parents occasionally and bowing around the family altar, with my dear father to lead in prayer. But, alas! my heart and former home are made desolate indeed. God grant we may be reunited in the kingdom. CHAS. STRATTON.

Cornville, Feb. 1st, 1864.

From Bro. S. E. Mabay.

BRO GRANT:—I would say that we as a band of brethren here at Amboy are growing stronger in love, and in the unity of the Spirit and bonds of peace. We meet twice a week for prayer and mutual benefit, exhorting one another so much the more as we see the day of God approaching, that we may continue in the faith, rooted and grounded, and not be moved away from the hope of the gospel. If ever the children of the Most High had reason to be strong in faith, giving glory to God, now is the time. And we are that class. While governments and systems of men's devising are trembling and tottering to their fall, we expect a kingdom which cannot be shaken, but will stand forever, and will not be left to another people.

We expect soon to be translated into Paradise restored; to be made immortal like our dear Savior, by that same Spirit that raised him from the dead; expecting to meet with loved ones now sleeping, whom in bitterness of heart and sorrow we laid away, but not without hope. They will soon sing that triumphant song—"O death, where is thy sting? O grave, where is thy victory?" We expect soon to see the King in his beauty and glory riding down the shining pathway of heaven, with a bright retinue of angels to gather his chosen ones from the four quarters of the earth to Mount Zion. They will come with songs of everlasting joy, and sorrow will forever flee away. Dear waiting ones, let us live every moment so that we may not be disappointed in sharing in the glories soon to be revealed.

My faith never was stronger. We highly prize the Crisis. I mean to extend its circulation. You have our prayers.

Yours in hope, S. E. MABEY.

From Bro. J. M. Moulton.

BRO. GRANT:—Though this new settlement is reputed the country over as comprising many that seek after "familiar spirits," yet I cannot but think that there is a leaven working in our midst. When I see the bundle of Crisis papers distributed at our office each week, I find that they are sought after by some of that class of unbelievers. And I would say for the encouragement of the little flock scattered abroad, there is a small church of believers here, waiting for the "redemption of Israel."

Brethren and sisters, we are living in perilous times. Let us hold fast to the "faith once delivered to the saints." The driving storm will soon be over, and we shall be safe in the everlasting kingdom.

Your Bro., hoping to be gathered with God's elect when Christ shall come,

Hammonton, N. J. J. M. MOULTON.

From Eld. L. Boutell.

BRN. GRANT AND HASTINGS:—I was glad to see in the Crisis an intimation that there would be a conference in Boston soon for the believers to come together and consult and confer upon the best method of increasing our effort in every department of christian activity to save our fellow men. I doubt not such a meeting will quicken into more united action in the great cause. This is emphatically the time to work. Let us come together, pray with and for one another, confess and forsake the wrong, and take hold of the right. There are better times in most places, and the Lord is gracious and willing to save. Then let us all come up to the work in earnest. Yours in hope of a meeting,

Groton, Feb. 5th. L. BOUTELL.

Obituaries.

CALVIN T. LIVERMORE.

Died in Virginia, in camp, near Brandy Station, Dec. 24th, 1863, of dropsy and kidney complaint, Sergeant Calvin T. Livermore, of Sebec, son of Joshua and Mary Livermore, aged twenty-five years, one month and thirteen days.

He was a member of Camp T. of the 6th Maine Vols. Such was the strong attachment of the company of which he was a member, that they raised a hundred dollars, and had him embalmed and sent home to his deeply afflicted friends, for which they take the opportunity to express their unfeigned gratitude.

Justice to the memory of our esteemed friend demands some further remarks. Calvin was cradled in piety, early sought and found the pearl of great price, and retained his devotion to God to the end of his short pilgrimage. Amiable in his disposition, and sympathetic in his associations, he won for himself friends in every sphere in which he moved. Hence the kindness of his fellow soldiers in so readily embalming him when dead, the deep and heartfelt sorrow of lover, parents, brothers, sisters, and friends, and the large, attentive, and feeling congregation who attended the funeral to sympathize with relatives and friends, while they were exhorted by the writer to comfort one another with these words, 1 Thess. 4: 13.

THOMAS SMITH.

Herald of Life, please copy.

MARY CRANE.

Died in Hartford, Conn., Jan. 4th, Mrs. Mary Crane, aged seventy-four, after a protracted illness, which she suffered with christian patience and resignation.

To the last her faith in God was firm and unshaken. Sister Crane experienced religion in early life, and has ever maintained the character of a christian. Her life was varied. She was called to endure many and severe trials, through which, though painful and sorrowful, she always triumphed in Christ, looking to the end of all her trials, the consummation of the christian's hope. Much might be said of the love she evinced to the followers of Christ, as many will remember who have shared the hospitalities of her house. The death of a beloved and only daughter a few years since seemed to ripen her for the kingdom of God.

Her remains were interred in Warehouse Point burial ground, to await the morning of the resurrection. "Blessed are the dead who die in the Lord . . . yea, saith the spirit, for they rest from their labors, and their works do follow them.

L. J. R.

WILLIAM A. STANWOOD.

Fell asleep on Tuesday morning, Jan. 26th, 1864, in Salem, Mass., William A., infant son of William H. and Mary E. Stanwood, aged nineteen months, fifteen days.

Bro. and Sr. Stanwood have been deeply afflicted They have, within a few years, been bereft by the "enemy" of three little ones. Willie had just recovered from a long fever, and his parents were filled with joy and gratitude, when their child was attacked by the membraneous croup, and in a short time expired in great agony.

Our brother and sister sorrow not even as others that have no hope; for they know that their little ones "shall come again from the land of the enemy." Three cords have been broken that bound them to this world; but now, a three-fold cord binds them to the kingdom of heaven. The writer endeavored to comfort their hearts by reading the promises of God's word.

F. H. BURBANK.

LUCRETIA JOHNSON.

Died, Nov. 17th, 1863, aged seventy-two years, six months.

She calmly and peacefully closed her eyes in death after a severe sickness of many days. We called on her a few days before she died, and found that although she was nearing the valley of the shadow of death, yet she feared no evil. Confident was she that He in whom she had believed, was able to bring her from the very dust to sing praises anew to him, when death should be swallowed up in victory, and the rebuke of his people should be wiped away.

May the friends that are left to mourn strive to check the unavailing tear as they remember that it is "well with her," and that he "giveth his beloved sleep." When he shall redeem his people from death, and shall bring again Zion, we hope to meet this beloved mother in Israel, where—

"Death divided friends shall meet,
And meet to part no more."

A. M. HOLLIS.

HELEN E. COLE.

Died at Berlin Falls, N. H., Jan. 10th, 1864, of diphtheria, Helen E. Cole, daughter of Daniel and Polly Green, aged twenty years, three months and fifteen days.

She has left a husband and daughter, with a large circle of friends, to mourn her departure. She was beloved and respected by all who knew her. Her funeral was attended by Eld. Pettingel, of Milan. Text, "Set your affections on things above, and not on things on the earth." F. G.

FREDDY, OTTIWELL, AND ALBA EASTMAN.

Died in Orange, N. H., Jan. 21st, 1864, of diphtheria, Freddy E., son of Enoch C. and Mary N. Eastman, aged two years and eleven days.

Also, Jan. 22d, 1864, of diphtheria, Ottiwell, and Alba J., sons of the above, aged respectively six years, four months, eight days, and seven years, seven months, and six days.

Hard indeed is our Bro. and Sr.'s lot while they have so suddenly been called to part with all their loved ones, except one little babe. May God's grace sustain them in this their affliction and bereavement, and they be enabled to shine as lights in the world, that they may shine with those loved ones in the kingdom of God. They desire the prayers of all God's children, that they may bear this affliction with christian fortitude.

S. K. FORD.

EDGAR S. EASTMAN.

Died in Orange, N. H., Jan. 22d, 1864, of diphtheria, Edgar S., only son of Daniel and Hannah A. Eastman, aged five years, three months, and twenty-six days.

Our brother and sister feel that heavy indeed is the blow that has thus fallen upon them. But they are comforted with the hope that soon, yea, very soon their loved one will come again from the land of the enemy, and come to his own border, and that they with him shall inherit the land promised to the faithful. S. K. FORD.

GEO. W. SWIFT.

Fell asleep in Jesus, Nov. 25th, 1863, George W. Swift, son of Henry F. and Sarah B. Swift, of Meredith, N. H., aged twelve years, six months, twenty-one days.

It was no lingering illness which bore the deceased away from earth. He was taken sick Sunday morning, and died Wednesday afternoon, of scarlet fever, canker rash and diphtheria. His father, who is in the army, mother, brothers and sisters, mourn his loss.

Funeral sermon by Bro. Bunday. Text, Heb. 9: 27, 28.

MORDENNA HOLLAND.

Died at Lafayette, Mordenna Holland, aged nine years, nine months, twenty-seven days.

Death has again taken its victim. But we rejoice that our brother and sister have the consoling thought of Jesus and the resurrection soon to come, when they, together with all those that have laid their little ones down to sleep, will be made to rejoice. God sanctify this to the afflicted ones.

ALBERT P. ALLEN.

SALLY KIDDER.

Died in Albion, Me., Jan. 12th, 1864, Sally, wife of Benjamin Kidder, aged seventy-seven years and eleven months.

This excellent woman has been an exemplary christian for over forty years. She died in hope of soon being brought from death in the likeness of Jesus. God comfort the lonely husband and children with the hope of her soon being ransomed from the power of the grave. L. L. HOWARD.

Fell asleep Jan. 17th, in Earlville, Lasalle Co., Ill., the infant child of Isaac and Clarissa Stafford, being sixteen days old.

Discourse by the writer, from the words of King Solomon. Eccl. 12: 1. I. R. TOWLE.

FRANKLIN H. STEVENS.

Died in Orange, N. H., Jan. 20th, 1864, of diphtheria, Franklin H., son of Samuel H. and Belinda W. Stevens, aged fourteen years, one month, and eighteen days. S. K. FORD.

Summary of News.

FOREIGN.

Paris, Jan. 24. Before assuming the reins of government Maximillian will await the return of the Mexican Deputation, who offered him the crown on the 3d of october, with the vote of the Mexican notables and a decision of certain cities specified by the Archduke, who demanded that the vote of the notables should be ratified by a vote of the Mexican principal councils. The mission of the French expedition will be accomplished by the middle of January. The deputation was expected to return to France by the first fortnight in Februrary and will proceed to Miramar to announce to the Archduke his election. The Archduke will not only accept, but immediately assume the sceptre and visit Paris in the quality of the Emperor of Mexico.

A Kiel telegram of the 22d says the Danish outposts were ordered to retire on the approach of the Prussian troops. It is expected that the Danes will defend Dannerwicke to the last extremity. The Prussian Chamber has adopted a resolution opposing the policy of Prussia in separating herself from the other German States, and threatening every resistance thereto.

The London Times of the 21st has a report that Denmark has offered to suspend the obnoxious constitution, and adds, if such an offer has really been made it will for a time avert the imminent danger of a war.

It is stated that the English squadron will be ordered to Heligoland.

BERLIN, Jan. 20. The Prussian and Austrian troops march without delay into Schleswig under Marshal Van Wragel.

STUTGARD, Jan. 20. The Chamber of Deputies to-day resolved to place the army of Wurtemburg on a war footing and place a certain number of troops at the immediate disposal of the confederation.

JAPAN NOT WARLIKE.—The Kanagawa correspondent of the New York Tribune says of recent Japanese events already published:

"But of one thing we may be sure, that this ready coming to terms of Satsuma, clearly indicates that Japan will have no war with the Treaty Powers unless forced into it. The Treaty Powers may be compelled to a large forbearance, certainly to employ a careful skill to avoid war, but Japan does not wish to fight. Three centuries of peace have enervated her sword-arm. Or we may assign, perhaps, a more creditable reason, that she alone of all the Oriental nations has had the sagacity to avoid conflict with the Western Powers, knowing its futility."

THE HOLY PLACES.—M. de Sauley, a Frenchman, is at Jerusalem, exploring the graves of the prophets. He has taken the sarcophagus and the bones it contained from the tomb of St. Kelba Lebona, and declared that he would do the same with the other holy burial places. The Jews took alarm at this, and telegraphed to the Rothschilds and other powerful Israelites in Europe, who obtained an order from the Turkish Grand Vizier forbidding further molestation of the tombs.

DOMESTIC.

Huntsville, Ala., Jan. 31st. I have just arrived here from Chattanooga. Before I left Gen. Palmer just arrived from a reconnoissance to Ringgold and Dalton. The main force of the enemy had undoubtedly left, and Gen. Palmer thinks they marched towards Longstreet for the purpose of invading Kentucky.

Since arriving here I have obtained information which satisfies me that Hardee has reinforced Mobile. An attack was undoubtedly made on Mobile within five days past. Persons here have solicited information to go through our lines to attend relatives wounded at Mobile. Positive information may soon be expected of an attack on that place and its probable fall.

NEWBERN, Feb. 1st,
Via Fortress Monroe, Feb. 2d.

To Major-General Butler:

Early this morning our outposts at Bachelor's Creek were attacked by the enemy, represented to be a force of about 15,000 strong, consisting of Thoke's brigade and Picket's entire division. It being impracticable to make an adequate defence, our force fell back in good order, destroying the camps, abandoning but few stores, with a loss of fifty to one hundred men and one section of light artillery. Our forces are now so arranged that we are confident of a successful resistance.

Almost simultaneously with this attack the enemy advanced on the south side of the Trent, with what force it is difficult to estimate, and were handsomely repulsed. Communication continues with Morehead City, but the enemy are near the road with the evident intention of cutting it. The commander at Beaufort is aware of the situation, and will use every effort to prevent any interruption of the road.

(Signed) J. W. PALMER, Brig. Gen.

Cincinnati, Feb. 3d. Considerable excitement prevails at Paris, Ill., in consequence of an anticipated attack on the returned soldiers by the "Butternuts" in that vicinity. The citizens of Paris have telegraphed to Terre Haute for aid.

Washington, Feb. 3d. The following dispatch was received at the headquarters of the army here to-day:

Nashville, Tenn., Feb. 2d.

Gen. Dodge reports that on the 28th ult. the forces under Col. Phillips drove Roddy to the south side of the Tennessee River and captured all his trains, consisting of over twenty mule teams, two hundred head of cattle, six hundred head of sheep, and about one hundred horses and mules, and destroyed a factory and mill, which had largely supplied him.

(Signed) JOHN A. RAWLINS,
Brig. Gen. and Chief of Staff.

New York, Feb. 4th. The Herald's Washington dispatch says: "An unusual number of refugees from the South were entering our lines in order to escape conscription. They state that the night after the passage of the act conscripting all persons liable to military duty, ninety refugees were caught by the rebel pickets along the Chickahominy. These men were given a pass for thirty days, with orders to report at the expiration of that time for duty. Fears are entertained in Richmond of an insurrection on the part of this class, and the rebel authorities will not allow more than five hundred conscripts to accumulate at the camp near Richmond, from apprehension of such an attempt. Bands are being organized in many parts of the South for the purpose of resisting the conscription."

Fortress Monroe, Feb. 4th. Eight refugees from the South arrived here this morning via Yorktown.

Three hundred and fifty contrabands with forty mule teams arrived at Norfolk yesterday from rebeldom.

New York, Feb. 6th. The Times' letter from Chattanooga says rebel deserters are pouring into our lines by hundreds, and open mutiny is feared by the rebel leaders in consequence of their late conscription law.

New York, Feb. 6th. The World's New Orleans letter says: Our forces at Madisonville are being constantly increased, evidently with a view of making it a base of supplies. Rumor says Gen. Banks will soon embark for Texas, betokening advance movements in that quarter. The people of that State are ready in large numbers to join our forces.

New York, Feb. 6th. News from Memphis of the 29th ult., says Corinth was evacuated on Monday last, and every thing of value brought to Memphis. The Memphis and Charleston Railroad will be evacuated from Lagrange to Memphis to-night.

The force that has been holding Corinth and the road between that place and Memphis was concentrated at Memphis, and the entire infantry and artillery have gone under Gen. Hurlburt, upon boats down the river. This expedition is splendidly equipped and in numbers that will make the rebels tremble wherever they may go. The whole Sixteenth Corps is in this expedition, and more too. The troops are now well on their way to their destination which is not as yet to be divulged.

A great cavalry expedition has also been organized under Brig. Gen. W. L. Smith, Chief of Gen. Grant's cavalry, which will soon be heard from. This expedition will make an extensive raid into Alabama, Mississippi and Georgia. Gen. Grierson accompanies the expedition. The force is large and well appointed and it is expected that they will make terrible havoc along the railroads, bridges, etc.

THE TOMB OF EZRA THE SCRIBE.—This is the age of commemorations. While we here in England are preparing to celebrate the three hundredth anniversary of the bard of Avon, the Jews in the heart of Asia are bestirring themselves to erect a monument to the memory of the great restorer of their sacred writings. After having rested in his honored grave for nearly 2500 years, the Jews of Bagdad have been roused to erect him a monument on the spot which the most ancient tradition has designated as his grave, and the correctness of which there is no reason to doubt. This spot lies in the desert, near the confluence of the Euphrates and Tigris, and the monument to be established is the only one befitting the memory of a man as much venerated by Christians as Jews. The proposed monument is a college for the study of the writings preserved through his care for the civilized world. Contributions for this purpose have been forwarded from Bombay, London and Paris.—Jewish Chronicle.

REBEL PLANS.—As an offset, probably, to the gloomy reports brought by refugees from the South respecting the declining fortunes of the rebellion, the Washington correspondent of the Chicago Times (Copperhead) says, "intelligent men from the South" declare that the Confederacy will have fully 500,000 effective troops in the field in the spring; that Gen. Johnston will have 150,000 of them to fight Grant, 150,000 more will invade the North, and the rest will defend Richmond, Charleston, etc. The Washington correspondent of the St. Louis Republican says Lee and Jeff. Davis recently had a protracted consultation, in which Davis urged an invasion of the North across the Ohio River to Lake Erie, which Lee declared impracticable and advised the recapture of Knoxville, thus compelling Grant to evacuate Chattanooga, when a union of the forces under Longstreet and Johnston would drive the Federals out of Tennessee and Kentucky.—Journal.

FROM NEWBERN.—We learn by a private letter from Newbern, that during the late rebel attack on that post, Adjutant Cheever, of the 17th Massachusetts regiment, was mortally wounded, has since died, and his body is in the hands of the enemy. Lieut. Col. Fellows, Dr. Galloupe, Capt. Floyd, Lieuts. Hill, Mann, Comins and Day, of the 17th, are supposed to have been taken prisoners. Out of 120 men and 13 officers who went out to meet the enemy, only 50 or 60 men and five officers have returned. The rest were captured.

The Hilton Head correspondent of the New York Times writes that several of the officers there having become impressed with the growing evils of intemperance in the army, have given up the use of ardent spirits.

HARTFORD, CONN., Feb. 5th. The original building of Colt's Pistol Factory was destroyed by fire this morning, with all the machinery and a large amount of other property. The building was five hundred feet long by sixty wide; L, one hundred by sixty. The office, a large three-story building, was also destroyed. The new building in which the Minie rifles are made was saved. Seventeen hundred workmen were employed, half of whom are thrown out of work. Several lives have been lost by the falling in of the roof of one of the buildings. Their names are not yet known. The loss, it is believed, will exceed $1,000,000. Insured for $750,000.

THE MALDEN TRAGEDY.—On Sunday evening, the 7th, Edward W. Green, Postmaster of Malden, was arrested for the murder of young Converse, who was shot in the Bank on the 15th of Dec. last. He makes full confession, and in jail awaits his trial before the Grand Jury of Middlesex county.

Items.

☞ It is more than a hundred years since an heir apparent to the British crown has had a son. The eldest son of George II. died a few years before his father, leaving his son, afterwards George III., surviving. Since that time there has been no such state of things as now exist. The children of George III. were all born while he was on the throne. George IV. had no son either before or after he ascended the throne. William IV. had no children.

☞ There is to be a Queen Eugenia as well as an Empress Eugenia. The new King of Greece, George the First, is to wed Eugenia, a daughter of the Duchess of Leutchenberg. The duchess's eldest daughter is betrothed to Prince Humbert, heir to the crown of Italy. These young women are great-granddaughters of the Empress Josephine.

☞ In Rockingham county, Va., corn has been sold at five dollars, and sometimes at a higher figure. A day laborer commands five dollars per day for his work, if an efficient hand. Flour is worth fifty dollars per barrel, cotton cloth commands five dollars per yard, beef brings fifty cents per pound, sugar is held at four dollars, and coffee at fifteen dollars.

☞ The school books lately published by the Austrian Government are printed on paper made of "corn shucks," or the leaves which protect the ear of maize. This material gives the paper a yellowish color, which medical men hold to be less fatiguing to the eye than our snowy pages.

☞ A mosquito flotilla, which has been preparing for some weeks at New York, is about to sail for New Orleans, where it will be divided into several fleets, to operate in such rivers and lagoons as are impassable to larger vessels.

☞ A meeting of the loyal citizens of Florida was held at Key West on the 28th ult., for the purpose of restoring the State to its original status under the United States Government.

☞ In certain places in Indiana so many young men have enlisted that it is almost impossible to get work done upon the farms. Many large farms are without a single hand to cultivate them.

☞ A railroad track was laid on the ice of the Upper Mississippi during the late cold snap, for the transportation of freight from one shore to the other.

☞ The Springfield armory turned out 23,700 muskets last month. The largest number ever fabricated in a single month. There are 200,000 on hand.

☞ Cotton of the value of $3,000,000 was recently burnt at Columbia, S. C.

☞ Before the war there were about seventy-five papers published on the soil of Mississippi; now there are only nine.

☞ Gen. Foster has prohibited the further distillation of grain within the limits of his department in Tennessee.

☞ The comet discovered by Prof. Watson of Mich., is rapidly approaching the earth, and will soon be visible to the naked eye.

☞ A Vermont exchange says that last week many farmers tapped a few maple trees and made small quantities of syrup and sugar.

☞ Rev. Dr. True writes to Zion's Herald that the Methodist itinerant system is brought to the verge of an abyss into which it will speedily sink.

☞ The Southern Methodist Book Concern in Nashville has been taken by the civil authorities for a government printing office.

☞ There are 700,000 men on the army pay rolls, and about 500,000 in service, with officers for about a million and a half.

☞ A remarkable religious revival is going on at Corning, N. Y.

☞ A pyramid, like the Egyptian pyramids, but smaller, has been discovered in California.

☞ Desertions from Hardee's army in Georgia are reported to average fifty daily.

☞ France consumed $43,225,000 worth of tobacco last year.

☞ The greenbacks and postal currency now in circulation amount to five hundred million.

☞ Corn is said to be higher at the West than it has been before for forty years.

☞ Immense deposits of lead have been discovered near Albuquerque, New Mexico.

☞ Wm. E. Dodge, of New York, has given $10.000 to found a college in Syria.

☞ Australia has a population of two millions.

☞ Ice is three inches thick at Richmond.

☞ Iowa has a population of 702,368.

Notices.

Quarterly Conference, Buchanan, Mich.

The first quarterly meeting of the Advent Christian Conference of Michigan and Indiana will commence Feb. 18th, at 10 o'clock A. M., in the Advent Chapel, and continue over the Sabbath. There will be preaching day and evening, by Elders Mansfield, Himes, Seymour, Babcock, and others. A large gathering is expected. Friends in the vicinity, and from every quarter, are invited to participate in this feast of love. Call upon Elder Mansfield, whose residence is on Day's Avenue, for directions. A. N. SEYMOUR, Sec'ry of Conf.

Conference in Norway, Me.

The Lord willing, we shall hold a conference at North Norway, in the Methodist Chapel, commencing Feb. 18th, (evening), and continue over the following Sunday. A general invitation is extended. Come, brethren and sisters, praying for the blessing of the Lord upon the meeting. Those coming from abroad may call upon Brn. French, Adams, Merrill, Pearce, and Pingree.

JAS. A. LIBBY.

Normal Institute
AND MANUAL LABOR ACADEMY.
REED'S FERRY, N. H.

The next term of this Academy commences Feb. 18th, and continues eleven weeks, under the instruction of H. E. Brown, A. B. For circular, address H. E. BROWN, Reed's Ferry, N. H.

Maine Central Quar. Conference.

This conference is expected to be holden at the Town House in Rome, commencing Thursday, March 3d, at 6 o'clock, P. M. Come, brethren, let us come up to the help of the Lord, and encourage and strengthen each other. Watchmen and brethren of other conferences are invited. Provision will be made for all. Call on Eld. L. L. Howard, Bros. Martin, Watson, Fletcher, Bleasdell, and others. Let us meet in the spirit of the truth, prepared to do the commandments of our Master with humility. D. W. GRIFFIN, Clerk.

Maine Eastern Quarterly Conference.

A quarterly conference will be held at Lincolnville Centre, Me., commencing Thursday evening, at 7 o'clock, Feb. 25th, and continue over the Sabbath following. Brethren from abroad will call on Bros. G. McKenny, E. Calderwood, D. Fletcher. E. Blood, S. Wadsworth, E. Young, and M. Young. A general invitation is given to all our brethren, etc, M. YOUNG, Secretary.

Meeting in Canaan, Me.

There will be a protracted meeting in Canaan, Me. at the Salisbury meeting-house, commencing Friday evening, Feb. 19th. Brethren and sisters from abroad, and all interested, are invited to attend.

L. L. HOWARD,
D. M. HANSCOM.

Tract Notice.

Elder L. C. Wellcome, Yarmouth, Me., has a good supply of tracts and books, hymn books, etc., published by the C. P. Society, and by H. L. Hastings and others. Also, a great variety of other best works on the Advent, and inheritance of the saints.

Notice.

Elder Thomas Smith, Bangor, Me., has on hand for sale H. L. Hastings' "Signs of the Times," with an assortment of his various Tracts; also, the Tracts by Miles Grant, on "The Soul," "The Spirit," and "What is Man?" and other Advent tracts.

A Liberal Offer.

Being satisfied that time is short, and that what is done must be done quickly; and feeling anxious to do what we can to arouse a sleeping world and church, we make the following liberal offer:—

Any one who will send three or more new subscribers to the Crisis for six months or one year, with advance pay for the same, shall receive one third the value of the money sent, in any of our books and tracts they may select. For instance, if they send three dollars, they receive one dollar's worth of books or tracts; for six dollars, we send them two dollars' worth; for twelve dollars, four dollars' worth, etc.

Let every reader take hold of the work in earnest, and help scatter tracts, books and papers like autumnal leaves.

MILES GRANT, per order of
Publishing Committee.

Appointments.

We would say to our preaching Brethren that it is necessary we should receive their appointments as early as TUESDAY MORNING, as our paper goes to press about noon; otherwise they will not be inserted till the week following.

LOWELL STREET CHAPEL, BOSTON, CORNER OF CAUSEWAY AND LOWELL STREETS. Meetings are held regularly three times every Sunday, and Tuesday and Friday evenings. Seats free.

APPOINTMENT FOR LOWELL STREET CHAPEL.

H. L. Hastings.....Sunday, Feb. 14th and onward for the present.

Alton, N. H., Saturday evening, and Lord's day, Feb. 14th. MILES GRANT.

Dansville, N. Y.....Feb. 14th
Bristol, N. Y.....Wednesday evening, Feb. 17th and every evening through the week, and Sunday, Feb. 21st, at 10 1-2 A. M.
Honeoye, 2 o'clock, P. M.....Feb. 21st
Dansville.....Feb. 28th
F. BURR.

New Britain, Ct.....Sunday, Feb. 14th
R. H. LADD.

APPOINTMENTS FOR HOLLIS, ME.

L. C. Wellcome.....Sunday, Feb. 21st
W. H. Mitchell.....Sunday, Feb. 28th

Plymouth, Mass.....Feb. 11th and over Sunday.
J. M. MURLIO.

Lawrence, Mass.....Sunday, Feb. 14th
J. G. SMITH.

Hoosick Falls, N. Y.....Friday, Feb. 19th and over the Sunday following.
H. P. CARPENTER.

Troy, or Lansingburg, N. Y., (as the brethren may appoint).....Sunday, Feb. 14th
H. PRATT.

Seneca Falls, N. Y.....Feb. 14th and through the week.
Warehouse Point, Conn.....Feb. 21st through the week, and Sunday the 28th.
S. S. BREWER.

Griswoldville, Mass.....Feb. 17th to continue evenings and over the following Sabbath.
Vernon, Vt.....Sunday, Feb. 28th
J. HEMENWAY.

Richmond, Me., (Reed meeting-house), Sunday, Feb. 14th.
Augusta, Me., (in the Hall).....Sunday, Feb. 21st
N. G. REED.

Lower Gilmanton, N. H.....Feb. 14th
London Ridge, N. H.....Feb. 21st
C. S. EMERSON.

South Reading, Mass.....Sunday, Feb. 14th
Lawrence, Mass.....Sunday, Feb. 21st
Concord, N. H.....Sunday, Feb. 28th
JOSEPH W. WHITE.

Vernon, Vt.....Sunday, Feb. 14th
West Brattleboro, Vt.....Sunday, Feb. 21st
GEORGE CHAMPLIN.

Hampton, N. H., (where Bro. Pike may appoint), Friday evening, Feb. 19th and the following Saturday and Sunday, A. SIMPSON.

Central.....Sunday, March 6th
Coventry, (Town House).....evening, March 8th
Summit.....evening, March 10th
North Scituate.....Sunday, March 13th
North Foster.....Sunday, March 20th
Glocester.....Sunday, March 27th
Blackstone, Mass.....Sunday, April 3d
If any of these appointments conflict, please write to me. J. K. BELLOWS.

South Wayne, (Jenkins school-house), Friday evening, Feb. 12th.
South Livermore.....Saturday evening, Feb. 13th and over the following Sabbath.
J. T. JORDAN.

Milo or Sebec.....Sunday, Feb. 14th
THOMAS SMITH.

Portsmouth, N. H.....Sunday, Feb. 14th
Biddeford, Me.....Sunday, Feb. 21st
WM. H. MITCHELL.

Scitico.....Feb. 14th
Boston, (Lowell Street Chapel) Friday evening, Feb. 19th
Portsmouth, N. H.....Sabbaths, Feb. 21st and 28th
Evenings between not engaged.
Exeter, N. H.....Tuesday evening, March 1st
Haverhill, Mass.....Wednesday evening, March 2d
Salem, Mass.....Thursday evening, March 3d
H. MUNGER.

Alton Corner, N. H.....Sunday, Feb. 14th
J. COUCH.

Warner Village (Union Hall).....Sunday, Feb. 14th
East Andover.....Tuesday evening, Feb. 16th
A. MUSSEY.

East Hartland, Ct.....Sunday, Feb. 14th as Bro. Gains may arrange.
Hope to see the brethren and sisters from adjacent towns at this meeting.
Collinsville, Ct.....Sunday, Feb. 21st
C. GOODRICH.

Springfield, (at Bro. Morgan's).....Saturday, Feb. 13th
Agawam.....Sunday, Feb. 14th
I. B. POTTER.

Warehouse Point, Ct. (Adams Hall), Sunday, Feb. 14th
WM. A. PENN.

London Ridge, N. H.....Sunday, Feb. 14th
Pittsfield, (where Bro. Mooney may appoint), evenings, Feb. 16th and 17th.
North Barnstead.....evening, Feb. 18th
Clark Meeting-house.....Sunday, Feb. 21st
Wolfborough, (where Bro. Walker may appoint), Monday evening, Feb. 22d.
T. W. PIPER.

Goshen, Mass.....Feb. 14th
Plainfield, Mass., (at Bro. J. E. Healy's) Feb. 16th–17th
Plainfield, Mass., (at Bro. David Thayer's).....Feb. 18th
Plainfield Pond.....Feb. 19th
Savoy, Mass.....Feb. 21st
Dalton, Mass.....Feb. 22d
and through the week as Bro. Warren and Smith may arrange.
North Adams, Mass.....Feb. 28th
Charlemont, Mass., (at Bro. Cudworth's), March 1st–2d
Christian Hill, Mass., (as Bro. Tenny may arrange) March 3d and 4th.
Griswoldville, Mass.....March 6th
Northfield Farms, Mass., (at Bro. A. Morgan's), March 8th.
GEO. A. STREETER.

APPOINTMENTS FOR BRISTOL, CT.

S. B. Munn.....Sunday, Feb. 14th
Bro. St. John.....Sunday, Feb. 28th

Haverhill, Mass.....Feb. 14th
A. SIMPSON.

Ossipee, Leighton Corner.....Feb 14th
N. HARRISON.

The Plains, Appanaug.....Feb. 14th
River Point, R. I.....Feb. 21st–28th
I desire to fill up the week as brethren may arrange
J. K. BELLOWS.

Exeter, N. H.....Feb. 21st, and 28th
A. ROSS.

Danielsonville, Ct.....Feb. 14th
J. W. BRITTAN.

Business.

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

E. Bryson—Has been sent regularly.
Chas. Stratton—Are out of that kind now. Will have some in a few days.
C. Bond and O. Kimball—Your remittances last Dec. were received and acknowledged in No. 431.
S. D. Daniel—To No. 407.
E. Tibbetts—To No. 483, Jan. 1st, 1865.

CASH RECEIPTS TO FEB. 4. 1864.

The present No. of the Crisis is 43[illegible].

The No. which follows your name, is the No. to which your money pays. Deduct the one from the other, and you will see how far you have paid in advance, or how much is due the office. Make a memorandum of the same, and you will be reminded when your subscription expires.

S Knight 470, J Newell 460, R Hunt 460, M B Hubbel 4[illegible]0. A M Humphreville 455, E A Prescott 457, Mrs H McAlpine 341, C Willard 460, G Wheeler 419, M L Calder 461, N Wheeler 462, S B Bliss 452, N Blodgett 4[illegible]0, D Grant 442, D Clark 442, Mrs S A Macomber 4[illegible]0, M Osman 460, M E Trafton 460, Wm Shattuck 460, Mrs M F Hunt 460, H S Barton 457, A B Cook 455, L Cook 460, J. S. Morgan 432, Edward (Joel?) Jones 421, S. C. Smith 404, Mrs A Case 456, Wm Elden 461, M Lancton 461, G Morgan 464, J Luther 461, L Wright 461, S Abbott 461, J H Jordan 461, J Partridge 417, H Greene 4[illegible]8, S M Hasty 461, J Bickford 451, M E Murphy 451, S Tracy 461, C Judson 487, Mrs M Umderhind 461, D J Burditt 461, E M Rice 454, Mrs B Stiles 433, G E Smith 431, H. Watt 461, J. Sheffield 461, Mrs. M. J. Hammon 461, J J Gibberson 461, Mrs J E Wood 447, M A Rockwell 445, Mrs E Burnham 461, G Hall 461, S C Wilcox 403, T J Wetherell 455, G H Coburn 442, J Clothey 461,—$1.00 each.

W W Green 483, E Potter 475, C Wilton 491, Mrs A Dunham 486, J C Safford 444, A Y Culver 446, D Austin 473, F Cummings 486, W H Donaldson 48[illegible], T Applegate 486, W McCulloch 476, L M Whitney 462, G W Mingle 486, P Curtis 406, L Wade 438, A P Morril 481, M Young 461, E Young 486, J L Wiggin 487, Z Fairfield 487, Mrs J G Clark 487, C Greene 479, A P Hyde 423, W S Fulton 487, G Godfrey 487, W S Darling 487, E B Nelson 483, B Graves 473, S F Field 487, S Crispin 454, L Storrs 468, M Fiske 435, G B Keach 487, I Young 494, A Cooper 4[illegible]7, M L Lawrence 472, Mrs I B Northrup 487, J P Furber 487—$2.00 each.

D. Morse 434, H. N. Watts 447, Miss H. P. Vankirk 444, R Gould 44[illegible], O B Holt 447, J G Keily 446, A Wattles 444,—50c each.

G. Hooper 75c, 414; J. Ellis $1.20, 442; R. Gibson $3.00, 416; J. S. Potter 70c, 434; D. McFarland $3.00, 442; D W Comstock $1.25, 470; Mrs S Folsom $11.55, 418; E Tibbetts $3.25, 483; J R Savage $4.00, 3[illegible]9; J L Rich $1.00, 338; L M Cottrell $3.00, 453; S R Hathorn $3.00, 516.

FOR BOOKS AND TRACTS.

B Wilson $5.00, J A Cleaveland $1.00, M E Trafton 30c, D W Comstock $1.75, S C Wilcox 50c, D T Taylor $1.00, S Crispin 25c, Z Fairfield $1.45.

TO SEND CRISIS TO THE POOR.—Wm. Nichols, $2.00; D. D. Chaffee, $1.00.

BOOKS AND TRACTS SENT.

BY MAIL.

I K Lombard, Hawleyville, Iowa; S W Bartlett, W. Stafford, Ct.; C H Leverton, Surry, Me; S Crispin, Corsica, O.; J A Layton, Liberty Cor., N. J.; N A Hitchcock, Warren, Ill.; J Bickford, Great Falls, N. H.; S C Wilcox, Centreville, W. Va.; W. Nichols, Albany, N Y.; J Morrison, New Glasgow, C. E.; D W Comstock, Keene, N. H.; S. M. Griswold, Alexandria, Va.; J. B. Bell, Augusta, Me.; S. E. Trott, Middleport, Ill.; S W Worthington, N. Bennington, Vt.; H Rotherham, Cascade, Iowa; L. E. Hendrix, Montgomery, Vt.; J. D. Brown, Brockport, N. Y.; G W Rathburn, Cordova, Ill.; E. Town, Reading, Mich.; L. H. Davis, La Claire, Ill.; F B Jones, Florence, Mass.; A G Lombard, Rochester, Minn.

LETTERS RECEIVED.

W. L. Seward, A. M. Smith, W H Ball, L Boutell, J Crofut, A W Fisk, G W Stetson, G W Hurd, P Green, H H Cheney, Minerva, S S Wardwell, C W Swett, W H Mitchell, G W Rathbun, I C Wellcome, J Ozanne, S B Roter, M B Hook, S S Brewer, Mary L Pratt, C M Williams, A. . Dow, T. M. Preble, Chas Greene, G W Stetson, A. A. Lason, I K Lombard, F. H. Burbank, F. Burr, Mrs C A Knowles, A P Allen, E. M. Rice, A M Hollis, D T Taylor 2, S K Ford, C Stratton, C H Sweet, N L Willard, L L Howard, S B Swift, C S E, J Taylor, L P Hastings.

POST OFFICE ADDRESS.

Elder J. V. Himes—Buchanan, Mich.
P. W. Hough—Fairbank, Buchanan Co, Iowa.
S. S. Brewer—South Glastenbury, Ct.

English Bibles for Sale.

1. DIAMOND, fine print, full references, morocco bound, $1.50; calf, $1.25; roan, gilt, $1.00; flexible binding, $1.00. Postage 12 cents.
2. PEARL, flat, full references, morocco, $2.25; roan, $1.50. Postage 16 cts.
3. NONPAREIL, 16 mo., references between the verses, or references in the margin, morocco, $3.00; calf, $2.50; roan, $2.00; references between verses, with gilt rims and clasps, $2.50. Postage 20 cts.
4. MINION, references between the verses, roan, $2.50. Postage 25 cts.
5. MINION, 8vo.; marginal ref., flat and clear type, roan, $2.50.
6. TESTAMENTS, roan, gilt, smallest 25 cts; larger, 33 cts. Postage 6 cts.

Address MILES GRANT, Boston, Mass.

Price Reduced.

RESURRECTION OF THE WICKED. Discussion between M. Grant and J. T. Curry.

The advertised price of this Discussion is 25 cents, postage 2 cents. We have a quantity of them on hand, and will sell them hereafter for 20 cts., postage 2 cts. Send on your orders.

PHOTOGRAPHS OF ELD. EDWIN BURNHAM. A few copies of a large, beautiful and life-like Photograph, which the friends of Bro. Burnham will be glad to obtain. Sent by mail for $1.00. Those wishing them should order at once.

BOOKS AND TRACTS.

[illegible]

MILES GRANT'S WORKS.

Resurrection of the Wicked. Discussion with Jos. T. Curry. [illegible]

Eternal Suffering. Discussion with Dr. J. Litch. [illegible]

Spiritualism. Discussion with J. S. Loveland, "On Spiritualism and Immortality." [illegible]

State of the Dead. Discussion with W. W. Clayton. [illegible]

Miles Grant's Tracts. 32 pages each. Price 5 cents [illegible]

What is Man? A Bible view of his creation; The meaning of Soul, Spirit, Death, and Hell.

The Soul, What is it? Or a careful examination of all the uses of the words niphesh and psuche as employed in the old and new Testaments.

The Spirit, What is it? Or a careful examination [illegible]

The Rich Man and Lazarus. Thief on the Cross; Souls under the Altar: [illegible]

TRACTS

Issued by the Christian Publication Society.

[illegible] FREE TO THE POOR.

The Church not in Darkness; or, the duties of the times; [illegible] By H. L. Hastings.

The Three Worlds; or, earth, past, present, and future. A graphic sketch of the old world, destroyed by the deluge; the present world reserved unto fire; and the new world which God shall create. By H. L. Hastings. 24 pages.

The Last Days. A calm, scriptural, and convincing argument, [illegible] By H. L. Hastings.

Plain Truths; or, Scripture and Tradition united. [illegible]

Will all Men be Saved? A pointed, pithy, earnest, and conclusive argument against Universalism, [illegible]

A Voice of Warning from the Four Winds. [illegible] By D. T. Taylor. 24 pages.

The New Heavens and New Earth. A collection of testimonies [illegible] By D. T. Taylor.

Ancient Landmarks. Six tracts of four pages each, [illegible] By H. L. Hastings. 24 pages.

The Duty of Christians in the present crisis. [illegible] By H. L. Hastings.

State of the Dead. By John Milton, author of "Paradise Lost," being extracts from his "Treatise on Christian Doctrine," giving his views upon the nature and condition of man in life and death. 24 pages.

Silence of the Scriptures respecting the Immortality of the soul, [illegible] By C. F. Hudson. [illegible]

Immortality Through Christ Alone. The doctrine safe and salutary. By C. F. Hudson. 20 pages.

The Destiny of the Wicked. A solid mass of Scripture quotations, without note or comment, upon this subject. Arranged by H. L. Hastings. 12 pages.

The Advent at Hand. A summary of reasons for expecting the speedy close of the present, and the ushering in of a new dispensation. 24 pages.

BOOKS PUBLISHED BY H. L. HASTINGS,
167 HANOVER STREET, BOSTON, MASS.
Single copies sent by mail, postpaid, on receipt of the price.

The Signs of the Times; or, A Glance at Christendom as it is. By H. L. Hastings. Third edition. Enlarged. [illegible] pages. Cloth, extra, $1.00. Paper, 75c.

[illegible]

The Voice of the Church on the Coming and Kingdom of the Redeemer; or, a History of the Doctrine of the Reign of Christ on Earth. By D. T. Taylor. Edited and prefaced by H. L. Hastings. 4th Edition. [illegible] 12mo. Price $1.00.

[illegible]

Spiritualism a Satanic Delusion and a Sign of the Times. By William Ramsey, D. D. Edited by H. L. H. [illegible] Paper, 15c.

[illegible]

Thessalonica; or The Model Church. A sketch of Primitive Christianity. By H. L. H. [illegible]

[illegible]

The Great Controversy between God and Man. Its origin, progress, and end. [illegible] By H. L. Hastings. [illegible]

Reasons for my Hope, and the Tokens of its Speedy Realization. By H. L. Hastings. [illegible]

Thessalonica and Reasons for my Hope. Bound in one volume. Cloth, 75 cents.

Looking Forward, or the Prospects of the Church; being the concluding chapter of the Signs of the Times. [illegible]

Future Punishment, as revealed in the Scriptures, in opposition to the Three Theories of Never-ending Sin and Misery, [illegible] By H. L. Hastings. Cloth, $1. Paper, 60c.

[illegible]

Pauline Theology; or, The Scripture Doctrine of Future Punishment, as taught in the Epistles of Paul. By H. L. Hastings. [illegible]

The Old Paths; or, the Primitive Doctrine of a Future Life. By H. L. Hastings. [illegible]

Retribution; or, The Doom of the Ungodly, after the Resurrection of the Dead, Just and Unjust. By H. L. H. [illegible]

C. F. HUDSON'S WORKS.

Debt and Grace. Or the Doctrine of a Future Life. by C. F. Hudson. [illegible]

Christ our Life. The Scriptural Argument for Immortality through Christ alone. [illegible]

Human Destiny. A Critique on Universalism. [illegible]

The Doctrine of Endless Misery an occasion of [illegible]

Eternal Death in the literal sense is Eternal Punishment. [illegible]

The Rich Man and Lazarus. With remarks on Jo[illegible]

The Rights of Wrong; or, is Evil Eternal? [illegible]

Reviewers Reviewed. New edition with replies to [illegible]

JACOB BLAIN'S WORKS.

Death not Life; or, The Destruction of the Wicked Scripturally established. [illegible]

Glad Tidings; or, Bible Proof that Woe and Sin are to end [illegible]

The Wicked not Immortal. Two hundred texts quoted to prove their destruction. [illegible]

Bible Meaning of the Word Hell. [illegible]

Endless Misery not a Bible Doctrine. [illegible]

Smoke of Torment and Unquenchable Fire Explained. [illegible]

Bible Meaning of Forever and Everlasting. [illegible]

Letter of Rev. John Foster on Future Punishment. [illegible]

All orders for any of the above works should be addressed to

MILES GRANT,
Boston, Mass.

For the World's Crisis.

SORROW IN HOPE; OR GRIEF FOR THE DEAD.

O heart! that ever feels to yearn,
O sorrowing soul! whom death has caused to mourn,
Your loved one, though in its dark borders borne,
Rests sweetly, and will soon return.

The thought that she beholds your grief,
That she is pained with every sorrowing thought,
Or heaving sigh, or lamentable lot,
Destroys instead of gives relief.

But ah! God's word relief bestows
Upon your sorrowing mind and bleeding heart;
For Christ will soon destroy death's cruel smart,
And wake her from her sweet repose.

Immortal, and in God's attire,
Refulgent, and with chords of praise sublime,
Her glorious form in earth's congenial clime
Will rove, and "earth restored" admire.

God's word declares the dead nought know,
And any thought by them can never be,
Who have not life, or do corruption see,
Or who do down to silence go.

Their love, their hatred, are alike
With envy and their memory destroyed,
Not to be given or again restored
Till Christ returns the earth to shake.

Then let the mind with pleasure grasp
The only hope which holy writ imparts;
And praise your God, who soothes all sorrow's smarts,
And breaks death's cruel, icy clasp.

The parent and the child will meet;
The husband with the wife again rejoice;
With brothers, sisters, friends, with one glad voice
Re-echo to their King their praises sweet!

J. C. RICH.

For the World's Crisis.

THE VISIBLE AND THE INVISIBLE.

NUMBER ONE.

"The things that are seen are temporary," (A. Clarke's trans.) "but the things that are not seen are eternal." Paul, 2 Cor. 4 : 18. The visible things of Paul's day of which he was then writing were the figurative or tropical, and have long since passed away; but the true temporary, still remain, and constitute the literal "first tabernacle" referred to by the apostle also in Heb. 9 : 8.

The unseen eternal, are yet future; but as surely as the "temporary" that now exist in fact, once, in times past, were not, so certainly will these things that now only exist in the purposes or plans of the Deity, be produced in their time and place. The things that now are, came into existence in their regular order and succession, and very many of the primary were of a long time completed prior to the commencement of others, and thus of the unseen,—part may already exist, possibly incomplete, but, like the "first tabernacle," now existing, shall be carried on to perfection by the formation and superaddition of the remaining portions, which as yet have had no beginning.

After this mode was the creation, the deluge, the call of Abraham, the going down into and the coming up out of Egypt, the giving of the law and the building of the tabernacle in the wilderness, the coming of the Just One, the rejection of Israel, the destruction of their house and chief city, and the calling of the Gentiles. So of all things human and divine, past and present, and so when he that "sat upon the throne" shall "make all things new."

The work of reconstruction, nevertheless, though progressive, is of long time commenced, and ever since the time of reformation, in the days of Christ and the apostles, has been steadily advancing towards completion.

A portion of the future, unseen, eternal things, are already occupied "at the right hand of God where Christ sitteth;" hence the unseen things of 2 Cor. 4 : 18, are the same as those of Col. 3 : 1, "upon which we are to set our affections," the things of 1 Cor. 2 : 9, 10, "that God hath revealed to us by his Spirit," as in reserve for them that love him, the "good things to come by a greater and more perfect tabernacle," for which Christ has now the ministration of the office of the antitypical Aaronic high priest-hood by the oath of the Deity." Not high priest, by a "greater and more perfect tabernacle,"—an incorruptible body—but by the oath and after, or through "the power of an endless life," the Spirit of the Deity, that raised him from the dead, and conveyed him away, beyond or above the vail. (See Heb. 7 : 16, 20, 21; 9 : 11; 6 : 19, 20; and Eph. 1 : 19, 20, 21.

These unseen but eternal things constitute "our far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory," of 2 Cor. 4 : 17, the "exceeding riches of his grace in" Eph. 2; 7, the "glory of Christ" that is to come after "his sufferings," (1 Peter 1 : 11), but not until the measure of those sufferings that are left behind are filled up by the Ecclesia which constitutes his body." Col. 1 : 24. Then this grace of God (favor) will be brought unto us by the revelation of Jesus Christ," at the end of this dispensation, "when this gospel of the kingdom has been preached in all the world for a testimony," (1 Peter 1 : 11, 13; Matt. 24 : 14), "that in the dispensation of the fullness of times (completeness) he may gather into one, all things in Christ, both which are in the heavens (marginal) and which are on earth, that we should be found unto the praise of his glory, at the redemption of the purchased possession;" on "the appearing of Jesus Christ;" who "loved the church and gave himself for it; that he might sanctify and cleanse it with the washing of water by the word," in order "to present it unto himself a glorious church, not having spot, or wrinkle, or any such thing; but that it should be holy and without blemish;" and having thus "made us unto our God kings and priests; we shall with him reign on the earth." Eph. 1 : 10, 14; 1 Peter 1 : 7; Eph. 5 : 25–27; Rev. 5 : 10; 20 : 4.

These things constitute the temporary or first tabernacle in their typical or figurative representation, and an exact counterpart must constitute the second or true tabernacle "when that which is perfect is come." 1 Cor. 13 : 10. It was by a knowledge of these unseen future things drawn from the visible through the promised Spirit by the word, that Paul and Peter were enabled to give correlative testimony in relation to them without collusion. The evidence of this exists in the different style of narration in the two witnesses. The first, a learned Hebrew, of the Hebrews, schooled at the feet of one of the doctors of the Levitical law, Gamaliel, taking the seen temporary and the unseen eternal for his predicate, proceeds in the figurative and poetic style of the prophets, to rear his superstructure thereupon, after the model of the tabernacle of Moses reproduced on a grander scale in Solomon's temple, and then deduces legitimate conclusions from his premises by contrasting the two by apposition, in 2 Cor. 5 : 1. "For we know (by the Spirit), that our earthly house (the temporary, that Christ called, in John 2 : 16, "my Father's house," of which he said in Matt. 24 : 2, "there shall not be left here one stone upon another, that shall not be thrown down;") of this tabernacle (dwelling) were DISSOLVED (taken down, destroyed, abolished, 2 Cor. 3 : 7–13), we have a building of God, an house NOT MADE WITH HANDS (unseen), eternal, "in the heavens."

It would seem that Paul took it for granted that his Corinthian brethren were not so dull of apprehension as were those "whose minds were blinded," (2 Cor. 3 : 14), and had no need that one "should teach them again what be the first principles of the oracles of God." Heb. 5 : 11, 12. Moreover, he had just gone over the whole "ground-work" of the abrogation of the law and the introduction of the gospel,—the typical end of the "things seen," and the "beginning," (John 1 : 1; 1 John 1 : 1), of the unseen, eternal things, in the preceding chapters, that they might be without excuse for being "unlearned."

But no sooner does he address himself to those "whose minds were blinded," and "dull of hearing," unstable—not settled in the truth, though he maintains the figurative, how very careful he is to explain each point in the type as he proceeds step by step. Beginning with the "house," in Heb. 3, built by Moses under the law, he contrasts it with the house to be built under the gospel, going through the whole, progressively, until in 6 : 12, he brings his blinded Hebrew brethren to the perfected antitypical temple or tabernacle, the "Mount Zion, the city of the living God, the heavenly Jerusalem, the innumerable company of angels, the general assembly and church of the first-born, to God, the Judge of all, and to the spirits (lives, Clarke) of just men made perfect; and to Jesus, the mediator of the NEW covenant, and to the blood of sprinkling." THESE are the subjects and objects of our faith, represented by the "figurative tabernacle" and its "appointed divine services." "For there was a tabernacle made" (Heb. 9 : 2), "which was a figure for the time then present," (9 : 9), "until the time of reformation." 9 : 10. But Christ being come an high priest of good things, to come by a greater and more perfect tabernacle, not made with hands,—that is to say, not of this building"—(i. e., the building spoken of in verse two that WAS made with hands, 9 : 11); "for Christ is not entered into the holy places made with hands, which are the figures of the true; but into heaven itself, now to appear in the presence of God for us," 9 : 24.

How plain he makes the thing, where in verses one and two, he says the first "tabernacle," "holy place," where the people met God, or "tabernacle of the congregation," was the "world sanctuary;" i. e., the EARTH. In verse six, he says "The daily priests went always into the first tabernacle, accomplishing the divine service," named in verse one.

Now we are doing that very thing by faith, throughout all the earth, wherever the name of Christ is named, as further shown, 1 Peter 2 : 5,—"Ye also, as living stones, are built up a spiritual house, an holy priest-hood, to offer up spiritual sacrifices, acceptable to God through Jesus Christ."

In Heb. 9 : 3, Paul says after the second vail was the holiest of all, and in verse seven, he declares "that the high priest went ALONE into this "Holiest of all," of verse three. In verse twenty-four he shows that this "Holiest of all" represented heaven.

G. W. STETSON.

For the World's Crisis.

NOVEL READING.

CHAPTER I.

Novels, on account of their nature, are not profitable. It is the aim of novel writers to follow their imagination beyond the bounds of common occurrences. They have the same privilege that lawyers take; i. e., telling the "whole truth" and as much more as "circumstances" require.

Some tell us it is innocent to write "facts in the form of fiction." But such writers are scarce who confine themselves to facts. "Facts are stubborn things," you know, and when fictionized are bent to the writer's fancy. It is impossible to write what would pass for a "good, thrilling, interesting tale," without mixing in falsehood. I tried writing in this strain, a few years ago, but found at the outset I needed to substitute a falsehood where facts appeared too "stubborn." There is danger of searing the conscience in interweaving false statements with true ones. I quitted it, in the name of the Lord.

I have gone through with the whole catalogue of novels, from Chas. Dickens to Timothy Titcomb. Tales said to be "translated from the German," or "from the French," have been read, though I doubt if their authors understood these languages. I pronounced them vanities long ago. They never satisfied me. The story was too "great" or too "small." Too much "love" or too little "murder." Some scapegrace left unhung,—some innocent one punished.

I have taken more comfort in reading a chapter in my Bible, to-day, than I ever got out of a novel, even though it were a Temperance tale. "Uncle Tom's Cabin" could not send out the spirit of peace, joy, love, hope and goodly faith that a chapter from PAUL has. Old "Legree" made me mad, but the Bible teaches and fills me with peace. Then I feel comfortable.

NOVELS.—CHAPTER II.

I have often examined our village Library. It contains many valuable books. There are numerous histories that I would be glad to own. Lives of notable men, Pope, Cowper, Dryden; Hemans', Moore's and Doddridge's Poems, are there;—good and bad authors together. Essays on the Sciences, etc., etc., are there. Then comes "Dickens' Complete Works," T. S. Arthur's Stories, and all the fiddle-faddle the imagination could invent. I could not but notice the worn lids and well-thumbed leaves of the novels, and the almost unopened pages of historical works. How does this speak for our citizens? Yet I doubt not they would compare with other people. A deacon ("orthodox") made the selection, and his sons may read them. Duns, donations, sprees, and governmental funds paid for them. People can get good instruction from the Library if they make choice of the best books.

CONFESSION OF A NOVEL READER.—CHAP. III.

An habitual novel reader is liable to lose all interest in more substantial reading. For instance. A young lady of my acquaintance quit school not long since, and gave as an excuse her inability to learn. She confesses an impaired memory. She said: "I never have read novels till arithmetic and grammar are dry as the paper they are made of. I cannot fix my mind on them. I imagine them to be fictions, and some old, half-forgotten tale is continually flitting through my brain. Often have I closed my arithmetic, 'asked out,' and gone to my room and re-read some ill-remembered romance. I am spoiled for other reading!" I urged her to read the Bible. Said she, with a laugh, "I could n't. I should sleep over any part of it." I offered her the Crisis. Said she, "I could find nothing to interest me there. Give me 'The Flag of our Union,' with its love and murder. I'm sorry my mind is so trained; but it is, and I enjoy it." Do you always enjoy it? "Yes, if the story is real good—full of something awful."

This proves novel reading bad in its effects, unfitting the mind for useful knowledge. Who ever knew a novel reader to be proficient in history or any useful study? How many of them are acquainted with their Bibles? Novel reading interferes with our religion. Novels stimulate the mind so that plain truth is left unloved. Thorough novel readers do not live in a real, but an imagined world. They are constantly dreaming. Foolish little misses try to imitate some favorite heroine, and the failure makes them miserable, peevish, cross and silly.

It is time christians spent their money in a more profitable manner than loading their centre tables with this sickly trash. Better put on "Reasons for my Hope," or "Important Questions." Better read "The Model Church," and so give us a few model christians. "Time is money,"—and money is the Lord's. What right have we to waste either in reading books that hinder or fail to help our growth in grace?

A MINISTERIAL NOVEL READER.—CHAP. IV.

Chancing to take lodgings during a protracted meeting among the Baptists, where a lover of "religious novels" (!) chanced to lodge, and being "book agent," I took occasion to exhibit my "stock." I had "Model Church," "Reasons for my Hope," "Great Controversy," etc., etc. I wondered why the preacher did not read some in my books; but found he was so interested in a story about some girl who turned Baptist and refused to "commune" with "unbaptized" persons, managed to get a Baptist preacher afoul of her family, got them converted and baptized, got married, and then acted the martyr in not going to communion with her husband and his family; but at last got them baptized, after confounding them and their minister in arguments on the subject.

All day long the old man read. He boasted of his extempore preaching; said he often knew not what subject he should take till after seating himself in the pulpit, and then, sometimes, took no text, but rushed into a subject. I guess he told the truth, for I never caught a Bible in his hands, except at family worship, and then often he asked "sis" to read it. The aged man preached well, the people thought. His extempore sermons sounded to me like a verbal copy of the American Messenger,—chiefly anecdotes and scraps of poetry. Not much about the King or kingdom.

One day the weary wanderer after "fancy" grew sleepy, and wished me to read for him. Nature overcame at last, and he slept. When he awoke, I commenced reading from "Model Church." The remarks about pride, lust, and worldly-mindedness started him.

"Hold!" said he; "you have changed the subject, I imagine. Who wrote that?"

"Eld. H. L. Hastings, a baptized christian man."

Taking up his novel, he remarked:—

"I don't dispute but that Mr. Hastings may be a good man; but if he is acquainted with such preachers as you have read about, he must know them by association; by living near to himself; for we have no such men in Vermont!"

Item. Last Court of Queen's Bench, a Baptist preacher was sentenced to four years in Kingston jail. Crime, forgery. Said Eld. lived in Irasburg, Vt.

Let us learn to love truth, and read no more fiction.

M. MATHEWS.

For the World's Crisis.

THE PRAYING CHRISTIAN.

Dear reader, did you ever see or hear of a christian that did not pray? I think I never did, neither do I ever expect to. But I have read in the blessed Bible of a real servant of God who was a praying man, and although his enemies conspired against him, to have him destroyed by the lions, he would not stop praying; and because he disobeyed the king's commandment, he was thrown among the lions; but God had commissioned an angel to take care of the lions, and to keep them from doing any harm to his faithful servant.

I have also read of three faithful servants of the Lord, who were requested by the prophet Daniel to desire mercies of the God of heaven, that he might reveal unto them the king's dream; and I presume that they joined together in a prayer-meeting, and God heard and answered their prayers. But I do not think they made very long prayers, but in a plain, earnest and simple manner, told their heavenly Father what they wanted, and what they really needed, and he heard and answered.

Those three companions of the prophet Daniel had been so faithful in prayer to God, and were so familiar with their heavenly Father, and had such strong confidence in his almighty protection, they feared not the monarch of Babylon, who had reared up an image on the plains of Dura, and commanded all to fall down and worship it; and although the penalty of disobeying the king's decree was death in its most horrid form, they knew that God had power to prevent the flames of the fiery furnace from hurting them.

How is it with us, dear brethren? do we fulfill the following declarations of holy writ? Let us turn to 1 Thess. 5 : 17, 18,—"Pray without ceasing, in every thing give thanks; for this is the will of God in Christ Jesus concerning you." Luke 18 : 1,—"And he spake a parable, saying, men ought always to pray and not to faint;" and then brings to view the importance of earnestly and continually pressing our suit before the Lord. In Luke 21 : 36, we are commanded by our Savior to "watch and pray always, that ye may be counted worthy to escape those things that are coming on the earth, and to stand before the Son of man.

In Psalm 55 : 17, King David says, "Evening, and morning, and at noon, will I pray and cry aloud; and he shall hear my voice."

But we must obey the Master's rule in Mark 11 : 24,—"Therefore I say unto you, What things soever ye desire when ye pray, believe that ye receive them, and ye shall have them." And we are also informed that the "Prayer of faith shall save the sick." Go to Father and tell him in a humble manner what you want. Thus you will receive what you need, according to the promise. Dear brethren, how is it about secret prayer? Do we pray in secret? If we are always faithful in secret devotion, we shall always be living christians.

And here I wish to tell the story of two sisters, who entered into a covenant with each other and with God, that they would retire to a grove and pray alone as often as twice or three times a day. As their paths went in different directions, by separating after walking in the same path about ten rods from the house, where they both lived, each could see the other's path. After a few weeks or months, one of the paths began to show signs of fresh grass growing up, and was a strong witness that the sister, who had previously kept the path trodden smooth, was growing cold and backsliding from the Lord. The other sister said to her one day,

"Dear sister, I am afraid you are not in the enjoyment of the good Spirit of the Lord."

Said the other, "How do you know?"

"Ah!" said she, "the grass is growing up in your path to the grove." And the backsliding sister confessed her fault, and in tears told her that the cause of it was her neglect of secret prayer.

We know that the prayer of faith is the key through Christ that opens the great storehouse of blessings and mercies, from whence all our wants are supplied. Therefore God help us to be faithful in prayer till the Master returns.

B. PERHAM.

IT SHALL BE WELL.

"Say ye to the righteous, that it shall be well with him. . . . Woe unto the wicked, it shall be ill with him."
—ISA. 3 : 10, 11.

Christian, cheer thee! though affliction's wave
Rolls o'er thee like th' unfathomed sea,
Remember, He whose power doth save,
Whispers, "It shall be well with thee!"

What though thy loved ones pass away,
And all alone thy journey here should be!
Soon thy dark night shall change to endless day,
And then it shall be well with thee.

When fierce temptations do thy path surround,
Look yonder by thy faith, and see
The glories of that dazzling crown!
Thine, when it shall be well with thee.

Be of good cheer, and thou shalt overcome;
For as thy day thy strength shall surely be;
And soon in Canaan's peaceful home
Ever it shall be well with thee.

* * * * * * *

Sinner, when thy Judge appears in splendor,
Where will then thy refuge be?
How canst thou escape his power,
When it shall be ill with thee?

When the great immortal army
Of God's saints shout victory,
And remove to realms of glory,
Then it shall be ill with thee.

O! then, turn, and seek salvation,
Cease thy mirth and revelry,
Hasten! while remains probation,
That it may be well with thee.

For the World's Crisis.

"GIVE MY LOVE TO THE CHURCH."

Such were the words of my dear sister,—Julia A. Scott,—a short time before she died. And, although she probably referred to the church in this place, yet it may not be amiss to notice it in the columns of her much beloved paper. The message was characteristic, for it was in her nature to love, and she said a few days previous to this, in conversation with her parents,—"I love everybody." So young, so pure and devoted, and yet so anxious to live! As a christian, I never met her equal. Such perfect consistency, such undoubting trust, and such patience in suffering, were really wonderful, and exhibited, as nothing else could, the power in religion. Through a long and trying sickness, never did one murmuring word escape her lips.

Possessed of a strong and active mind, a sweet and unselfish disposition, she was indeed the pet of our household, and beloved of a large circle of friends. Especially in the church will her loss be felt. Nothing but sickness could keep her from her accustomed place of worship. The cause of Christ was uppermost in her mind, and "gather them in" were words she often used, as Sabbath after Sabbath she collected her dear little class, that will never forget her anxiety for them after disease had so far prostrated her as to prevent her meeting them. The poor and lonely were never unheeded. She seemed to search out the sorrows of such hearts, and offer balm and consolation. And many a saddened heart will remember her sunny countenance and outstretched arm, and cherish the kind words that ever fell from her lips, no more to gladden save in fond memory. Her presence indeed seemed to bring sunshine to our dwelling; her voice music to our ears and joy to our heart.

But she is gone! No bitter wailings or heart-broken sighs can bring her back. Only in fond remembrance can she be in our midst. And although she clung to life so tenaciously, "hoping," as she said, "to go forth and gaze upon the great world of nature in the bloom of health," yet she was taken. And although the blow falls heavily upon us, though the ingredients of the cup seem so bitter, and the burden seems almost insupportable, we bow and say, "It is well."

Our darling rests. Yes, rests from the toils and troubles of life. No more weary tossings or restless nights fatigue and wear out our loved one. No more delusive hopes of returning health buoy her up for a season, to mock with excruciating and cruel reaction. Well did she sigh for rest; well did her thoughts turn toward that better land; well did she long for the resurrection morning. The grave looked dark and cheerless. It was beyond that darkened tide she looked, beyond the night of death, towards the morning of a blissful eternity she spoke of with joy.

And to that bright morning the weeping ones of earth may gladly look. The disconsolate households may watch for the sunlight on the mountains. The weeping fathers and mothers may hail the era of reunion, and clasp their treasures on the other shore, no more to be parted. The church may look forward to the triumphant day when the great charnel-house shall yield up the precious dust of ages; when death, so cruel and relentless, will no more walk up and down the earth, consigning the loved ones to the grave; when disease shall be banished, and immortality stamped upon everything; a striking and delightful contrast to this darkened and perishing world, where decay and death but meet our view, sorrow and sighing but fill the heart.

I often think of the words she spoke to her weeping mother, as she entered her room, borne down with anguish of heart to witness her child's suffering. She looked and said, "Oh! my mother, 'weeping may endure for a night, but joy cometh in the morning.'" What more of consolation can be offered, being words of inspiration?

SARAH E. SCOTT.

Vernon, Vt., Jan., 1864.

DO YOU ENJOY RELIGION?

I do not ask you if you possess religion, but do you enjoy it? Does it make you happy? The question is not whether being, as you hope, a religious person, you are also happy: but is it your religion which makes you happy? Are you happy, because religious? A person may acknowledge God, and have joy, and yet not "joy in God." Perhaps you will say it helps to make you happy—that is religion and certain other things together make you happy. But this answer is not satisfactory. Religion must more than help to make you happy. If it only helps, it does no more than many other things. They help. In that case religion might be needful to happiness, even as money is reckoned by many to be; but it could not be pronounced to be the one thing needful. Religion ought to make you happy without the aid of anything else. You should enjoy it, though you had nothing else to enjoy. Habakkuk says, "Although the fig-tree shall not blossom, neither shall fruit be in the vines; the labor of the olive shall fail, and the fields shall yield no meat; the flock shall be cut off from the fold, and there shall be no herd in the stalls; yet will I rejoice in the Lord, I will joy in the God of my salvation." He regarded religion as able alone to make him happy. And are we not commanded to be happy in religion alone—to "rejoice in the Lord," and that "evermore?" Should we be commanded to be happy in it, if it needed some assistance to make us happy?

Religion is both exactly adapted and entirely adequate to make its subjects happy. It supplies the soul with a portion; and what does the soul want to make it happy but a suitable and sufficient portion? This the religious man has. The Lord is his portion. Is not that a portion to make him happy? Is it not good enough, and large enough? If the world can make one happy, as some suppose, cannot much more the Maker of all the worlds, and the owner of the universe? This portion is infinite, so that it can never be exhausted; and it is eternal, so that it can never fail. And while religion gives us a portion, what a protector, what a provider, what a comforter it affords us! The best of fathers, and the friend that is more constant than a brother! Then, what present good it yields, and what promises it makes of greater good to come! What a prospect it holds out! O what hopes it inspires! The christian has all these to rejoice in—Christ Jesus, the "exceeding great and precious promises," the first-fruits of the Spirit, and the hope of glory. Can any one say what is wanting in religion to make one happy?

Religion has made many happy. Peter, in his first general epistle, within the compass of only three verses, speaks of christians as not only rejoicing, but rejoicing "greatly," yea, "with joy unspeakable and full of glory." He speaks of it not as a duty, or as a privilege, but as a fact. They did so. And what they so rejoiced in was Jesus Christ, and the prospect of the incorruptible inheritance, both which christians have the same warrant to rejoice in now. Now, if religion made these happy, why should it not make others happy? Why should one enjoy it, and another not enjoy it, if both possess it? It was intended to make all its subjects happy—very happy.

I ask then, does it make you happy? Do you enjoy religion? Now, do not evade the question. What is to become of us, if religion does not make us happy? If we do not enjoy it here, how shall we enjoy it hereafter? Barely to possess it hereafter would not satisfy, even if such a thing could be. How can a religion which does not make us happy on earth, make us happy in heaven? The religion of heaven is the same in kind with that of earth. The only difference is in degree. The religion of earth is communicated from heaven. It must be of the same nature with it.

Besides, if our religion does not make us happy, how do we do our duty? We are commanded to rejoice. It is a part of practical christianity to be happy. It is obedience to a precept. It belongs to the character of the doer of the word. Moreover, how are we to have satisfactory evidence that we possess true religion, if we have not joy in it? Suppose we had not love, would we be christians then? No, certainly; for without charity a man is nothing. But why can we not be christians without love? Because it is the fruit of the Spirit. And is not joy also the fruit of the Spirit? If love is the first named of the nine, joy is the second. "The fruit of the Spirit is love, joy, etc." Gal. 5 : 22, 23. And these are not said to be the fruits of the Spirit. It is not the plural form that is used. They are not distinct productions. They are all one cluster—"the fruit of the Spirit." Now, since we have not love, we conclude we have not the Spirit; why should we not conclude the same if we have not joy? I know it may be said that there are many things to interfere with christian joy. But while these may and do diminish it and interrupt it, they do not therefore annihilate it. They were "in heaviness through manifold temptations." Nevertheless they rejoiced "greatly."

You see now why I ask you if you enjoy religion. You perceive that it is no insignificant question. Many profess to have religion, but are conscious that they do not enjoy it. They hope they are religious, but know they are not happy. They trust that God is their portion, but they have no joy in him. Indeed some are astonished that we should speak of religion as a thing to be enjoyed. They regard it rather as a thing to be endured—as a sort of penance, a system of privation. And in so far as it is not suffering, it is toil—a something composed of penance and task. When they betake themselves to anything of a religious nature, they feel that they must. A sort of dire necessity constrains them. Such a religion may prepare a person for hell, but how it is to qualify him for heaven, I see not. And a religion which does not qualify a person for heaven, certainly does not answer the purpose.

Many persons lament that their religion does not make them happy, and they wonder why it is. I suspect it is because they depend no more upon it to make them happy. They look for enjoyment too much to other sources. Perhaps, however, the reason they have so little enjoyment in religion is that they have so little religion to enjoy. Now those who appear to have so little, should seriously inquire if they have any.

But some may say, "Religion sometimes makes us happy." But why only sometimes—why not always? The command is, "Rejoice in the Lord always;" and the same reason exists for being happy in religion at all times, as at any time. If you rejoice in the world, no wonder if your joy is often interrupted; but if God is your God, and he is evermore the same, why should you not rejoice in him evermore? But does not the Lord sometimes call to sorrow? True, but even then he does not call from joy. Joy and sorrow are perfectly compatible. Were they not coincident in the experience of Paul? "As sorrowful, yet always rejoicing," he says. If there exist causes of sorrow which operate, that does not annihilate the causes of joy. They should operate too. If you seem to have nothing else to rejoice in, yet there are your sorrows; rejoice in them; well may you, if they work for you "a far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory." Did not Paul "glory in tribulations also?"

Let not the reader rest satisfied until he enjoys religion. What can one enjoy when the world is receding, if he cannot enjoy God?
—Nevins.

DELAYS.

Shun delays; they breed remorse;
Take thy time, while time is lent thee;
Creeping snails have weakest force;
Fly their fault, lest thou repent thee.
Good is best when soonest wrought,
Lingering labors come to nought.

The Children's Corner.

PLEDGE OF THE TRY COMPANY.

We, the Undersigned, hereby pledge ourselves to abstain from Tea, Coffee, Tobacco, and all Intoxicating Drinks as a Beverage.

NAMES FOR THE TRY COMPANY.—George W. Baker, John Pitman.

For the World's Crisis.

TO MY DEAR YOUNG FRIENDS.

Do you ever study the habits and manners of animals and birds? If so, you have no doubt, ere this, learned many an instructive lesson therefrom. Now I will tell you of something that came under my own observation.

My little girls brought from a neighbors a turkey—not a "hen," but a large white gobbler—a stately, majestic old fellow. They called him "Dick," and kept him for his feathers, of which they made "plumes." He used to roost nights upon the garden fence, or other places, as high as he could get. The old fellow felt lonesome, no doubt, all alone, a stranger in a strange place. A little while after, they brought a poor little motherless chicken, not much larger than your fist. The little thing went peeping about, and just had strength enough to eat, and no one seemed to care much about it, whether it lived or not; and where it slept nights they gave no heed. It grew, and began to thrive fast, and I noticed that in the day time it would follow "Old Dick" about, and there seemed to be a mutual liking between them.

But soon I observed there was something going on, quite unusual to the old fellow's previous habits. At last we lost sight of him nights altogether; but he made his appearance in the morning betimes, with "chicky" by him, scratching away for its breakfast for dear life. So one evening shortly after, just after sundown, I had occasion to go through a piece of potatoes that grew in my garden. They were very rank and thick. I saw something white down next to the ground. I went up to it and pushed away the vines; and behold you! "quit, quit," here was "Old Dick," and, to my surprise, little chicky poked out his head from under the old fellow's wing, as much as to say, "I'm all right, good night," then went back again to finish his night's rest. I must confess I was completely upset, so contrary to nature, too; if it had been a "hen," I would not have thought it so strange.

But here it was, young friends, a poor friendless, houseless little chick. God found means for its protection. It seems as if the old gobbler could reason: "Poor little friendless orphan, you little know the dangers to which you are exposed. Your blood may soon become food for the remorseless mink, or greedy hawk. I, also, am a captive, in a strange land. You shall not lack a friend; I will henceforth be your protector." Such seemed to be his soliloquy, and actions sometimes speak louder than words.

We kept Old Dick and his little charge until late in the fall, then sold him. When he was to be taken away, the question was, What are we to do with chicky? "Don't let them be separated by any means." So it was taken away with him, and we have since learned they were never parted until by death.

We draw a moral, thus, for our young friends, (and some older ones), to be kind to the poor, weak, and friendless outcasts, and condescend to men, or things, of low estate, adapting ourselves to the mind which was in Christ.

Yours, D. KINNEY.

Norwichville, C. W.

LITTLE CHILDREN CAN DO GOOD.

In one of the mining districts, where the people were very rough and savage—for they passed nearly all their lives in very laborious employment down in the mines, and had little to comfort or cheer them—there came a new hand, that is to say, a new workman. This man was above the common sort; he had seen better days; he was a widower, but he had one child, and all the love of his heart was centered in her. How he had watched her when she lay asleep, none but he could tell; and what hope and joy had sprung up in his heart as he looked upon her, none but he and God knew. But when I say that all the love of his heart centered in her, I mean all the love that properly belonged to earth. He had a higher love, for he loved God, and this love of the Creator sanctified the love to the creature.

And the child of the miner used to go with her father very often down into the pit. If you ever climbed a hard, dry rock, and found in a small fissure a little flower blooming, then that was something like this child in the mine. Hard, dry and stony were those about her, but she was the little flower that gave new interest to the place, and seemed to make it better. She was quite a little girl then, not more than seven years old, I should think, so that to laugh merrily, to prattle pleasantly, and to play with such rough toys as the place admitted, were all that she did, except, as was sometimes the case, she went about with a lamp or lantern so cautiously, that if she had been seven times seven years old, she could not have been more careful.

The men at first grumbled at the child's presence, then they laughed at her father, as if because he loved his little daughter he were weak-minded; but after a time they got used to her, and then they began to like her, and when a circumstance occurred which gave them an opportunity of showing it more fully, they were as kind as men could be.

One day, as the child's father was descending the shaft, the rope broke, and he was killed on the spot. The child was then ten years old. She was at home at the time of the accident, and knew nothing of it till she saw several of the men coming towards the house with a heavy burden. The child saw them coming, tripped out lightly, with a smile on her face, for she knew not what they brought her, and asked, "Is father coming?"

And they said, "yes—no—not yet—not exactly;" and then the foremost man, who had undertaken to break the news, lifted up the child, and carried her into the house, saying, "Don't take on now! don't take on! if father's dead and gone, we'll all be fathers to you—don't take on now—don't!"

Dead! yes, she saw it at once, and cried bitterly. She begged to go and look at her father, and they led her out where the grass was growing, where the birds were singing, where the sun was shining, and where the body lay covered with a cloth. Then they stood apart and left the child alone—alone with God and her dead father! She knelt down and prayed. It was not a long, grand prayer. It was only broken words. It was the prayer he had taught her—the Lord's prayer. When she came to that petition, "Thy will be done," she repeated it three times. Then she uttered her other prayer, in which she was accustomed to name her father. She knew she must not pray for him now, but it was the first time that name was to be left out, and oh! how she wept. Then she lifted up the cloth, or was going to do so, when she fainted quite away, and the miners came and carried her into her home, and whispered that she was dead.

But she was not dead. When she recovered, things had been arranged, and the old miner who had broken to her the news, took her to his home, and became as a father to her.

When her father was buried, and her first grief had worn away, she visited the mine again; but she exercised a new and unexpected influence. The men had been accustomed to look at her as a flower on the rock; but they had seen her pray—had seen her grief, and they saw her conquer her grief, and be hopeful in distress, and they knew and felt the reason,—it was religion that had done it. The good seed sown in her heart was bearing fruit, and the wind of adversity had scattered some of the seed, and it fell here and there, and yonder into other hearts, and found good ground to grow in.

And it was not only the presence of the child that made those men think of religion. She was a little missionary to them. When they would let her—and they would let her whenever they could—she would read to them out of her father's Bible, now a psalm, now a parable, now a scene from the gospel history. Her work, simple as it was in its character, was owned and blessed. Those hard, rocky hearts had water of repentance, and faith and love, that would gush forth at the word of God. And now one, and now another of those men, turned their feet from the evil way, and took the path to Zion, God's word being a lamp to their feet.

So passed three or four years; the child, beloved by all, was the child of all, and she went on in her quiet way, doing all she could to be useful,—sewing, knitting, reading, spinning, anything, everything.

One day she was reading the story of Jairus to a woman who had been a mother to her, and when she came to that passage where it says that Jesus said to the dead child, "Little maid, I say unto thee arise!" she looked up at the woman who was busy spinning, and said,

"I think he will say that to me soon!"

The woman shook her head in surprise, and said, "How so, pretty one?"

"I think," she said, "he will say arise, and come up higher!" And then she nestled her head in the garments of the woman, and was silent for a long time.

She was not mistaken. The word had gone forth. The blossom on the rock was withering; she sickened from that day and died. They buried her by her father's side, and called her the little angel.

Selected by M. D. W.

From Sarah Proctor.

BRO. GRANT:—I am glad the children have a paper of their own, and I think it is a very pretty paper; but I like to read the Children's Corner in the Crisis just as well as before. The Young Pilgrim is not large enough to hold it all, and so we can have both. I send you two names for the Try Company. I tried to get more, but they thought they could not give up their tea and coffee.

I want all the brothers and sisters to pray for me, that I may be faithful, and meet them all in the kingdom when Jesus comes.

Yours truly, SARAH PROCTOR.

Worthington, Iowa.

THE GOOD LITTLE GIRL.—A little colored girl, who had learned to read the New Testament, one day ran to her mother to show her how many plums a kind friend had given her.

"She has given you a great many," said her mother; "she was very generous."

"But," said the little girl, "here are not all she gave me. I gave away a part to Mary Jones."

"Why did you give them to her?" inquired her mother.

"Because," said the little girl, "she pushes me off the side-walk, and calls me 'nigger,' and I gave them to her because I am commanded to love my enemies. I thought may be she wouldn't call me 'nigger' any more, if I gave her the plums."

"You did right, my child," replied her mother. "You should always return good for evil."

☞ The answer to Enigma in the Crisis of Jan. [illegible], is what David sung,—"PSALMS."

The World's Crisis

AND SECOND ADVENT MESSENGER.

TERMS:

A single copy, one year.......$2.00
A single copy, six months.......1.00
A single copy, three months.......50
5 copies, six months, when sent to one address.......4.50
10 copies, six months, when sent to one address.......8.00
20 copies, six months, when sent to one address.......15.00
30 copies, six months, when sent to one address.......22.00

PAYABLE IN ADVANCE.

These terms, allowing a subscription of 50 cents for three months, place the paper within reach of all that are able to pay anything. The reduction in prices, where five or more papers are sent to one address, enables subscribers, by combining, to receive a large number at reduced rates; thus supplying the poor in their neighborhood.

We propose that those who have ability, when sending their own subscriptions, also send what they are willing to give to aid in circulating the Crisis among the poor who we have always with us.

POSTAGE.—The postage, in the United States, on each single copy of the Crisis, is 20 cents a year, payable quarterly, in advance, at the office of delivery.

RULES FOR CORRESPONDENTS.—Over all matters not intended for publication, write PRIVATE.
Over all business matters, write BUSINESS.
Over all articles for the paper, write FOR THE CRISIS.
All articles should be accompanied by the writer's name, for the Editor's information, even if it is not published.
When the names of new subscribers are sent, please say they are new subscribers.

PRIVATE LETTERS.—Those wishing to address the Editor on matters not connected with the office, will please write the word PRIVATE on the outside of the envelope.

Please put the business matters and appointments on a piece of paper separate from other communications.

All persons writing to the office should give DISTINCTLY and PLAINLY the Post Office, County and State at which they wish to be addressed; and all orders, subscriptions, communications and remittances, should be plainly directed to MILES GRANT, BOSTON, MASS.

PUBLISHED ALSO AT THE SAME OFFICE,

THE YOUNG PILGRIM,

A NEW ILLUSTRATED SUNDAY SCHOOL PAPER,

DEVOTED TO

The Interests of our Children and Youth.

TERMS:

For a single copy, 25 cents a year; and at the same rate for any number of copies under ten.
10 copies, when sent to one address.......$2.00
20 copies, when sent to one address.......3.50
30 copies, when sent to one address.......5.00
50 copies, when sent to one address.......[illegible]
100 copies, when sent to one address.......[illegible]

PAYABLE—ALWAYS IN ADVANCE.

POSTAGE—(12 cents a year, for every single copy, and the same for every 10 copies or less to one address) must be paid quarterly in advance, at the office where the paper is received.

All communications and remittances should be addressed to THE YOUNG PILGRIM, CASSE BOX, BOSTON, MASS.

The World's Crisis

AND SECOND ADVENT MESSENGER.

"BEHOLD, I COME QUICKLY; AND MY REWARD IS WITH ME."

WHOLE NO. 437. BOSTON, TUESDAY, FEBRUARY 16, 1864. VOL. XVIII.—NO. 22.

The World's Crisis

AND SECOND ADVENT MESSENGER,

Issued every Tuesday Afternoon, at

167 HANOVER STREET, BOSTON.

MILES GRANT, EDITOR.

EDITORIAL COMMITTEE:
H. L. HASTINGS, D. T. TAYLOR,
H. F. CARPENTER.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEE:
H. V. DAVIS, S. S. BREWER,
A. ROSS, J. G. HAMBLIN,
SOLOMON HOVEY.

GEO. T. ADAMS, TREASURER.

☞ THE CRISIS is devoted to the exposition of all Bible truth; especially the doctrine of the immediate, personal coming and reign of Christ on the earth; holiness of heart; the unconscious state of the dead; their literal resurrection, and the final destruction of the wicked.

For the World's Crisis.

"O LORD, HOW LONG?"

"One human soul
Is more than any parchment scroll,
Or my flag the winds unroll."
—Whittier.

How long ere we shall see the light?
Wilt Thou not end this weary fray?
O, let the splendors of Thy day
Dispel the darkness of our night!

We've waited long; our eyes are wet
With bitter, unavailing tears;
And still we wait, 'mid doubts and fears,
To see the end that comes not yet.

O, let this surging tumult cease,
And bring our loved ones back again;
O, let Him quickly come to reign,
Whose title is the Prince of Peace.

Yet still we'll suffer and endure,
Bending unto Thy sovereign will;
We may not fear to trust Thee still,
Knowing Thy promises are sure.

Then let the tide of sorrow come,
Though it o'erwhelm, we will not fear;
Nor murmur, knowing Thou art near,
And in Thy presence we are dumb.

Look down upon us while we pray,
And from the blackness of our night
Help us to walk, with garments white,
Into the sunshine of Thy day.

MRS. CHAS. A. KNOWLES.

Peace Dale, R. I.

For the World's Crisis.

THE RESURRECTION OF THE BODY.

"But some man will say, How are the dead raised up? and with what body do they come? Thou fool! that which thou sowest is not quickened, except it die: and that which thou sowest, thou sowest not that body that shall be, but bare grain, it may chance of wheat, or of some other grain: but God giveth it a body as it hath pleased him, and to every seed his own body."—1 Cor. 15: 35-38.

The first point in this analogy was noticed in the Crisis of Jan. 12th, and therefore need not be repeated. But the next point—"that which thou sowest, thou sowest not that body that shall be"—deserves examination; because some infer therefrom that the body that dies will not be raised. But such omit to notice the next point—"God giveth it a body as it hath pleased him, and to every seed his own body";—which clearly refutes the inference which they deduce from the other point.

If we sow wheat, we raise wheat; if we sow barley, we raise barley; and so we reap what we sow, in all cases; only we sometimes obtain different varieties of what we sow. So also, we may say, is the resurrection of the dead. It is sown a natural body, it is raised a spiritual body. But we could not say so, if the body sown shall be raised a spiritual body, and that body was not raised from the material that dies; for that would not be raising what is sown. But Paul says that the body sown shall be raised: "It is sown in corruption, it is raised in incorruption." And he might as well say that we should raise wheat from onion seed, in connection with the statement that God giveth to "every seed his own body," as to say that the body sown should be raised from some unearthly substance.

Therefore, as we have no right to infer from one point what will contradict the other, we must understand both so as not to contradict either. To illustrate, take the case of a person very much deformed; that body will not be "that body that shall be"; for "it is sown in dishonor, it is raised in glory," although raised from the material of the one sown. For the analogy,—"Thou sowest not that body that shall be"—would, in this case, and in the case of all, hold good; for it is a new body formed from the substance of the old one. And this would also illustrate the other point,—"God giveth it a body as it hath pleased him, and to every seed his own body." But let us hear what Paul says in illustration of his own analogy. "All flesh is not the same flesh; but there is one kind of flesh of beasts, another of birds, another of fishes. There are also bodies celestial, and bodies terrestrial: but the glory of the celestial is one, and the glory of the terrestrial is another. There is one glory of the sun, and another glory of the moon, and another glory of the stars; for one star differeth from another star in glory. So also is the resurrection of the dead. It is sown in corruption, it is raised in incorruption; it is sown in dishonor, it is raised in glory; it is sown in weakness, it is raised in power; it is sown a natural body, it is raised a spiritual body."—Vers. 39-44.

That Paul here speaks of the character of the resurrection body, of all, both good and bad, cannot be denied; except on the assumption that the pronoun "we" is here implied, and has a limited application to the finally saved. For if any of the persons addressed were to fail of life eternal, then they would be excluded from its application. But when Paul declares that "since by man came death, by man came also the resurrection of the dead," and then explains by saying, "For as in Adam all die, even so in Christ shall all be made alive," the explanation requires that the preposition "in" should have the same meaning as "by." For if it be said that it means in the Christ nature, then it would follow that we should die out of Christ, in the Adamic nature, in order to be thus made alive. But to get rid of this difficulty, up comes this all-sufficient "we." All are christians that die in Adam shall be made alive by Christ. But if the righteous only were meant, why does Paul add—"But every man in his order," and then explain "order" to be successive divisions—Christ the first-fruits, afterwards they that are Christ's at his coming; and then the end, when he shall have delivered up the kingdom," etc.? Why say, "Every man in his own order," if all that were to be raised are to be raised at once, in one order?

That logic that goes on the assumption that the pronoun "we" is implied in every promise of this chapter, and applicable to those to whom the epistle was addressed, and is afterwards limited to only those of them who are finally saved, like "necessity, knows no law." The pronoun is sometimes used in a limited sense, when it will admit of a general application. For instance, Paul says in Rom. 14: 10-12, "Why dost thou judge thy brother? or why dost thou set at naught thy brother? for we shall all stand before the judgment seat of Christ. For it is written, As I live, saith the Lord, every knee shall bow to me, and every tongue shall confess to God. So then every one of us shall give account of himself to God."

As the phraise "every knee shall bow," excludes none, but manifestly includes all, so the pronoun "we" can have the same general application. So there can be no escape from that judgment; if there could be, the very persons addressed might have escaped by rejecting the apostle's reproof, by continuing to judge unrighteously. But then, where would be the point to Paul's statement—"We shall all stand at the judgment seat of Christ"? How could all stand there, and each give account of himself to God, if any of them were to fail of a resurrection? when Paul intimates that a non-resurrection blots out all hope of any future life. See 1 Cor. 15: 32. And if all that die are to be "made alive," then the analogy in regard to the resurrection of the dead applies equally to all.

But, says one, if all the dead are raised with spiritual and incorruptible bodies, then they will all be immortal. But stop! A spiritual body is not the only qualification for the life eternal. "To be carnally minded is death; but to be spiritually minded is life and peace." Neither is incorruptibility of the body immortality. If it were, Paul would not have said, "This corruptible must put on incorruption, and this mortal must put on immortality."

But can this apply to all? It cannot, because this is stated as a qualification of those who shall inherit the kingdom of God. And "Know ye not," said Paul, "that the unrighteous shall not inherit the kingdom of God?" But hear what he says:—"Now this I say, brethren, flesh and blood cannot inherit the kingdom of God: neither doth corruption inherit incorruption. Behold, I show you a mystery: we shall not all sleep, but we shall all be changed, in a moment, in the twinkling of an eye, at the last trump. For the trumpet shall sound, and the dead shall be raised incorruptible, and we shall be changed. For this corruptible must put on incorruption, and this mortal must put on immortality. So when this corruptible shall have put on incorruption, and this mortal shall have put on immortality, then shall be brought to pass the saying that is written, Death is swallowed up in victory. O death, where is thy sting? O hades, where is thy victory?"—Vers. 50-55.

That what is here said—"we shall all be changed"—applies to the finally saved, is stated in the beginning of this very chapter. Paul begins it by saying, "Moreover, brethren, I declare unto you the gospel which I preached unto you, which ye also received, and wherein ye stand: by which also ye are saved, if ye keep in memory what I preached unto you, unless ye have believed in vain." He then proceeds to convict some among them of believing in vain, who said, "there is no resurrection of the dead." Yet he addresses them all as "brethren," whether they had believed in vain or not, and reckoned them among the "all" that "shall be made alive." So their final salvation was dependent on their faith, but their resurrection independent of any faith. For if this was not so, Paul could not have said, If the dead rise not, then is not Christ raised; for that would not follow; but this—If the dead rise not, it will be because they have not faith enough to make them rise.

How very logical it is to deny the resurrection of the body, and hold to the natural immortality of the soul, and yet profess to believe in the resurrection of the dead! Dead what? Dead soul? O no. Dead body? O no, the old body cannot be raised! Then why talk about raising the dead, if there is nothing that is dead that can be raised? Or why seek for instruction in such illogical reasoning that sets scripture statements and common sense at defiance?

Did not good old Job say—"After my skin worms destroy this body, yet in my flesh shall I see God." And did not Paul say that the body sown in corruption should be raised an incorruptible spiritual body? Incorruptible, because no more subject to putrefaction; spiritual, because not quickened by blood, but spirit-life. Did not Paul also say "Christ is risen from the dead, and become the first-fruits of them that slept"? Did his flesh see corruption? Did he not himself say, after his resurrection, "A spirit hath not flesh and bones, as ye see me have"? And shall we deny that Jesus Christ is come in the flesh; that he left his resurrection body behind, and assumed some other one? If we do not, then we must believe that, as he is the first-fruits, there will be a general resurrection of all that are in the graves; a resurrection of the body as well as of the soul. Let God be true.

WM. HOBBS.

☞ Pity and patience are the two keys which unlock the human heart.

HOPE OF THE RESURRECTION.

There is nothing so repulsive to our natural instincts as death. There are few people who do not feel a cold shudder creeping through and through them whenever they realize the thought that they must die, and have the coffin-lid screwed down upon their foreheads, and be covered up with clods in the damp, dark ground. But the hope of the resurrection of the just throws a radiance round the death-bed and the grave, and helps to reconcile us to the mysterious change. To a good man, the sepulchre is but the gateway to a better world,—the resting-place for the wasted and wearied body previous to going forth into the bliss and honors of a divine and eternal kingdom. Its shades are but a quiet night anterior to an everlasting day. Death is but a sleep, which presupposes a future awakening. "An eternal sleep" is a contradiction in terms,—a miserable solecism,—a mode of speech the very phraseology of which brands the atheistic invention with absurdity. Sleep is but the temporary suspension of animation for the purpose of refreshment and invigoration. It is always succeeded by a waking. And such is death to the christian. Jesus has transmuted it into a refreshing sleep, from which we shall early arise, in renewed strength and glory, for the scenes and employments of a day which shall have no night. The New Testament nearly always speaks of the departure of the believing as a sleep. Jesus said, "Our friend Lazarus sleepeth; but I go that I may awake him out of sleep." "The saints which slept," is familiar phraseology to the reader of the Scriptures. "David, after he had served his own generation, fell on sleep." As the first martyr died, Luke said he "fell asleep." Paul comforted the mourning Thessalonians, by assuring them that their pious dead "are asleep,"—only "asleep,"—to be waked to life again when Jesus comes. And so all the saints that have departed this life are said to "sleep in Jesus."

Yes, christian parent, that child which so suddenly sickened, withered and faded in your arms, and which with so much sadness you yielded to the cold, dark grave, is not lost and gone eternally. It only sleeps—sweetly sleeps—in the arms of its Maker. You buried it; but you buried it looking for the resurrection of the last day, when it shall awake to be yours forever. Weep not, O daughter, as if that sainted mother whom you last saw dressed for the tomb shall never look upon you again with her wonted love and tenderness. She is thy mother still. She is not dead, but sleepeth. She will awake again, and take you to her heart as fondly as ever. Sorrow not as they that have no hope, O stricken one, mourning over a husband's grave. He has only laid him down to rest in soft slumber. God's eye is on that prostrate buried form. And when thy loved one's Savior comes he will shake off his sepulchral covering, and be thy constant friend as in the days gone by.

"Soon shall you meet again,
Meet ne'er to sever;
Soon will peace wreath her chain
Round you forever."

And what a reunion of hearts and exchange of happy gratulations shall crown and crowd that day! What glorious meetings and triumphs will then be celebrated! What devout and anxious hopes shall then be consummated! Then shall Jesus say, "Awake and sing, ye that dwell in the dust"; and they shall obey his call, and rise to praise him forever. Then will the once afflicted saints of every age and clime "stand dressed in robes of everlasting wear." Then shall those who denied themselves and took up the cross receive their crowns. Then shall the wisdom of their "respect unto the recompense of the reward" be vindicated forever. Then shall God glorify his Son by transforming millions into his glorious image. And "then shall be brought to pass the saying that is written, Death is swallowed up in victory."

Earth, my brethren, has been the theatre of some splendid victories, the fame of which has filled the world and echoed along the corridors of ages. But never has earth beheld such a triumph as that which shall be realized at the resurrection of the just. Then shall be enacted another genesis, more glorious than the first. Then shall be performed another exodus, more illustrious than that which Moses led. Then shall truth triumph over error, and faith over unbelief, humility over pride, life over death, and immortality over the grave. Then shall the cross give way to the crown, and corruption to glory; and from the mold and ashes of every christian's tomb shall come forth an undying form, radiant with the transforming touch of Deity,—a dear-bought but sublime and imperishable monument to the resurrection and the life. The graves of the patriarchs shall open. The scattered dust and ashes of prophets, apostles, and martyrs shall be gathered. Unknown saints of God that have died in garrets, and cellars, and barns, and dungeons,—and lowly and despised poor in Christ who sleep in potters'-fields,—shall spring forth from their unnoticed graves in sublimer glory than ever adorned the illustrious Solomon. Precious innocents, whose names were never heard, and lamented children, that molder in their little tombs, and pious afflicted ones, who spent their days in pain secluded from the gay world,—all, all shall then forsake their resting-places and shine as the stars for ever and ever. Then shall all the waiting saints of all lands and ages, mysteriously transferred to the bridal halls of heaven, join in holy fellowship to celebrate with untold joy the sublime epiphany of their redeeming Lord, with all their varied tongues in heavenly concord singing the triumphs of that salvation for which they lived, and hoped, and suffered.

"O, scenes surpassing fable, and yet true!
Scenes of accomplished bliss! which, who can see,
Though but in distant prospect, and not feel
His soul refreshed with foretastes of the joy?"

Not all the saints, indeed, may rise at the same instant, nor all the living be translated at once; there is progression and order in all the divine works; but still the resurrection is for all that sleep in Christ, and the translation for all whom he shall find awaiting his coming. All shall share in the happy victory. And what adds to the peculiar joy of some is that they will never die at all, but shall "be changed, in a moment, in the twinkling of an eye, at the last trump; for the trumpet shall sound, and the dead shall be raised incorruptible, and we shall be changed." "The dead in Christ shall rise first: then we which are alive and remain shall be caught up together with them." And what a thought is this, that there perhaps are some listening to me now who shall never know by experience what death is! Those of Christ's people who are living when he comes shall of a sudden feel the thrill of immortality careering through them, and find themselves transported to join the children of the resurrection. Not one of them who truly believe in Jesus shall be left behind. The humblest and obscurest, the lowest with the highest, all shall be taken together. For "he shall send forth his angels, with a great sound of a trumpet, and they shall gather together his elect from the four winds, from one end of heaven to the other." And they shall live and reign with Christ the thousand years. "And so shall we ever be with the Lord." And thenceforward forever shall this song be sung:—

"Behold, the tabernacle of God is with men,
And he will dwell with them,
And they shall be his people,
And God himself shall be with them,
And be their God.
And God shall wipe away all tears from their eyes;
And there shall be no more death,
Neither sorrow nor crying,
Neither shall there be any more pain:
For the former things are passed away."

Verily, "blessed and holy is he that hath part in the first resurrection!" Was there ever conceived such a system of grace and glory as that which constitutes the gospel of Jesus? How precious are its promises! How transporting are its hopes! How it meets the vast desires of humanity, and pours consolation into the hearts of the children of sorrow! What is there to compare with it? Atheism, with its eternal sleep, may stupefy the soul, and render it somewhat callous to the woes of life. But how sad and cheerless is the epitaph which it writes on the tomb! Heathen philosophy, with its transmigrations and feeble guesses, may excite some dull and low concern for futurity; but how gloomy is the destiny which it sets before man! It is only Christianity, with its resurrection and another life, that can at all rouse man into a proper consciousness of his dignity, or satisfy the lofty and mighty aspirations that well up from his heart. This is our glorious hope, the price of which cannot be equalled with gold.

And how devoutly thankful should we then be for what God has done for us and purposed concerning us! How should our hearts soften at the contemplations before us, and swell with emotions of love towards so great a Benefactor! How should we be concerned to find out the will of such a friend, and seek to approve ourselves unto him! How gladly should we set ourselves to do his gracious commands, and to keep his loving counsels! In him is our strength, our hope, and our joy. He is not ashamed to be our God, and surely we should not be ashamed to be his people, "looking for that blessed hope, even the glorious appearing of the great God, our Savior Jesus Christ." Let us, then, give ourselves to him, body and soul, as a living sacrifice, which is our reasonable service. Let us fully identify ourselves with Jesus, knowing that "when he shall appear, we shall be like him, for we shall see him as he is." And especially, let us not forget that "every man that hath this hope in him purifieth himself, even as the Savior is pure." He hath prepared for us a city; but "there shall in no wise enter into it any thing that defileth, neither whatsoever worketh abomination, or maketh a lie." It is only "the holy" who shall have part in the first resurrection. "The fearful, and unbelieving, and abominable, and murderers, and whoremongers, and sorcerers, and idolaters, and all liars, shall have their part in the lake which burneth with fire and brimstone, which is the second death." It is only "unto them that look for him" that "he shall appear the second time unto salvation."—The Last Times.

For the World's Crisis.

"FAITHFUL OVER A FEW THINGS."

Why do I write this morning? To be faithful over the few things intrusted me. The day of reckoning I understand to be indefinitely near. I would do with my might what my hands find to do. When I have done all I am instructed to say I am an unprofitable servant, having only done my duty. To do duty is to do what one is bidden to do; and not to do this is to be an unfaithful servant. I am but beginning to see duty in its broad scope of—"Whatsoever ye do"—am but learning the alphabet of obedience—"do all in the name of the Lord Jesus." What! know my Lord's will and do it not?—"beaten with many stripes;" these I have received from my spiritual Father for my profit, that I might be a partaker of his holiness by yielding to him implicit obedience through this fatherly training. How foolish to merit stripes for solaces, frowns for smiles. For example, just lay the Scripture rule for making feasts along side my past life and see what it touches; only three or four points where an attempt has been made at obedience. Obedience the exception, disobedience the rule! Is this a faithful servant? I can only cry, pardon, pardon, to my coming Lord; I knew not what I did.

The rule on this point is, "When thou makest a dinner or a supper, call not thy friends, nor thy brethren, neither thy kinsmen, nor thy rich neighbors." My rule has been to call just the above classes; now see the fruit of my toil,—"Lest they also bid thee again and a recompense be made thee." Like the Pharisee who prayed to be seen of men, I get all my recompense in this life, none in reserve for me. Oh! how sad the thought, as I look back upon my toil of thirty years.

Now for the positive part of this rule. What care has our Lord taken to first tell us who we must not invite and then who we must invite, that there need be no mistake. "But when thou makest a feast, call the poor, the maimed, the lame, the blind. And thou shalt be blessed, for they cannot recompense thee; but thou shalt be recompensed at the resurrection of the just." Happy is he who has an account filed for settlement at that day. Happy is she whose toil, and care, and sweat will bring her a reward in that day.

Beloved, how stands the account with you? I hope more favorably than with me. But, should it not, let us arise together in the strength of the Lord, and be obedient in the future; and not on this point only, but on all points of duty in God's holy book. Let us provoke one another to love and to good works; not forsaking the assembling of ourselves together, as the manner of some is; but exhorting one another; and so much the more as we see the day approaching.

We faithfully prepared our Christmas dinner, and felt that our work was accepted of the Lord. Also our New Year's day brought with it a blessing to the few who assembled themselves in the name of the Lord. Sr. Judy walked her four and a half miles to pay her vows in the presence of his people, and she was blest. On the first Sabbath of the year we had an unction from the Holy One. Our cups run over, although few in number. It is the "twos" and "threes" that God looks at now and blesses—"even to him that is poor, and of a contrite spirit, and trembleth at my word."

Brethren and sisters, we wish you all a happy New Year only in obedience to every precept of God's literal word. May you be kept in the love of God and in the patient waiting for Christ. Amen.

Yours in christian bonds,
E. S. WILLARD.

Hammonton, N. J., January, 1864.

For the World's Crisis.

PRACTICE WHAT YOU PREACH.

Tell me not of garbled sermons—
Elegance of thought and style;
Heard from out your modern pulpits,
Man from error to beguile.
Eloquence may charm the fancy,
Summon an admiring crowd,
Who surround the gifted preacher
With their praises long and loud;
But if God's appointed servants
Would their hearers' conscience reach,
Leading them to paths of wisdom,
They must practice what they preach.

D. F. N.

For the World's Crisis.

THE FIRST AND SECOND TABERNACLE.

NUMBER TWO.

In verse 8, Paul tells them that the signification of the high-priest going alone into the second tabernacle (Heb. 9) was that the way into the holiest of all, heaven, was not yet made manifest (laid open) while (so long) as the first tabernacle was yet standing, and in 10: 19, 20, he says, "Having, therefore, brethren, boldness (margin, liberty) to enter into the holiest (heaven) by the blood of Jesus, through a new and living way, which he hath consecrated for us through the vail, that is to say, through his flesh," etc. Whence some have concluded that since the rending of the vail from the top to the bottom (Matt. 27: 51) at the crucifixion, the souls of believers in a conscious state as entities pass immediately into heaven at death, the king of terrors and the terror of kings, becomes to them "The voice that Jesus sends / To call them to his arms," or "the gate to endless joy"; and yet they "dread to enter there." So also it becomes the "new and dying instead of living way," and Jesus himself is no longer the "strait way, the narrow gate," "the door," "the way and the life," but only the means by which death to them is made the way to life.

Perhaps these notions are the result of not having duly considered what the Scriptures of truth have said upon this subject. Nevertheless my apprehension of what is said leads me to quite a different conclusion; but in consequence of the difference of opinion, it becomes essential, for an agreement, that the subject of the "vail," the "living way," which he has consecrated (set apart) for us, should be a little more closely examined.

The point demanding our attention primarily is the phrase in Heb. 9: 8;—"So long as the first tabernacle was yet standing." Now Paul has expressly stated that that first, in the building "made with hands" by Moses, was a figure of the true and the temporary; and then he shows that the true temporary is the seen, the world, and the world "that now is" STILL STANDS as the first true tabernacle. Consequently "the way into the holiest" is not yet laid open to "the general assembly and church of the first-born."

Again, Christ said that "though heaven and earth should pass away," one jot or tittle of the law should not pass away until all was (should be) fulfilled; and that law says (Lev. 16: 16), speaking of the high-priest and the atonement, "that he shall make an atonement for the holy place (world, sanctuary) because of the uncleanness of the children of Israel, and because of their transgressions in all their sins; and so shall he do for the tabernacle of the congregation THAT REMAINETH AMONG (or with) THEM, in the midst of their uncleanness; and there shall be no man in the tabernacle of the congregation, when he goeth in to make an atonement in the holy place, until he come out."

NOTE.—Robinson's Calmet says that "the expiatory sacrifice offered by our Savior on Calvary, was the price or ransom, on the efficacy of which the atonement of the race of mankind depended; but to call that sacrifice the atonement, instead of the means of atonement, is an incorrect application of the word." Page 118. Consequently those who believe that the "sacrifice" was "the reconciliation," will have difficulty in understanding Lev. 16: 16, 17, when they read it; but if the reconciliation comes through the ministration of the high-priest, after he enters the holiest, by the blood of the sacrifice, then our application of the passage (Lev. 16: 16, 17) is legitimate to our subject, inasmuch as "the day of atonement" under Christ is not yet ended.

The idea contained in the words—"There shall be no man in the tabernacle of the congregation, etc., until he come out," is in harmony with 1 Cor. 15: 23. "Christ the first-fruits (of them that slept), AFTERWARD they that are Christ's at his coming." Even those that shall be alive and remain alive at his coming cannot be permitted to enter the "tabernacle of the congregation" here spoken of, the "eternal house," until "those who are sleeping in Jesus are raised from the dead," THEN those "who believe and shall never die" (John 11: 26), will be changed instantly, and conveyed away in clouds to meet the Lord in the air (Query. In the spirit?); and so will they "ever be with the Lord," "that where I am (when I come again) there ye may be also."—1 Thess. 4: 15, 17; John 14: 2. So if there be no resurrection of the dead, there can be no entering into the tabernacle of the congregation; or no "being clothed upon with our house which is from heaven." "No man in," etc.

Once more on this point. Christ said—alluding to the little ante-rooms in Solomon's temple, figurative emblems of those in whom should dwell the "promised spirit"—"In my Father's house are many mansions (dwelling places); if it were not so I would have told you. I go to prepare a place for you, and if I go and prepare a place for you, I will COME AGAIN and receive you unto myself, that where I am (when I come again implied), there ye may be also." Well, he has gone "into heaven itself, now to appear in the presence of God for us;" that by the sprinkling of his blood, that was offered through the eternal Spirit before the mercy-seat, he might prepare us for the heavenly, by taking off the curse placed upon us because of sin, which is death, and also prepare a place for us by removing the curse that was pronounced upon the tabernacle of the congregation in the sentence—"Cursed is the ground for thy sake," etc. Gen. 3: 17.

Now there is but one way of removing the consequences of transgression, and that is through the blood of Jesus; and he has not yet "come out of the holy," not yet "come again" the second time "unto salvation," and by parity of reasoning we know that the "preparation of the place is incomplete"; and consequently he has not yet received them unto himself, for he said he would do so when the place was prepared.

It only remains now to look at the "vail." The vail that was rent in twain was not the true vail but the typical; and just as that was rent from one extremity to the other, and taken away from between the holy and the holiest, so must the true temporary vail be destroyed and taken out of the way, before heaven and earth can be so approximated that the inmates of the one can have actual access and intercourse with the other. It is that true vail that bars us all from the heavenly court where "the trees are all green"; and Christ himself "after the flesh" could only reach that desired haven by tearing that vail of death asunder by a resurrection from the dead, and thus set apart the living way, or way of life, through or by his flesh, when he "counterworked death, and illustrated life and incorruption by the gospel." 2 Tim. 1: 10. (A. Clarke's Trans.) Hence it is said that "he died for (on account of) our sins, but rose again for (or to obtain) our justification" unto life; or rose again that we might have life. Consequently the "entering into life," being at the resurrection, it cannot be at death.

Thus Paul says that "when this corruptible (body) shall have put on incorruption, and this mortal (soul) shall have put on immortality (by a resurrection from the dead, ver. 52), THEN shall be brought to pass the saying that is written, Death is swallowed up in victory." And this he quotes from Isa. 25: 7;—"And he will destroy (margin—swallow up) in this mountain the face of the covering cast over all people, and THE VAIL that is spread over all nations. He will swallow up death in victory, and the Lord God will wipe away tears from off all faces."

So according to Paul's application and explanation of the BIBLE, the "vail" signified death, and its rending the resurrection, or abolition of death by it; but he shows clearly enough, to my understanding, that he was not referring to going to heaven at death, but an act of living faith of the christian here on earth, when he says, in the succeeding passage (Heb. 10: 22), "Let us draw near with a true heart, in full assurance of faith, having our hearts sprinkled from an evil conscience, and our bodies washed with pure water," etc.

If further testimony were needed to show that Paul in 2 Cor. 5: 1, when speaking of the "earthly house," made with hands, did not mean our corruptible bodies, in which "an immortal soul-man is groaning," because it must pass through the gate of death, to reach eternal life,—by the way, how will those who believe, and never die, but are changed at Christ's coming, reach that life, if death be the gate, and they never pass through it,—that testimony may be found in his summing up the argument on the "dissolution of the tabernacle" in Heb. 26: 27, in these words: "But now hath he promised, saying, Yet once more, I shake not the earth only, (the first true tabernacle, the visible,) but heaven also. And this word, Yet once more, signifieth the removing of those things that are made, that those which cannot be shaken (the future unseen, the eternal) may remain. Wherefore (in consequence of which) we receiving (we are to receive,) a kingdom that cannot be moved (therefore), let us serve God acceptably, with reverence and godly fear."

Before leaving this subject, we must allow the simple-minded and plain-spoken fisherman, Peter, to turn the focus of his Spirit-lens upon it, when all metaphors will vanish.

G. W. STETSON.

For the World's Crisis.

HOLINESS OF HEART.—No. 3.

Genuine holiness is the water of life. It has for its fountain the Creator of the universe, the Father of all. Its channel of communication is Jesus Christ, the Son of the living and true God; flowing freely from heaven it is the river of life. Jesus came to open our hearts and let this water of life flow in; so that the human heart becomes the reservoir. God the fountain, Christ the channel, and the great heart of humanity the reservoir.

Holiness cleanses, purifies, and enlarges the heart. Holiness is the heart's anchor. Hope is our cable. The word of God is our chart, our compass, our guide through the voyage of life. Looking unto Jesus, our Captain, the compass, as true as the needle to the pole, directs us to the port of glory.

Holiness develops a true and noble character from within, outward, and upward. This forms the great central principle of every worthy character. Holiness assists while it strengthens nature. The heart needs holiness. It must have it. 'Tis the demand of nature and the command of God. The eye may as well see without light as the heart be pure without holiness. Only get the heart right, have it cleansed and purified by genuine holiness—tear yourself loose from a second and habitual nature which you have formed, and by the grace and goodness of God, stand upon your own feet; and then you can see God and worship him in Spirit and in truth.

Holiness is perfectly adapted to the entire nature of man. I mean the original nature which God gave when he made man upright and procured him a good workmanship. That nature he had when he fell—which still adhered to him in "Paradise lost"—was made the monarch of the man by "Paradise regained." Holiness sweetens while it controls the disposition, elevates while it gives direction to the affections, stimulates while it gives scope to the intellect, and soothes while it supports the soul in its severest agonies.

Sin is directly opposed to holiness. Holiness is the result of a ready and implicit obedience to the will of God. Sin is a transgression of the law of God. Sin deceives while it decoys—presents pleasure while it poisons, blasts while it burns; and drags down while it destroys. Paul said, "Let not sin reign in your mortal body." Christ said, "Ye cannot serve God and mammon." God said, "Be ye holy, as I am holy." God is supreme. If our hearts are filled with holiness, we will desire and choose God for our portion. This opposing element of sin will introduce us to the devil, and so blind us that we shall be taken captive by him at his will.

One thought more, and that is self-examination! Am I in the broad way of sin that leads to death, or in the highway of holiness that conducts us into everlasting life? The answer we secretly give to this question really decides our present condition.

A. A. LASON.

For the World's Crisis.

LIGHT BORN OF DARKNESS.

Christian, when that dark veil which naturally covers our hearts is thrown aside, we discover a Father of infinite love who tries us here, that we may be fitted for the hallowed enjoyments of himself. In the presence of the great luminary, the stars withdraw themselves, but as night advances, and draws her veil before the sunbeams, they again emerge from their obscurity, and shine with lustre undiminished.

Emblem of the trials of the christian! When these have cast a shade over the vanity of our hearts, and thrown a gloom over the brightness of our earthly views, how plainly then we can perceive our inward depravity—what revelations of indwelling sins are made to us, and of a kind, too, whose existence we little suspected! While we were surrounded by every thing calculated to insure our ease and comfort, they were undiscovered, but let the clouds of trial and adversity darken the zenith of our worldly happiness, and coming forth from their obscurity they show their palpable existence. These are the seasons when the world is compelled to confess itself nothing but vanity and deceit.

No matter how heavy, how impenetrable the cloud may appear, the glorious Star of Jacob pierces the thickening shadows, and shows himself our unchanging guide—our Morning Star. The more weightily our afflictions press upon our spirits, the more valuable and lovely do we feel religion to be, the more do we find its adaptation to our every want. Then it is she stands out in bold relief, and shows herself clad in robes of immortality and eternal life.

Let such considerations as these induce us to take joyfully our appointed share of trial. Let us lose sight of the world, of all things earthly, and seek after an increasing resemblance to our Redeemer, that we may be a lucid gem in his crown forever.

May the Lord be with us, and keep us, and guide us till his appearing, is the prayer of your unworthy sister in Christ,

Warsaw, Ind. S. B. RORKE.

☞ Magnanimous repentance never waits for the spur of [illegible] before it bounds toward the injured one with confessions and reconciliation.

For the World's Crisis.

NOTES BY THE WAY.

Left home Jan. 2nd, for North Springfield, Vt. I drove my horse fifty miles, through an extremely cold day, and arrived there at six o'clock. At six and a half o'clock, meeting commenced. I preached a discourse to a goodly number, for such a tedious, cold evening. There were a number of stirring exhortations after the discourse. The Lord owned the word, and children were fed. Sabbath morning I preached a discourse on the signs of the times. It was a time of interest. The power of God was manifest. It was a time of weeping, and the church of God was stirred to diligence, the foundation of backsliders shaken, and the weight of the argument felt through the whole congregation. In the afternoon the meeting was more interesting, with a good congregation. The discourse was practical, and generally received, with a number of warm exhortations to back it up. In the evening, we gave the third discourse. The brethren were ready to back up the truth. It was a time of deep solemnity. At the close of the meeting a number arose for prayers.

On Monday evening, I preached again. It was a time of interest indeed. At the close of the meeting three or four arose for prayers. One man arose the night before and testified to the goodness of God. Others are feeling deeply. There are tokens of good.

Tuesday it snowed all day. The evening was cold and blustering; meeting not so fully attended, but the interest was good. Subject on the way of life and salvation. Wednesday morning, left for South Woodstock, Vt., and arrived at Bro. Slaten's about eleven o'clock. I was cordially received by him and his sister. I was well cared for. I enjoyed a favored afternoon with him. It is a pilgrim's home indeed for the weary and hungry. I tarried with him all night.

Thursday morning, I left for Bridgewater, Vt., and arrived at Bro. Hubbard's about eleven o'clock. There I was received again with warm hearts. I commenced my labors on Thursday evening with an attentive congregation. The Lord owned the truth, and it took effect. I labored from Thursday until the Wedneday night following. The meetings were interesting. A number of backsliders were reclaimed. We fired bombshells into the enemies' camp, and raised the Spiritualists. They did their utmost to frustrate the meeting, and to stop the work; but God had the helm, and the work went on. The Spiritualists claimed they were personated. My answer was, "I shot at the devil, and if any body got between me and the devil, they had to take the charge. So victory turned on Zion's side. The work was deep and thorough.

Tuesday night, I preached at Bridgewater Ville, where there never was an Advent discourse preached before. I had a crowded hall, and an attentive hearing. My congregation was composed of Congregationalists, Universalists, and Spiritualtsts.

Thursday, left for Pomfret, and found many souls hungry for the word of the Lord. I stopped with them over the Sabbath, and had a crowded house; and, on the whole, an interesting time. I was sent for Sunday to attend a funeral on Monday at Bridgewater. I rode twenty miles, preached a discourse at one o'clock, and here I continued preaching every evening through the week. We realized during this time a wonderful outpouring of the Spirit of God. Many precious souls were reclaimed from a backslidden state, and some sinners were converted. The whole section of country was moved by the power and Spirit of God. I then left the following Monday for home, and arrived Tuesday evening, feeling well worn down. I am now resting at home, sawing wood, and trying to get out some sermons for another tour.

Yours in the bonds of love,

Vernon, Vt. GEO. CHAMPLIN.

For the World's Crisis.

MILROY.

BRO. GRANT:—We have just closed a meeting at this place, with the best results. Some weeks before the meeting began we wrote to our dear Bro. H. A. King, now living in Ohio, but on account of throat disease, he was not able to attend, so all alone and in poor health we determined to begin the attack, yet not alone, either, for the Lord stood with me, and aided by his Spirit, the brethren and sisters also helped much by prayer, exhortation and singing the songs of Zion. The people gave the best of attention, seeming eager to hear the word of God, divested from and unmingled with the Spirit that seems to actuate the clergy of the present day.

While carrying on our meetings there were clergymen in a neighboring town holding alternate meetings, in one of which they called for recruits for the armies of the Union; in the other for the army of the Lord, in the latter they utterly failed, while in the former they had moderate success, declaring that all who fell in so glorious a cause would immediately "rise to glory and to God." Such is the teaching of the last days.

The Spirit of the Lord pressed home the truth to the hearts of the people, and there was a general rejoicing among the saints. On the Sabbath we had the blessed privilege of opening the ice in Walnut Creek, and baptizing one willing soul; and on Monday, another. Our meeting closed by partaking of the broken body and shed blood of our Lord, and giving the right hand of fellowship to brethren and sisters uniting with us—five in number. Thus closed a meeting that will be remembered many days.

The dear friends did not send us away empty to our home, with a "God bless you" only, but after a godly sort provided for our coming wants. The Lord bless them abundantly. Brn. Wm. McCullock and D. S. Clark were the pioneer laborers in this place some three years ago; under whose labors a small church was brought out. The opposition was so fierce and determined it seemed that we should be annihilated, but God had determined otherwise. The "truth is mighty and will prevail." The Lion of Methodism,—Mr. Lucket, of Peoria,—was sent for to meet Bro. Sheldon in debate. The Lord helped our dear brother mightily by his Spirit, and the truth shone forth in resplendent beauty. Prejudice was removed, and the people began to inquire after the "old paths." Since then they have had preaching once a month pretty regularly. The church has strengthened and enlarged, and God been glorified in them.

Oh that the Lord would send us more laborers! There never has been a better time for scattering the seeds of life. The people are continually asking for the bread of life, and [illegible] for the want of it, [illegible] minister to their wants. Pray for us, that we may be as lights in the world, shining forth to the praise of God.

Yours in Christ, G. W. HURD.

Ionia, Warren Co., Ill.

The World's Crisis

AND SECOND ADVENT MESSENGER.

Boston, Tuesday, February 16, 1864.

MEETINGS IN MONTREAL.

Our meetings in Montreal continued to increase in interest till their close. We felt sad to leave them, and the dear friends who have been raised up in that city. When we first went there to hold meetings, we found but three to sympathise with us, and now there are scores. The Lord has wrought a great work in M., and given his truth a signal victory. There are now many who love it ardently, and are willing to make any sacrifice in their power to obtain it and help spread it among others. A large number of tracts have been circulated, which are seized and read with greediness. The people have been so long in the dark prison of error, their joy is great as they come out into the light of the simple truth of the Bible. The opposition, though strong and bitter, does not frighten them from the glorious light of the gospel. They feel they can well afford to bear all the reproaches that blind men can heap upon them for the sake of the light that illumines their pathway to life and glory. Though friends forsake, and their good names are trampled in the dust with contempt from the bigoted, fashionable, learned and proud; yet they count it a small matter compared with the worth of the blessed hope that cheers them on their pilgrimage to the land of promise. They value the friendship of Jesus more than all the honors of this wicked world, and are willing to be companions of those who are despised for his sake. Indeed, we know of no other way to be true disciples of the Lord. He who is not willing to give up his good name for the truth's sake, does not deserve the name of christian; for he is very unlike our Savior, who "made himself of no reputation" among the honored Pharisees, who professed to be the only true children of the Lord; but they were not doers.

We have noticed that whenever "pure religion" is revived, and the truth is developed, cold formalists are roused up in opposition to the work. This was very much the case in Montreal. Very bitter things were said both in public and private. The ministers looked with great contempt upon that "Yankee" who had come to M. to teach them knowledge. The very idea was to them extremely revolting.

On the last Lord's day we spent in M., the minister in Great St. James St. Church took occasion to call us a semi-infidel, and our preaching semi-infidelity; when one of the congregation, who had attended our meetings, and taken a part, arose and complained to the minister for attacking a man whom he had not heard nor seen; then took his hat and left; several others following his example. This produced quite a sensation. Many have their eyes open to see that the charge of "infidelity" is entirely misplaced, unless a firm belief in the Bible makes one an infidel.

During our meetings, some very intelligent persons became interested in "the faith once delivered to the saints," and now see that immortality is gained by "patient continuance in well-doing," and is not an element in man's nature. The truth has gained a signal victory in M., notwithstanding it met the most determined opposition.

During our last visit, the clergy concluded to let us alone, regretting, as we learned, that they did not do so at the first. We saw nothing of our opponent in the discussion, although we gave a public notice that his tract, entitled—"Observations on the immortality of the soul," would be reviewed on Wednesday evening, Feb. 3d; yet he appeared not for its defense. When we were there before, he declared publicly that he should follow us so long as we remained in Montreal, and oppose the doctrine we preached concerning the nature of man.

During our last visit, the Lord gave us peace in all our borders, and our meetings were characterized for good order and the best of attention. We feel assured that the truth has taken a firm root in the hearts of many in M. There is a real growing interest. Men of earnestness have taken hold of the work, and the fear of losing a good name will not hinder them from doing their duty.

Our last four meetings were of special interest. On the last Saturday evening, we spoke on the mortality of man, and the Lord gave his truth a great triumph, causing his children to rejoice in his word.

Lord's day, Feb. 7th, was one of deep interest. Our love-feast was a season of heavenly refreshing. At the close of the forenoon meeting, a church was organized, which numbered, when we left, forty-two members. It was cheering to hear their warm-hearted testimonies, praising the Lord for the light which had been shed upon the Bible since the commencement of our meetings. We had a precious communion season in the evening. Several new ones requested prayers. The work is still onward.

One, who has been happily converted during the meetings, when relating his experience, said that, within twelve months, he drank pretty freely with a man, and afterward became offended at him, went home and got his pistol, loaded it with much care, and with a very heavy charge, went back to his antagonist, met him, presented his pistol to his breast and snapped it; but it did not go off. Thus he was saved from killing his fellow man! God has forgiven him, and he is now a bold and happy soldier of the cross.

Some [illegible] are also seeking the Lord. When we left the interest was greater than at any other time. We shall expect to hear more good tidings from there soon. Arrangements were made to have another series of meetings commence June 14th. Bro. J. Porter, pastor of the church in Danville, and other friends from there and other townships, were present to assist in the battle of Montreal. Dear Brn., do not cease praying for that city, and the church therein.

NEW TRACTS.

Bro. S. S. Brewer's new tracts, entitled—"Last Day Tokens," are excellent to put in the hands of those who have not examined the signs of the times, which indicate the speedy coming of our Savior.

No. I shows God's faithfulness in warning past generations of approaching judgments before they transpire, as brought to view in the prophetic Scriptures.

No. II contains an astounding array of facts showing that we have really come to "the last days of the present dispensation, as indicated by the moral condition of our world. He who thinks our world is growing better, contrary to the teaching of the Bible, should read this tract. We think he would give up his idea of the world's conversion.

No. III contains a large collection of facts relative to the physical signs that were to indicate the coming of Christ, as they should be seen in the sun, moon and stars. These tracts should be read by every body. We expect a supply of them in a few days. Let them be scattered far and wide.

Prices:—No 1, single, 9 cts.; postage 2 cts.; per doz. 87 cts. No. 2, single, 23 cts; postage 2 cts.; per doz. $2.50. No. 3, single, 23 cts.; postage 2 cts.; per doz. $2.50.

BIBLES.—We have just received a choice lot of English Bibles. See notice in the book list. We sell them as cheap at retail as they can be bought in New York at wholesale. As gold advances, their cost increases. We have to pay for them in gold, or its equivalent. We have found it necessary to add 15 per cent to former prices, while other booksellers add twice as much. American Bibles are cheaper, but not as good paper, nor usually as well bound. We hope now to be able to fill all orders for choice Bibles.

INQUIRIES AND ANSWERS.

BRO. GRANT:—The third copy of "The World's Crisis" has reached me. With intense interest I have devoured its contents. I, too, believe in the speedy coming of our blessed Lord. I am altogether unacquainted with the body of christians to whom you belong. Hence I wish to propose a few questions for answers through your paper. Please answer, and thus I can learn your whereabouts. I am a Bible man,—discard creeds, sectarianism, etc. I want to know the truth, and the whole truth.

Please answer the following interrogations:

1. What is the avowed name of the body of christians to which you belong?
2. What is your guide book in matters of faith and practice? The Bible, or a human guide book?
3. What is the test of church fellowship?
4. What are the recognized names of church officers among you?
5. Do you immerse, pour or sprinkle, when you observe this command, "Go teach all nations, baptizing them," etc.
6. With you, what is the design of this institution?
7. Do you, as christians, observe the literal washing of the saints' feet?
8. Are you Trinitarian, Unitarian, or neither, concerning the God-head?
9. Do you hold that the just will be resurrected one thousand years, ere the unjust?
10. Will the event spoken of in 2 Pet. 3: 10, 13, take place at or before the first or second resurrection? If at the first, what becomes of the living wicked? If at the second, where will the saints then be?
11. Is Christ king now, and has he a present kingdom?

I hope you'll not refuse to answer the foregoing questions. Thus we will get a good idea of your position on Bible matters, which I will agree to thoroughly examine in the light of the truth. I am in the great cause of truth. Souls are being converted to the truth in this country. The truth, the glorious truth, how glorious and how fair. Worth more than diamonds. I want to walk in the truth, rejoice in the truth, and by obedience to the truth enjoy the everlasting kingdom.

Yours for the truth, R. H. BOLTON.

Upper Sandusky, O., Jan. 12th, 1864.

ANSWERS.

We are pleased to have the privilege of answering the foregoing honest inquiries. We see in Bro. Bolton a kindred spirit, and we delight in talking with a real lover of truth. May the Lord guide him in all things.

1st. We are commonly known by the name of "Second Advent Church"; but many acknowledge no name but CHRISTIAN.

2. We acknowledge no guide-book, in creed, but the BIBLE.

3. Our test of church fellow is CHRISTIAN CHARACTER. We will here insert

"OUR COVENANT."

"We, whose names are subjoined, do hereby covenant and agree, by the help of the Lord, to walk together as a Church of Christ; faithfully maintaining its ordinances, taking the BIBLE as our ONLY rule of faith and practice, church order and discipline; making CHRISTIAN CHARACTER the ONLY TEST of fellowship and communion.

We further agree, with Christian fidelity and meekness, to exercise mutual watchcare, to counsel, admonish, or reprove, as duty may require, and to receive the same from each other as becometh the household of faith."

4. Our officers are elders and deacons.

5. We invariably immerse.

6. We understand baptism to represent the burial and resurrection of Christ; and by it we show that our only hope of a future life, if we die, is in the resurrection of the dead. As the future life, in this world, of the one "buried" in baptism depends on his being raised up from under the water; so, if we go into the grave, our life in the world to come depends on our being raised out of it. This depends on the resurrection of Christ. As Paul says, "If the dead rise not, then is not Christ raised, . . . then they also which are fallen asleep in Christ are perished." But as we believe Christ was raised, we are baptized "in the likeness of his death," that we may show our faith in his resurrection, and our hope of being raised from the dead when the Lord descends from heaven "at the last day."

[illegible] we did [illegible] as did Paul, "Else what shall they do which are baptized for the dead, if the dead rise not at all? why are they then baptized for the dead?" In this scripture the apostle clearly shows us that there is no significance to baptism, if the dead rise not.

7. We do not, as a people, "observe the literal washing of the saints, feet."

8. As a body we are not Trinitarians; neither are we Unitarians. We believe Christ is the Son of God, as the Bible teaches; but that he is a distinct person from the Father.

9. We generally believe the righteous will be raised one thousand years before the wicked, as recorded in Rev. 20: 5—"But the rest of the dead lived not again till the thousand years were finished."

10. We understand some portion of 2nd Pet. 3: 10–13 will take place at the first resurrection, but most of it at the second; "the day of the Lord" being "a thousand years."

Our people generally believe the living wicked will be cut off by judgments at the coming of Christ; that the christians will be in "the camp of the saints," when the second resurrection takes place; and the rest of the earth passes through its fiery baptism, resulting in the eternal destruction of the wicked. We understand "the Sanctuary," or the land promised to Abraham, Isaac and Jacob, is to "be cleansed" at the beginning of the thousand years. The Eden of our world is then restored, and is called "the camp of the saints," where we enjoy the Sabbath of rest with all the redeemed and the Redeemer.

11. We understand Christ is our High Priest now, is to be our King when he returns to "reign over the house of Jacob," as promised before his birth.

WAR IN EUROPE.

There is now but little doubt that the horrors of war will soon be witnessed on the eastern continent. The war clouds are continually becoming more threatening. Indeed, we have reason to expect the news before the opening of spring, that the armies are in the battle field. Preparations are being made as fast as possible. There is a prospect of a terrible storm of "leaden rain and iron hail." How truly may it be said the nations are "angry." The great day of wrath is at hand. The outburst must be terrible in the extreme. We see no reason to hope for any improvement in the state of the nations, while the present dispensation continues. Let every christian see that he is clothed with "the whole armor of God." We are not safe one moment without it. This is the time when it is specially needed. The wicked spirits in aerial regions are very busy to entrap the careless and unarmed.

All our statesmen appear to be satisfied that great revolutions are at hand, and that no human device, or wisdom, can prevent their occurrence. Men stand appalled at the prospect of coming events. Their hearts are growing weak. They stand trembling and perplexed, with increasing symptoms of distress.

The Montreal Witness, of Feb. 2nd, says:—

"It will be seen by the telegraphic news that actual war is imminent between Germany and Denmark, and that great uneasiness and something like a panic prevail in Europe. It is understood that, in the event of hostilities, Britain, however reluctantly, will be compelled to support Denmark. The only party satisfied with the turn things are taking, is probably Louis Napoleon, who will foresee in such a war the weakening of his neighbors and the aggrandizement of France. He will also be able to point to his proposal of a Congress as one which should have been adopted."

We may be sure, we think, that Napoleon will turn both war and peace to his advantage. He is the master magician, who wins at every game. His success is wonderful, and is still extending.

A COSTLY SEAT.

If the poor wished to hear the popular preaching of these "last days," we think it would be necessary that they should listen at the doors and windows of the house, for they could not afford to buy a seat within. A pew in King's Chapel, Boston, was recently sold for $5,400. Were Jesus in the world now, we fear he would not be able to say of the above-named chapel, and many others in our land, "The poor have the gospel preached to them." The poor feel no welcome to the fashionable places of worship, and it is very doubtful whether our Savior would receive any better treatment in such places, should he come again, than at the first advent from the Pharisees. Human nature is still the same now as then; and, although men are not called Pharisees, no doubt the same character is still in community.

A large number of the houses for religious worship appear to be built only for the wealthy and fashionable portion of society, and all others are looked upon as intruders. Such places are not designed for the "common people" who heard Jesus "gladly." The ploughman, the mechanic, the colored man, the seamstress, the "factory girl," the servant girl, no matter how much they may love Jesus, find no room for their plebian feet within the walls of our fashionable meeting-houses. Those who control them have probably forgotten that Jesus said: "Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these my brethren, ye do it unto me." Also what James says:—

"My brethren have not the faith of our Lord Jesus Christ, the Lord of glory, with respect of persons.

For if there come unto your assembly a man with a gold ring, in goodly apparel, and there come in also a poor man with vile raiment;

And ye have respect to him that weareth the gay clothing, and say unto him, Sit thou here in a good place; and say to the poor, Stand thou there, or sit here under my footstool:

Are ye not then partial in yourselves, and are become judges of evil thoughts?

Hearken, my beloved brethren, Hath not God chosen the poor of this world rich in faith, and heirs of the kingdom which he hath promised to them that love him?

But ye have despised the poor. Do not rich men oppress you, and draw you before the judgment seats?

Do not they blaspheme that worthy name by the which ye are called?

If ye fulfil the royal law according to the Scripture, Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself, ye do well.

But if ye have respect to persons, ye commit sin, and are convinced of the law as transgressors."—James 2: 1–9.

Let us always consider the poor, and "condescend to men of low estate." Remember, Jesus has said, "Blessed are the meek, for they shall inherit the earth."

THE SOUL.

We notice that the "Union Bible Dictionary" gives a different definition of the soul from the common notion entertained at the present day. It is as follows:—

"Soul, (Gen. 2: 7.) The Scriptures evidently distinguish between the spirit and soul. 1 Thess. 5: 23. Heb. 4: 12.) The word which we call soul is used to denote mere animal life, the seat of sensation, appetites, passions. Gen. 1: 20. Here the word life is the same with that which is elsewhere translated soul."

The truth is stated in the foregoing. The word rendered soul (nephesh) is first applied to beasts; hence, if it signifies an immortal principle in man, why should it not mean the same when applied to beasts? The fact is, the word is never used in the Bible to represent an "immortal part of man."

It is noticed that preachers do not speak of "the immortal soul" as they did years ago.

Our Tract Column.

THE NEW TRACT FUND.

Two Thousand Dollars.

We, the undersigned, agree to give the sums affixed to our names, for the purpose of raising TWO THOUSAND DOLLARS to aid the Christian Publication Society in the gratuitous distribution of tracts; and our subscriptions shall be paid at the call of the Treasurer, as soon as one half of the amount shall be subscribed.

Pledges and payments to Jan. 1st,	$395.30
M. ATKINS, pd	1.00
LUCY A. HYDE, pd	1.00
R. W. HILL, (pd. $2)	12.00
J. D. BROWN, (tracts sold)	2.00
MILES GRANT	60.00
S. P. CLARK	10.00
JAS. DANFORTH	1.00
CHAS. W. DUDLEY	2.00
L. H. DAVIS	2.50
JOHN E. PHELPS	3.00
A. S. BARBER	2.00
S. GILPATRIC	1.00
A FRIEND	1.00
E. TUTTLE	.28
A FRIEND	2.00

TRACTS.

Our plan: do you understand it? It is to solicit money of you, and expend the same in printing tracts and pamphlets to give away. You give the cash,—the C. P. S. gives the tracts. We think this better than to get money by selling them to you. It throws you at once on to the ground of conscience-responsibility in the matter of giving. It is God's cause we seek thus to advance, in the spread of information on all the doctrine. You want the tracts all of you. But if you continue to draw on the society for them, and fail to send in the money, the result will be, the tracts will disappear from our shelves, and there will be no funds wherewith to print others.

We here in Castleton (i. e., one man, C. S. S.,) have, in less than two years, paid into the Fund $125, and have in the same time drawn out only $25 worth of tracts; hence we are not in debt any to the C. P. S., and one hundred dollars have gone to send tracts all over other fields. Meanwhile we have scattered all we could economically here; and have also distributed them north, south, east and west; in the army away down South, and in Vermont and New York. And they have done, and are doing good. Don't be afraid your money will be wasted, squandered, or stolen. The men in our office can be trusted; all donations go for tracts, and but little to paid agents, save for simply manufacturing the tracts and pamphlets. D. T. T.

For the World's Crisis.

BRO. BREWER'S TRACTS.

BRO. GRANT:—By your permission, I shall take great pleasure in recommending The Prophetic Expository Works of our beloved Brother Brewer to all lovers of the prophetic word and instruction upon the sacred page. I know of none better or so well calculated to instruct, or inspire the lover of truth with love for the inspired history of the past, present, and future, as those Last Day Admonitors. They are multum in parvo, written in the kindest manner; and possess the intrinsic merit of freedom from dogmatism. Our Bro. is among the oldest of our preachers, a pioneer in the proclamation of the glad tidings, east, west, north, and south. I do hope his christian zeal, and love for the diffusion of what he most conscientiously considers the truth, will be appreciated by all that love those who love to make sacrifice and suffer for the truth. Friends, help him in his declining years. His works are worth more than the cheap price he is anxious to receive for them in this his time of need.

☞ Put $1.10 in a letter directed to Eld. S. S. Brewer, South Glastenbury, Ct.

Newark, N. J. DR. A. DECKER.

For the World's Crisis.

☞ BRO. GEO. TRASK of Fitchburg, Mass., sends us some samples of his four page anti-tobacco and anti-rum Tracts, of various kinds, grave, gay, solemn, and funny. Some have pictures. Send a dollar and get some; then give the one which has a picture of smoking monkeys to that boy you know, who resembles him so much. You can hand the one that says "Good bordi'g, Bister Cubbidgs. . . . Rebarkably fide sduff that of yours. We'll have wud parti'g pidch," to those patrons of the "sduff box" whose devotion to their idol prevents their speaking the English language correctly. The tracts on "Tobacco and the Cross of Christ," "Raising Tobacco," etc., etc., are all worthy of wide circulation in these days, when the devil pays such big prices for men's bodies, that they are willing to throw in what little soul they have for the sake of the trade. Read these tracts and circulate them. When I [illegible] that cigar stinks. I had rather meet a [illegible] than a smoker. [illegible]

For the World's Crisis.

LETTER FROM CASTLETON.

DEAR CRISIS:—The opposition to the doctrines we hold, and to us who hold them, is not at all abated in Castleton. This is only what those that love Christ and his appearing, and the glorious immortality he will bestow upon the good alone, should expect. But it seems hard that the severest trials and opposition should come from the so-called orthodox christians. We, of late, have been passing through an ordeal which is characteristic, but rather peculiar; the effect of which appears to be to encourage rather than to depress us; and the meetings have not been so well attended, or so fervent for some time, as at present.

Several weeks since, a notice appeared in the paper, calling a meeting of the evangelical churches of this county, to be holden in the Cong. church here, Jan. 27th and 28th, for the purpose of forming a Sunday School Union. We were not evangelical, of course, and got no special call. But, fondly dreaming we did possess a "saving faith," we also imagined the word "Union" might be understood in its broadest, unsectarian sense; but, alas! the orthodox meaning was found to be limited, and we did not have so much as in invitation to return and be pardoned,—a favor that "Uncle Abe" has extended to the rebels.

So, three Advent Christian churches, with a membership of some two hundred and fifty souls, and about seventy-five or one hundred of our innocents, were left out in the cold, to ruminate on the perils of daring to stem the popular tide. The punishment operates as did the nailing up of the door of the Baptist church in Boston by the Orthodox Congregational authorities of two hundred years ago, when the first were few and weak, and the latter were strong; i. e., it helps the cause of truth. And we accordingly thank God and take courage. But it is worthy of note that the spirit of tolerance in the one sect is not improved by age, and the other has forgotten how in their early days in Vermont a six-pounder was fired at the water's edge for every willing candidate their pioneer Elders immersed in the waters of blue Champlain.

The first evening, some of our people attended. The first proceeding was to report. Dr. C— had the chair. Then came the reading of the Articles of the Constitution. These provided a name for the society, and a membership therewith for all pastors, teachers, scholars, etc., who believed in the immortality of the soul, the unity of the Trinity, and the eternity of rewards and punishments, etc. The practical use of such a platform for general good is indeed a question. The association might learn some things to their profit of the "Evangelical City Missionary Society of Worcester, Mass.," where Congregationalists, Methodists, Baptists and Episcopalians cordially and unanimously invited the Advent Christian church to unite with them in their good work on a free basis, without sectarian shackles or creeds. This was done, too, with all the heresies that crown us staring them in the face, and when our present pastor was there in charge. So the place and the clergy make all the difference. There, we were "evangelical"; here, "heretical."

Well, by this time it was suggested that a prayer be made, which, in the hurry to read the articles, seems to have been forgotten. Then the articles were discussed. It were well for the peace of the meeting that "the heretics" had not been invited. But the gates were barred, and our people and pastor were either absent or sat with sealed lips. The words eternal and everlasting were voted to mean the same thing, and made uniform in the articles; of course, orthodoxy intending thereby—eternal pain.

A sermon followed—a good one—in which the reader was perhaps not well posted, as we escaped without direct blows. A contribution was taken up to defray expenses. The bag was passed to Bro. Sherman, who, in his quiet way, observed, "I am not orthodox enough to give." The rebuke, coming from the richest and one of the best men in town, was severe, but well merited. The bag was handed to the Secretary, who immediately emptied its contents on the table and commenced counting. His financial operations were interrupted while a prayer was offered, but the benediction was forgotten altogether.

Meanwhile, careful hands prepared a dinner on the next day for the children (God bless them!), in which the pies and cakes some carping heretics (perhaps remembering Matt. 6: 44) had sent in, were gladly accepted and devoured with a relish, and sundry other favors called for in the same direction.

In subsequent meetings, one Rev. Dr. took special pains to impress upon the children that they all had immortal souls, and verily did he prove it, too, out of Dr. Watts and Montgomery.

Thus opens up a new chapter in ecclesiastical intolerance. And the end is not yet. But we survive the shock of neglect and hate, with a rising interest in our meetings, an increasing favor even among unconverted men, who saw and sharply rebuked this last phase of unchristianism; a settled and fixed determination to stand by the truth at all hazards; a Sunday congregation only exceeded in size by one other in town; and an increase of eighteen in our membership since Elder Taylor came among us; and this week two young ladies have set out to serve the Lord. But "the best of all is," as said Wesley, "God is with us." To him be everlasting thanks.

PREACH THE WORD.

Men need the gospel. They are dying for want of it. There never was as much eloquent, learned, and instructive preaching in the land as at the present day. Yet comparatively but little is effected. Sin is daily growing bolder and more aggressive. Vice obtrudes itself at every corner. Vital godliness is rarely to be found. A vast multitude outside of the churches, and inside of the churches, are going down to the regions of dark despair. A form of godliness is made to take the place of a living Christ within the soul, and money given through some of the various organized channels of benevolence, serves as a substitute for the fruits of the Spirit. Thus the conscience is quieted, and the poor, self-deceived, lukewarm professor passes on in a respectable manner down to hell.

If a reformation is effected, it must be through the agency of the preaching of the gospel. This works every necessary outward reform, by touching the springs of action. If the affections are sanctified, the will subdued, and the intellect illuminated by the Holy Ghost, the outward life cannot be essentially wrong. Let a man be so saved that he is ready any moment for heaven, and he can be depended upon for any of the ordinary or extraordinary duties of life. Inward salvation is the great want of the church. The tree of evil is of luxurious growth, and while the preacher is lopping off a branch here and there, others still more unseemly are growing and hardening on the opposite side. The only proper way is to lay the axe at the root of the tree. Salvation from all sin should be insisted upon.

The great, fundamental doctrines of the Bible must be proclaimed in thunder tones. In the days when the pulpit controlled, and in a great measure, formed public opinion, the preacher had an excuse for dwelling upon the popular topics of the day. But now the newspaper is common. It is read much more than the Bible is. The people are much better versed in politics than they are in theology. When they go to the house of God they should be made to feel that they have interests at stake of far more overwhelming importance than the success of armies, or the establishment, or the overthrow of nations. Heaven and hell should be presented as realities, in which every one has a deep and abiding interest. How little are the teachings of the Bible respecting man's future destiny understood and appreciated by the mass of attendants upon our orthodox churches! It is astonishing how readily they drink in error upon this subject, especially when apparently sustained by an array of Scripture texts!

We are not of those who think that religion has nothing to do with a man's conduct in political or commercial life.

Men need to be converted. They must be born of the Spirit, or be damned. There is, there can be, no doubt about this matter. Human nature is corrupt, and must be regenerated. Not a day passes but that human depravity is most fearfully exemplified before us, but still the doctrine is stoutly denied. Many are dying of self-complacency. They admit that they are not quite as good as they ought to be, but deny that they are bad enough to be lost, unless they become new creatures in Christ Jesus. Let us have clearly presented the teachings of the Bible upon this subject.

O, for ministers baptized with the Holy Ghost to preach the word! If they are educated, so much the better; but if they can barely read their text, and know the way to the cross, and how to lead men there, let them go forth weeping, bearing the precious seed, and they shall, doubtless, come again with rejoicing, bringing their sheaves with them.—Earnest Christian.

Correspondence.

From Bro. A. N. Seymour.

BRO. GRANT:—Our meeting at Jonesville, Mich., was a good success. Nearly one hundred brethren and sisters were present to enjoy the feast. All seemed to drink into the Spirit of our divine Master, while they confessed to each other their joys and anticipations; and I will assure you, there was a striking contrast exhibited on the occasion between the Spirit, faith, and hope of the saints looking for speedy redemption through Christ, and the Spirit, faith, and hope of that class of the religious world, who, cherishing the heathen dogma of an immortal soul in man, expect as they stop breathing they are going to fly away to glory, into the presence of God, where there is fullness of joy and pleasure forevermore. Oh what a strong delusion. No wonder that so few, comparatively speaking, see so little beauty and glory, and take so little interest in the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ; but until that deleterious error is destroyed out of the minds of men, there can be no permanent interest and joy in heaven's coming King.

But the dear saints gathered from Ohio, Michigan, and Indiana, on this occasion, were truly joyful; and we did sit together in a heavenly place in Christ Jesus. And my Lord if this is only a foretaste of joys to come; hasten, Oh hasten thy footsteps that shall usher in the days, when all thy saints shall meet, in the general assembly and church of the firstborn, to celebrate joys complete in the kingdom of God.

Some ten preaching brethren and sisters were present to preach the word of life. Bro. J. V. Himes' advent among us is hailed with much satisfaction, and things look much more favorable to our prosperity than ever before. God grant that there may be unity of feeling, interest, love, and effort, in carrying forward the glorious proclamation of our soon coming Lord. We cannot help but prosper if we worship God instead of the creature. Then let us worship God more, and the creature less, and we shall be the sons and daughters of the Lord Almighty. Seven put on the Lord in the act of baptism, as the result of the meeting.

Yours in Christ,

Reading, Mich. A. N. SEYMOUR.

From Eld. L. Boutell.

BRO. GRANT:—My late visit to Northfield and Athol, Mass., were interesting to me. It was one of my fields of labor in times that are past; consequently, many changes had taken place. Some of the seed of Abraham had fallen victims to disease and death; others had risen to fill their place; so that, in looking over the field, both sadness and joy were caused to flow in succession.

Saturday evening was my first meeting. There was a good turn out to hear the word. There were the old tried and faithful of many years' service; also many young recruits who had newly enlisted, and are much interested in their new mode of warfare, and could use their weapons of defense to good advantage. We had a good and profitable time, and an increasing interest was the result.

Sunday was a warm day, and those of like precious faith from six towns came together. Some came fifteen miles, others ten, and many seven or eight, adding much interest to the occasion. It brought to mind the "former days" of illumination, and the Spirit of the Lord and of refreshing was in our midst. It was a blessed good day from morning till evening. I discoursed to them on that gospel I thought adapted to comfort, quicken, and strengthen the faithful, and lead others to Christ, the fountain of life. In the evening we also had a full meeting, interesting indeed.

Tuesday evening finished my labors with this people for the present. The interest increased. The young converts seem to have the Spirit of perseverance in the good way to eternal life. The word of God had free course, and some were solicitous to know what is truth. It was my privilege to greet many old toil-worn pilgrims on this tour, whom I had not seen for a long time, and to find them still in love with Jesus and his coming; having made progression in the divine life, and become more fervent in Spirit; more liberal in principle, loving one another with pure hearts fervently. It was blessed,—yea, thrice blessed. Let the good work of faith and love go on.

I also called at Bro. Sawtell's, in Athol, and preached thrice in the schoolhouse to very interesting congregations. They had to bring in seats to accommodate those that came out to hear. Here I found a good company of believers, and an interesting state of things. As in Northfield, the Lord is adding to their numbers and graces. I wish them all prosperity in the Lord.

Brethren, keep aloof from the world and worldly policy. If the cause will not go without festivals, donation parties, and levees, let it go, and return to fasting and prayer, bringing all the tithes into the storehouse. This is the way to prove God, and the blessing will come. Let us as a church and people try this old patriarchal method, and I have no doubt the waters of life will be made to flow.

Dearly beloved in these places, I commend you and the cause of God, and the Lord Jesus Christ, praying he may send among you faithful, consistent, biblical preachers, full of the Spirit of the Lord, rightly dividing the word of truth, who will live practically unspotted from the world.

I also called upon Bro. James Hemenway, who has located for the present at Athol Depot. His health is better than it has been, and he is ready to attend the Macedonian cry, and calls of the church as the Lord gives him strength to do; and when unable to preach, in a work-man-like manner, he will attend to filling, extracting, and putting up teeth for all who may call. L. Boutell.

Groton, Mass.

From Sr. B. P. French.

Bro. Grant:—I had laid aside my pen intending to let it remain, but receiving a letter from a lady in Massachusetts, soliciting a correspondence, I thought (with your permission) I would answer her letter through the Crisis.

Dear Sister in Christ:—I received your kind letter, and as you request me to answer it, and also express a hope that I shall write for the Crisis, I will endeavor to comply with both requests in one letter. You thank me for my letter in the Crisis. I am very grateful for yours to me. If I have comforted you and enabled you to look over on the other side, you have strengthened and encouraged me. When I wrote my first letter, I hardly expected it would be printed. But my heart was full of gratitude for having received a little light, and I longed to greet God's dear children and express my gratitude. It was printed, and I ventured to write again, praying that God would enable me to write something that would cheer and encourage some poor sorrowing heart. But I did not expect to hear from one so far distant and a stranger.

God bless you! tears sprang to my eyes as I read your letter, and I thanked God that I had found a people so humble, that I, weak, little, ignorant as I was, could work with them.

I have my trials too, bitter ones; but if I can be of use to any of God's dear children, I am content and will rejoice amid them all. You say you are drinking the waters of affliction. Well, my sister, remember if you are Christ's disciple, for every tear you shed, for every wrong you suffer, he gives you a look of tender pity. And for every unjust accusation or reproach that you bear patiently for his sake, he gives you a smile of approbation. I know not all your sorrows, but I know there is a balm for every wound.

You say you are alone; that there is no Advent brother or sister near with whom you can converse, or from whom you can receive strength. Dear sister, you are mistaken. Your Elder Brother, the Lord Jesus, is the greatest, the strongest Adventist there is; and he has said, "Lo, I am with you always, even to the end." His ear is ever open to hear, and his arm is continually stretched out to save. Rejoice that you have such a friend, such an advocate with the Father, even Christ the righteous.

Your letter came to me in a peculiar time. I was standing in the way and looking, trying to learn what God would have me do. That helped to decide my course. I have been until within a few days a member of the Methodist church. I have loved her from a child. But she persists in saying, "My Lord delayeth his coming;" she scornfully rejects a portion of God's truth, and in sorrow but not in anger I have bidden her farewell, and have gone forth without the camp, bearing the reproach, but leaning upon my Beloved.

I expect the hatred of the world, and the maledictions of the church. I expect that friends will forsake and foes deride. I look for persecution, and more, I am looking for a time to come, when we shall be called to bow the knee to that modern Baal (Spiritualism), but I pray that He, who is better than a thousand earthly friends, will keep me, and enable me to stand steadfast in the faith once delivered to the saints, and endure patiently to the end.

O! my sister, forget your trials, look upward and rejoice. If we are faithful—

"A few more rolling suns, at most,
Will land us safe on Canaan's coast;
There we will sing redeeming grace,
Safe in our glorious hiding-place."

From your sister, B. P. French.

Norway, Me., Nov. 15th.

From Bro. C. S. Emerson.

Bro. Grant:—I am striving to gird on the armor anew, and give myself more fully to the work of the ministry, and pray men in Christ's stead to be reconciled to God. I have felt for some time that I must not be so much entangled with the affairs of this life, that I may please him that has called me to be a soldier. The Lord is soon coming. How few of us realize it. If ever there was a time when the ministers of the Lord should weep between the porch and the altar, and cry, Spare thy people, O Lord, it is now. The enemy is doing his last work, knowing his time is short; but the Lord is at work, and some are deserting the enemy's ranks and joining the Union army. Praise the Lord.

I was with the church in Portsmouth last Sabbath. The brethren are coming up to the help of the Lord against the mighty. They are at peace among themselves, and sinners are inquiring what shall we do? A young man and his wife came out two weeks ago last Sabbath night. They were at the meeting Wednesday evening, spoke and prayed. The young man said he had taken more comfort for three days, than ever he had taken in all his life in sin. His wife said she had got the evidence that the Lord had pardoned all her sins, and owned her as his child. This sounds like old times. It is encouraging to see young men and women brake away from the ranks of the enemy, come over on the Lord's side, take the truth and the reproach that goes with it; when some of the old hands can hardly hold up their heads for fear of the reproach. Read 1 Peter 4: 14, take courage, face the storm, prove the Lord.

Last Sabbath we went down to the river, because there was much water there, and baptized them, and they went on their way rejoicing.

I found an open door in Exeter for the truth. The cloud is gathering over that place, and there is a sound of rain, thank the Lord. But there are things I wish to say to brethren going to that place; be sure you have the real coin, or you will call it a hard place. The church want food.

Your brother in Christ,
Pittsfield, N. H. C. S. Emerson.

From Sr. S. R. A. Coburn.

Dear Brn. and Srs.:—What a cheering hope we as a body of Second Advent believers have! A glorious hope of soon seeing Jesus, and being made like him, and reigning with him forever in that beautiful Eden home, that haven of eternal rest; nothing to mar our rest, no more to endure the trials and hardships of this life. No more will partings be given, no more with our dear loved ones at death's door, to bid farewell till the trump of God awake them from their dusty beds.

"O glorious hope of heavenly love!
It lifts me up to things above."

How many now are being separated from their loved ones, never more to meet here in this state of existence, by this sad war. How many bleeding hearts there are all over this country, but how cheering to the true child of God that this state of things will not long exist. Soon all this war and commotion will cease. Christ will soon establish peace upon this earth. Praise the Lord for his soon coming. If it were not for that, the picture would indeed look dark to many of the followers of the meek and lowly Jesus. But cheer up, christian. "Land is nearing." Soon we will go home.

Often as I meditate upon these things, I am led to ask myself the question, am I a fit subject for that heavenly kingdom? Am I striving each day and hour of my life to live in readiness for the fast coming judgment day? God grant that we may realize how fast it is approaching. It is my prayer that I, with each one that may read these few thoughts, may so live, that when the blessed Life-giver shall appear, we shall appear with him in glory.

"O! how I long to see that day,
When the redeemed shall come
To Zion, clad in white array,
Thrice blissful, happy home.
My longing heart cries out, O come!
Creation groans for thee;
The weary pilgrim sighs, O come,
Bring immortality!"

Lynn, Mass.

From Dr. J. Crofut.

Bro. Grant:—Thanks and praise to "our Father in heaven" for having given you a heart to comfort me,—unworthy me,—in sending to me the Crisis. I could scarcely think that my earnest wish for it would be thus noticed and gratified. I dared not ask for it, although I felt as if I must, as I suppose many poor like me have it gratuitously. Perhaps I shall not be able to do any thing for you, other than pray for you, that you may be a profitable servant of Jesus Christ, and faithfully set forth the truth of his gospel. The spirited communications in the Crisis from brethren and sisters which greet us weekly are very cheering, and I enjoy them very much.

The day of God is near, and every evidence of its nearness, and of a people prepared for it, comforts my heart and enlivens my hope. God grant that I may once more go out and testify of the grace of God, and of his mercy and love in Jesus Christ. I want to persuade sinners to become reconciled to God; to exhort believers to a holy life, to be faithful and persevere in the truth; to believe all things written by inspiration of the Holy Spirt, and to live in the Spirit; to "watch and pray always," and to wait in sure and certain hope of very soon seeing Jesus and of being glorified by him; but O "Father, not my will, but thine be done." Many thanks to you Bro. G. and to those associated with you in publishing the Crisis. May the Comforter, the Holy Spirit, guide you into all truth, and the grace of our Lord Jesus Christ be with you.

Your unworthy brother,
Brooklyn, N. Y. J. Crofut.

From Bro. M. L. Curtis.

Bro Grant:—While writing on business, I will say a few words to the conductors and readers of the Crisis, (by your permission). I am glad that the paper is growing in worth, as well as in its subscription list, for it is, with the books that are published, and my Bible, all the preaching that I have. Let it grow better and better. Let it be circulated wider and wider. Let it be instrumental in opening the eyes of many that are blind, and of comforting the scattered flock of the Lord.

I have just been reading Bro. Brewer's books. They are just the things to scatter all over the field. The field is the world, and the harvest is the end of the world. What we do must be done very soon. Come, brethren, get these books and scatter them to the four winds. Let us all do our part of the great work, that we may have our part of the great reward. M. L. Curtis.

From H. K. Flagg.

Bro. Grant:—We are having an old-fashioned good time in this place, in the service of the Lord. In 1843 and '44, there were those in this place who believed in the immediate coming of the Lord. Since that time there have been but two or three sermons preached by the servants of the Lord, professing to believe in the speedy coming of Christ and his kingdom. I came here last week Friday, in accordance with a promise I had made to Bro. J. N. Sherman last fall. We commenced the meetings the same evening, (last Friday), in the Town Hall, and have continued them over the Sabbath, and every evening since at the same place, excepting one evening, when the hall was occupied for a ball. The subject is a new one to most of the people here; consequently there has been manifested an eagerness to hear, such as I have not witnessed for a long time.

Some twenty backsliders and sinners have already given their hearts and hands to the work of the Lord. The meetings continue over the next Sabbath, when a number are expected to go forward in the ordinance of baptism. The interest seems to be increasing, and the evidences brighten that the Lord will raise up a church of believers in the place, who are willing to be crucified to the world, and to stand in defence of the truth. Bro. Sherman, who is a resident of the place, engaged the Town Hall, which is somewhat expensive, trusting in and looking to God for the result. Others have been found willing to sacrifice for the truth and the salvation of sinners. If there are any readers of the Crisis in any of the villages, or towns in this section, who may wish me to come and labor with them for sinners, in halls, if they can be obtained, if not school or private houses; address me at Holliston, Mass. Do not hesitate because you are poor or have no money. God will take care of his servants, if faithful.

H. K. Flagg.

Holliston, Mass., Feb. 12th, 1864.

Obituaries.

George Neal.

Died in Southington, Ct., Jan., 25th, 1864, George W., eldest son of Bro. Levi C. and Sr. Amanda Neal, aged seventeen years, eight months.

About ten months previous to his death he began to complain of lameness in his back, followed by complete prostration of his limbs, rendering him helpless. He had the use of his hands, but could only be moved with assistance. He rode out almost daily until early in the fall, since when, he was confined to the house till his death.

Some weeks before his death he realized that the only way the Lord could save him, was to take him out of the world in this way. His mouth seemed filled with praise to the Lord that it was as well with him as it was, and he felt that the Lord had done a great work for him, by his Spirit and word, in changing his desires and affections, and placing them on Christ and the promises in his word. The things he formerly enjoyed had lost their charm for him, and so deeply did he feel the change, that the notice of a festival brought into his room was so unwelcome, that he wished it taken out.

The Spirit of the Lord had lit up his understanding to the great truths contained in the Bible, and the hope of a resurrection from the dead, and of being made immortal when his Savior should appear, transcended all earthly joys.

A numerous circle of friends mourn his loss, but especially is it felt by the father, mother, grandmother, sister and brothers; but they sorrow not as those who have no hope, for they believe that Jesus died and rose again, and them that sleep in Jesus God will bring with him. Eld. Ralph Williams spoke words of comfort at the funeral from 1 Thess. 2: 19. O. D. Woodruff.

Sr. Morroson.

Sister Morroson, one of our dear sisters in the Lord, has fallen asleep in Jesus, and rests from her labors, but her works follow. She was taken sick on the 22d of Dec. last, with the inflammation on the lungs, and died the 26th, at two o'clock in the morning. She leaves a husband and three little children to mourn their loss. It was the most beautiful death-bed scene that my eyes ever witnessed. She called her little ones to her bedside, and gave them the parting hand and the farewell kiss without a tear in her eyes, and then consigned them to the will of God, and exhorted them to put their trust in him, and continue in the faith, for they that put their trust in God shall never lack any "good thing." Her face shone as an angel's. The fear of death was taken away. She said she was falling asleep in Jesus; and they that fell asleep in Jesus God would bring with him. She was a strong believer in the doctrine of the immediate personal coming and reign of Christ on the earth, and longed for his appearing.

By her request a sermon was delivered Jan. 3d, from 1 Thess. 4: 14, by Rev. Mr. Curry from New York.

Why should our eyes with sorrow flow,
Or bosom heave the painful sigh;
When Jesus calls, the saint must go,
'T was her eternal gain to die.

She trod the shades of gloomy death,
Could set her seal that God was true;
Finished her course, and kept the faith,
And shut her eyes with heaven in view.

Fearless she entered Jordan's flood,
At peace with God, she closed her eyes;
Her only trust was Jesus' blood,
In sure and certain hope to rise.

H. H. Claney.

Albion Nichols.

Died of Diptheria, in North Searsport, Me., Feb. 5th, 1864, Albion R. Nichols, aged six years, one month, and seventeen days.

Albion was an affectionate child, very active, intelligent, and quick to learn. In his sickness he said to his father, if he should die, that he should come up again when Jesus comes; expressing the faith of his parents, and showing that the instruction given by his fond parents was not all lost. Bro. and Sr. Nichols feel deeply their heavy stroke of affliction, but they are comforted with the assurance that in a little while they shall see their fond one again, where death cannot come. May this affliction be sanctified to them for their everlasting good. J. H.

Rachel Manning.

Died in Goffstown, N. H., Dec. 16th, 1863, Rachel Manning.

My sister fell in love with Jesus in early life; was baptized, and united with the F. W. B. church in South Weare, N. H., and remained with them till she heard the sound of Jesus' coming in '43. She was ready to embrace the doctrine.

She lived a christian till death laid her low. But Jesus is coming to raise the dead; then, if I am faithful, I shall meet that dear sister with all the family of God in the kingdom.

Benjamin P. Manning.

Susannah Shultz.

Died in Earlville, Ill., Jan. 15th, 1863, Sr. Susannah Shultz, aged sixty-four years.

The subject of this notice was baptized by Bro. Caulkins, about six years ago, and lived and died in the faith of the speedy coming of Christ. O what a hope in a dying hour. Thanks be to God who hath begotten us again through the lively hope of the resurrection of Jesus Christ from the dead. Glory be to God, he hath begotten us unto a hope of something that is worth having. This was the hope of our sister.

The sermon on the occasion was preached by the writer, from Job 14, in harmony with other Scripture. M. Mally.

Ansley Dickinson.

Died in Oshkosh, Wis., Jan. 4th, 1864, Ansley D., only child of Jeremiah and Julia Dickinson, aged eleven months.

Another lovely flower has faded,
Bitter tears are o'er it shed;
One more form the grave has shaded,
One more numbered with the dead.

Mary L. Pratt.

Cephar Ransom.

Died in Woodstock, Vt., Jan. 31st, 1864, Cephar Ransom, aged seventy-three years. Another saint has laid down to sleep. F. S. Ransom.

Several of the Continental Journals contain the following paragraph:—"A submarine vessel of colossal dimensions, is now being built at Cronstadt, in the construction of which 2,000 tons of iron and steel will be used. She is to be moved by two large engines, worked by compressed air, is to be armed with a powerful spur, and will carry every accessory for fixing to the hulls of large vessels large cylinders of powder to be fired by electricity. Large glass covered openings will enable the crew to direct the course of the vessel; they will also be able to regulate the depth at which she is to swim, but in general the vessel will be near the surface. The Emperor recently signed a decree appropriating 673,000 francs for the construction of this sea monster."

Summary of News.

FOREIGN.

PER STEAMSHIP CHINA.
Liverpool, Jan. 30th, Queenstown 31st.

Liverpool, Jan. 28. The Danish question continues threatening. England backs her remonstrances with warlike preparations, and it is reported that 20,000 to 30,000 troops are to be placed on a warlike footing.

The Austro-Prussian vanguard is ordered to march from Kiel toward the Eider canal.

The pirate Alabama was at Singapore, Dec. 22, coaling.

Gen. Berg has issued an order that Poland shall in future be governed by martial law.

It is asserted that an alliance has been concluded between Denmark and Sweden.

A Vienna letter of Jan. 23 says: "The acceptance of the crown of Mexico by the Archduke Maximilian is now an irrevocable fact. His Imperial Highness will return to-morrow to Triest to make his final preparations for the journey. A second Mexican deputation is expected in March with the result of the plebiscitum, after which the Emperor elect will leave for Mexico. The Emperor of Austria is said to have given his consent to the daring enterprise of the Archduke, who looks on it as purely a personal matter, placing the Empire under no obligations whatever. The Court of Miramon has entered on negotiations with France and England and indirectly with President Lincoln, the issue of which is favorable to their cause."

The French Chamber of Deputies continued to debate the Address. The opposition members strongly advocated a rupture of diplomatic intercourse with Russia in assertion of the rights of Poland. They also advocated the evacuation of Rome.

The Polish insurrection was reported to be increasing in Lubin.

Spain will send four battalions to St. Domingo in March.

Liverpool, Jan. 30. The Vienna correspondent of the Times says that notwithstanding the assurances of the French papers, the Archduke Maximilian has not yet definitely accepted the French crown. If he can get a loan of ten millions pounds sterling he will go to Mexico, but not without. In no case will he go to Paris before March.

Breslau, Jan. 23. A sanguinary conflict between the insurgents under Bossach and the Russians took place on the 18th inst., in the vicinity of Czenstochan. Several wagon-loads with dead and wounded Russian soldiers have been brought into the town of Czenstochan.

DOMESTIC.

[By People's Line, 77 Washington Street.]

Baltimore, Feb. 13th. The Sun of this morning gives the following particulars of a raid on the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad:

"The express passenger train which left Camden Street Depot on Thursday night for Wheeling was captured by a company of Confederates, when near Kearneysville Depot, about eight miles west of Harper's Ferry.

It appears a switch had been turned, and the waving of a lighted lamp made by the raiders as the train approached caused the engineer to stop the engine. The train was then surrounded by the raiders, and a number of armed men entered the cars.

The passengers, among whom, of course, there was a great consternation, were more or less mulcted in the shape of ransom. Some produced greenbacks, others watches, while several reluctantly gave diamonds, rings, or breast-pins.

Of the former the amounts ranged from one thousand to thirty thousand dollars. Some of the passengers were certain that the robbers were persons residing in the neighborhood, while another party, a well-known resident of this city, declared that he conversed with one of the mulcted passengers, who stated to him that Major Harry Gilmore, of the Confederate cavalry, was in command of the expedition, and that he knew and conversed with him.

No one was injured, nor was there the least disposition on the part of the raiders to take any prisoners. Several members of the Maryland State Legislature delegates from the western counties, were among the passengers, but on the occasion are represented to have been quite taciturn as to their official positions. Their greenbacks and watches are said to have formed a part of the booty.

It was also stated that several Federal officers and soldiers were on the train, but fared no worse than their fellow-passengers. After the raiders accomplished their purpose, they ran the locomotive and tender off the track, causing some injury to the engine. They then left the train, going through the fields in the direction of Smithfield, a small village in Jefferson county, Va.

Baltimore, Feb. 13th. It is now very strongly expected that the attack on the express train on the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad was made by a gang of robbers and cut-throats from the loyal States, penitentiary birds, and probably deserting Federal soldiers, who had no connection with the rebels.

The robbery of the affrighted passengers was very general. Not one of them escaped losing something. One man is said to have lost over $4000 in greenbacks. The passengers made no resistance, supposing they were surrounded by an overwhelming force of rebels. A good many of them threw their watches, jewels and money away, some of which has since been found.

No insult was offered to the ladies, and no attempt to make any one prisoner; neither was there any effort to burn or destroy the train. The deed was committed almost in sight of quite a strong Federal encampment. All these things look very much as if the offending party was a band of robbers belonging to our own side.

Religious Items.—We see accounts in our religious exchanges of powerful revivals in various places in New England. The Puritan Recorder states that at a late inquiry meeting at Rev. Mr. Plumb's church, in Chelsea, about forty persons were present, and several heads of families are indulging hope. At Rev. Dr. Copp's church, in Chelsea, there were sixty inquiries last Sabbath, and the interest is extending. At Townsend, Mass., the Methodists and Congregationalists are holding union meetings, and from fifty to seventy-five persons are inquiring the way of life. At the Hanover Street church (Methodist), Boston, there is a good deal of interest. Twenty-five persons remained for inquiry at a recent evening meeting. The revival at Manchester, N. H., continues. At a recent meeting there, those who felt that they had been pardoned and renewed were asked to arise, when one hundred stood up. Then those who wanted to find Christ were asked to arise, when six hundred stood up. It is said that ten clergymen of the different denominations are laboring harmoniously together in that place.

Items.

New Bedford.—We spent Lord's day, Feb. 14th, with the church in New Bedford. We found a growing interest, and a good prospect of a revival of pure religion. Several have been quickened recently, and are preparing to meet the coming Bridegroom.—Ed.

☞ The noted clergymen of New York are not to be reckoned among the poor of this world, though they may be rich in faith. Bishop Hughes is worth his million; Rev. J. W. Geissenheiner, of the Lutheran church, is worth a quarter of a million; Rev. A. R. Van Nest is reckoned at $200,000, and has a million more in prospect; Rev. Dr. Spring has $100,000, and his young bride three times as much more; Rev. Dr. Adams is worth $100,000; Rev. Dr. Potts $50,000; Bishop Janes about $100,000; Rev. Henry Ward Beecher and Dr. R. S. Storrs, of Brooklyn, are set down at about $30,000 each.—Springfield Republican.

☞ The silver product of Nevada territory will this year, it is estimated, amount to $15,000,000, and in two years more, it is thought it will be fully $30,000,000. A writer in the San Francisco Bulletin, who has studied the subject on the spot, holds that Nevada is the "richest silver-bearing country in the world. Unlike California, her wealth 'is not where you find in,' but her 'silver runs in veins.'"

☞ Prof. Agassiz, while at Pittsburgh on a lecturing tour, received an autograph letter dated Jan. 4th, 1864, from Louis Napoleon, Emperor of France, inviting his return to the country which gave him birth. The professor, however, will decline the offer.

☞ A delegation of clergymen at Washington, Feb. 17, 1864, who want the Preamble of the United States Constitution amended so as to acknowledge the sovereignty of God, had an interview with the President to-day. He listened to their views, but gave no answer.

☞ A number of deaths have recently taken place at Brattleboro', Vt., from a strange and hitherto unknown disease, which first attacks the victim at the base of the brane and along the spine. Cramp generally immediately succeeds, and frequently the sufferer dies in from twenty-four to forty-eight hours.

☞ Garibaldi has issued a proclamation announcing the formation of a committee to promote the Italian Union, and inviting all Italians to rally around it.

☞ Rev. Mr. Bliss, one of the American missionaries of the American Board in Central Turkey, writes that there will be at least two hundred thousand bales of cotton of this season's growth shipped from Adana and that immediate vicinity.

☞ The comparative strength of the armies now in the field is generally estimated to be, for the Union armies four hundred thousand men, for the rebel armies two hundred and sixty thousand men.

☞ A Paris paper computes the population of the globe at one thousand millions, speaking three thousand and sixty-four languages, and having eleven hundred different forms of religion.

☞ In St. Augustine there is an orange tree which has borne seven thousand oranges in one season; and still is flourishing.

☞ Flour in Richmond is $250 per barrel; sugar $7 a $8 per pound.

☞ A gentleman from Bath, Me., says that ship builders and owners of that city have sold ships enough to Europeans, since the commencement of the war, to amount to 3,000,000 in gold. Of this sum $2,000,000 is still on deposit in Europe.

☞ Halim Pasha, viceroy of Egypt, has made arrangements for the extensive employment of steam cultivators, and will have a great breadth of land next season under cotton.

Appointments.

We would say to our preaching Brethren that it is necessary we should receive their appointments as early as Tuesday Morning, as our paper goes to press about noon; otherwise they will not be inserted till the week following.

Lowell Street Chapel, Boston, corner of Causeway and Lowell Streets. Meetings are held regularly three times every Sunday, and Tuesday and Friday evenings. Seats free.

Appointment for Lowell Street Chapel.
H. L. Hastings..........Sunday, Feb. 21st and onward for the present.

Lynn, Mass..........Feb. 21st
Pittsfield, N. H., evenings of Feb. 25th, 26th, 27th, and Lord's day, 28th. Miles Grant.

Portland, Me..........Sundays, March 6th and 13th
J. S. White.

Clinton, Mass..........Friday evening, Feb. 26th
Worcester..........Sunday, Feb. 28th
Manchester, N. H..........Friday evening, March 4th
Concord, N. H..........Sunday, March 6th
L. Boutell.

Providence, R. I., (at Eld. Peterson's church), North End, Feb. 21st.
Manton, R. I..........Feb. 28th
East Killingly, Ct..........March 6th
Coventry Centre, R. I..........March 13th
B. Robberts.

Richmond, R. I., (Clark's Mills)..........Sunday, Feb. 28th
Rocky Brook, R. I..........March 1st and 2nd
Slocumville, Exeter, R. I..........March 3d
Lafayette, R. I..........March 4th and 5th
River Point, R. I..........Sunday, March 7th
Wm. Shepherd.

Tuftonborough, N. H..........Feb. 21st
Woodstock, N. H..........evening, Feb. 25th
Canaan, Vt., (where Dr. Jones may arrange), Sunday, Feb. 28th.
J. G. Smith.

Bristol...Saturday eve. and Sunday, Feb. 20th and 21st
Alexandria Meeting-house, evening..........Feb. 21st
Alexandria, (Harvey Lock's house), Monday evening, Feb. 22d.
Danbury, (at A. C. Knowlton's), Tuesday evening, Feb. 23d.
John G. Hook.

Elliot, Me., Sabbaths, Feb. 28th and March 6th, and every evening through the week. A. Simpson.

Thorndike, Mass..........Feb. 21st and longer as the brethren may direct.
J. W. Brittan.

Holliston, Mass., at the Town Hall, Sunday, Feb. 21st
Also, meetings through the week following, at Sherburn or West Medway, if a Hall or any convenient place can be obtained. Notice will be given at Holliston, Sabbath 21st.
South Reading, Mass..........Sunday, Feb. 28th
H. K. Flagg.

New Hampton, N. H., (where Bro. Pike may appoint), Friday evening, Feb. 19th, and the following Saturday and Sunday. A. Simpson.

Rochester, N. Y..........Monday evening, Feb. 22d
Brockport, N. Y..........Tuesday evening, Feb. 23d
South Butler, N. Y..........Sunday, Feb. 28th
Mannsville, N. Y..........Sunday, March 13th
Harrisburgh, N. Y..........Tuesday evening, March 15th
West Martinsburgh, N. Y..........Sunday, March 20th
Copenhagen, N. Y..........Friday evening, March 25th and over the following Sunday.
Dear Brn. and Srs., I wish to see you all in the vicinity of these appointments. Let there be a rallying to these meetings. The third quarterly meeting of the Northern New York Christian Association will be held in connection with these meetings, at West Martinsburgh, commencing Friday evening, March 18th. Let there be a general gathering at this meeting.
C. B. Turner.

Honeoye, 2 o'clock, P. M..........Feb. 21st
Dansville..........Feb. 28th
F. Burr.

Appointments for Hollis, Me.
I. C. Wellcome..........Sunday, Feb. 21st
W. H. Mitchell..........Sunday, Feb. 28th

Warehouse Point, Conn..........Feb. 21st through the week, and Sunday the 28th.
S. S. Brewer.

Vernon, Vt..........Sunday, Feb. 28th
J. Hemenway.

Augusta, Me., (in the Hall)..........Sunday, Feb. 21st
N. G. Reed.

Loudon Ridge, N. H..........Feb. 21st
C. S. Emerson.

Collinsville, Ct..........Sunday, Feb. 21st
South Windsor, Ct..........Sunday, Feb. 28th
C. Goodrich.

Lawrence, Mass..........Sunday, Feb. 21st
Concord, N. H..........Sunday, Feb. 28th
Joseph W. White.

West Brattleboro, Vt..........Sunday, Feb. 21st
George Champlin.

Lafayette, R. I..........Feb. 20th and 21st
Central..........Sunday, March 6th
Coventry, (Town House)..........evening, March 8th
Summit..........evening, March 10th
North Scituate..........Sunday, March 13th
North Foster..........Sunday, March 20th
Gloucester..........Sunday, March 27th
Blackstone, Mass..........Sunday, April 3d
If any of these appointments conflict, please write to me. J. K. Bellows.

Biddeford, Me..........Sunday, Feb. 21st
Wm. H. Mitchell.

Portsmouth, N. H..........Sabbaths, Feb. 21st and 28th
Exeter, N. H..........Tuesday evening, March 1st
Haverhill, Mass..........Wednesday evening, March 2d
Salem, Mass..........Thursday evening, March 3d
H. Munger.

Clark Meeting-house..........Sunday, Feb. 21st
Wolfborough, (where Bro. Walker may appoint), Monday evening, Feb. 22d. T. W. Piper.

Savoy, Mass..........Feb. 21st
Dalton, Mass..........Feb. 22d
and through the week as Brn. Warren and Smith may arrange.
North Adams, Mass..........Feb. 28th
Charlemont, Mass., (at Bro. Cudworth's), March 1st–2d
Christian Hill, Mass., (as Bro. Tenny may arrange) March 3d and 4th.
Griswoldville, Mass..........March 6th
Northfield Farms, Mass., (at Bro. A. Morgan's), March 8th. Geo. A. Streeter.

Appointments for Bristol, Ct.
Bro. St. John..........Sunday, Feb. 28th

River Point, R. I..........Feb. 21st–28th
I desire to fill up the week as brethren may arrange
J. K. Bellows.

Exeter, N. H..........Feb. 21st, and 28th
A. Ross.

Notices.

A Liberal Offer.

Being satisfied that time is short, and that what is done must be done quickly; and feeling anxious to do what we can to arouse a sleeping world and church, we make the following liberal offer:—

Any one who will send three or more new subscribers to the Crisis for six months or one year, with advance pay for the same, shall receive one third the value of the money sent, in any of our books and tracts they may select. For instance, if they send three dollars, they receive one dollar's worth of books or tracts; for six dollars, we send them two dollars' worth; for twelve dollars, four dollars' worth, etc.

Let every reader take hold of the work in earnest, and help scatter tracts, books and papers like autumnal leaves.

Miles Grant, per order of Publishing Committee.

Maine Central Quar. Conference.

This conference is expected to be holden at the Town House in Rome, commencing Thursday, March 3d, at 6 o'clock, P. M. Come, brethren, let us come up to the help of the Lord, and encourage and strengthen each other. Watchmen and brethren of other conferences are invited. Provision will be made for all. Call on Eld. L. L. Howard, Bros. Martin, Watson, Fletcher, Bleasdell, and others. Let us meet in the spirit of the truth, prepared to do the commandments of our Master with humility. D. W. Griffin, Clerk.

Maine Eastern Quarterly Conference.

A quarterly conference will be held at Lincolnville Centre, Me., commencing Thursday evening, at 7 o'clock, Feb. 25th, and continue over the Sabbath following. Brethren from abroad will call on Bros. G. McKenny, E. Calderwood, D. Fletcher, E. Blood, S. Wadsworth, E. Young, and M. Young. A general invitation is given to all our brethren, etc.

M. Young, Secretary.

Conference.

If the Lord will, there will be a conference in Free Hall, Manchester, N. H., commencing Sunday, Feb. 21st, and continue as long as it is thought best. We cordially invite our friends from abroad, and especially our preaching brethren, to attend this meeting. Elders John Billings, J. T. Curry, and S. W. Bishop will be in attendance to labor in word and doctrine. D. S. Holt, for the Bro.

Maine Western Quar. Conference.

We purpose to hold the next session of our conference in Hollis, near the centre, at the Methodist Chapel. It will commence, the Lord willing, March 10th, evening, and last over the following Sunday. A general invitation is given to ministers and people to come to this meeting, filled with the Spirit to work for the Lord. Those coming may inquire for Brn. Clark, Dennett, and Carle.

Jas. A. Libby.

Notice.

Providence permitting, we will hold the next session of the Winona County Minn. Quarterly Conference with the brethren and sisters at Hesper, Iowa, near the state line, commencing on Saturday, the 12th day of March, at half-past 10 A. M., 1864, and continue over the following Sunday. All who can possibly attend the quarterly conference will please to come. Come on, and join with us, and work for God. Come in the humble spirit of Jesus, praying, "O Lord, revive thy work." Brethren and others coming from Winona, Minn., will come by the way of Lenora.

Eld. Philip Ramer, Clerk.

Normal Institute
AND MANUAL LABOR ACADEMY.
Reed's Ferry, N. H.

The next term of this Academy commences Feb. 18th, and continues eleven weeks, under the instruction of H. E. Brown, A. B. For circular, address H. E. Brown, Reed's Ferry, N. H.

Meeting in Canaan, Me.

There will be a protracted meeting in Canaan, Me., at the Salisbury meeting-house, commencing Friday evening, Feb. 19th. Brethren and sisters from abroad, and all interested, are invited to attend.

L. L. Howard,
D. M. Hanscom.

Conference.

A conference will be held in the east part of Belmont, Me., at the house of Bro. Peter Tower, the third Saturday in February, and the third Saturday in each month thereafter until further notice. Preaching brethren are cordially invited to attend. In behalf of the brethren,

S. Hammons.

Notice.

I shall not be able to meet my engagement at Hollis on the 21st, as it seems duty to attend an urgent call from another place. I. C. Wellcome.

Business.

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

C. B. Turner—S. P. is sent as directed. Sr. J. was credited $2.00.
H. A. King—All right, H. A. K.
N. R. Gould—The $2.00 cr. on book.
R. Cull—You will find it in No. 433.
F. Burr—Will have German Tracts in a few days.
A. P. Moore—G. B. M. due, from 423 to 437, 54c.
L. H. Davis—Cannot find B. W. Clark. At what P. O. has it been going?
Chas. Bunnell—We have not.

H. H. J.—Books sent. 75 cents due. B. holds the same view so far as I know. H. L. H.

— CASH RECEIPTS TO FEB. 7, 1864.

The present No. of the Crisis is 437.

The No. which follows your name, is the No. to which your money pays. Deduct the one from the other, and you will see how far you have paid in advance, or how much is due the office. Make a memorandum of the same, and you will be reminded when your subscription expires.

P T Watson 463, E D Hutchinson 438, Mrs C Tabor 416, W Howard 416, W B Maynard 461, F W Higgins 442, A Messer 499, L M Eccleston 463, J Noka 463, W S Howden 442, E Bolby 461, W F Seward 461, Mrs R Cook 461, Mrs N McKinney 451, E Blood 429, Mrs M J Gray 461, L Conkey 461, J. Danforth 455, S E Trott 462, J Fleming 462, S B Norton 462, L Dudley 446, J Wise 458, A Stivers 458, S R Goodsell 457, E W Turner 462, H Stedman 462, D B Wright 462, H W Chamberlain 443, N L Curtis 338,—$1.00 each.

A Whitcomb 468, Mrs H Austin 487, H W Dann 450, C. H. Copp 485, G. R. Gladding 457, G W Denton 482, L D Bliss 368, W H Ball 469, Mrs J Stulb 487, L L Sanborn 444, J Devitt 483, S Allen 486, G B Moore 423, A P Davis 486, L. H. Davis 468 (See "To Corresp.), M C Curtis 486,—$2.00 each.

S Helmer 446, A Taylor 447, D Taylor 447, L H Durgin 450, O M Cuyler 449, L Surdom 449, S Lum 455, A Bartlett 449, A Tarr 449,—50c each.

S Pray $1.50, 472; A G Lombard 60c, 461; C W Sargent 25c, 437; A L Chamberlain $3.00, 338; B W Clark $3.00, —; J Taylor $1.01, 446.

FOR BOOKS AND TRACTS.

A G Lombard $1.40, E W Turner 20c.

BOOKS AND TRACTS SENT.

By Mail.

L. Wells, Amenia, N. Y.; W. Jones, Norfolk, Va.; Mrs W Howe, Dover, Mass.; G L Hart, Unionville, Ct.; F H Bruce, Rockville, Ct.; S B Colton, Bloomfield, Ct.; Mrs A Sproul, Ostrander, O.; W Ingmire, Seneca Falls, N. Y.; J M Howard, So. Hope, Me.; S W Bartlett, W. Stafford, Ct.; T Redfern, Montreal, C. E.; H. A. Ellis, Belgrade Mills, Me.; H. A. Lynch, Wabashaw, Minn.; W. M. Ferber, E. Northwood, N. H.; A. A. Carver, E. Machias, Me.; B. Bunton, Farley, Iowa; C. W. Davis, Washington, D. C.; H Morril, Kingston, N. H.; J Gay, S. Casco, Me.; C Stratton, Cornville, Me.; P W Watts, Paoli, Wis.; J Pine, Ionia, Ill.; J P Babcock, Westerly, R. I.; G Wright, Jr., Lapeer, Mich.; L Scott, Denver, Ill.; J Wilbur, W. Hoosick, N. Y.; J McCannon, Dayton, O.; C Sweet, Utica, Ill.; Mrs E W Veach, Mattson, Ill.; C Bunnel, Havanna, Ill.; H J Wilson, Lewisville, Ind.; C D W Scott, Ottawa, Minn.

By Express.

G. W. Denny, New Haven, Ct.; D C Terry, Windsor Locks Depot; I C Wellcome (two packages), Yarmouth, Me.; E Cheney, Shelbyville, Ill.

LETTERS RECEIVED.

W Collier, J Reynolds, A N Seymour, D L C, E V C Bennett, H H Claney, M T Eldridge, F Kies, T M Preble, S W Worthington, P. E Armstrong, S. S. Brewer, L G, P Alling, G W Rathbone, P S W Deyo, F W Sutton, S Bassford, A. M. Hollis, M Parry, C A Knowles, D T Taylor, M Mathews, L Cawkins, G Champlin, M L Curtis, W. H. Mitchell, B. P. Manning, S E Finn, L J Beach, J C Wheeler, T. B. T.

☞ Received of Bro. A. of California, $2.50 in gold. The Lord reward the giver. W. Pratt.

POST OFFICE ADDRESS.

Elder J. V. Himes—Buchanan, Mich.
P. W. Hough—Fairbank, Buchanan Co., Iowa.
S. S. Brewer—South Glastenbury, Ct.
Walter Pratt—New Bedford, Mass.
T. M. Preble—East Weare, N. H.

English Bibles for Sale.

1. Diamond, fine print, full references. Morocco, $1.75. Morocco, circuit binding (with flaps), $2.50. Calf, $1.40. Roan, gilt, $1.10. Roan, gilt, rims and clasps, $1.75. Flexible binding, $1.10. Postage 12 cts.
2. Pearl, flat, full references. Morocco, $2.50. Grained roan, $1.75; ditto, rims and clasps, $2.15. Morocco, circuit binding (with flaps), $3.50. Postage 16 cts.
3. Nonpareil, 16 mo., references between the verses. Morocco, $3.10. Roan, $2.10. Colored calf (references between the verses, or in the margin), $2.25. Postage 20 cts.
4. Minion, references between the verses. Morocco, $3.50. Colored calf, $2.80. Grained roan, $2.50. Postage 28 cts.
5. Testaments. Roan, gilt, smallest 25 cts; larger, 33 cts. Postage 4 cts.

Address Miles Grant, Boston, Mass.

VALUABLE BOOKS FOR SALE.

Kitto: The Cyclopædia of Biblical Literature. Edited by John Kitto, D. D., F. S. A. Illustrated by numerous maps and engravings. 2 vols., 8vo., 1878 pages, double columns, half calf binding. Price $8.

Murdock: The New Testament, translated from the Syriac by James Murdock, D. D. 8vo., 515 pp. Price $2.

Address H. L. Hastings, Boston, Mass.

Price Reduced.

Resurrection of the Wicked. Discussion between M. Grant and J. T. Curry.

The advertised price of this Discussion is 25 cents, postage 2 cents. We have a quantity of them on hand, and will sell them hereafter for 20 cts., postage 2 cts. Send on your orders.

The History of an Immortal Soul Mythology, Theology versus Bible. By S. S. Brewer, Minister of the Gospel.

A new tract, embracing testimony from the above sources concerning the nature and destiny of souls. Per dozen by mail, 87 cts.; single 10 cts.

BOOKS AND TRACTS.

[illegible]

MILES GRANT'S WORKS.

Resurrection of the Wicked. Discussion with Jas. T. Curry. [illegible]

Eternal Suffering. Discussion with Dr. J. Litch. [illegible]

Spiritualism. Discussion with J. S. Loveland, "On Spiritualism and Immortality." [illegible]

State of the Dead. Discussion with W. W. Clayton. [illegible]

Miles Grant's Tracts. 32 pages each. [illegible]

What is Man? A Bible view of his creation; The [illegible]

The Soul, What is it? Or a careful examination of [illegible]

The Spirit, What is it? Or a careful examination [illegible]

The Rich Man and Lazarus. Thief on the Cross; [illegible]

TRACTS

Issued by the Christian Publication Society.

[illegible]

FREE TO THE POOR.

The Church not in Darkness; or, the duties of the [illegible]

The Three Worlds; or, earth, past, present, and future. [illegible]

The Last Days. A calm, scriptural, and convincing [illegible]

Plain Truths; or, Scripture and Tradition united. A [illegible]

Will all Men be Saved? A pointed, pithy, earnest [illegible]

A Voice of Warning from the Four Winds. A [illegible] By D. T. Taylor. 24 pages.

The New Heavens and New Earth. A collection of [illegible] By D. T. Taylor. 20 pages.

Ancient Landmarks. Six tracts of four pages each, [illegible] By H. L. Hastings. [illegible]

The Duty of Christians in the present crisis. [illegible] By H. L. Hastings. [illegible]

State of the Dead. By John Milton, author of "Paradise Lost," [illegible]

Silence of the Scriptures respecting the immortality [illegible] By C. F. Hudson. [illegible]

Immortality Through Christ Alone. The doctrine safe and salutary. By C. F. Hudson. 20 pages.

The Destiny of the Wicked. A solid mass of Scripture quotations, without note or comment, upon this subject. Arranged by H. L. Hastings. 12 pages.

The Advent at Hand. A summary of reasons for expecting the speedy close of the present, and the ushering in of a new dispensation. [illegible]

MISCELLANEOUS.

Cruden's Condensed Concordance, by which any [illegible]

The Life of Trust. An account of the Lord's Dealings with George Müller, [illegible]

Two Hundred Stories for Children. An excellent [illegible] by T. M. Preble. [illegible]

A Treatise on the 24th and 25th chapters of Matthew, [illegible] By I. C. Wellcome. [illegible]

Should Christians Fight? A pamphlet on War, [illegible] By I. C. Wellcome. [illegible]

The Bible from Heaven, or a dissertation on the Evidences of Christianity. By M. Hull. [illegible]

America in Prophecy. Exposition of the 18th chap. of Isaiah, [illegible]

The Celestial Railroad, or Modern Pilgrim's Progress. [illegible]

The Three Kingdoms, or the Kingdom of God the Father, the kingdom of Satan, the kingdom of the Lord Jesus Christ; [illegible] By T. M. Preble. [illegible]

The Ten Virgins, or Wisdom and Folly contrasted. By T. M. Preble. [illegible]

The Two Adams. By T. M. Preble. An interesting tract. [illegible]

Messiah's Mission, or an exposition of the Gospel Covenant, [illegible] By C. F. Sweet. [illegible]

The Excellency of the Lord's Anointed, or Christ the promised Messiah. By Mrs. Mary A. Seymour. [illegible]

Everybody's Book. The Bible View of the personality of God. The Devil: his origin, personality, power, and doom. By Phineas A. Smith. [illegible]

Cook Book. By Dr. F. W. Hurd. This book gives instructions for preparing all the articles of food used at Dr. Jackson's celebrated health institution, denominated "Our Home," Dansville, N. Y. Price 10c, postage 2c.

Premature Decay of American Youth. By Dr. A. Stone. This is a valuable work, and should be read by all the young. [illegible]

The Saint's Harvest, or an exposition of Matt. 24: 13, in connection with Dan. 12: 11-12. By H. K. Flagg. [illegible]

The Old and New Covenant. Superiority of the New. By A. W. Sibley. [illegible]

The Christian Lyre. A collection of Hymns and Tunes for Worship. [illegible]

A Disquisition on the Prophecies. By F. H. Berick. [illegible]

An Appeal to Pious Trinitarians. By H. Grew. [illegible]

BOOKS PUBLISHED BY H. L. HASTINGS,
167 Hanover Street, Boston, Mass.
Single copies sent by mail, postpaid, on receipt of the price.

The Signs of the Times; or, A Glance at Christendom as it is. By H. L. Hastings. Third edition. [illegible]

[illegible]

The Voice of the Church on the Coming and Kingdom of the Redeemer; [illegible] By D. T. Taylor. [illegible]

[illegible]

Spiritualism a Satanic Delusion and a Sign of the Times. By William Ramsey, D. D. [illegible]

[illegible]

Thessalonica; or The Model Church. A sketch of Primitive Christianity. [illegible]

[illegible]

The Great Controversy between God and Man. [illegible]

[illegible]

Reasons for my Hope, and the Tokens of its Speedy Realization. [illegible]

[illegible]

Thessalonica and Reasons for my Hope. Bound in one volume. [illegible]

Looking Forward, or the Prospects of the Church; [illegible]

Future Punishment, as revealed in the Scriptures, [illegible]

[illegible]

☞ All orders for any of the above works should be addressed to

MILES GRANT,
Boston, Mass.

For the World's Crisis.

Blessed Bible, the mirror of heaven so dear,
Perfected its charming reflections appear;
While leading the mind and entrancing the heart,
It doth in its beauty its glory impart.

Precious Bible, God's own—yes, and our own too,
Ever flashing its pages with truths always new;
It comforting leads to the joys it portrays,
And shows how to live for eternity's days.

Sweet Bible, a river of life to us now,
Whence the waters of grace in their heavenly flow,
Full of mercy and truth, so happily tend
Towards the land where those waters in glory shall end.

That bright land of glory, the land of the blest,
Where believers shall triumph in glorious rest;
Where the ransomed returned with holiness shine,
And all things made new, make all things divine.

The Lord's day of glory, the great jubilee,
When the "mansions" prepared by the Savior we see;
When from heaven descends the new city of peace,
When loud is proclaimed the sweet year of release!

But some are not running the heavenly race,
Are leaving unvalued the treasures of grace;
Immortality offered, seek not to obtain,
Thus, Messiah neglected, existence is vain.

Alas! when with Time, Time's comforts are past,
The future, thus chosen, forever lies waste;
Earthliness purchased, uncounted the cost;
Selfhood possessed,—thus existence is lost!

The summons is ready for you and for me,
"The King in his beauty" ere long we shall see;
See him with full pleasure, and not with dread pain,
If, through grace all abounding, his life we obtain.

Philadelphia. CHAS. GREENE.

For the World's Crisis.

WINTER EVENINGS AT HOME.

"The light of Home! how bright it beams
When evening shades around us fall;
And from the lattice far it gleams,
To love and rest and comfort call;
When tired with the toils of day,
The strife of glory, gold and fame,
How sweet to seek the quiet way,
Where loving lips will lisp our name
Around the light at Home."

Friends, how do you spend the long winter evenings? In wisdom's ways? in reading, meditating, treasuring up useful knowledge, scientific, historical, scriptural? We may calculate on three hours at least, between the closing of out-door work till early bedtime. How shall we spend these three precious hours? in what way? where shall we go? what shall we do? The bright fire in the fireplace, grate, open stove, gives an air of cheerfulness and comfort to the family sitting-room. Are you fatigued with the labors of the day? Is not this the place of all others to rest weary limbs or brain? Do the cares of business press heavily upon you? Where may you throw them off if not here? where seek sympathy and counsel? Would you find relaxation and improvement at the same time, in familiar conversation? What is more charming or more improving, to mind or heart, than the right kind of home-talk?

"Of all the spots that Heaven has blest,
The dearest place is home;
'Tis there the fond heart loves to rest,
And never loves to roam;
Whilst love plays round the smiling hearth,
'Tis Heaven's own bliss enjoyed on earth."

If you need rest and relaxation, take it, by all means, in the quiet of your own homes; but with most of our readers, especially in the country, these long evenings should be seasons of intellectual, social, and moral activity. We have not been accustomed to put sufficient value upon home as a school, or to avail ourselves of half of its privileges. The work of education, in both the young and the old (for who is too old to learn?) should now be going on.

The lamp burns brightly on the work-stand near the fire. Mother and the girls are busy with their knitting or sewing. What shall father and the boys do? read to them? What? Have you a choice library? Have you Baxter's Works, Hall's, Taylor's, Bunyan's, Wesley's, Fletcher's, Fullers's, Doddridge's? Among the more recent productions, have you Finney's Revival Sermons? his works on Theology in one volume, octavo? President Mahan's "True Believer?" his "Moral and Intellectual Philosophy?" the Works of Wm. Goodell? the precious volumes of Madame Guyon? Nelson on Infidelity? "The Tongue of Fire?" The soul should be first—"seek first the kingdom of God and his righteousness, and all other things will be added."

How with your periodical reading, your weeklies and monthlies? have you selected the precious from the vile? Beware of the literary serpents. Never, never allow them to cross your threshold; never waste your energies on the merely imaginative or fictitious—read none but good books and papers—such as improve the mind and the heart.

The little folks may occupy a little space at their lessons, in geography, history, botany, geology, agriculture; in arithmetic, grammar, the use of the globes; in pleasant, cheerful, edifying conversation. But the Bible, the blessed Bible—let this be the first, midst, last, always. To wind up the family scene, a chapter in the Bible, a song of praise, and a season of prayer.

This is a hint toward what we mean by the "home school" and "home education." Is there any thing repugnant in it? Would not the whole family soon learn to enjoy and profit by such exercises?

Is not home, after all, the pleasantest, happiest, best place on earth? If it is not, where lies the fault? Have you not something to do with the matter? Set yourselves at once, dear friends, about the work of making it so. Be you father or mother, son or daughter, brother or sister, you are responsible, in greater or less degree, for the character and influence of home.

"Summer is gone, the fair young flowers
Have faded in their bloom,
And the music of the fairy bowers
Is hushed 'mid winter's gloom.

Our summer life hath its winter too,
And 'mid its waning bloom
We wait that Spring, whose fadeless hue
E'er glows beyond the tomb."

But however pleasant home may be, one does not wish to remain always there. Our sympathies and wants extend beyond its beautiful and sacred, but narrow circle. Multitudes like to spend their evenings abroad. Where shall we go? Shall we visit the ball-room? the theatre, the opera, the gay party, the fashionable concert, the haunts of dissipation, the frolic and the dance?

"On with the dance. Let joy be unconfined;
No sleep till morn, when youth and pleasure meet
To chase the glowing hours with flying feet."

Who that values time, and considers the worth of the soul, can trifle thus?

"The character of many young men and women is decided for life by the way in which they spend their evenings when growing up to manhood and womanhood. Some young ladies think only of amusement, and contrive from week to week how they may secure a larger variety of pleasures, and bring them in a keener zest. Some young men find the monotony of home life dull and repulsive, and resort to the streets for companions, and to the drinking saloon and the theater for pleasure. The first class generally grow up to lead frivolous lives, and the latter to a career of vice and shame."

But where shall we go? Go to the lyceum, the lecture room, the sanctuary—the house of prayer and praise. Go where you can walk with an unsullied conscience, where you can be benefitted, soul and body, mind and spirit. Go to places where you are not ashamed to take your wife, your sisters, your little ones.

"Speak not of the mirth of the giddy crowd,
In the halls of revelry found,
For their reckless joke and laughter loud,
Compare not with joys so sound.

Oh, give me the pious and happy home,
Where the bond that unites is Love,
Where the will of the Holy One is done,
And His blessing sought from above!"

How many precious hours are squandered by young persons at gay parties, soirees, depots, saloons, beer shops, shoe shops, and other places of public resort, in senseless gabble, idle, frothy chit-chat, or something worse, which time might be profitably employed at home, in reading good books and papers, the study of history, philosophy, geography, or chemistry, or in attending useful lectures, the house of God, or meetings for prayer and praise! "But ye have set at nought all my counsel, and would none of my reproof. I also will laugh at your calamity, I will mock when your fear cometh." "Rejoice, O young man, in thy youth, and walk in the ways of thine heart, and in the sight of thine eyes: but know thou, that for all these things God will bring thee into judgment." "For God shall bring every work into judgment, with every secret thing, whether it be good or whether it be evil."

"I would not waste my spring of youth
In idle dalliance; I would plant rich seeds,
To blossom in my manhood, and bear fruit
When I am old."

Author of "Home Thrusts."

For the World's Crisis.

GREAT MISTAKES.

There are many great mistakes, but I shall now speak of only a few which are very common. I do it in hope that it may lead to some reforms.

It is a great mistake for sinners to think they do not need pardon from God.

It is a great mistake for a pardoned sinner to think he will be saved without obedience to Christ after conversion.

It is a great mistake for a christian to think himself better than his brethren.

It is a great mistake for the church to think their minister can do their part of the worship of God, and they be blessed.

It is a great mistake for a minister to think the people cannot prosper without him.

It is a great mistake for a church to think they cannot worship God when their minister is absent.

It is a great mistake for a minister to think God cannot work reformation by small means.

It is a great mistake for a church to think they cannot be fed and souls converted by the faithful, humble minister, who is not styled a great preacher.

It is a great mistake to give all the church is able to raise, to foreign ministers, and suffer those among them to preach without support, and earn their own living, and get no time to study.

It is a great mistake for a church to think they must have the best and most able minister, and give no encouragement to new beginners.

It is a great mistake for a minister to think his labors are worth so much more than his flock, that he withholds them when they are not able to pay.

It is a great mistake for a minister to think his children must go through the high schools and colleges on the money earned by the children of his church, who are not able to get as good an education.

It is a great mistake for a minister to think his sermons too precious to be preached to a small congregation.

I have probably said enough on great mistakes for one chapter. If any one thinks I have hit him in any of these remarks, I hope the Lord will aid him in reforming, and I will try to avoid mistakes myself.

I. C. WELLCOME.

For the World's Crisis

THE FRIENDS THAT I LOVED.

Who are they? They are the friends of Jesus. Jesus says, "Ye are my friends if ye do whatsoever I command you." From this we learn that the only way we can possibly be the friends of Jesus is by doing whatever he commands us to do. Doing, then, secures his friendship, love, approving smiles, and the great "recompense of reward" promised at the resurrection of the just. By being loyal to Jesus in all things, we become reconciled to God. Hence, God and Christ love us freely. Our sins are all washed away, and we are made the sons and daughters of the Lord Almighty; consequently heirs of the manifold grace of God. As a seal of our citizenship in the household of God, the Holy Spirit or Comforter is shed upon and abides with each member of the family amidst all the trials and conflicts of this probationary state.

Now these friends follow Jesus through night's darkest hours; when he bears witness to the truth, they imitate his example by doing so. When he bears the reproach of a heartless world and a proud and Pharisaical church, they meekly bow their necks to the yoke, and say, Father, not my will, but thine be done. When he is rendered unpopular and obnoxious in the eyes of a selfish, unsanctified, and sectarian rabble, they sympathize, and say, We will not leave thee nor forsake thee, choosing, as Moses did, rather to suffer affliction with the people of God than to enjoy the pleasures of sin for a season; esteeming the reproach of Christ greater riches than the treasures of Egypt; "for he had respect unto the recompense of reward."

Such friends Jesus loves, and blessed be his dear name, so do I. They are the elect of the Lord, chosen out from the world to be his special treasure. They are Christ's friends, upon the eternal principles of righteousnes as revealed in God's word. I desire to make such my chosen friends, my especial and affectionate companions. I cannot love and esteem such too highly; they are choice jewels; they love God, Christ, truth, righteousness a thousand times more than popularity, a good name or any thing else that the world calls good or great. Let me live and die, or meet my Lord with such ardent friends of the dear Jesus.

But friends who are so through mercenary motives, I care not to cherish; they are only friends in fair weather. Where self-interest, popularity, pride of opinion, or speech of people are at stake, they coldly turn away and by their actions, which speak louder than words, say, we do not wish to recognize you under such and such circumstances. It will be somewhat mortifying under these peculiar events of Providence to take particular notice of you.

Oh! how many such hangers on there are in these days, professing to love Jesus and take an interest in the proclamation of the soon coming Lord, fondly hoping they are the especial friends of Jesus and will be saved ultimately. What a delusive hope! You cannot serve the world and Christ. You cannot be the friends of Jesus and of the world at the same time. You cannot follow the Spirit of a popular christianity and the Spirit of Jesus too. No, never; therefore let me exhort such to either renounce what little interest you now have, or come out fully and show yourself to be a whole-souled christian inside and out, a real, tried friend of Jesus, one that will not be ashamed of the truth, or of those that are the chosen of the Lord, and are striving with all their energies to be perfect, ever seeking the mind of Christ.

The cause of our soon coming Savior is greatly reproached and hindered by the inconsistent actions of some of its adherents, while they believe one thing, they will, by their actions, preach another exactly the opposite. They say but do not.

While I fully believe my dear Lord is coming very soon to judge the world, should I be doing his will by paying out my means to support those ministers who are saying, "My Lord delayeth his coming," and who seek in all their efforts to render that truth unpopular, and at the same time neglect to support those ministers who are giving meat in due season, and who, I know, have the cause of God at heart, interwoven in all their course of action? While I believe the doctrine of immortal-soulism is doing vastly more to overthrow the Bible and the religion of Jesus in these days than all the Tom. Paines and infidels put together; while I believe the dead are unconscious and go (not to heaven or hell at death, but) to the grave, should I be a friend of Jesus while I went and employed ministers to preach my deceased friends off to heaven at death, not even mentioning the resurrection of the dead; when at the same time there are able and acceptable ministers within call, who are able to preach the truth on such occasions? Let the real friends of Jesus judge. I will never thus betray my Lord and Master by such palpable contradictions in faith and justice. Yours in faith,

A. N. SEYMOUR.

For the World's Crisis.

BASIL.

EXTRACTS FROM THE DISCOURSES OF BASIL, ARCHBISHOP OF CÆSAREA.

Preached about the Fourth Century.

"It is necessary for the perfection of a christian life, that we should imitate Christ; not only such holy actions and dispositions, as lenity, modesty, and patience, which he exemplified in his life, but also his death, as Paul saith, "I am a follower of Christ, I am conformable to his death, if by any means I might attain unto the resurrection of the dead."

How can we be placed in a condition of likeness to his death? By being "buried with him in baptism." What is the form of this burial, and what benefits flow from an imitation of it? First, the course of the former life is stopped. No man can do this, unless he be born again, as the Lord hath said.

Regeneration, as the word itself imports, is the beginning of a new life; therefore, he that begins a new life must put an end to his former life. Such a person resembles a man got to the end of a race, who, before he sets off again, turns about, pauses, and rests a little; so in a change of life it seems necessary that a sort of death should intervene, putting a period to the past, and giving a beginning to the future. How are we to go down with him into the grave? By imitating the burial of Christ in baptism; for the bodies of saints are, in a sense, buried in water. For this reason the apostle speaks figuratively of baptism, as a laying aside the works of the flesh; ye are circumcised with the circumcision made without hands, in putting off the body of the sins of the flesh by the circumcision of Christ, buried with him in baptism.

Two things are proposed in baptism; to put an end to a life of sin, lest it should issue an eternal death; and to animate the soul to a life of future sanctification. The water exhibits an image of death, receiving the body as into a sepulchre; the Spirit renews the soul, and we rise from a death of sin into a newness of life. This is to be born from above, of water and the Spirit, as if by the water we were put to death, and by the operation of the Spirit brought to life.

If there be any benefit in the water, it is not from the water, but from the presence of the Spirit; for baptism doth not save us by putting away the filth of the flesh, but by the answer of a good conscience toward God.—Benedict's History, Baptist. Vol. 1., pp. 68, 69.

Bethel, Vt. GEO. U. LEWIS.

For the World's Crisis.

A FEW WORDS TO THE MEMBERSHIP OF THE KINGDOM OF GOD.

Being also one of those who are in a strange land, into which we are cast on account of our waywardness from God; being also one of those who are longing for the time of deliverance from under a strange yoke, and for the time of gracious visitation from the countenance of the great God; I find myself moved to express to my fellow bearers and endurers of the same fate some thoughts concerning our present situation.

As the people of the Most High, destined to be the place of his abode and the throne of his glory, we lie in darkness and scattered. Hell has opened its mouth wide and threatens to devour us. The Lord and Savior Jesus Christ, the mighty Benefactor, has in times past had compassion upon us. He took his stand between us and our near eternal ruin, and spoke in godly power: You hell and ye satans, you shall not destroy entirely this my humanity! You shall not annul my primitive plan with my creation! He tendered his mighty hand to help us; we promised on our part to follow him willingly. He made a covenant of delivery with us, in which he pledged himself to deliver us out of our scattering, out of servitude, and out of all misery and all tribulation, upon our promise to live solely for him, if it needs be to suffer for him (i. e., for the cause he suffered), and if required, to die for him.

Now we, finding ourselves in one and the same unhappy situation, bear the blame ourselves, that we have not yet overcome, but are yet overcome. The Lord is righteous and holy, and also true. On account of our disobedience and stubbornness we have incurred the judgment of God so nearly, that death is right before us. Let us cry to the Lord, who wills not our death, but only our life, that he would let mercy go before justice, and that he would remember his covenant; that he would give us yet room to repent, that we may be obedient to his word and pay to him our vows; that he would not take us away in his fury with those who call not upon his name nor desire any pardon; that he would spare his people; that his covenant of grace might not cease among the children of men; that at least the little ones, who are comparatively innocent, but would also suffer under our burdens, might live to see the refreshing solemnly promised to them. And if the Lord give to us favor in his sight again, and we be permitted to stand upright, that he would direct our steps so that his cause may be advanced; and if we should be overpowered, as was our Lord Jesus, that our death may only confirm his work of grace and justice.

Fellow endurers, only upon this course there is yet hope; and that we might resolve upon taking now the decided stand for the Lord's government, he has entrusted unto us his further designs, what he intends doing for his obedient ones in sight of all the world. When he sends his mighty sword through the land to avenge the great iniquity of its inhabitants, then those in his favor shall not be touched by it. See the records of the rights and doings of the Almighty, Ps: 91; Ezek. 9; Ex. 12; Mal. 3: 4; Zach. 10: 12; Isa. 54: 44; and Revelation throughout.

Beaver, O. FR. KIES.

For the World's Crisis.

"SING TO ME."

(Re-published by request.)

Sing to me, for I am weary,
While my vision dimly scans
Future scenes, whose shadows dreary
Pain my heart and chill my hands.
Let it be a song of pity,
Angel music, soft and low,
And its breath of love so near me,
It may sweep my throbbing brow.

Sing a dirge, for earth bemoaning
Her bright gems grown dim and rare;
Trees of righteousness once blooming
Stretch their branches cold and bare.
There is no redeeming feature
Marks this mercy-deluged age;
Prayers and Bibles sink her deeper,
While she writes her darkest page.

Jesus, save! the hour of trouble
Circles round the "little flock";
Earthly peace is but a bubble,
Broken with the lightest shock.
Sacred bonds are lightly broken,
Perjured priests at every post,
Trust betrayed, no hopeful token
Lingers round this bankrupt host.

Sing to me! the vision brightens,
O'er the wave's a starry shore;
One glad smile that land enlightens,
Where the gathered weep no more.
Far beyond this night of sadness,
Far beyond the day of doom,
Man shall walk in native gladness,
Earth shall smile in Eden bloom.

Charlemont, Mass. VESTA N. CUDWORTH.

For the World's Crisis.

NOVEL THEORY.

BRO. GRANT:—It may not be uninteresting to you, and the readers of the Crisis, to be made acquainted with a novel theory concerning the "spirits of the dead."

While on my journey to this place, I called on a friend to rest awhile, and was invited to tarry for the night and have a meeting; to which I agreed; and although the neighborhood was sparsely settled, we had a goodly number together in the evening,—considering so short a notice,—to whom I spoke the word of life.

After meeting, I entered into conversation with an intelligent looking man, who inquired of me what I thought of the stars; at first, I did not fully comprehend his question, and so gave him no definite answer. He then remarked:

"The Scriptures speak of stars in glory."

"O yes," said I; "Paul says one star differeth from another star in glory," etc.

"Well," said he, "I will tell you what I think of them. I have observed that there appear to be more stars in the heavens than formerly, and think that whenever a saint dies he becomes a star."

Now this may seem too absurd to be believed by anybody, but the absurdity of the conclusion arises from the absurdity of the premises; and while such absurd premises are maintained, though those who hold the premises may differ in their conclusions, their conclusions must be erroneous.

Let men believe that man is a unit, and when dead will remain dead till the resurrection, and they will no longer be troubled with the dreamy notions of conscious entities in death, either in the form of angels, stars, or any thing else. W. H. MITCHELL.

Conway, N. H.

EFFECTS OF ONE GLASS.

On passing through one of the wards of the —— Prison, I accosted an elderly looking convict. He held down his head as though ashamed to look me in the face. On handing him a tract, he said, "I knew your voice as soon as I heard you, sir; I have heard you before to-day, sir."

After a few words of explanation, I found that we had been at one time members of the same congregation, and sat under the same faithful ministry. I anxiously inquired how it was that he had fallen so low as to become an inmate of a prison.

"A glass of ale, sir, was my ruin," he replied.

"How could that be?" I asked.

"I was at one period of my life, sir, very intemperate, but was happily led to give up drinking entirely, although I did not sign any pledge, which I now lament. I became a regular attendant at a place of worship, and joined the congregation. I went on very happily for some years, until one evening I was returning from ——, when I met with some friends from Hull. They prevailed upon me to go to the public house to have but 'one glass.' Conscience reproved me, but having entered upon the enchanted ground, I was readily induced to take more liquor, until I became overcome by it. The next morning I was ashamed to show myself, and left —— for Leeds. My old appetite for drink had been rekindled. I became reckless and joined a set of counterfeit coiners. We were discovered, convicted, and now I am to be transported. Oh! that I had never touched that ONE GLASS!"—Band of Hope Review.

☞ Instead of thinking that religion is a kind of secret indulgence, to be snatched by stealth from the ordinary affairs of life, make a study of spreading religion over all your daily path, and then you will realize the habit of walking before God all the day long—of doing all things to his glory.

THE OLD BLACK BULL.

QUARRELSOME CHURCHES will please read the following story, and profit by the same. Who will do it? S. T. T.

Old John Bulkley, (grandson of the once famous President Chauncey), was a minister of the gospel, and one of the best educated men of his day in the wooden nutmeg State, when the immortal (or ought to be) Jonathan Trumbull was "round," and in his youth.

Mr. Bulkley was the first settled minister in the town of his adoption, Colchester, Ct. It was with him, as afterward with good old Bro. Jonathan, (Governor Trumbull, the bosom friend of General Washington), good to confer on almost any matter, scientific, political, or religious—any subject, in short, wherein common sense and general good to all concerned was the issue. As a philosophical reasoner, casuist, and good counsellor, he was "looked to," and abided by.

It so fell out that a congregation in Mr. Bulkley's vicinity got to loggerheads, and were upon the apex of raising "the evil one" instead of a spire to their church, as they proposed and split upon. The very nearest they could come to a mutual cessation of hostilities was to appoint a committee of three to wait on Mr. Bulkley, state their case, and get him to adjudicate. They waited on the old gentleman, and he listened with great attention to their conflicting grievances.

"It appears to me," said the old gentleman, "that this is a very simple case—a trifling thing to cause you so much vexation."

"So I say," says one of the committee.

"I don't call it a trifling case, Mr. Bulkley, said another.

"No case at all," responded the third.

"It ain't, eh?" fiercely answered the first speaker.

"No, it ain't, sir!" quite as savagely replied the third.

"It is any thing but a trifling case, anyhow," echoed number two, "to expect to raise the minister's salary and that new steeple, too, out of our small congregation."

"There is no danger of raising much out of you, any how, Mr. Johnson," spitefully returned number one.

"Gentlemen, if you please"— beseechingly interposed the sage.

"I have not come here, Mr. Bulkley, to quarrel," said one.

"Who started this?" sarcastically answered Mr. Johnson.

"Not me, any way," number three replied.

"You don't say I did, do you?" says number one.

"Gentlemen—gentlemen!"

"Yes, Mr. Bulkley," says Johnson, "and there's old Winkles, too, and here's Deacon Potter also."

"I am here," stiffly replied the deacon, "and I am sorry the Reverend Mr. Bulkley finds me in such company, sir!"

"Now, gentlemen, brothers, if you please," said Mr. Bulkley, "this is ridiculous"—

"So I say," murmured Mr. Winkles.

"As far as you are concerned, it is ridiculous," said the deacon.

This brought Mr. Winkles up, standing.

"Sir!" he shouted, "sir!"

"But, my dear sirs"— beseechingly said the philosopher.

"Sir!" continued Winkles, "sir! I am too old a man,—too good a christian, Mr. Bulkley to allow a man, a mean despicable toad, like Deacon Potter"—

"Do you call me—me a despicable toad?" menacingly cried the deacon.

"Brethren," said Mr. Bulkley, "if I am to counsel in your difference, I must have no more of this unchristianlike bickering.

"I do not wish to bicker," said Johnson.

"Nor I don't want to, sir," said the deacon, "but when a man calls me a toad, a mean, despicable toad"—

"Well, well, never mind," said Mr. Bulkley; "you are all too much excited now; go home again, and wait patiently; on Sunday evening next I will have prepared and sent to you a written opinion of your case, with a full and free avowal of most wholesome advice for preserving your church from desolation and yourselves from despair." And the committee left to await his issue.

Now it chanced that Mr. Bulkley had a small farm, some distance from the town of Colchester, and found it necessary, the same day he wrote the opinion and advice to the brethren of the disaffected church, to drop a line to his farmer regarding the fixtures of said estate. Having written a long and of course elaborate "essay" to his brethren, he wound up the day's literary exertions with a dispatch to the farmer, and after a reverie to himself, he directs the two documents, and the next moment dispatches them. But, by a misdirection, sends each to its wrong destination.

On Saturday evening a full and anxious synod of the belligerent churchmen took place in their tabernacle, and punctually, as promised, came the dispatch from the Plato of the time and place—Rev. John Bulkley.

All was quiet and respectful attention. The Moderator took up the document and broke the seal open, and—a pause ensued, while dubious amazement seemed to spread over the features of the worthy president of the meeting.

"Well, Bro. Temple, how is it—what does Mr. Bulkley say?" and another pause followed.

"Will the Moderator please proceed?" said another voice.

The Moderator placed the paper on the table, took off his spectacles, wiped the glasses, then his lips—replaced his specs upon his nose, and with a very broad grin said:

"Brethren, this appears to me to be a very singular letter, to say the least of it!"

"Well, read it—read it," responded the wondering hearers.

"I will." The Moderator began:

"You will see to the repair of the fences, that they be built up high and strong, and you will take special care of the old black bull!"

There was a general pause; a silent mystery overspread the community; the Moderator dropped the paper to a "rest," and gazing over the top of his glasses for several minutes, nobody saying a word.

"Repair the fences!" muttered the Moderator, at length.

"Build them strong and high!" echoed Deacon Potter.

"Take special care of the old black bull!" growled half the meeting.

Then another pause ensued, and each man eyed his neighbor in mute mystery.

A tall and venerable man now arose from his seat; clearing his voice with a hem, he spoke:

"Brethren, you seem lost in the brief and eloquent words of your learned adviser. To me nothing could be more appropriate to our case. It is just such a profound and applicable reply to us as we should have hoped and looked for from the learned and good man, John Bulkley. The direction to repair the fences is to take heed in the admission and government of our members; we must guard the church by our Maker's laws, and keep out stray and vicious cattle from the fold! And, above all things, set a trustworthy and vigilant watch over that old black bull, who is the devil, and who has already broken into our enclosures and sought to desolate and lay waste the grounds of our church!"

The effect of this interpretation was electrical. All saw and took the force of Mr. Bulkley's cogent advice, and unanimously resolved to be governed by it; hence the old black bull was put hors de combat, and the church preserved in union!

The effect produced on the farmer by the communication intended for the church, history does not record.

☞ That man cannot be upright before God who is unjust in his dealings with men.

Hygiene.

"This is for your health."—Paul.

TALES ABOUT HEALTH.

BY DIO LEWIS, M. D.

ANOTHER WORD ABOUT DRESS.

He who would labor for the physical redemption of woman in America must begin with her dress. The prevailing modes constitute an insuperable obstacle to her physical development. Every humane physiologist has argued, expostulated, and implored. If American women should squeeze their feet until those members were in Chinese fashion, or should place a flat stone on the head until the brains were forced into the back of the neck, we might keep silent; but while they compress that part of the body which contains the organs of vitality—the heart, lungs, liver, and stomach—we must continue to resist their madness. In this part of the body is the fountain of life. The slightest pressure immediately reduces the size and activity of that fountain. He who has thoughtfully studied the inevitable results of the prevailing style of dress at the waist, will affect no surprise at those cold feet, that constipation, weak spine, short breath, palpitation of the heart, and congestive headache, which are the average characteristics of the health of American women. Give a live woman, a corset, the average tight dress, and the physiologist will deduce the morbid conditions I have named.

Near my institution in Boston are three shops—a rum-shop, a candy-shop, and a corset-shop. I do not know which is the greatest evil.

My practical suggestion is that, without corsets, the dress-waist should be full and loose; the skirt-bands buttoned about the waist much larger than the body, supported on the shoulders by suspenders, such as gentlemen wear, and attached to the bands at the same points. My own wife adopted many years ago the style I advise, and is greatly delighted with the results. The dress is more artistic and beautiful than the plain waist with the hard, ironlike ligature at the band. After twenty years' study of the subject of health, and the causes of disease, if I were permitted to select from our one hundred and one pysiological blunders that one which I should most desire to see corrected, I should unhesitatingly name this feature of female dress.

VENTILATION.

The evils resulting from breathing, night after night, an atmosphere becoming more and more vitiated as the morning approaches, probably equal, if they do not exceed, those resulting from the intemperate use of spirituous liquors. Indeed, it is questionable whether a craving for stimulants has not been occasionally created by this abominable yet prevalent custom of keeping the windows of a sleeping apartment either entirely closed or opened but a "crack." They should be widely opened every night throughout the year, unless the weather is intensely cold, or the wind unusually violent, or some other valid reason exists for mitigating the draught.

Were this practice universally adopted, a surprising reduction would be quickly manifested in the frequency of morning headache and nausea, dyspepsia, chronic catarrh, croup, diphtheria, influenza, measles, scrofula, consumption, scarlet fever, smallpox, typhus fever, felon, whitlow, erysipelas, and many other disorders, which are more often induced by an infected atmosphere than any other cause.

In recommending a draught I am not advocating a whirlwind or a hurricane, but merely such a current of air as will supply the lungs during each night with from eight to ten thousand installments of pure, fresh, free oxygen, in a quantity fully equal to any possible demand of the human system. Stagnant air cannot supply this want, neither can air that is in motion, if it be not perceptibly so; nothing less than a draught, moderate but decided, and continuing throughout the night, can meet in every respect the requirements of health.

Of the many and remarkable advantages of sleeping in the open air, or what may be regarded as the same thing, I can speak from thirteen years' experience. Commencing the practice rather abruptly in the winter of 1850, and without suffering any serious inconvenience from the initial trial, I became in a few weeks nearly as invulnerable to the assaults of a freezing cold blast as a salamander to fire. From that time to the present I have not once suffered from any pulmonary affection, and, except in very rare instances, have been utterly exempt from any illness that could be traced to a night-draught exposure. In short, a practice which . . . I have rigidly observed for a series of years, as one of the most important of all the means that I have hitherto adopted for indefinitely promoting health, strength, and development.

The following are a few of the many examples that might be cited to show how horrible may be the effects of a vitiated atmosphire:

In the year 1756, during a rebellion in India, one hundred and forty-six persons, chiefly English, Dutch, and Portugese soldiers, were imprisoned by the natives in the Black Hole of Calcutta, which was nothing more or less than an apartment eighteen feet square and about sixteen feet high, and furnished with two grated openings on one side for the admission of light and air. During a confinement of twelve hours, one hundred and twenty-three perished, and the remainder were subsequently attacked with "putrid fever," which proved fatal in most of the cases.

In the year 1797 or '98, during a storm at sea, seventy men, women, and children, were kept for a short time in the hold of a small vessel, the hatches of which had not only been "laid over," but, for better security, "battened down." The death of the entire number was the result.

In December, 1848, also during a storm, one hundred and fifty passengers were inclosed in the same hermetical manner, in the steerage cabin of the steamer "Londonderry," while on its passage from Liverpool to New York. Soon half the number perished from suffocation; and it is very probable that the rest would have speedily met with a similar fate, had it not been for the strength of one man, who succeeded in bursting open the door of the narrow companion-way, although the captain of the steamer had taken especial pains to prevent such an occurrence.

The following are a few examples to illustrate the importance of a thorough system of ventilation, in cases where little if any complaint had been made of inattention to this hygienic measure:

There was once in Glasgow an assemblage of buildings attached to a factory, which were occupied by about five hundred persons—one family to each room. For a long period an immense deal of sickness had pervaded the buildings, which the inmates seemed to regard as a mysterious dispensation of Providence, for they absolutely refused to adopt such sanitary expedients as had been repeatedly advised them. At length the proprietors of the establishment, despairing of ever making the inmates appreciate the importance of occasionally opening windows, resolved to apply a system of ventilation which should be thorough, continual, and utterly beyond the control of those subjected to it. They accordingly connected each room, by means of tubes, with the chimney of the factory furnace, and compelled every occupant, whether willing or unwilling, to be exposed daily and nightly to a draught of air. The result was, that sickness of every kind rapidly diminished, and one disease, typhus fever, which had frequently raged as an epidemic, became so light years "scarcely known to the place."

In 1842, at Norwood School, in England, scrofula made its appearance among a hundred children, and destroyed a great number of them. The disorder having been attributed to an insufficiency and bad quality of food, a scientific investigation was made, and a decision given that the food was most abundant and good—that "defective ventilation and consequent atmospheric impurity" was the cause of the sickness. A thorough system of ventilation was immediately applied, and scrofula rapidly disappeared, nor did it ever recur, though the number of pupils was gradually increased to eleven hundred.

In a hospital at Dublin, 2,944 deaths took place in four years. A better system of ventilation having been resorted to as a means of lessening the mortality, it was found that during the next four years the number of deaths was only 279.

The above facts are merely selected from a long array of a similar character, which tend to show the paramount importance of breathing an uncorrupted atmosphere. It is certainly no exaggeration to say, that were the public as particular as they should be, and easily might be, about the quality of that subtile fluid which enters and departs from an average pair of human lungs about a thousand times an hour, and nearly nine million times in a year, the bills of human mortality would be reduced one-third at least, and the average duration of human life be nearer seventy than forty.—Herald of Progress.

DURATION OF LIFE.

With the inheritance of a good constitution, and with a rational mode of life from first to last, undoubtedly the human race would reach the age of one hundred years or upwards, in health and cheerfulness. The natural life of man appears to be four times as long as the period of growth, or in other words, growth occupies one quarter of the natural life. The human race, in general, reach maturity in twenty-five years, taking males and females together—males at the age of twenty-eight, females at twenty-two. Bad constitutions come to maturity sooner than that, and remarkably good ones later. Persons who live to the age of one hundred years and upwards, without attention to the rules of health, were no doubt more than thirty years in growing. The same proportion of life to growth undoubtedly prevails in all animals and vegetables, from the enduring elephant to the transient butterfly, and from a spear of grass to the big trees of California, which are known to have grown thousands of years, but whose ages are unknown. By a great many persons, health is ignorantly and carelessly destroyed. Almost every one commits slow suicide. Life is shortened at the rate of about twenty-five years. Those who die at seventy-five might have lived twenty-five years longer.

In the first place, the constitution depends on that of the parents. In the next place, injury to health begins before birth. Whatever injures the mother, has the same effects on her unborn child, as errors in diet, hard work, deficient exercise, care, anxiety, and ungoverned passions, etc. It is obvious that great prudence on the part of the prospective mother is doubly important.

After birth, the greatest cause of disease and a short life, especially in this country, is wrong eating, which includes three faults; namely, too much food, unwholesome cooking, and an unwholesome way of eating after it is cooked. It is doubtful which of the three faults does most harm.

Only a little too much food, or that which is irrationally eaten, deranges the digestion of the meal, which makes itself known by unpleasant feelings. Overloading the stomach is begun in infancy. Too much food checks the growth of the body, and lays the foundation of nearly all diseases. Partly from this cause a great part of the young men are slender and round shouldered. A rational abstemiousness preserves health, cheerfulness, and life, to a great age. "Eating to live," makes living to eat, as temperance is pleasure. In old age the stomach loses in a great measure its power of digestion, and the food should be lessened accordingly. Ardent spirits, by calling forth all the powers of digestion, wear out the stomach, and unfit it for food. Paregoric, from the opium it contains, when given freely to infants to quiet them, dwarfs the body and mind, and destroys the health.—Investigator.

COOKING APPLES.—One of the most notable housewives and best cooks in the State, has a new way of cooking apples—at least it was new to me, and will, no doubt, be new to many others. She pares the apples and quarters them, placing them in a tin plate with the core side up; if dried apples, a little water is added; they are then set in the oven and roasted. When done, they are set on a common plate and sprinkled with sugar, to be eaten with bread and butter and cake. It would require canned fruit of extra flavor to tempt me from the apple dish, if thus prepared. Apples cooked in this way are very nutritious and healthy.—Rural Amer.

SMOKING.—All the evils of smoking are functional in character, and no confirmed smoker can ever be said, so long as he indulges in the habit, to be well.

The World's Crisis

AND SECOND ADVENT MESSENGER.

TERMS:

A single copy, one year........ [illegible]
A single copy, six months........ [illegible]
A single copy, three months........ [illegible]
5 copies, six months, when sent to one address........ [illegible]
10 copies, six months, when sent to one address........ [illegible]
20 copies, six months, when sent to one address........ [illegible]
30 copies, six months, when sent to one address........ [illegible]

PAYABLE IN ADVANCE.

These terms, allowing a subscription of 50 cents for three months, place the paper within reach of all who are able to pay any thing. The reduction in price, where five or more papers are sent to one address, enables subscribers, by combining, to receive a large number at reduced rates; thus supplying the poor in their neighborhood.

We propose that those who have ability, while sending their own subscriptions, also send what they are willing to give to aid in circulating the Crisis among the poor who we have always with us.

POSTAGE.—The postage, in the United States, on each single copy of the Crisis, is 20 cents a year, payable quarterly, in advance, at the office of delivery.

RULES FOR CORRESPONDENTS.—Over all matters not intended for publication, write PRIVATE.

Over all business matters, write BUSINESS.

Over all articles for the paper, write FOR THE CRISIS.

All articles should be accompanied by the writer's name, for the Editor's information, even if it is not published.

When the names of new subscribers are sent, please say they are new, and it will save us much labor.

PRIVATE LETTERS.—Those wishing to address the Editor on matters not connected with the office, will please write the word PRIVATE on the outside of the envelope.

Please put the business matters and appointments on a piece of paper separate from other communications.

All persons writing to the office should give DISTINCTLY and PLAINLY the Post Office, County and State where they wish to be addressed; and all orders, business communications and remittances, should be plainly directed to MILES GRANT, BOSTON, MASS.

PUBLISHED, ALSO AT THE SAME OFFICE,

THE YOUNG PILGRIM,

A NEW ILLUSTRATED SUNDAY SCHOOL PAPER,

DEVOTED TO

The Interests of our Children and Youth.

TERMS:

For a single copy, 25 cents a year; and at the same rate for any number of copies under ten.

10 copies, when sent to one address........ [illegible]
20 copies, when sent to one address........ [illegible]
30 copies, when sent to one address........ [illegible]
50 copies, when sent to one address........ [illegible]
100 copies, when sent to one address........ [illegible]

PAYABLE ALWAYS IN ADVANCE.

POSTAGE.—(12 cents a year, for every single copy, and the same for every 10 copies or less to one address) to be paid quarterly in advance, at the office where the paper is received.

All communications and remittances must be addressed to THE YOUNG PILGRIM, Chardon Street, Boston, Mass.

For the World's Crisis.

Blessed Bible, the mirror of heaven so dear,
Perfected by charming reflections appear;
While binding the mind and entrancing the heart,
It doth in its beauty its glory impart.

Precious Bible, God's own—yes, and our own too,
Ever flashing its pages with truths always new;
It unflinching leads to the joys it portrays,
And shows how to live for eternity's days.

Sweet Bible, a river of life to us now,
Whence the waters of grace in their heavenly flow,
Full of mercy and truth, so happily tend
Towards the land where these waters in glory shall end.

That bright land of glory, the land of the blest,
Where believers shall triumph in glorious rest;
Where the ransomed returned with holiness shine,
And all things made new, make all things divine.

The Lord's day of glory, the great jubilee,
When the "mansions" prepared by the Savior we see;
When from heaven descends the new city of peace,
When loud is proclaimed the sweet year of release!

But some are not running the heavenly race,
Are leaving unvalued the treasures of grace;
Immortality offered, seek not to obtain,
Thus, Messiah neglected, existence is vain.

Alas! when with Time, Time's comforts are past,
The future, thus chosen, forever lies waste;
Earthliness purchased, uncounted the cost;
Selfhood possessed,—thus existence is lost!

The summons is ready for you and for me,
"The King in his beauty" ere long we shall see;
See him with full pleasure, and not with dread pain,
If, through grace all abounding, his life we obtain.

Philadelphia. CHAS. GREENE.

For the World's Crisis.

WINTER EVENINGS AT HOME.

"The light of Home! how bright it beams
When evening shades around us fall;
And from the lattice far it gleams,
To love and rest and comfort call;
When tired with the toils of day,
The strife of glory, gold and fame,
How sweet to seek the quiet way,
Where loving lips will lisp our name
Around the light at Home."

Friends, how do you spend the long winter evenings? In wisdom's ways? in reading, meditating, treasuring up useful knowledge, scientific, historical, scriptural? We may calculate on three hours at least, between the closing of out-door work till early bedtime. How shall we spend these three precious hours? in what way? where shall we go? what shall we do? The bright fire in the fireplace, grate, open stove, gives an air of cheerfulness and comfort to the family sitting-room. Are you fatigued with the labors of the day? Is not this the place of all others to rest weary limbs or brain? Do the cares of business press heavily upon you? Where may you throw them off if not here? where seek sympathy and counsel? Would you find relaxation and improvement at the same time, in familiar conversation? What is more charming or more improving, to mind or heart, than the right kind of home-talk?

"Of all the spots that Heaven has blest,
The dearest place is home;
'Tis there the fond heart loves to rest,
And never loves to roam;
Whilst love plays round the smiling hearth,
'Tis Heaven's own bliss enjoyed on earth."

If you need rest and relaxation, take it, by all means, in the quiet of your own homes; but with most of our readers, especially in the country, these long evenings should be seasons of intellectual, social, and moral activity. We have not been accustomed to put sufficient value upon home as a school, or to avail ourselves of half of its privileges. The work of education, in both the young and the old (for who is too old to learn?) should now be going on.

The lamp burns brightly on the work-stand near the fire. Mother and the girls are busy with their knitting or sewing. What shall father and the boys do? read to them? What? Have you a choice library? Have you Baxter's Works, Hall's, Taylor's, Bunyan's, Wesley's, Fletcher's, Fullers's, Doddridge's? Among the more recent productions, have you Finney's Revival Sermons? his works on Theology in one volume, octavo? President Mahan's "True Believer?" his "Moral and Intellectual Philosophy?" the Works of Wm. Goodell? the precious volumes of Madame Guyon? Nelson on Infidelity? "The Tongue of Fire?" The soul should be first—"seek first the kingdom of God and his righteousness, and all other things will be added."

How with your periodical reading, your weeklies and monthlies? have you selected the precious from the vile? Beware of the literary serpents. Never, never allow them to cross your threshold; never waste your energies on the merely imaginative or fictitious—read none but good books and papers—such as improve the mind and the heart.

The little folks may occupy a little space at their lessons, in geography, history, botany, geology, agriculture; in arithmetic, grammar, the use of the globes; in pleasant, cheerful, edifying conversation. But the Bible, the blessed Bible—let this be the first, midst, last, always. To wind up the family scene, a chapter in the Bible, a song of praise, and a season of prayer.

This is a hint toward what we mean by the "home school" and "home education." Is there any thing repugnant in it? Would not the whole family soon learn to enjoy and profit by such exercises?

Is not home, after all, the pleasantest, happiest, best place on earth? If it is not, where lies the fault? Have you not something to do with the matter? Set yourselves at once, dear friends, about the work of making it so. Be you father or mother, son or daughter, brother or sister, you are responsible, in greater or less degree, for the character and influence of home.

"Summer is gone, the fair young flowers
Have faded in their bloom,
And the music of the fairy bowers
Is hushed 'mid winter's gloom.
Our summer life hath its winter too,
And 'mid its waning bloom
We wait that Spring, whose fadeless hue
E'er glows beyond the tomb."

But however pleasant home may be, one does not wish to remain always there. Our sympathies and wants extend beyond its beautiful and sacred, but narrow circle. Multitudes like to spend their evenings abroad. Where shall we go? Shall we visit the ball-room? the theatre, the opera, the gay party, the fashionable concert, the haunts of dissipation, the frolic and the dance?

"On with the dance. Let joy be unconfined;
No sleep till morn, when youth and pleasure meet
To chase the glowing hours with flying feet."

Who that values time, and considers the worth of the soul, can trifle thus?

The character of many young men and women is decided for life by the way in which they spend their evenings when growing up to manhood and womanhood. Some young ladies think only of amusement, and contrive from week to week how they may secure a larger variety of pleasures, and bring them to a keener zest. Some young men find the monotony of home life dull and repulsive, and resort to the streets for companions, and to the drinking saloon and the theater for pleasure. The first class generally grow up to lead frivolous lives, and the latter to a career of vice and shame."

But where shall we go? Go to the lyceum, the lecture room, the sanctuary—the house of prayer and praise. Go where you can walk with an unsullied conscience, where you can be benefitted, soul and body, mind and spirit. Go to places where you are not ashamed to take your wife, your sisters, your little ones.

"Speak not of the mirth of the giddy crowd,
In the halls of revelry found,
For their reckless joke and laughter loud,
Compare not with joys so sound.
Oh, give me the pious and happy home,
Where the bond that unites is Love,
Where the will of the Holy One is done,
And His blessing sought from above!"

How many precious hours are squandered by young persons at gay parties, soirees, depots, saloons, beer shops, shoe shops, and other places of public resort, in senseless gabble, idle, frothy chit-chat, or something worse, which time might be profitably employed at home, in reading good books and papers, the study of history, philosophy, geography, or chemistry, or in attending useful lectures, the house of God, or meetings for prayer and praise! "But ye have set at nought all my counsel, and would none of my reproof. I also will laugh at your calamity, I will mock when your fear cometh." "Rejoice, O young man, in thy youth, and walk in the ways of thine heart, and in the sight of thine eyes: but know thou, that for all these things God will bring thee into judgment." "For God shall bring every work into judgment, with every secret thing, whether it be good or whether it be evil."

"I would not waste my spring of youth
In idle dalliance; I would plant rich seeds,
To blossom in my manhood, and bear fruit
When I am old."

Author of "Home Thrusts."

For the World's Crisis.

GREAT MISTAKES.

There are many great mistakes, but I shall now speak of only a few which are very common. I do it in hope that it may lead to some reforms.

It is a great mistake for sinners to think they do not need pardon from God.

It is a great mistake for a pardoned sinner to think he will be saved without obedience to Christ after conversion.

It is a great mistake for a christian to think himself better than his brethren.

It is a great mistake for the church to think their minister can do their part of the worship of God, and they be blessed.

It is a great mistake for a minister to think the people cannot prosper without him.

It is a great mistake for a church to think they cannot worship God when their minister is absent.

It is a great mistake for a minister to think God cannot work reformation by small means.

It is a great mistake for a church to think they cannot be fed and souls converted by the faithful, humble minister, who is not styled a great preacher.

It is a great mistake to give all the church is able to raise, to foreign ministers, and suffer those among them to preach without support, and earn their own living, and get no time to study.

It is a great mistake for a church to think they must have the best and most able minister, and give no encouragement to new beginners.

It is a great mistake for a minister to think his labors are worth so much more than his flock, that he withholds them when they are not able to pay.

It is a great mistake for a minister to think his children must go through the high schools and colleges on the money earned by the children of his church, who are not able to get as good an education.

It is a great mistake for a minister to think his sermons too precious to be preached to a small congregation.

I have probably said enough on great mistakes for one chapter. If any one thinks I have hit him in any of these remarks, I hope the Lord will aid him in reforming, and I will try to avoid mistakes myself.

I. C. WELLCOME.

For the World's Crisis

THE FRIENDS THAT I LOVED.

Who are they? They are the friends of Jesus. Jesus says, "Ye are my friends if ye do whatsoever I command you." From this we learn that the only way we can possibly be the friends of Jesus is by doing whatever he commands us to do. Doing, then, secures his friendship, love, approving smiles, and the great "recompense of reward" promised at the resurrection of the just. By being loyal to Jesus in all things, we become reconciled to God. Hence, God and Christ love us freely. Our sins are all washed away, and we are made the sons and daughters of the Lord Almighty; consequently heirs of the manifold grace of God. As a seal of our citizenship in the household of God, the Holy Spirit or Comforter is shed upon and abides with each member of the family amidst all the trials and conflicts of this probationary state.

Now these friends follow Jesus through night's darkest hours; when he bears witness to the truth, they imitate his example by doing so. When he bears the reproach of a heartless world and a proud and Pharisaical church, they meekly bow their necks to the yoke, and say, Father, not my will, but thine be done. When he is rendered unpopular and obnoxious in the eyes of a selfish, unsanctified, and sectarian rabble, they sympathize, and say, We will not leave thee nor forsake thee, choosing, as Moses did, rather to suffer affliction with the people of God than to enjoy the pleasures of sin for a season; esteeming the reproach of Christ greater riches than the treasures of Egypt; "for he had respect unto the recompense of reward."

Such friends Jesus loves, and blessed be his dear name, so do I. They are the elect of the Lord, chosen out from the world to be his special treasure. They are Christ's friends, upon the eternal principles of righteousness as revealed in God's word. I desire to make such my chosen friends, my especial and affectionate companions. I cannot love and esteem such too highly; they are choice jewels; they love God, Christ, truth, righteousness a thousand times more than popularity, a good name or any thing else that the world calls good or great. Let me live and die, or meet my Lord with such ardent friends of the dear Jesus.

But friends who are so through mercenary motives, I care not to cherish; they are only friends in fair weather. Where self-interest, popularity, pride of opinion, or speech of people are at stake, they coldly turn away and by their actions, which speak louder than words, say, we do not wish to recognize you under such and such circumstances. It will be somewhat mortifying under these peculiar events of Providence to take particular notice of you.

Oh! how many such hangers on there are in these days, professing to love Jesus and take an interest in the proclamation of the soon coming Lord, fondly hoping they are the especial friends of Jesus and will be saved ultimately. What a delusive hope! You cannot serve the world and Christ. You cannot be the friends of Jesus and of the world at the same time. You cannot follow the Spirit of a popular christianity and the Spirit of Jesus too. No, never; therefore let me exhort such to either renounce what little interest you now have, or come out fully and show yourself to be a whole-souled christian inside and out, a real, tried friend of Jesus, one that will not be ashamed of the truth, or of those that are the chosen of the Lord, and are striving with all their energies to be perfect, ever seeking the mind of Christ.

The cause of our soon coming Savior is greatly reproached and hindered by the inconsistent actions of some of its adherents, while they believe one thing, they will, by their actions, preach another exactly the opposite. They say but do not.

While I fully believe my dear Lord is coming very soon to judge the world, should I be doing his will by paying out my means to support those ministers who are saying, "My Lord delayeth his coming," and who seek in all their efforts to render that truth unpopular, and at the same time neglect to support those ministers who are giving meat in due season, and who, I know, have the cause of God at heart, interwoven in all their course of action? While I believe the doctrine of immortal-soulism is doing vastly more to overthrow the Bible and the religion of Jesus in these days than all the Tom. Paines and infidels put together; while I believe the dead are unconscious and go (not to heaven or hell at death, but) to the grave, should I be a friend of Jesus while I went and employed ministers to preach my deceased friends off to heaven at death, not even mentioning the resurrection of the dead; when at the same time there are able and acceptable ministers within call, who are able to preach the truth on such occasions? Let the real friends of Jesus judge. I will never thus betray my Lord and Master by such palpable contradictions in faith and justice. Yours in faith,

A. N. SEYMOUR.

For the World's Crisis.

BASIL.

EXTRACTS FROM THE DISCOURSES OF BASIL, ARCHBISHOP OF CÆSAREA.

Preached about the Fourth Century.

"It is necessary for the perfection of a christian life, that we should imitate Christ; not only such holy actions and dispositions, as lenity, modesty, and patience, which he exemplified in his life, but also his death, as Paul saith, "I am a follower of Christ, I am conformable to his death, if by any means I might attain unto the resurrection of the dead."

How can we be placed in a condition of likeness to his death? By being "buried with him in baptism." What is the form of this burial, and what benefits flow from an imitation of it? First, the course of the former life is stopped. No man can do this, unless he be born again, as the Lord hath said.

Regeneration, as the word itself imports, is the beginning of a new life; therefore, he that begins a new life must put an end to his former life. Such a person resembles a man got to the end of a race, who, before he sets off again, turns about, pauses, and rests a little; so in a change of life it seems necessary that a sort of death should intervene, putting a period to the past, and giving a beginning to the future. How are we to go down with him into the grave? By imitating the burial of Christ in baptism; for the bodies of saints are, in a sense, buried in water. For this reason the apostle speaks figuratively of baptism, as a laying aside the works of the flesh; ye are circumcised with the circumcision made without hands, in putting off the body of the sins of the flesh by the circumcision of Christ, buried with him in baptism.

Two things are proposed in baptism; to put an end to a life of sin, lest it should issue an eternal death; and to animate the soul to a life of future sanctification. The water exhibits an image of death, receiving the body as into a sepulchre; the Spirit renews the soul, and we rise from a death of sin into a newness of life. This is to be born from above, of water and the Spirit, as if by the water we were put to death, and by the operation of the Spirit brought to life.

If there be any benefit in the water, it is not from the water, but from the presence of the Spirit; for baptism doth not save us by putting away the filth of the flesh, but by the answer of a good conscience toward God.—Benedict's History, Baptist. Vol. 1., pp. 68, 69.

Bethel, Vt. GEO. U. LEWIS.

For the World's Crisis.

A FEW WORDS TO THE MEMBERSHIP OF THE KINGDOM OF GOD.

Being also one of those who are in a strange land, into which we are cast on account of our waywardness from God; being also one of those who are longing for the time of deliverance from under a strange yoke, and for the time of gracious visitation from the countenance of the great God; I find myself moved to express to my fellow bearers and endurers of the same fate some thoughts concerning our present situation.

As the people of the Most High, destined to be the place of his abode and the throne of his glory, we lie in darkness and scattered. Hell has opened its mouth wide and threatens to devour us. The Lord and Savior Jesus Christ, the mighty Benefactor, has in times past had compassion upon us. He took his stand between us and our near eternal ruin, and spoke in godly power: You hell and ye satans, you shall not destroy entirely this my humanity! You shall not annul my primitive plan with my creation! He tendered his mighty hand to help us; we promised on our part to follow him willingly. He made a covenant of delivery with us, in which he pledged himself to deliver us out of our scattering, out of servitude, and out of all misery and all tribulation, upon our promise to live solely for him, if it needs be to suffer for him (i. e., for the cause he suffered), and if required, to die for him.

Now we, finding ourselves in one and the same unhappy situation, bear the blame ourselves, that we have not yet overcome, but are yet overcome. The Lord is righteous and holy, and also true. On account of our disobedience and stubbornness we have incurred the judgment of God so nearly, that death is right before us. Let us cry to the Lord, who wills not our death, but only our life, that he would let mercy go before justice, and that he would remember his covenant; that he would give us yet room to repent, that we may be obedient to his word and pay to him our vows; that he would not take us away in his fury with those who call not upon his name nor desire any pardon; that he would spare his people; that his covenant of grace might not cease among the children of men; that at least the little ones, who are comparatively innocent, but would also suffer under our burdens, might live to see the refreshing solemnly promised to them. And if the Lord give to us favor in his sight again, and we be permitted to stand upright, that he would direct our steps so that his cause may be advanced; and if we should be overpowered, as was our Lord Jesus, that our death may only confirm his work of grace and justice.

Fellow endurers, only upon this course there is yet hope; and that we might resolve upon taking now the decided stand for the Lord's government, he has entrusted unto us his further designs, what he intends doing for his obedient ones in sight of all the world. When he sends his mighty sword through the land to avenge the great iniquity of its inhabitants, then those in his favor shall not be touched by it. See the records of the rights and doings of the Almighty, Ps: 91; Ezek. 9; Ex. 12; Mal. 3: 4; Zach. 10: 12; Isa. 54: 44; and Revelation throughout.

Beaver, O. FR. KIRS.

For the World's Crisis.

"SING TO ME."

(Re-published by request.)

Sing to me, for I am weary,
While my vision dimly scans
Future scenes, whose shadows dreary
Pain my heart and chill my hands.
Let it be a song of pity,
Angel music, soft and low,
And its breath of love so near me,
It may sweep my throbbing brow.

Sing a dirge, for earth bemoaning
Her bright gems grown dim and rare;
Trees of righteousness once blooming
Stretch their branches cold and bare.
There is no redeeming feature
Marks this mercy-deluged age;
Prayers and Bibles sink her deeper,
While she writes her darkest page.

Jesus, save! the hour of trouble
Circles round the "little flock";
Earthly peace is but a bubble,
Broken with the lightest shock.
Sacred bonds are lightly broken,
Perjured priests at every post,
Trust betrayed, no hopeful token
Lingers round this bankrupt host.

Sing to me! the vision brightens,
O'er the wave's a starry shore;
One glad smile that land enlightens,
Where the gathered weep no more.
Far beyond this night of sadness,
Far beyond the day of doom,
Man shall walk in native gladness,
Earth shall smile in Eden bloom.

Charlemont, Mass. VESTA N. CUDWORTH.

For the World's Crisis.

NOVEL THEORY.

BRO. GRANT:—It may not be uninteresting to you, and the readers of the Crisis, to be made acquainted with a novel theory concerning the "spirits of the dead."

While on my journey to this place, I called on a friend to rest awhile, and was invited to tarry for the night and have a meeting; to which I agreed; and although the neighborhood was sparsely settled, we had a goodly number together in the evening,—considering so short a notice,—to whom I spoke the word of life.

After meeting, I entered into conversation with an intelligent looking man, who inquired of me what I thought of the stars; at first, I did not fully comprehend his question, and so gave him no definite answer. He then remarked:

"The Scriptures speak of stars in glory."

"O yes," said I; "Paul says one star differeth from another star in glory," etc.

"Well," said he, "I will tell you what I think of them. I have observed that there appear to be more stars in the heavens than formerly, and think that whenever a saint dies he becomes a star."

Now this may seem too absurd to be believed by anybody, but the absurdity of the conclusion arises from the absurdity of the premises; and while such absurd premises are maintained, though those who hold the premises may differ in their conclusions, their conclusions must be erroneous.

Let men believe that man is a unit, and when dead will remain dead till the resurrection, and they will no longer be troubled with the dreamy notions of conscious entities in death, either in the form of angels, stars, or any thing else. W. H. MITCHELL.

Conway, N. H.

EFFECTS OF ONE GLASS.

On passing through one of the wards of the —— Prison, I accosted an elderly looking convict. He held down his head as though ashamed to look me in the face. On handing him a tract, he said, "I knew your voice as soon as I heard you, sir; I have heard you before to-day, sir."

After a few words of explanation, I found that we had been at one time members of the same congregation, and sat under the same faithful ministry. I anxiously inquired how it was that he had fallen so low as to become an inmate of a prison.

"A glass of ale, sir, was my ruin," he replied.

"How could that be?" I asked.

"I was at one period of my life, sir, very intemperate, but was happily led to give up drinking entirely, although I did not sign any pledge, which I now lament. I became a regular attendant at a place of worship, and joined the congregation. I went on very happily for some years, until one evening I was returning from ——, when I met with some friends from Hull. They prevailed upon me to go to the public house to have but 'one glass.' Conscience reproved me, but having entered upon the enchanted ground, I was readily induced to take more liquor, until I became overcome by it. The next morning I was ashamed to show myself, and left —— for Leeds. My old appetite for drink had been rekindled. I became reckless and joined a set of counterfeit coiners. We were discovered, convicted, and now I am to be transported. Oh! that I had never touched that ONE GLASS!"—Band of Hope Review.

☞ Instead of thinking that religion is a kind of secret indulgence, to be snatched by stealth from the ordinary affairs of life, make a study of spreading religion over all your daily path, and then you will realize the habit of walking before God all the day long—of doing all things to his glory.

THE OLD BLACK BULL.

QUARRELSOME CHURCHES will please read the following story, and profit by the moral. Who will do it? S. T. S.

Old John Bulkley, (grandson of the once famous President Chauncey), was a minister of the gospel, and one of the best educated men of his day in the wooden nutmeg State, when the immortal (or ought to be) Jonathan Trumbull was "round," and in his youth.

Mr. Bulkley was the first settled minister in the town of his adoption, Colchester, Ct. It was with him, as afterward with good old Bro. Jonathan, (Governor Trumbull, the bosom friend of General Washington), good to confer on almost any matter, scientific, political, or religious—any subject, in short, wherein common sense and general good to all concerned was the issue. As a philosophical reasoner, casuist, and good counsellor, he was "looked to," and abided by.

It so fell out that a congregation in Mr. Bulkley's vicinity got to loggerheads, and were upon the apex of raising "the evil one" instead of a spire to their church, as they proposed and split upon. The very nearest they could come to a mutual cessation of hostilities was to appoint a committee of three to wait on Mr. Bulkley, state their case, and get him to adjudicate. They waited on the old gentleman, and he listened with great attention to their conflicting grievances.

"It appears to me," said the old gentleman, "that this is a very simple case—a trifling thing to cause you so much vexation."

"So I say," says one of the committee.

"I don't call it a trifling case, Mr. Bulkley, said another.

"No case at all," responded the third.

"It ain't, eh?" fiercely answered the first speaker.

"No, it ain't, sir!" quite as savagely replied the third.

"It is any thing but a trifling case, anyhow," echoed number two, "to expect to raise the minister's salary and that new steeple, too, out of our small congregation."

"There is no danger of raising much out of you, any how, Mr. Johnson," spitefully returned number one.

"Gentlemen, if you please"— beseechingly interposed the sage.

"I have not come here, Mr. Bulkley, to quarrel," said one.

"Who started this?" sarcastically answered Mr. Johnson.

"Not me, any way," number three replied.

"You don't say I did, do you?" says number one.

"Gentlemen—gentlemen!"

"Yes, Mr. Bulkley," says Johnson, "and there's old Winkles, too, and here's Deacon Potter also."

"I am here," stiffly replied the deacon, "and I am sorry the Reverend Mr. Bulkley finds me in such company, sir!"

"Now, gentlemen, brothers, if you please," said Mr. Bulkley, "this is ridiculous"—

"So I say," murmured Mr. Winkles.

"As far as you are concerned, it is ridiculous," said the deacon.

This brought Mr. Winkles up, standing.

"Sir!" he shouted, "sir!"

"But, my dear sirs"— beseechingly said the philosopher.

"Sir!" continued Winkles, "sir! I am too old a man,—too good a christian, Mr. Bulkley to allow a man, a mean despicable toad, like Deacon Potter"—

"Do you call me—me a despicable toad?" menacingly cried the deacon.

"Brethren," said Mr. Bulkley, "if I am to counsel in your difference, I must have no more of this unchristianlike bickering.

"I do not wish to bicker," said Johnson.

"Nor I don't want to, sir," said the deacon, "but when a man calls me a toad, a mean, despicable toad"—

"Well, well, never mind," said Mr. Bulkley; "you are all too much excited now; go home again, and wait patiently; on Sunday evening next I will have prepared and sent to you a written opinion of your case, with a full and free avowal of most wholesome advice for preserving your church from desolation and yourselves from despair." And the committee left to await his issue.

Now it chanced that Mr. Bulkley had a small farm, some distance from the town of Colchester, and found it necessary, the same day he wrote the opinion and advice to the brethren of the disaffected church, to drop a line to his farmer regarding the fixtures of said estate. Having written a long and of course elaborate "essay" to his brethren, he wound up the day's literary exertions with a dispatch to the farmer, and after a reverie to himself, he directs the two documents, and the next moment dispatches them. But, by a misdirection, sends each to its wrong destination.

On Saturday evening a full and anxious synod of the belligerent churchmen took place in their tabernacle, and punctually, as promised, came the dispatch from the Plato of the time and place—Rev. John Bulkley.

All was quiet and respectful attention. The Moderator took up the document and broke the seal open, and—a pause ensued, while dubious amazement seemed to spread over the features of the worthy president of the meeting.

"Well, Bro. Temple, how is it—what does Mr. Bulkley say?" and another pause followed.

"Will the Moderator please proceed?" said another voice.

The Moderator placed the paper on the table, took off his spectacles, wiped the glasses, then his lips—replaced his specs upon his nose, and with a very broad grin said:

"Brethren, this appears to me to be a very singular letter, to say the least of it!"

"Well, read it—read it," responded the wondering hearers.

"I will." The Moderator began:

"You will see to the repair of the fences, that they be built up high and strong, and you will take special care of the old black bull!"

There was a general pause; a silent mystery overspread the community; the Moderator dropped the paper to a "rest," and gazing over the top of his glasses for several minutes, nobody saying a word.

"Repair the fences!" muttered the Moderator, at length.

"Build them strong and high!" echoed Deacon Potter.

"Take special care of the old black bull!" growled half the meeting.

Then another pause ensued, and each man eyed his neighbor in mute mystery.

A tall and venerable man now arose from his seat; clearing his voice with a hem, he spoke:

"Brethren, you seem lost in the brief and eloquent words of your learned adviser. To me nothing could be more appropriate to our case. It is just such a profound and applicable reply to us as we should have hoped and looked for from the learned and good man, John Bulkley. The direction to repair the fences is to take heed in the admission and government of our members; we must guard the church by our Maker's laws, and keep out stray and vicious cattle from the fold! And, above all things, set a trustworthy and vigilant watch over that old black bull, who is the devil, and who has already broken into our enclosures and sought to desolate and lay waste the grounds of our church!"

The effect of this interpretation was electrical. All saw and took the force of Mr. Bulkley's cogent advice, and unanimously resolved to be governed by it; hence the old black bull was put hors de combat, and the church preserved in union!

The effect produced on the farmer by the communication intended for the church, history does not record.

☞ That man cannot be upright before God who is unjust in his dealings with men.

Hygienic.

"This is the way, walk ye therein."

TALKS ABOUT HEALTH.

BY DIO LEWIS, M. D.

ANOTHER WORD ABOUT DRESS.

He who would labor for the physical redemption of woman in America must begin with her dress. The prevailing modes constitute an insuperable obstacle to her physical development. Every humane physiologist has argued, expostulated, and implored. If American women should squeeze their feet until those members were in Chinese fashion, or should place a flat stone on the head until the brains were forced into the back of the neck, we might keep silent; but while they compress that part of the body which contains the organs of vitality—the heart, lungs, liver, and stomach—we must continue to resist their madness. In this part of the body is the fountain of life. The slightest pressure immediately reduces the size and activity of that fountain. He who has thoughtfully studied the inevitable results of the prevailing style of dress at the waist, will affect no surprise at those cold feet, that constipation, weak spine, short breath, palpitation of the heart, and congestive headache, which are the average characteristics of the health of American women. Give a live woman, a corset, the average tight dress, and the physiologist will deduce the morbid conditions I have named.

Near my institution in Boston are three shops—a rum-shop, a candy-shop, and a corset-shop. I do not know which is the greatest evil.

My practical suggestion is that, without corsets, the dress-waist should be full and loose; the skirt-bands buttoned about the waist much larger than the body, supported on the shoulders by suspenders, such as gentlemen wear, and attached to the bands at the same points. My own wife adopted many years ago the style I advise, and is greatly delighted with the results. The dress is more artistic and beautiful than the plain waist with the hard, ironlike ligature at the band. After twenty years' study of the subject of health, and the causes of disease, if I were permitted to select from our one hundred and one pysiological blunders that one which I should most desire to see corrected, I should unhesitatingly name this feature of female dress.

VENTILATION.

The evils resulting from breathing, night after night, an atmosphere becoming more and more vitiated as the morning approaches, probably equal, if they do not exceed, those resulting from the intemperate use of spirituous liquors. Indeed, it is questionable whether a craving for stimulants has not been occasionally created by this abominable yet prevalent custom of keeping the windows of a sleeping apartment either entirely closed or opened but a "crack." They should be widely opened every night throughout the year, unless the weather is intensely cold, or the wind unusually violent, or some other valid reason exists for mitigating the draught.

Were this practice universally adopted, a surprising reduction would be quickly manifested in the frequency of morning headache and nausea, dyspepsia, chronic catarrh, croup, diphtheria, influenza, measles, scrofula, consumption, scarlet fever, smallpox, typhus fever, felon, whitlow, erysipelas, and many other disorders, which are more often induced by an infected atmosphere than any other cause.

In recommending a draught I am not advocating a whirlwind or a hurricane, but merely such a current of air as will supply the lungs during each night with from eight to ten thousand installments of pure, fresh, free oxygen, in a quantity fully equal to any possible demand of the human system. Stagnant air cannot supply this want, neither can air that is in motion, if it be not perceptibly so; nothing less than a draught, moderate but decided, and continuing throughout the night, can meet in every respect the requirements of health.

Of the many and remarkable advantages of sleeping in the open air, or what may be regarded as the same thing, I can speak from thirteen years' experience. Commencing the practice rather abruptly in the winter of 1850, and without suffering any serious inconvenience from the initial trial, I became in a few weeks nearly as invulnerable to the assaults of a freezing cold blast as a salamander to fire. From that time to the present I have not once suffered from any pulmonary affection, and, except in very rare instances, have been utterly exempt from any illness that could be traced to a night-draught exposure. In short, a practice which . . . I have rigidly observed for a series of years, as one of the most important of all the means that I have hitherto adopted for indefinitely promoting health, strength, and development.

The following are a few of the many examples that might be cited to show how horrible may be the effects of a vitiated atmosphire:

In the year 1756, during a rebellion in India, one hundred and forty-six persons, chiefly English, Dutch, and Portugese soldiers, were imprisoned by the natives in the Black Hole of Calcutta, which was nothing more or less than an apartment eighteen feet square and about sixteen feet high, and furnished with two grated openings on one side for the admission of light and air. During a confinement of twelve hours, one hundred and twenty-three perished, and the remainder were subsequently attacked with "putrid fever," which proved fatal in most of the cases.

In the year 1797 or '98, during a storm at sea, seventy men, women, and children, were kept for a short time in the hold of a small vessel, the hatches of which had not only been "laid over," but, for better security, "battened down." The death of the entire number was the result.

In December, 1848, also during a storm, one hundred and fifty passengers were inclosed in the same hermetical manner, in the steerage cabin of the steamer "Londonderry," while on its passage from Liverpool to New York. Soon half the number perished from suffocation; and it is very probable that the rest would have speedily met with a similar fate, had it not been for the strength of one man, who succeeded in bursting open the door of the narrow companion-way, although the captain of the steamer had taken especial pains to prevent such an occurrence.

The following are a few examples to illustrate the importance of a thorough system of ventilation, in cases where little if any complaint had been made of inattention to this hygienic measure:

There was once in Glasgow an assemblage of buildings attached to a factory, which were occupied by about five hundred persons—one family to each room. For a long period an immense deal of sickness had pervaded the buildings, which the inmates seemed to regard as a mysterious dispensation of Providence, for they absolutely refused to adopt such sanitary expedients as had been repeatedly advised them. At length the proprietors of the establishment, despairing of ever making the inmates appreciate the importance of occasionally opening windows, resolved to apply a system of ventilation which should be thorough, continual, and utterly beyond the control of those subjected to it. They accordingly connected each room, by means of tubes, with the chimney of the factory furnace, and compelled every occupant, whether willing or unwilling, to be exposed daily and nightly to a draught of air. The result was that sickness of every kind rapidly diminished, and one disease, typhus fever, which had frequently raged as an epidemic, became for eight years "scarcely known to the place."

In 1842, at Norwood School, in England, scrofula made its appearance among six hundred children, and destroyed a great number of them. The disorder having been attributed to an insufficiency and bad quality of food, a scientific investigation was made, and a decision given that the food was most abundant and good—that "defective ventilation and consequent atmospheric impurity" was the cause of the sickness. A thorough system of ventilation was immediately applied, and scrofula rapidly disappeared, nor did it ever recur, though the number of pupils was gradually increased to eleven hundred.

In a hospital at Dublin, 2,944 deaths took place in four years. A better system of ventilation having been resorted to as a means of lessening the mortality, it was found that during the next four years the number of deaths was only 279.

The above facts are merely selected from a long array of a similar character, which tend to show the paramount importance of breathing an uncorrupted atmosphere. It is certainly no exaggeration to say, that were the public as particular as they should be, and easily might be, about the quality of that subtile fluid which enters and departs from an average pair of human lungs about a thousand times an hour, and nearly nine million times in a year, the bills of human mortality would be reduced one-third at least, and the average duration of human life be nearer seventy than forty.—Herald of Progress.

DURATION OF LIFE.

With the inheritance of a good constitution, and with a rational mode of life from first to last, undoubtedly the human race would reach the age of one hundred years or upwards, in health and cheerfulness. The natural life of man appears to be four times as long as the period of growth, or in other words, growth occupies one quarter of the natural life. The human race, in general, reach maturity in twenty-five years, taking males and females together—males at the age of twenty-eight, females at twenty-two. Bad constitutions come to maturity sooner than that, and remarkably good ones later. Persons who live to the age of one hundred years and upwards, without attention to the rules of health, were no doubt more than thirty years in growing. The same proportion of life to growth undoubtedly prevails with all animals and vegetables, from the enduring elephant to the transient butterfly, and from a spear of grass to the big trees of California, which are known to have grown thousands of years, but whose ages are unknown. By a great many persons, health is ignorantly and carelessly destroyed. Almost every one commits slow suicide. Life is shortened at the rate of about twenty-five years. Those who die at seventy-five might have lived twenty-five years longer.

In the first place, the constitution depends on that of the parents. In the next place, injury to health begins before birth. Whatever injures the mother, has the same effects on her unborn child, as errors in diet, hard work, deficient exercise, care, anxiety, grief, ungoverned passions, etc. It is obvious that great prudence on the part of the prospective mother is doubly important.

After birth, the greatest cause of sickness and a short life, especially in this country, is wrong eating, which includes three faults; namely, too much food, unwholesome cooking, and an unwholesome way of eating after it is cooked. It is doubtful which of the three faults does most harm.

Only a little too much food, or that which is irrationally eaten, deranges the digestion of the meal, which makes itself known by unpleasant feelings. Overloading the stomach is begun in infancy. Too much food checks the growth of the body, and lays the foundation of nearly all diseases. Partly from this cause a great part of the young men are slender and round shouldered. A rational abstemiousness preserves health, cheerfulness, and life, to a great age. "Eating to live," makes living to eat, as temperance is pleasure. In old age the stomach loses in a great measure its power of digestion, and the food should be lessened accordingly. Ardent spirits, by calling forth all the powers of digestion, wear out the stomach, and unfit it for food. Paregoric, from the opium it contains, when given freely to infants to quiet them, dwarfs the body and mind, and destroys the health.—Investigator.

COOKING APPLES.—One of the most notable housewives and best cooks in the State, has a new way of cooking apples—at least it was new to me, and will, no doubt, be new to many others. She pares the apples and quarters them, placing them in a tin plate with the core side up; if dried apples, a little water is added; they are then set in the oven and roasted. When done, they are slid on a common plate and sprinkled with sugar, to be eaten with bread and butter and cakes. It would require canned fruit of extra flavor to tempt me from the apple dish, if thus prepared. Apples cooked in this way are also very nutritious and healthy.—Rural Amer.

SMOKING.—All the evils of smoking are functional in character, and no confirmed smoker can ever be said, so long as he indulges in the habit, to be well.

The World's Crisis

AND SECOND ADVENT MESSENGER.

TERMS:

A single copy, one year	$2.00
A single copy, six months	1.00
A single copy, three months	.50
5 copies, six months, when sent to one address	4.50
10 copies, six months, when sent to one address	8.00
20 copies, six months, when sent to one address	15.00
30 copies, six months, when sent to one address	22.00

PAYABLE IN ADVANCE.

These terms, allowing a subscription of 50 cents for three months, place the paper within reach of all who are able to pay any thing. The reduction in price, where five or more papers are sent to one address, enables subscribers, by combining, to receive a large number at reduced rates; thus supplying the poor in their neighborhood.

We propose that those who have ability, when sending their own subscriptions, also send what they are willing to give to aid in circulating the Crisis among the poor who we have always with us.

POSTAGE.—The postage, in the United States, on each single copy of the Crisis, is 20 cents a year, payable quarterly, in advance, at the office of delivery.

RULES FOR CORRESPONDENTS.—Over all matters not intended for publication, write PRIVATE.

Over all business matters, write BUSINESS.

Over all articles for the paper, write FOR THE CRISIS.

All articles should be accompanied by the writer's name, for the Editor's information, even if it is not published.

When the names of new subscribers are sent, please say they are new, and it will save us much labor.

PRIVATE LETTERS.—Those wishing to address the Editor on matters not connected with the office, will please write the word PRIVATE on the outside of the envelope.

Please put the business matters and appointments on a piece of paper separate from other communications.

All persons writing to the office should give DISTINCTLY and PLAINLY the Post Office, County and State at which they wish to be addressed; and all orders, subscriptions, communications and remittances, should be plainly directed to MILES GRANT, BOSTON, MASS.

PUBLISHED, ALSO AT THE SAME OFFICE,

THE YOUNG PILGRIM,

A NEW ILLUSTRATED SUNDAY SCHOOL PAPER,

DEVOTED TO

The Interests of our Children and Youth.

TERMS:

For a single copy, 25 cents a year; and at the same rate for any number of copies under ten.

10 copies, when sent to one address	$2.00
20 copies, when sent to one address	[illegible]
30 copies, when sent to one address	[illegible]
40 copies, when sent to one address	[illegible]
50 copies, when sent to one address	[illegible]
100 copies, when sent to one address	15.00

PAYABLE ALWAYS IN ADVANCE.

POSTAGE.—(12 cents a year, for every single copy, and the same for every 10 copies or less to one address) must be paid quarterly in advance, at the office where the paper is received.

All communications and remittances should be addressed to THE YOUNG PILGRIM, Crisis Box, Boston, Mass.

The World's Crisis
AND SECOND ADVENT MESSENGER.

"BEHOLD, I COME QUICKLY; AND MY REWARD IS WITH ME."

WHOLE NO. 438. BOSTON, TUESDAY, FEBRUARY 23, 1864. VOL. XVIII.—NO. 23.

The World's Crisis
AND SECOND ADVENT MESSENGER,
Issued every Tuesday Afternoon, at
167 HANOVER STREET, BOSTON.

MILES GRANT, EDITOR.

EDITORIAL COMMITTEE:
H. L. HASTINGS, D. T. TAYLOR,
H. F. CARPENTER.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEE:
H. V. DAVIS, S. S. BREWER,
A. ROSS, J. G. HAMBLIN,
SOLOMON HOVEY.

GEO. T. ADAMS, TREASURER.

☞ THE CRISIS is devoted to the exposition of all Bible truth; especially the doctrine of the immediate, personal coming and reign of Christ on the earth; holiness of heart; the unconscious state of the dead; their literal resurrection, and the final destruction of the wicked.

For the World's Crisis.

OUR FRIEND ABOVE.

Earthly hopes are often blasted,
Earthly joys soon pass away,
Like dewdrops in the sunshine wasted,
At the dawning of the day.

Earthly friends are often faithless,
Oft from us become estranged,
To purest friendship oft prove treach'rous,
Betray the love they once have gained.

Earthly honors, too, are transient,
Earthly pleasures known to-day;
Prospects bright, with hopes so radiant,
Soon forever pass away.

Yet we have an "Elder Brother,"
Constant, loving, ardent friend;
Who when trusted leaves us never,
Tarries with us to the end.

Let us ever, then, be faithful,
E'er abounding in His love,
Ever tearful, ever prayerful,
Trusting in our Friend above.

Barre, N. Y. ELIZA M. RICE.

For the World's Crisis.

JUSTIFICATION BY GRACE.

BRO. GRANT:—While reading a sermon preached in London by Rev. C. H. Spurgeon, of which the above is the title, I became very much interested and affected by it, and request it may be published in your paper, for the instruction and benefit of the readers of the Crisis. T. L. Waugh.

"Being justified freely by his grace, through the redemption that is in Christ Jesus."—ROM. 3: 24.

The hill of comfort is the hill of Calvary; the house of consolation is builded with the wood of the cross; the temple of heavenly cordials is founded upon the riven rock, riven by the spear which pierced its side. No scene in sacred history ever gladdens the soul like the scene on Calvary.

"Is it not strange, the darkest hour
That ever dawned on sinful earth,
Should touch the heart with softer power
For comfort, than an angel's mirth?
That to the cross the mourner's eye should turn,
Sooner than where the stars of Bethlehem burn?"

Nowhere does the soul ever find such consolation as on that very spot where misery reigned, where woe triumphed, where agony reached its climax. There grace hath dug a fountain, which ever gusheth with waters pure as crystal, each drop capable of alleviating the woes and the agonies of mankind. Ye have had your seasons of woe, my brethren and my sisters in Christ Jesus; and ye will confess it was not at Olivet that ye ever found comfort, and on the hill of Sinai, nor on Tabor; but Gethsemane, Gabbatha, and Golgotha, have been a means of comfort to you. The bitter herbs of Gethsemane have often taken away the bitters of your life; the scourge of Gabbatha hath often scourged away your cares, and the groans of Calvary have put all other groans to flight.

We have, then, a subject which I trust may be the means of comforting God's saints, seeing it takes its rise at the cross, and thence runs on in a rich stream of perennial blessings to all believers. You note we have in our text, first of all, the redemption of Christ Jesus; secondly, the justification of sinners flowing from it; and then thirdly, the manner of the giving of this justification, "freely by his grace."

1. First, then, we have THE REDEMPTION THAT IS IN OR BY CHRIST JESUS. The figure of redemption is very simple, and has been very frequently used in Scripture. When a prisoner has been taken captive, and has been made a slave by some barbarous power, it has been usual, before he could be set free, that a ransom price should be paid down. Now, we being, by the fall of Adam, prone to guiltiness, and, indeed, virtually guilty, we were by the irreproachable judgment of God given up to the vengeance of the law; we were given to the hands of justice; justice claimed us to be his bond-slaves forever, unless we could pay a ransom, whereby our souls could be redeemed. We were, indeed, poor as owlets, we had not wherewith to bless ourselves. We were as our hymn hath worded it, "bankrupt debtors;" an execution was put into our house; all we had was sold; we were left naked, and poor, and miserable, and we could by no means find a ransom; it was just then that Christ stepped in, stood sponsor for us, and, in the room and stead of all believers, did pay the ransom price, that we in that hour be delivered from the curse of the law and the vengeance of God, and go our way, clean, free, justified by his blood.

Let me just endeavor to show you some qualities of the redemption that is in Christ Jesus. You will remember the multitude he has redeemed; not me alone, nor you alone, but "a multitude that no man can number," which shall so far exceed the stars of heaven for number, as they exceed all mortal reckoning. Christ hath bought for himself some out of every kingdom, and nation, and tongue, under heaven; he hath redeemed from among men some of every rank, from the highest to the lowest; some of every color—black and white; some of every standing in society, the best and the worst. For some of all sorts hath Jesus Christ given himself a ransom, that they might be redeemed unto himself.

Now, concerning this ransom, we have to observe, that it was all paid, and all paid at once. When Christ redeemed his people, he did it thoroughly; he did not leave a single debt unpaid, nor yet one farthing for them to settle afterwards. God demanded of Christ the payment for the sins of all his people; Christ stood forward, and to the utmost farthing paid whate'er his people owed. The sacrifice of Calvary was not a part of payment; it was not a partial exoneration, it was a complete and perfect payment, and it obtained a complete and perfect remittal of all the debts of all believers that have lived, do live, or shall live, to the very end of time. On that day when Christ hung on the cross, he did not leave a single farthing for us to pay as a satisfaction to God; he did not leave, from a thread even to a shoe-latchet, that he had not satisfied. The whole of the demands of the law were paid down there and then by Jehovah Jesus, the great high priest of all his people. And blessed be his name, he paid it all at once too. So priceless was the ransom, so princely and munificent was the price demanded for our souls, one might have thought it would have been marvellous if Christ had paid it by instalments; some of it now, and some of it then. Kings' ransoms have sometimes been paid part at once, and part in dues afterwards, to run through years. But not so our Savior; once for all he gave himself a sacrifice; at once he counted down the price, and said, "It is finished," leaving nothing for him to do, nor for us to accomplish. He did not drivel out a part-payment, and then declare that he would come again to die, or that he would again suffer, or that he would again obey; but down upon the nail, to the utmost farthing, the ransom of all his people was paid, and a full receipt given to them, and Christ nailed that receipt to his cross, and said, "it is done, it is done, it is done; I have taken away the handwriting of ordinances, I have nailed it to the cross; who is he that shall condemn my people, or lay any thing to their charge? for I have blotted out like a cloud their transgressions, and like a thick cloud their sins!"

And when Christ paid all this ransom, will you just notice, that he did it all himself! He was very particular about that. Simon, the Cyrenian, might bear the cross; but Simon, the Cyrenian, might not be nailed to it. That sacred circle of Calvary was kept for Christ alone. Two thieves were with him there; not righteous men, lest any should have said that the death of those two righteous men helped the Savior. Two thieves hung there with him, that men might see that there was majesty in his misery, and that he could pardon men and show his sovereignty, even when he was dying. There were no righteous men to suffer; no disciples shared his death; Peter was not dragged there to be beheaded, John was not nailed to a cross side by side with him; he was left there alone. He says, "I have trodden the wine-press alone; and of the people there was none with me." The whole of the tremendous debt was put upon his shoulders; the whole weight of the sins of all his people was placed upon him. Once he seemed to stagger: "Nevertheless, not my will, but thine be done." The whole of the punishment of his people was distilled into one cup; no mortal lip might give it so much as a solitary sip. When he put it to his own lips, it was so bitter, he well-nigh spurned it: "Let this cup pass from me." But his love for his people was so strong, that he took the cup in both his hands, and for all his people. He drank it all, he endured all, he suffered all; Christ hath suffered all they ought to have suffered, and they must, they shall go free. The work was completely done by himself, without a helper.

"At one tremendous draught of love
He drank damnation dry"

And note, again, it was accepted. In truth, it was a goodly ransom. What could equal it? A soul "exceeding sorrowful even unto death;" a body torn with torture; a death of the most inhuman kind; and an agony of such a character that tongue cannot speak of it, nor can even man's mind imagine its horror. It was a goodly price. But say, was it accepted? There have been prices paid sometimes, or rather offered, which never were accepted by the party to whom they were offered, and therefore the slave did not go free. But this was accepted. The evidence I will show you. When Christ declared that he would pay the debt for all his people, God sent the officer to arrest him for it; he dragged him to the bar of Pilate, to the bar of Herod, and to the judgment-seat of Caiaphas; the payment was all made, and Christ was put into the grave. He was there, locked up in durance vile, until the acceptance should have been ratified in heaven. He slept there a portion of three days in his tomb. It was declared that the ratification was to be this; the surety was to go his way as soon as his surety-ship engagements had been fulfilled. Now let your minds picture the buried Jesus. He is in the sepulchre. 'Tis true he has paid all the debt, but the receipt is not yet given; he slumbers in that narrow tomb. Fastened in with a seal upon a giant stone, he sleeps still in his grave; not yet has the acceptance been given from God; the angels have not yet come from heaven to say, "The deed is done, God has accepted thy sacrifice." Now is the crisis of this world; it hangs trembling in the balance. Will God accept the ransom or will he not? We shall see. An angel comes from heaven with exceeding brightness; he rolls away the stone; and forth comes the captive, with no manacle upon his hands, with the grave-clothes left behind him; free, never more to suffer, never more to die. Now,

"If Jesus had not paid the debt,
He ne'er had been at freedom set."

If God had not accepted his sacrifice, he would have been in his tomb at this moment; he never would have risen from his grave. But his resurrection was a pledge of God's accepting him. He said, "I have had a claim upon thee to this hour; that claim is paid now; go thy way." And death gave up his royal captive, the stone was rolled into the garden, and the Conqueror came forth, leading captivity captive.

And, moreover, God gave a second proof of acceptance; for he took his only begotten Son to heaven, and set him at his right hand, far above all principalities and powers; and therein he meant to say to him, "Sit upon the throne, for thou hast done the mighty deed; all thy works and all thy miseries are accepted as the ransom of men." O my beloved, think what a grand sight it must have been when Christ ascended into glory; what a noble certificate it must have been of his Father's acceptance of him! Do you not think you see the scene on earth? It is very simple. A few disciples are standing upon a hill, and Christ mounts into the air in slow and solemn movement, as if an angel sped his way by gentle degrees, like mist or exhalation from the lake into the skies. Can you imagine what is going on up yonder? Can you for a moment conceive how, when the mighty Conqueror entered the gates of heaven, the angels met him?

"They brought his chariot from on high,
To bear him to his throne;
Clapped their triumphant wings and cried,
'The glorious work is done!'"

Can you think how loud were the plaudits when he entered the gates of heaven? Can you conceive how they pressed on one another, to behold how he came conquering and red from the fight? O, what a spectacle was there that day! No Roman warrior ever had such a triumph; none ever saw such a majestic sight. So far, then, concerning the ransom.

2. And now, by the help of God's Spirit, let me address myself to THE EFFECT OF THE RANSOM; being justified—"justified freely by his grace through the redemption." Now, what is the meaning of justification? Divines will puzzle you, if you ask them. I must try the best I can to make justification plain and simple, even to the comprehension of a child. There is not such a thing as justification to be had on earth for mortal men, except in one way. Justification, you know, is a forensic term; it is employed always in a legal sense. A prisoner is brought to the bar of justice to be tried. There is only one way whereby that prisoner can be justified; that is, he must be found not guilty; and if he is found not guilty, then he is justified—that is, he is proved to be a just man. If you find that man guilty, you cannot justify him. He may be pardoned; but not royalty itself can ever wash that man's character. He is as much a real criminal when he is pardoned as before. There is no means among men of justifying a man of an accusation which is laid against him, except by his being proved not guilty. Now, the wonder of wonders is, that we are proved guilty, and yet we are justified; the verdict has been brought in against us, guilty; and yet, notwithstanding, we are justified. Can any earthly tribunal do that? No; it remained for the ransom of Christ to effect that which is an impossibility to any tribunal upon earth. We are all guilty. Read the twenty-third verse, immediately preceding the text—"For all have sinned, and come short of the glory of God." There the verdict of guilty is brought in, and yet we are immediately afterward said to be justified freely by his grace.

Now, allow me to explain the way whereby God justifies a sinner. I am about to suppose an impossible case. A prisoner has been tried and condemned to death. He is a guilty man; he cannot be justified, because he is guilty. But now, suppose for a moment that such a thing as this could happen—that some second party could be introduced, who could take all that man's guilt upon himself, who could change places with that man, and by some mysterious process, which, of course, is impossible with men, become that man; or take that man's character upon himself; he, the righteous man, putting the rebel in his place, and making the rebel a righteous man. We cannot do that in our courts. If I were to go before a judge, and he should agree that I should be committed for a year's imprisonment, I could not take his guilt. I might take his punishment but not his guilt. Now, what flesh and blood cannot do, that Jesus Christ by his redemption did.

(To be Continued.)

For the World's Crisis.

"THE SLAYING OF THE WITNESSES."

BY I. P. LABAGH.

DEAR BRO. S. HALE:—By your request, I have read the above work you gave me when at your kind home. I consider it an effort to put the above in the future, which in my humble opinion is most certainly in the past. With the kindest of feelings to the writer, and a desire to keep others from embracing what seems to be an error, I shall proceed to give the result of my investigation. In order to bring the subject at once before the reader's mind, I will present the writer's statement on page 5. It reads thus:

"Of one thing, however, we feel assured, that the prophecy of Rev. 11 is an unfulfilled prophecy, that it relates principally to the Jewish people, the scene being laid in the Holy Land (ver. 1), and the usual distinction between that people and the rest of the world being mentioned in verse 2."

From such an hypothesis, the reader must conclude that the author would make all his argument tend to sustain this position. Consequently the treading under foot of the Holy City forty-two months by the Gentiles, in the second verse, must be future. Can this be true? I think not. It is conceded by all creditable expositors that the forty-two months of Rev 13:5 is most certainly prophetic time, as given by Ezek. 4: 6. This fact is apparent to every one, as it covers the complicated state of papacy. Now I contend positively that that time is prophetic time—1260 years. Then, according to the above author, the "forty-two months" of Rev. 11: 2 is an unfulfilled prophecy, and there are yet 1260 years for the Jewish people and the Holy Land to be trodden under foot, according to his own assurance.

SECOND. On page 13, the author argues the 1260 days of verse third to be literal days. This must of necessity be done, in order to support his argument. My objection to this interpretation is this: any one may with equal propriety claim that the 1260 days of Rev. 12: 6 are literal days. But it may be said, facts preclude the possibility of such a rendering. I then inquire, are there any facts in Scripture or history to preclude the possibility of the 1260 days of the eleventh chapter being so many years? I know of none whatever. There is nothing left but to assume that it is an unfulfilled prophecy.

THIRD. On page 5 we have as follows:

"If, as we learn from the prophets, the Jews will be restored to their land in an unconverted state, and will inhabit it some little time before they 'look on him whom they have pierced'."

That this scripture has had a most positive fulfillment, for one I can never doubt. Please turn and read John 19: 53–58. A part reads thus:—"For these things were done that the scripture should be fulfilled, A bone of him shall not be broken. And again another scripture saith, They shall look on him whom they have pierced."

FOURTH. On pages six and eight the author claims Moses and Elias to be the two witnesses (p. 6). He says:

"And who of all the ancient servants of God to that people, would be best qualified for this work? There are two of their prophets who are regarded by that people as the greatest and holiest men that ever lived, and who naturally exercise a greater influence over them than any others that have ever lived. Those are Moses and Elias."

Let us compare the writer's opinion with the inspired testimony of our Lord, in Matt. 11: 11;—"Verily I say unto you, among them that are born of women there hath not risen a greater than John the Baptist." Let us hearken and believe the Lord Jesus.

Moses declared, in Deut. 18: 15, that the Lord would raise up unto them a prophet to whom that people should hearken, and all that would not hear that prophet should be destroyed from among that people. Acts 3: 22, 23. And he was the greatest, the wisest, the holiest being the world ever saw; yet they rejected the Son of God. And now please mark his testimony. It is conclusive, and settles the point under discussion forever. From this decision, as it respects any future mercy on the part of God to the Jews after the rejection of his Son, it is settled forever. Matt. 21: 37,—"LAST OF ALL HE SENT UNTO THEM HIS SON, saying, They will reverence my Son. But when the husbandmen saw the Son, they said among themselves, This is the heir, come, let us kill him." That was LAST OF ALL; and there will be none ever sent to that people when God says LAST OF ALL. Let God be true. Amen.

FIFTH. On pages 7, 8, it reads thus:

"At the transfiguration Moses and Elias appeared and talked with him, and spake of his decease which he should accomplish at Jerusalem. These two anointed ones (Moses and Elias), standing before the Lord of the whole earth, were despatched from the world of spirits to bear testimony that Jesus was the Son of God. Are they not then witnesses of him in a more exalted and peculiar sense than PROPHETS, and APOSTLES, Waldenses, or TESTAMENTS possibly can be? They were emphatically Christ's 'Two Witnesses'."

I have read the record of that event in Matt. 17: 1–10; Mark 9: 1–11; Luke 9: 28–37; and fail to find a particle of testimony recorded in either instance that Moses or Elias witnessed in any sense whatever that "Jesus was the Son of God."

Again. I cannot credit the above assertion, for the Lord Jesus declared—"If they believe not Moses and the prophets, neither will they be persuaded though one rose from the dead." Jesus did rise from the dead, and they did not believe. Is Moses or Elias greater than He who was the "brightness of the Father's glory, and the express image of his person"? Judge ye. Furthermore, if we would let judgment decide, it seems to me that either Peter, James or John would be a more fitting selection of that august assemblage, to witness upon that vision, as Jesus declared it to be (See Matt. 17: 9), than either Moses or Elias "from the world of spirits"; as Peter declared in his 2d epistle 1: 16–19,—"We were eye WITNESSES of his majesty." Which of the three shall we select? If the witnesses are two men, who shall decide, as there are three present, living witnesses, not "from the spirit world."

Lastly. I protest against the above inference (for it is nothing more) upon the positive declaration in the 19th verse, which reads thus:—"We have also a more sure word of prophecy, whereunto ye do well that ye take heed." Let us obey the inspired apostle's declaration, who was an eye witness, in preference to the opinions of erring men, however plausible such may be. David declares, in Ps. 138: 2,—"For thou hast magnified thy word above all thy name." O! let us try to make harmony of it, not make it bend to support a theory, and that of very doubtful character.

SIXTH. On page ten, the above writer saith:

"To say that the two Testaments have now or ever had 'power to shut up heaven, turn waters into blood, and smite the earth with plagues as often as they will,' is to say that for which there is no authority whatever, no shadow of proof in either sacred or profane history. If, then, they have not these powers, they are not the two witnesses."

It seems to me it would have served a much better purpose, if the above writer would have borne in mind the very becoming position he laid down on page five of his work, thus:

"It behooves us to speak with great modesty and submit our view for investigation, rather than affirm it positively."

The reader will please notice the above author states that the two Testaments have not and never had power to shut up heaven, turn waters into blood, and smite the earth with plagues. He says there is no authority in sacred or profane history for such an opinion. There may not be in the sense he claims, but if he will contend for the literal interpretation, as he does in most instances, then let us apply his rule. The two witnesses, he contends, are Moses and Elias. Ver. 5,—"If any man will hurt them, fire proceedeth out of their mouth and devoureth their enemies." Can that be literal? Or the 17th verse of chap. 9; where it reads, Out of the horses' mouths issued fire and smoke and brimstone"? He certainly will not contend that it is literal in either instance. He refers us to the case of Elijah, 2 Kings 1: 10. Yes, and who is the witness of that fact but the old Testament, and what would the testimony of either Moses or Elias amount to without the old Testament, the first faithful and true witness?

On page 15 he contends that the two witnesses are literal men, because they are declared to be prophets. Yes, and they are declared to be in verse 4 two olive trees, and the two candlesticks "standing before the God of the earth." Let us confine ourselves to his rule for one moment, and then who shall decide, strictly upon the literal interpretation, whether they are olive trees, candlesticks, or prophets. If then, as it is self-evident this prophecy is not to be understood in a literal manner, is it a violation of the rules of interpretation and common sense to consider the language metaphoric? If they are two olive trees, they are not two candlesticks; if they are two candlesticks, they are not two prophets—in a literal sense. S. S. BREWER.

South Glastenbury, Conn.

(Concluded next week.)

PUBLIC WORSHIP.

Who can expect to be by Jesus blest,
If absent when he comes to meet his guest?
Can those who once have tasted Jesus' grace,
Choose to be absent when he shows his face?
Shall a few drops of rain, or a dirty road,
Prevent their public intercourse with God?

See! Satan's slaves to scenes of riot go,
By day and night, through rain, or hail, or snow!
And shall some visitor, or worldly care,
Detain believers from the house of prayer?

Forbid it, Lord! revive thy people's zeal;
The lukewarm-plague among thy people heal;
Ye heirs of bliss, whom Jesus often meets,
Whene'er his house is opened, fill your seats.

Selected by A. S. Richards.

For the World's Crisis.

THE SEVENTH DAY SABBATH—THE LAW.
THE OLD "DEAD SCHOOLMASTER"! THE LIVING JESUS.

MY EXPERIENCE.

TO THE SAINTS SCATTERED ABROAD, GREETING:—MY BRETHREN: I have once been an observer of the seventh-day Sabbath! This was from about the middle of the year 1844, to the middle of 1847; when, becoming convinced that I was wrong, I gave it up, and returned to the observance of the "first day" again.

As I wrote and published some upon this subject, and a few of the "tracts" are yet in being, Sabbatarians are making what use they can of them to advance their cause. Wishing to atone in part, or as far as I am able, for the evils I may have done in publishing so far as I did this error; and especially as many have solicited my reasons for the change of my views, and what scriptural grounds I have for my present position; I deem it my duty to publish still more; but now on the right side of the question.

Where it is deemed good policy, I learn that some are trying to make all the capital out of my old tract on the seventh-day Sabbath they can, and sometimes appear to place about as much confidence in reading it to their hearers, to establish the doctrine of Sabbatarians, as they do in reading from the Bible; and say that I am now a "backslider," and "going to perdition," because of my return to the observance of the "first day"!

As I have several letters now on hand, soliciting my views on the Sabbath question, which I have been unable to answer of late, in consequence of sickness in my family, and other cares and labors; I deem it my duty to prepare an article for the paper, and if the Crisis will have the goodness to speak for me on this vexing or "bewitching" question, I hope it will prove to be a satisfactory answer to my friends; and others, who are interested in this subject, be benefitted by it, in these last days of temptation and trial. Amen.

MY CONFESSION.

Here let me now confess, that if there is any one day mentioned in the Scriptures which is now more "holy" than another, made so by the express or direct command of Almighty God, then the "seventh day" is the one. And as I have often said, within the last fifteen years, to those who have questioned me on this subject, that if they would point out one single text to me in the New Testament that will show that the seventh day is now more "holy" than another, and that it thus proves that christians should observe it as "holy" time, then I will observe with them the next seventh day; and will preach and practice after that, the observance of the "seventh-day Sabbath," as in former years. But not a man of them has yet, neither can they show this. Many, both in public and in private, have been silenced in this way, and have never opened their mouth to me on the seventh-day Sabbath question, after this statement. This statement stands good against me yet, and if any Sabbatarians wish me to observe with them again the seventh day, let them just comply with the above request, and they will find me true to my word. This puts the laboring oar into their hands. Let them use it if they can.

WE SHOULD BE NEW TESTAMENT CHRISTIANS.

For any one to start a subject founded upon the Old Testament Scriptures, and then try to make the New Testament conform to it, instead of taking their starting point in the New, and then see that the Old is made to harmonise with this; that is putting a "yoke" upon their own "necks," and upon the necks of others who are made to believe them, "which neither our fathers, nor we were able to bear." And as the apostle says to the Corinthians:—

"But their minds were blinded: for until this day remaineth the same veil untaken away in the reading of the old testament; which veil is done away in Christ. But even unto this day, when Moses is read, the veil is upon their hearts. Nevertheless, when it shall turn to the Lord, the veil shall be taken away."—2 Cor. 3: 14–16.

And I will repeat that, at "this day," many "minds are blinded," because "the same veil" remains "untaken away in the reading of the Old Testament"; and it is a great pity that men will not turn their "hearts" to the LORD JESUS; then "the veil shall be taken away," and thus be no longer "upon their hearts." But if men are determined to go it "BLIND," the "ditch" must take them up.

DIFFERENCE OF DAYS.

I think it will be safe for us to take our position with the apostle Paul, as found in Rom. 14: 5, 6:—

"One man esteemeth one day above another: another esteemeth every day alike. Let every man be fully persuaded in his own mind. He that regardeth the day, regardeth it unto the Lord; and he that regardeth not the day, to the Lord he doth not regard it."

If any one believes otherwise, let him be "fully persuaded in his own mind"; and I, for myself, intend to be fully persuaded, or assured, as the margin reads, in my own mind; so, if any one thinks he ought to observe the seventh day for the Sabbath, I do not wish to have contention with him about it; for if he can regard the day "unto the Lord," let him do so; but as for myself, I do not now so regard it. I carried that "yoke" as long as I think I could regard the day "unto the Lord." If others wish to esteem the seventh day above another, let them try it until they are satisfied, as I have been. I now regard the "first day" "unto the Lord."

REASONS FOR MY GIVING UP THE SEVENTH DAY.

During the whole period of the three years that I observed the seventh day as the Sabbath, no one was ever able, that I met with, to meet my arguments, and no argument adduced by others ever affected by mind in the least degree, until in a correspondence with Eld. Joseph Marsh in the "Voice of Truth," in answer to questions I proposed to him on this subject, he, among other things, proposed to me this question:

"ARE THE GENTILES A TYPICAL PEOPLE?"

This question opened to me a new door of thought; and after full three weeks of careful review of this whole question, I became satisfied that I was wrong; and then I confessed my error. And from that day to this, not a shadow of a doubt has passed my mind in regard to my present position.

THE SABBATH A "SIGN" UNTO THE "CHILDREN OF ISRAEL," AND UNTO THEM ONLY.

I know that Sabbatarians deny this, but I shall prove it, their denial to the contrary notwithstanding. Proof:—

"Speak thou also unto the children of Israel, saying, Verily my Sabbaths ye shall keep: for it is a sign between me and you throughout your generations; that ye may know that I am the Lord that doth sanctify you. Ye shall keep the Sabbath therefore; for it is holy unto you. Every one that defileth it shall surely be put to death: for whosoever doeth any work therein, that soul shall be cut off from among his people. Six days may work be done; but in the seventh is the Sabbath of rest, holy to the Lord: whosoever doeth any work in the Sabbath day, he shall surely be put to death. Wherefore the children of Israel shall keep the Sabbath, to observe the Sabbath throughout their generations for a perpetual covenant. It is a sign between me and the children of Israel for ever: in six days the Lord made heaven and earth, and on the seventh day he rested, and was refreshed."—Ex. 31: 13–17.

For the sake of brevity, and for emphasis or greater force, the reader will notice that I have taken the liberty to italicize a few words in my quotations from the Scriptures. I shall be pardoned in this, I trust. But still more proof:—

"Wherefore I caused them to go forth out of the land of Egypt, and brought them into the wilderness. And I gave them my statutes, and showed them my judgments, which if a man do, he shall even live in them. Moreover also I gave them my Sabbaths, to be a sign between me and them, that they might know that I am the Lord that sanctify them."—Ezek. 29: 10–12.

The passage just quoted from Ezek. 31, proves positively that the Sabbath referred to is "the seventh-day" Sabbath, "the Sabbath of rest," the one called "holy to the Lord:" and yet the LORD JEHOVAH says, "IT is a SIGN" between him and "the children of Israel." How long? "Throughout their generations." And let all God's people say—Amen. How long did the generations of the children of Israel continue? See Matt. 1: 1, and 17:—"The book of the generation of Jesus Christ, the Son of David, the son of Abraham. So all the generations from Abraham to David are fourteen generations; and from David until the carrying away into Babylon are fourteen generations; and from the carrying away into Babylon unto Christ are fourteen generations."

Let any one find the generations of the children of Israel to continue any longer than "until John," or until Christ, if they can. Let God be true, though "the seventh-day Sabbath" perish!

OF WHAT IS THE SABBATH A SIGN OR TYPE?

Should the inquiry be raised by the objector, whether I do not believe the seventh-day Sabbath of the Old Testament is a type of the seventh millennium, or thousand years; I answer yes. Then says the objector, How can you make out that the type will cease to be observed until the antitype is reached? I answer, the same as other types ceased to be observed, or kept, before the antitypes were reached: as for example, look at the "high priest" who went "into the holy place" once every year;—

"The Holy Ghost this signifying, that the way into the holiest of all was not yet made manifest, while as the first tabernacle was yet standing: which was a figure for the time then present, in which were offered both gifts and sacrifices, that could not make him that did the service perfect, as pertaining to the conscience; which stood only in meats and drinks, and divers washings, and carnal ordinances, imposed on them until the time of reformation. But Christ being come a high priest of good things to come, by a greater and more perfect tabernacle, not made with hands, that is to say, not of this building; neither by the blood of goats and calves, but by his own blood he entered in once into the holy place, having obtained eternal redemption for us."—Heb. 9: 8–12.

This says,—"Having obtained eternal redemption for us." But we have not really obtained this redemption yet; neither can we, until Christ comes "the second time without sin unto salvation."

"For Christ is not entered into the holy places made with hands, which are the figures of the true; but into heaven itself, now to appear in the presence of God for us: nor yet that he should offer himself often, as the high priest entereth into the holy place every year with blood of others; for then must he often have suffered since the foundation of the world: but now once in the end of the world hath he appeared to put away sin by the sacrifice of himself. And as it is appointed unto men once to die, but after this the judgment: so Christ was once offered to bear the sins of many; and unto them that look for him shall he appear the second time without sin unto salvation."—Heb. 9: 24–28.

Thus, we see, that the Levitical priesthood was a type of the priesthood of Christ; but the Levitical priesthood has been "changed," and, hence, the type has ceased to be observed; as we read in Heb. 7: 11, 12;—

"If therefore perfection were by the Levitical priesthood, (for under it the people received the law,) what further need was there that another priest should rise after the order of Melchizedek, and not be called after the order of Aaron? For the priesthood being changed, there is made of necessity a change also of the law."

But let us examine this still more, and see how clearly we can establish the fact, that the priesthood of Christ is the antitype of the Levitical priesthood; and although the type has ceased to be observed, yet the antitype is not yet reached in its completion:—

"For he of whom these things are spoken pertaineth to another tribe, of which no man gave attendance at the altar. For it is evident that our Lord sprang out of Judah; of which tribe Moses spake nothing concerning priesthood. And it is yet far more evident: for that after the similitude of Melchizedek there ariseth another priest, who is made, not after the law of a carnal commandment, but after the power of an endless life."—Heb. 7: 13–16.

Mark this last expression:—Our "priest" is made, "not after the law of a carnal commandment, but after the power of AN ENDLESS LIFE." But again:—

"By so much was Jesus made a surety of a better testament. And they truly were many priests, because they were not suffered to continue by reason of death: but this man, because he continueth ever, hath an unchangeable priesthood."—Heb. 7: 22–24.

Yes, praise God:—"By so much was Jesus made a SURETY of a better testament." (Verse 22.)

And so it is with the Sabbath, it was a sign or type of that "rest"—or "keeping of a Sabbath," (margin)—which "remaineth" "to the people of God" (Heb. 4: 9); but as "the body is of Christ" (Col. 2: 16, 17), we cannot trace the "shadow" beyond the "body": but Christ has become our "surety" of that "rest," the same as he was made "a surety of a better testament." And as Christ does not fulfill the type of the priesthood until he comes out of the holy of holies, or out of "heaven itself," to give "the people of God" "an endless life"; so the type of the Sabbath will not be fulfilled until Christ comes out of "heaven itself" to give "the people of God" that "rest" which "remaineth" for them. And as the apostle says:—

"Now of the things which we have spoken this is the sum: We have such an high priest, who is set on the right hand of the throne of the Majesty in the heavens; a minister of the sanctuary, and of the true tabernacle, which the Lord pitched, and not man. For every high priest is ordained to offer gifts and sacrifices: wherefore it is of necessity that this man have somewhat also to offer. For if he were on earth, he should not be a priest, seeing that there are priests that offer gifts according to the law: who serve unto the example and shadow of heavenly things, as Moses was admonished of God when he was about to make the tabernacle; for, see, saith he, that thou make all things according to the pattern showed to thee in the mount. But now hath he obtained a more excellent ministry, by how much also he is the mediator of a better covenant, which was established upon better promises."—Heb. 8: 1–6.

ORIGIN OF THE SABBATH.

